This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE

TO THE TWENTY-THIRD EDITION.

SINCE the publication of the 22nd Edition, in 1900, there has not been very much legislation affecting the Criminal Law. Indeed the only new statutes are the Money Lenders Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 51), post, p. 594; the Larceny Act, 1901; the Poor Prisoners Defence Act, 1903; the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904; and s. 28 of the Companies Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. 48), post, p. 587, which deals with false statements by directors and officers of joint-stock companies.

The Larceny Act, 1901 (1 Edw. 7, c. 10), which is printed at pp. 575, 576 of this Edition, has had the effect of removing the many difficulties found in working ss. 75, 76 of the Larceny Act, 1861, which it repeals—difficulties which had been pointed out in In re Bellencontre [1891] 2 Q. B. 122.

The Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904 (4 Edw. 7, c. 15), which is in the main a re-enactment of the Act of 1894, will be found at p. 877, et seq. The chief changes effected by the new Act are the addition to the schedule of further enactments, to which the rules of the Act as to evidence and procedure are to be applied in the case of offences against children under sixteen; the provision allowing conviction for cruelty on an indictment for manslaughter, and the alteration from three to six months of the time limit on prosecutions for offences against girls of thirteen and under sixteen against s. 5 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885. In R. v. Chandra Dharma, 69 J. P. Rep. 39 (noted post, p. 913), a case was reserved on the question whether the prosecution for an offence against s. 5 of the Act of 1885, committed less than three months before October 1, 1904, when the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904, came into force, was subject to the three months' limitation in the Act of 1885, or to the six months' limitation in the Act of 1904. On March 18, 1905, the Court for Crown Cases Reserved decided (40 L. J. Newsp. 238; 21 T. L. R. 353) that the amendment effected by s. 27 of the Act of 1904 related to procedure only, and applied to offences committed before the section came into force, in respect of which the three months' limit imposed by the Act of 1885 had not expired on October 1, 1904.

The Poor Prisoners Defence Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 38), will be found at p. 187, and the attorney-general's rules under it at p. 189; while the scales of costs for solicitor and counsel will be found at p. 255. Attention may here be drawn to the new scales of costs and allowances in criminal prosecutions made in June, 1904 (see pp. 249–255), superseding those of November, 1903, which had superseded all prior scales. In view of these changes, the chapter on costs has been almost wholly rewritten.

It has been thought more convenient to print the text of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, in full at p. 392, et seq., and to add as notes the various decisions interpreting its provisions. There are still some unsettled difficulties as to its effect, e.g. whether in cases where the husband or wife of a prisoner may be called for the Crown without the consent of the prisoner, such a witness is now compellable or is competent only. In R. v. Ellis, Lewes Assizes, November 25, 1899 (post, p. 398), on a charge of abduction under 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 7, Wills, J., ruled, in accordance with the practice adopted at the Central Criminal Court, that s. 4 of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, rendered the husband or wife compellable witnesses in prosecutions under the statutes scheduled to that Act. He had proposed to reserve a case; but the prisoner was acquitted, and this difficulty still remains unsettled. So far as concerns cases within the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904, or the first schedule to that Act, the difficulty is solved by s. 12 of that Act (post, p. 882), but it remains as to the other enactments referred to in s. 4 and the schedule to the Act of 1898 (post, p. 397); and it is to be presumed that in s. 4 of the Act of 1898 calling such a witness "for the defence" without the consent of the accused means calling the witness on behalf of a co-defendant.

The divergences of judicial opinion stated, post, pp. 319, 320, as to the scope and effect of the ruling in R. v. Lillyman, have been to a considerable extent removed by the judgment of the Court for Crown Cases Reserved in R. v. Osborne [1905] 1 K. B. 551, which establishes that immediate complaints are admissible in the case of offences against women and girls, even where the question of consent is not an essential element in the crime charged, and that such complaints are admissible even if made in answer to questions, provided that the questions are not leading, suggestive, or of an intimidating character.

In the preface to the 22nd Edition it was stated that the title Treason had been revised in view of the probability that prosecutions for the offence might occur in the near future. During the South African War many prosecutions for treason took place in South Africa; but the offence is there governed by the Roman-Dutch law, and not by the law of England. However, in this country the trial of R. v. Lynch [1903] 1 K. B. 444, arising out of the same war, necessitated a careful examination of the English authorities on treason, and certain of the results of that investigation have been incorporated in the present Edition.

The title Libel reflecting on the administration of justice has been rewritten, and that of Contempt of Court added (post, p. 1094), in consequence of the decisions in R. v. Tibbits and Windust [1902] 1 K. B. 77: R. v. Gray [1900] 2 Q. B. 36: and R. v. Parke [1903] 2 K. B. 432, in which last case the powers of the High Court to prevent comments on cases committed for trial were fully considered. The chapters on compensation (p. 263), restitution of property (p. 268), and compounding offences (p. 1089), have been revised and, it is hoped, improved.

The title Bigamy (p. 1167) has been rearranged; the various forms of "Disorderly Houses" have been dealt with more fully than in previous editions and forms of indictment have been inserted; the substance of the various statutes relating to Lotteries has been inserted; and throughout the work the editors have made numerous alterations and additions; e.g. as to the law relating to the taking of the deposition of a dying person (p. 374), and to the admissibility of dying declarations (p. 322), and as to proof of guilty knowledge in cases of receiving stolen property (p. 552); and they have inserted at p. 1327 certain of the new Prison Rules relating to the classification of prisoners by the prison authorities. Certain of the indictments have been modernized; and the references have been rechecked throughout with the object of eliminating so far as possible all incorrect citations of cases and text-books, and the Index has been revised and supplemented to meet numerous criticisms and suggestions received. The editors are obliged to Mr. B. O. Bircham and Mr. H. E. Jenkins, both of the South-Eastern Circuit, for help in correction of references and of the Index, and to Mr. Arthur Denman, Clerk of Assize on the South-Eastern Circuit, and Mr. J. B. Matthews, of the Oxford Circuit, for many valuable suggestions.

In the Addenda and Corrigenda (pp. cxxix., cxxx.) will be found some cases decided too late to be included in the text, and correction of certain mistakes discovered while the edition was going through the press.

TEMPLE, May 18th, 1905.

PREFACE

TO THE FIRST EDITION (1822).

In the year 1812, I collected all the authorities upon the Pleas of the Crown to be found in the text books, the books of reports, etc.; all that could elucidate the subject in Bracton, Britton, Fleta, and the Mirror; the substance of Hale, Hawkins, the Third Institute, Dalton, Foster, and East; all the cases upon the subject in the Year Books, the old reports, and in the modern and recent reports; and all the statutes upon the subject down to the period at which I made the collection. Of these materials I framed, with infinite pains, a Digest in three volumes, one of which was actually published in the year 1813.

When I contemplated the publication above mentioned, works upon the Pleas of the Crown were extremely scarce; those of repute, upon the subject, were rarely to be had, even at most extravagant prices. But immediately upon the publication of my First Volume, two other works were announced upon the same subject, one of which was published very shortly after it was announced: the other not for nearly two years afterwards. Their being announced, however, had the effect of deterring me from proceeding with my Work; I thought they would amply supply the deficiency of works upon the subject; and I felt too much diffidence in my own ability to enter into competition with the writers of them. Another, and a very elaborate work, (a) has since been added, which has fully confirmed me in my determination not to publish the work I originally contemplated.

As the subject of Evidence in criminal cases, however, had not been treated of by any of these writers, and as some book upon the subject was extremely desirable, I thought I might select from the Work I originally compiled such part of it as related to evidence in criminal cases, and publish it, without subjecting myself to the imputation of wishing to enter into any competition with the learned writers of the Works already extant upon the Pleas of the Crown. I have made this compilation; I have added to it all the cases since decided, and the statutes since enacted, upon the subject; and I have compressed the whole into the smallest compass that appeared to me to be practicable, consistent with perspicuity. I have also added precedents of indictments and other criminal pleadings —not from any idea that this part of the Work was required by the Profession, there being already one or two collections of great repute upon the subject—but merely because I found it impracticable to give the evidence in particular cases in the simplified form I was anxious to give it, without also giving, in each case, the particular indictment or pleading the evidence was intended to support. And as I was thus obliged to give the precedents, I thought it desirable, and indeed necessary, also to give such a summary of the law relative to pleading in criminal cases generally, as would enable the reader to frame an indictment in cases where he might not be able to find a precedent.

As to the arrangement of my materials, I have endeavoured to make it simple and perspicuous. The work consists of two books—the First Book, which treats of Pleading and Evidence in criminal cases generally, is divided into two parts: the first, treating of Pleading generally, namely, of indictments, informations, special pleas, demurrers, etc.; the second, treating of Evidence generally, namely, of evidence of records, of matters quasi of record, of private written instruments, and of parol evidence, the competency and credit of witnesses, etc., etc.

The Second Book, which treats of Pleading and Evidence in particular cases, is divided into four parts: the first treats of offences against the property and persons of individuals; the second treats of offences of a public nature, namely, offences against the King and his government, offences against public justice, offences against the public peace, offences against public trade, and offences against public police and economy; the third treats of conspiracies; and the fourth of principals and accessories.

I have now apprised the reader of what he is to expect in the following Work. Trifling as it may appear, it has cost me much time and great labour. I have taken infinite pains to simplify my subject; to reject everything redundant or irrelevant; to compress the whole into the smallest possible compass consistent with perspicuity; and to clothe it in language plain, simple, and unadorned. In fact, my sole object has been to make this a practically useful book: I neither anticipate nor desire for it a higher commendation.

A book called the Paris cash account book was kept in the office in London in which one of the partners of the firm entered the sums received from Paris from the slips sent over by the defendant. The defendant knew that the book was so kept, and that items omitted by him from the slips would necessarily be omitted from the book. The defendant fraudulently omitted to enter on the slips three sums received by him in Paris on account of his employers. When in London the defendant went through the book and compared it with the slips after two of the three items had been omitted therefrom. The jury found him guilty of an offence against s. 1 of the Falsification of Accounts Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 24), viz. of having omitted and concurred in omitting the above three sums from the Paris cash account book kept in London. Held, Alverstone, C.J., Lawrance and Ridley, JJ. SECT. 1.

INDICTMENT, WHAT, AND IN WHAT CASES IT LIES.

AN "indictment" is a written accusation of crime, made at the suit of the King, against one or more persons, and preferred to, and presented upon oath by, a grand jury; a "bill of indictment" is such written accusation before it is so presented.

It is the ordinary common law remedy for all treasons and felonies, for misprisions of treason and felony, and for misdemeanors of a public nature: 2 Hawk. c. 25, ss. 1, 4. In the case of treason and felony it is now the sole remedy except (1) that—rarely used—of impeachment, appeals of felony having been abolished in 1819 by 59 Geo. 3, c. 46: (2) that of a coroner's inquisition in cases of murder or manslaughter (see post, Book I. ch. iii.): (3) the summary remedy permitted in certain cases of felony and misdemeanor under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts of 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49) and 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 22). In the case of misdemeanors, there is also an alternative remedy by way of information, q.v. post, Book I. ch. ii. p. 139.

Breaches of common law duty.]—An indictment lies at common law for a breach of duty, which is not a mere private injury, but an outrage on the moral duties of society. Perhaps the most important example is the neglect to provide sufficient food or other necessaries (as to medical aid, see R. v. Smith, 8 C. & P. 153: Sellen v. Norman, 4 C. & P. 80: Wennall v. Adney, 3 B. & P. 247; 6 R. R. 780: R. v. Senior [1899] 1 Q. B. 283; Russell, L. C. J., at p. 289) for a person unable to provide for himself, and for whom the defendant is obliged by duty or contract to provide, where such neglect injures the health of that person, whether the person injured be of extreme age (R. v. Marriott, 8 C. & P. 425: R. v. Instan [1893] 1 Q. B. 450), or of tender years (R. v. Friend, R. & R. 20: R. v. Hogan, 2 Den. 277; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 219: R. v. Phillpot, Dears. 179; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 113: R. v. Chandler, Dears. 453; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 109; R. v. Ryland, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 99; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 10; 10 Cox, 882: R. v. Rugg, 12 Cox, 16 (C. C. R.): R. v. Jones, 19 Cox, 678), or the defendant's servant (R. v. Ridley, 2 Camp. 650: R. v. Smith, L. & C. 607; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 153), or apprentice (R. v. Self, 1 Leach, 137; 1 East, P. C. 226: R. v. Smith, 8 C. & P. 153), or a lunatic (R. v. Pelham, 8 Q. B. 959; 15 L. J. (M. C.) 105. Cf. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 26 (servants and apprentices), 53 & 54 Vict. c. 5, s. 322 (lunatics); 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 1 (children). It also lies for any act of wilful negligence, whereby human life or health is endangered, such as shipping dangerous combustibles without informing the ship-master: Williams v. H. E. I. Co., 3 East, 192; 6 R. R. 589; or exposing for sale, or possessing, with intent to sell, provisions unfit for human food: R. v. Mackarty, 6 East, 133, 141, cit.; 2 Ld. Raym. 1179; 3 Ld. Raym. 487: R. v. Dixon, 3 M. & Sel. 11; 15 R. R. 301: R. v. Haynes, 4 M. & Sel. 214: R. v. Stevenson, 3 F. & F. 106: Shillito v. Thompson, 1 Q. B. D. 12; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 18. It also lies for acts intended to interfere with or pervert the course of justice, e.g., for disposing of a dead body so as to prevent the coroner from holding an inquest upon it where an inquest ought to be held: R. v. Price, 12 Q. B. D. 247; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 51: R. v. Stephenson, 13 Q. B. D. 331; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 176; but not for burning a dead body instead of burying it, unless it be so done as to cause a public nuisance: R. v. Price, ubi supra; for manufacturing false evidence for the purpose of misleading a judicial tribunal, although the evidence is not in fact used: R. v. Vreones [1891] 1 Q. B. 360; 60 L. J. (M. C.) 62; 17 Cox, 267: or for attempting to pervert the course of public justice by publishing articles in a newspaper affecting the conduct or character of persons awaiting trial: R. v. Tibbits and Windust [1902] 1 K. B. 77; 20 Cox, 70, (C. C. R.), and cases there cited: R. v. Parke [1903] 2 K. B. 432.

It also lies for all nuisances of a public nature, though occasioned by an act in itself innocent, if the nuisance be the probable consequence of the act. R. v. Moore, 3 B. & Ad. 184; 37 R. R. 383; and see 1 Hawk. c. 75, ss. 6, 7. Under this head falls the remedy against a common innkeeper who either refuses to receive a traveller as guest in his house or to find him victuals or lodging on being tendered a reasonable price: see R. v. Rymer, 2 Q. B. D. 136; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 108; 13 Cox, 378; 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 740.

Attempts to commit offences.]—Mere intention to commit an offence is not indictable, except in the case of high treason, as to which it is said that under 25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 2, voluntas reputatur pro facto; but in all cases where the intent to commit a crime is manifested by any overt act, the party may be indicted for an attempt to commit the offence. 1 Deacon Cr. L. 643: R. v. Scofield, Cald. 397: R. v. Higgins, 2 East, 5, 21; 6 R. R. 615; R. v. Chapman, 1 Den. 432; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 152: 3 Cox, 467: R. v. Taylor, 1 F. & F. 511: R. v. Duckworth [1892] 2 Q. B. 83; 17 Cox, 495. And it is perfectly clear that every attempt (not every intention) to commit a felony or misdemeanor is a misdemeanor at common law, whether the crime attempted is one by statute or at common law. R. v. Hensler, 11 Cox, 570 (C. C. R.): R. v. Roderick, 7 C. & P. 795, Parke, B: R. v. Martin, 2 Mood. C. C. 123; 9 C. & P. 213, 215: R. v. Ransford, 13 Cox, 9 (C. C. R.): R. v. Cartwright, R. & R. 107, n.: R. v. Butler, 6 C. & P. 368. This doctrine has been applied to an attempt to commit suicide. R. v. Doody, 6 Cox, 463: R. v. Burgess, L. & C. 258; 9 Cox, 302; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 185.

To constitute an attempt the act done must be immediately connected with the commission of the offence. R. v. Eagleton, Dears. 515; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 158: R. v. Cheeseman, L. & C. 140; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 89; 9 Cox, 100: R. v. Roberts, Dears. 539; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 17. Thus, the procuring of indecent prints with intent to sell them is an indictable misdemeanor; but the merely keeping and preserving them with that intent is not. Dugdale v. R., 1 E. & B. 435; Dears. 64; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 50. So the procuring of base coin with intent to utter is indictable at common law (R. v. Fuller, R. & R. 308), but the mere possession of base coin with intent to utter it is not indictable at common law. R. v. Stewart, R. & R. 288: R. v. Heath, R. & R. 184. It is so now, in certain circumstances, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 11, post, tit. Coining; and possession of coining tools with intent to use them is indictable at common law. R. v. Sutton, 1 East, P. C. 172; Cas. K. B., temp. Hardw. 379. To render a person criminally liable for an attempt to commit an offence it is not necessary to show that if no interruption had taken place the attempt could have succeeded. R. v. Brown, 24 Q. B. D. 357; 59 L. J. (M. C.) 47; 16 Cox, 715: R. v. Ring, 61 L. J. (M. C.) 116; 17 Cox, 491 (C. C. R.): R. v. Williams [1893] 1 Q. B. 320; 62 L. J. (M. C.) 29, which overrule R. v. Collins, L. & C. 471; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 177; 9 Cox, 497, in which it had been held that if a person puts his hand into the pocket of another with intent to steal what he can find there, and the pocket is empty, he cannot be convicted of an attempt to steal.

Incitement.]—To solicit or incite another to commit a crime is an indictable misdemeanor at common law, even though the solicitation or incitement has no effect. R. v. Quail, 4 F. & F. 1076: R. v. Gregory, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 77; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 60. This includes an offer of a bribe to a person to commit an offence. Wade v. Broughton, 3 V. & B. 172: and an attempt to incite to the commission of crime is also an indictable misdemeanor at common law. R. v. Ransford, 13 Cox, 9 (C. C. R.). It is immaterial whether the principal offence is one existing by the common law or is created by statute. As to incitement to murder, see post, Book II. ch. ii. s. 1.

Disobedience to statutes.]—Where a statute declares any act or omission to be treason, felony, misprision of treason or misdemeanor, an indictment lies in respect of such act or omission. And even though a statute does not use express terms describing the nature of the offence, if it prohibits a matter of public grievance to the liberties and securities of the subject, or commands a matter of public convenience (such as the repairing of highways or the like), all acts or omissions contrary to the prohibition or command of the statute are misdemeanors at common law, punishable by indictment, unless such method of procedure do manifestly appear to be excluded by it. 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 4: R. v. Davis, Say. 163: R. v. Sainsbury, 4 T. R. 451; 2 R. R. 433: R. v. Price, 11 A. & E. 727: R. v. Stephenson, 13 Q. B. D. 331; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 176: R. v. Hall [1891] 1 Q. B. 747; 60 L. J. (M. C.) 124. In R. v. Kenyon [1901], 36 L. J. Newsp. 371, an indictment was framed for contravening s. 3 of the Disused Burial Grounds Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 72) by building on a disused Roman Catholic burial-ground. The remedy usually sought is injunction (see re Ponsford and Newport District School Board [1894] 1 Ch. 454; 63 L. J., Ch. 278. But Phillimore, J., seems to have considered the indictment good, and the defendants pleaded guilty, and in two cases were sentenced to imprisonment. If a statute specify a mode of proceeding different from that by indictment, then, if the matter were already an indictable offence at common law, and the statute merely introduces a different mode of prosecution and punishment, the remedy is alternative, and the prosecutor has still the option of proceeding by indictment at common law, or by the mode pointed out by the statute. Castle's case, Cro. Jac. 644: R. v. Robinson, 2 Burr. 799, 805: R. v. Wigg, 2 Ld. Raym. 1163; 2 Salk. 460: R. v. Balme, 2 Cowp. 648: R. v. Richard Carlile, 3 B. & Ald. 161: and see 2 Hale, 191; 1 Saund. 135, and notes; Hardcastle on Statutes (3rd ed.), 234; Maxwell on Statutes (3rd ed.), 568. And even if a statute prohibit, under a penalty, an act which was before lawful, and a subsequent statute (R. v. Boyall, 2 Burr. 832), or the same statute (in a subsequent substantive clause), ordain a mode of proceeding for the penalty different from that by indictment, the prosecutor may, notwithstanding, proceed by indictment upon the prohibitory clause, as for a misdemeanor at common law, or he may at his option proceed in the manner pointed out by the statute. 2 Hale, 171: R. v. Wright, 1 Burr. 543; and see R. v. Jones, 2 Str. 1146: R. v. Harris, 4 T. R. 202; 2 R. R. 358: R. v. Buchanan, 8 Q. B. 883; 15 L. J. (Q. B.) 227: R. v. Hall [1891] 1 Q. B. 747, at 770; 50 L. J. (M. C.) 124, Charles, J.: Saunders v. Holborn District Board [1895] 1 Q. B. 64, 69; 64 L. J. (Q. B.) 101. But if the manner of proceeding for the penalty be contained in the same clause which prohibits the act, the mode of proceeding given by the statute must be pursued, and no other; for the express mention of any other mode of proceeding impliedly excludes that of indictment. R. v. Robinson, 2 Burr. 799, 805: R. v. Buck, 2 Str. 679: R. v. Hall, ubi supra; R. v. Lovibond, 19 W. R. 753. Where a statute, in one clause, declares an act to be a public nuisance, it is indictable, though a subsequent clause subjects it to a pecuniary penalty recoverable by "information, bill, plaint, or action at law," or makes it abateable. R. v. Crawshaw, Bell, 303; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 58; 8 Cox, 375: R. v. Gregory, 5 B. & Ad. 555; 3 L. J. (M. C.) 25. It is now an established rule of construction that "where an act or omission constitutes an offence under two or more acts, or both under an act and at common law, whether any such act was passed before or after" January 1, 1890, the offender shall, "unless the contrary intention appears, be liable to be punished under either or any of those acts, or at common law, but shall not be liable to be punished twice for the same offence." 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63 (Interpretation Act, 1889) ss. 33, 42. Thus if, in the case of a common-law misdemeanor, a new mode of punishment or new mode of proceeding merely be directed, without altering the class or nature of the offence, the new punishment or new mode of proceeding is alternative, and the offender may be indicted as before for the common-law misdemeanor (R. v. Richard Carlile, 3 B. & Ald. 161); and the mere declaration that an offence shall be felony which was so at common law does not create a new offence. Williams v. R., 7 Q. B. 250, 253, Patteson, J. But if a later statute expressly alters the quality of an offence, e.g. by making it a misdemeanor instead of a felony, or a felony instead of a misdemeanor, the offence cannot be proceeded for under the earlier statute. Michell v.

Brown, 1 E. & E. 257; 28 L. J. (M. C.) 53; R. v. Cross, 1 Ld. Raym. 711; 3 Salk. 193. This result equally follows if the words "feloniously" or "deemed to be a felony" are used in the later act. R. v. Johnson, 3 M. & Sel. 539, 556; 16 R. R. 352: Bayley, J.: R. v. Solomons, 1 Mood. C. C. 292; overruling R. v. Cale, 1 Mood. C. C. 11. And if a later statute describes an offence created by a former statute, and affixes to it a different punishment, varying the procedure, and giving an appeal where there was no appeal before, the prosecutor must proceed for the offence under the later statute. Michell v. Brown, ubi supra. And where a statute make the doing of an act felonious, if a subsequent statute make it penal only, the latter statute is a virtual repeal of the former, so far as relates to the punishment of the offence. 1 Hawk. c. 40, s. 5. Where, therefore, a statute (9 Geo. 1, c. 22) made an offence a capital felony, and a subsequent statute (16 Geo. 3, c. 30) imposed a forfeiture of twenty pounds for the same offence when first committed, recoverable before justices of the peace, and made the second offence felony, the latter statute was held virtually to repeal so much of the former statute as related to the offence. R. v. Davis, 1 Leach, 271.

Disobedience to rules and orders made under statutory authority.]—Disobedience to an order relating to quarantine, made by the king in council under statutory authority, has been held to be an indictable misdemeanor at common law. R. v. Harris, 4 T. R. 202, explained in R. v. Hall [1891] 1 Q. B. 747, 765; 60 L. J. (M. C.) 124. And where a statute, the matter of which concerns the public in general, delegates to commissioners the power to make orders under it, disobedience to an order made by them in pursuance of such power is an indictable misdemeanor at common law. R. v. Walker, L. R. 10 Q. B. 355; 44 L. J. (M. C.) 169. As to failure by overseers to account to a poor law auditor, see R. v. Crossley, 10 A. & E. 132; 8 L. J. (M. C.) 81. Where a corporation were authorized by a public statute to make a towing-path on the side of a river, it was held to be an indictable misdemeanor at common law to obstruct the corporation in the execution of the powers given them by the statute. R. v. Smith, 2 Doug. 441. Disobedience to an order of a court of competent jurisdiction is indictable at common law. R. v. Robinson, 2 Burr. 799, 804; R. v. Mortlock, 7 Q. B. 459: R. v. Brisby, 1 Den. 416; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 157: R. v. Jeyes, 3 A. & E. 416: R. v. Johnson, 4 M. & Sel. 515; and see post, pt. ii. c. iii. s. 13. It was an indictable misdemeanor to obstruct a coroner in the execution of the duties imposed upon him by 4 Edw. 1, st. 2 (stat. de officio coronatoris). R. v. Price, 12 Q. B. D. 247; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 51: R. v. Stephenson, 13 Q. B. D. 331; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 176; and the same would probably be held in the case of an obstruction of the coroner in the execution of the duties imposed upon him by The Coroners Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 71), which repeals and replaces the old statute.

Private injuries.]—An indictment will not lie for a mere private injury against an individual: as for enticing away his apprentice; R. v. Daniel, 1 Salk. 380; entering his close, digging the ground, erecting a shed thereon, expelling him and keeping him out of possession; R. v. Storr, 3 Burr. 1698: R. v. Bake, Ib. 1731; pulling the thatch off a dwelling-house, of which he was in peaceable possession; R. v. Atkins, Ib. 1706; or for a private cheat; R. v. Osborn, ib. 1697; or for excluding commoners by enclosing, Willoughby's case [1588], Cro. Eliz. 90, or the like. The remedy for injuries of this description is by action only, unless they in some measure concern the King, or are accompanied by circumstances which amount to a breach of the peace. Anon., 3 Salk. 187. Nor will an indictment lie for the infringement of a right common, not to all his majesty's subjects, but only to the inhabitants of a particular district. 1 Hawk. c. 76, s. 1: Co. Litt. 56 a: Westbury v. Powel, cited in Fineux v. Hovenden, Cro. Eliz. 664; R. v. Thrower, 1 Vent. 208; 3 Keble, 28: Austin's case, 1 Vent. 189. So an indictment will not lie for the infringement of rights which are merely private, though regulated by a public statute; R. v. Richards, 8 T. R. 634; 5 R. R. 489: and see Com. Dig. Indictment (D.); nor for an act prohibited by a private statute, which tends merely to the damage of a particular individual; R. v. Pawlyn, 1 Sid. 208; nor will it lie for a mere breach of the bye-laws or customs of a corporation. R. v. Sharples, 4 T. R. 777: R. v. Gorge, 3 Salk. 189. See Com. Dig. Indictment (E.); 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.), 195, 201; and see ante, p. 3.

Offences indictable at election of accused.]—An offence punishable on summary conviction before justices, other than an assault, may, at the option of the accused, under certain circumstances be converted into an indictable offence, under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 17, which enacts as follows: "(1.) A person when charged before a court of summary jurisdiction, with an offence, in respect of the commission of which an offender is liable on summary conviction to be imprisoned for a term exceeding three months, and which is not an assault, may, on appearing before the court, and before the charge is gone into but not afterwards, claim to be tried by a jury; and thereupon the court of summary jurisdiction shall deal with the case in all respects as if the accused were charged with an indictable offence and not with an offence punishable on summary conviction, and the offence shall as respects the person so charged be deemed to be an indictable offence, and if the person so charged is committed for trial, or bailed to appear for trial, shall be prosecuted accordingly, and the expenses of the prosecution shall be payable as in cases of felony. . . . (3.) This section shall not apply to the case of a child, unless the parent or guardian of the child is present;" but if he is, "the claim under this section may be made by such parent or guardian." A list of the enactments to which this provision applies is given in Douglas, Summary Jurisdiction Procedure (8th ed.), 149. There are several other statutes, such as 12 & 13 Vict. c. 49 (Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849), s. 15; 38 & 39 Vict. c. 86 (Conspiracy and Protection of Property Act, 1875), s. 9, and 50 & 51 Vict. c. 28 (Merchandise Marks Act, 1887), s. 2, sub-s. 6, which expressly enable a defendant, when accused of an offence punishable on summary conviction under those statutes, to insist upon a trial by indictment. It is the duty of the Court of Summary Jurisdiction before going into the case to inform the accused of his right to elect: and failure to do so invalidates the subsequent summary proceedings. R. v. Cockshott [1898] 1 Q. B. 582; 67 L. J. Q. B. 467. When the defendant elects to be tried on indictment the procedure and powers of the court of trial are the same as in the case of an ordinary misdemeanor, and are not those of the court of summary jurisdiction; see R. v. Clerk of Peace for Manchester (1889), in Stone's Justice (35th ed.), 42.

Effect of repeal on pending proceedings.]—By the unqualified repeal of the statute on which an indictment is framed, though it takes place after the finding of the bill, (but before plea pleaded,) the proceedings fall to the ground and no judgment can be pronounced. R. v. Denton, Dears. 3; 18 Q. B. 761; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 207; see R. v. Mawgan in Meneage, 8 A. & E. 496; 7 L. J. (M. C.) 98. And where a prisoner was indicted for privately stealing from a shop against 10 & 11 W. 3, c. 16 (c. 23, Ruffhead), which was repealed after the offence was committed, but before the prisoner was tried, by 1 G. 4, c. 117, s. 1 (rep.), it was held that the prisoner could not be sentenced under the repealed act. R. v. M'Kenzie, R. & R. 429. But it has been held that an indictment for conspiracy to violate a statute, being a common law offence, will lie after the repeal of the statute, or in respect of an offence committed before the repeal. R. v. Thompson, 16 Q. B. 832: 20 L. J. (M. C.) 183. As to statutes passed since 1889, the Interpretation Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 63), s. 38, provides that where an Act "repeals any other enactment, then unless the contrary intention appears, the repeal shall not . . . affect any penalty, forfeiture or punishment incurred in respect of any offence committed against any enactment so repealed, or affect any investigation, legal proceeding, or remedy in respect of any such . . . penalty, forfeiture or punishment as aforesaid;" and that "any such investigation, legal proceeding, or remedy may be instituted, continued or enforced, and any such penalty, forfeiture or punishment may be imposed as if the repealing act had not been passed." See R. v. Webb (1904) 197 Cent. Cr. Ct. Sess. Pap. 627, Walton J. Particular clauses to the like effect were common in prior statutes: as to their effect, see R. v. Smith, L. & C. 131; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 105.

Vexatious indictments.]—At common law any person was at liberty to prefer a bill of indictment before a grand jury against another for any indictable offence, without any previous inquiry before a justice into the truth of the accusation. This right was often much abused, because as the grand jury only hear the evidence for the prosecution, and the accused is unrepresented before them, it frequently happened that a person innocent of the charge made against him, and who had no notice that any proceedings were about to be instituted, found that a grand jury had been induced to find a true bill against him, and so to injure his character and put him to great expense and inconvenience in defending himself against a groundless accusation. This common law right has been restricted by legislation in the case of a number of crimes. The Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 17), provides (s. 1) that "no bill of indictment for any of the offences following" (see list below) shall be presented to or found by any grand jury, unless the prosecutor or other person presenting such indictment has been bound by recognizance to prosecute or give evidence against the person accused of such offence, or unless the person accused has been committed to or detained in custody, or has been bound by recognizance to appear to answer to an indictment to be preferred against him for such offence, or unless such indictment for such offence, if charged to have been committed in England, be preferred by the direction or with the consent in writing of a judge of one of the superior courts of law at Westminster (i.e. now of the High Court of Justice) or of his majesty's attorney-general or solicitor-general for England, or unless such indictment for such offence, if charged to have been committed in Ireland, be preferred by the direction or with the consent in writing of a judge of one of the superior courts of law in Dublin (i.e. now of the Supreme Court of Ireland), or of his majesty's attorney-general or solicitor-general for Ireland, or (in the case of an indictment for perjury) by the direction of any court, judge or public functionary, authorized by the Criminal Procedure Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 100), to direct a prosecution for perjury." The offences specified in the Act of 1859 are:

(a) Perjury and subornation of perjury;

(b) Conspiracy;

(c) Obtaining money or other property by false pretences (but not the mere attempt to obtain: R. v. Burton, 13 Cox, 71, C. C. R.);

(d) Keeping a gambling house or a disorderly house;
(e) And any indecent assault (22 & 23 Vict. c. 17, s. 1).
To these have been added:
(f) All misdemeanors under Part 2 of the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 18), as modified by the Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), and the Bankruptcy Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 71);
(g) All libels or alleged libels, apparently including blasphemous, defamatory, seditious and obscene libel (44 & 45 Vict. c. 60, s. 6);
(h) All misdemeanors under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 17);
(i) All offences punishable on indictment under the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 28, s. 13); and (j) Misdemeanors under the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904 (4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 25).

A committal for trial by justices sitting in and acting for one petty sessional division of a county on a charge arising in another petty sessional division of the same county is a good committal under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 17, s. 1. R. v. Beckley, 20 Q. B. D. 187; 57 L. J. (M. C.) 22. By s. 2 of the Act of 1859, "where any charge or complaint shall be made before any one or more of her majesty's justices of the peace that any person has committed any of the offences aforesaid within the jurisdiction of such justice, and such justice shall refuse to commit or to bail the person charged with such offence to be tried for the same, then in case the prosecutor shall desire to prefer an indictment respecting the said offence, it shall be lawful for the said justice, and he is hereby required, to take the recognizance of such prosecutor to prosecute the said charge or complaint, and to transmit such recognizance, information and depositions, if any, to the court in which such indictment ought to be preferred, in the same manner as such justice would have done in case he had committed the person charged to be tried for such offence." Where a prosecutor bonâ fide prefers before a justice a charge in respect of an offence in the above list, alleged to have been committed within his jurisdiction, and the justice dismisses the charge for want of evidence,—even where there is no evidence in support of the charge,—the dismissal is equivalent to a refusal to commit, and the prosecutor is entitled under s. 2 to require the justice to take his recognizance to prosecute the charge. R. v. Lord Mayor of London, ex parte Gostling, 16 Cox, 77; 54 L. T. 646; 50 J. P. 711. Where a magistrate has refused to grant process he cannot be compelled to do so, nor to take recognizances under the act, unless an indictable offence is disclosed by the information: Ex parte Wason, L. R. 4 Q. B. 573; and see R. v. Battier, 44 J. P. 490; ex parte Reid, 49 J. P. 600; and the only remedy of the would-be prosecutor is to apply ex parte to a judge of the K. B. D. for leave to prefer a bill.

In considering the sufficiency of a recognizance to prosecute under s. 1 of the Vexatious Indictments Act, reference may be made to the accompanying depositions to ascertain the particulars of the offence charged. R. v. Bell, 12 Cox, 37.

If a prosecutor is bound over under s. 2 after a refusal to commit for trial, but fails to send up a bill to the grand jury at the sessions for which he is bound before that body is discharged, the court cannot enlarge his recognizances to the next sessions. R. v. Eayres [1900], 64 J. P. 217. The fiat of the attorney-general may be issued even in cases where the magistrates have already refused to commit for trial. R. v. Rogers, 66 J. P. 825, Fulton, Recorder. Where the prosecution is instituted on the fiat of the attorney-general, it would seem sufficient to lodge the fiat with the clerk of the court of trial, and unnecessary to produce or prove it at the trial. R. v. Dexter, 19 Cox, 360, Grantham, J.

It is not necessary that the performance of any of the conditions mentioned in the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859, should be averred in the indictment or proved before the petty jury. Knowlden v. R., 5 B. & S. 532; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 219; 9 Cox, 483. If a prisoner committed for obtaining a chattel by false pretences be indicted in one count for that offence, and in another count for obtaining another chattel by false pretences, without any authority having been obtained under the statute to prefer such second charge [excepting where the second charge is founded upon facts disclosed in the depositions, 30 & 31 Vict. c. 35, s. 1, infra], the proper course is for the judge at the trial to direct the second count to be quashed, and not to put the prisoner to plead to it. If, however, the two counts are allowed to go to the jury, and evidence is given respecting each charge, and the jury convict on each count, the conviction cannot be supported on either—not on the second, because it ought to have been quashed; nor on the first, because improper evidence has been received. R. v. Fuidge, L. & C. 390; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 74. When the indictment is preferred by the direction or with the consent in writing of a judge of one of the superior courts, it is for the judge, to whom the application is made for such direction or consent, to decide what materials ought to be before him, and it is not necessary to summon the party accused, or to bring him before the judge. R. v. Bray, 3 B. & S. 255; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 11. Where three persons were committed for conspiracy, and afterwards the solicitor-general, acting under this statute, directed a bill to be preferred against a fourth person who had not been committed, and all four were indicted together for the same conspiracy, such a course was held to be unobjectionable. Knowlden v. R., ubi supra. It was doubted whether an indictment under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 115, s. 57 (rep.), for giving false evidence before a naval court-martial, was an indictment for perjury within the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859; R. v. Heane, 4 B & S. 947; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 115; and whether that statute applied to offences committed out of England and Ireland. Id. Under the present Naval Discipline Act (29 & 30 Vict. c. 109, s. 67), it is provided that if perjury before a court-martial out of England is tried in England all statutes and laws applicable to cases of perjury shall apply to the case.

The Act of 1859 was found to be attended by the inconvenience that it was frequently objected on the trial of a prisoner charged with an offence falling under its provisions, that when before the magistrates he had not been charged with, nor committed by them for, the precise offence stated in the indictment, although it was abundantly evident from the depositions that the charge made in the indictment was substantially, although perhaps not in form, gone into before the magistrates. This inconvenience was remedied by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 35), which, after reciting that it is found that delay and inconvenience are frequently caused by the provisions contained in s. 1 of 22 & 23 Vict. c. 17, in cases not within the mischief for remedy whereof that act was made and passed, and that it is expedient to restrict the operation thereof, enacts (s. 1) that, "the said provisions of the said first section of the said Act shall not extend or be applicable to prevent the presentment to or finding by a grand jury of any bill of indictment containing a count or counts for any of the offences mentioned in the said Act, if such count or counts be such as may now be lawfully joined with the rest of such bill of indictment, and if the same count or counts be founded (in the opinion of the court in or before which the same bill of indictment be preferred) upon the facts or evidence disclosed in any examinations or depositions taken before a justice of the peace, in the presence of the person accused or proposed to be accused by such bill of indictment, and transmitted or delivered to such court in due course of law; and nothing in the said act shall extend or be applicable to prevent the presentment to or finding by a grand jury of any bill of indictment, if such bill be presented to the grand jury with the consent of the court in or before which the same may be preferred." See hereon, R. v. Brown [1895] 1 Q. B. 119; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 1; 18 Cox, 81. This section is to be read with 22 & 23 Vict. c. 17, for the purposes of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62 (Debtors Act, 1869), s. 18. R. v. Bell, 12 Cox, 37, Montague Smith, J. The "consent of the court," mentioned in the last part of s. 1, is not a mere formality, and if the court grants such consent without having before it materials on which it may exercise a discretion, the indictment, or any counts contained in it, preferred in pursuance of such consent may be quashed. R. v. Bradlaugh, 15 Cox, 156. But it is not necessary to obtain the consent of the court to the addition of counts for offences within the Vexatious Indictments Act before the bill is presented to the grand jury, if the facts on which the counts are founded appear upon the depositions. R. v. Clarke, 59 J. P. 248, Collins, J. Semble, it is necessary so to obtain such consent where it is desired to prefer a fresh bill of indictment, whether it charge offences disclosed upon the depositions or not, as is the practice at the Central Criminal Court. Charges preferred before the justices on which they have refused to commit cannot be joined in an indictment with those on which the justices did commit, unless the prosecutor has been bound over as to the dismissed charges. R. v. Crabbe, 59 J. P. 247, Fulton, C. S. Where a count charging conspiracy to defraud based on evidence appearing on the depositions was added to counts charging perjury and conspiracy to commit perjury, the Court held the added count to be embarrassing, and refused to allow evidence to be given in support of it. R. v. Harris, 64 J. P. 360, Grantham, J.

Costs of vexatious indictments.]—30 & 31 Vict. c. 35, s. 2, provides that "whenever any bill of indictment shall be preferred to any grand jury, under the provisions of the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (supra), against any person who has not been committed to or detained in custody or bound by recognizance to answer such an indictment, and the person accused thereby shall be acquitted thereon, it shall be lawful for the court before which such an indictment shall be tried, in its discretion, to direct and order that the prosecutor or other person by or at whose instance such indictment shall have been preferred shall pay unto the accused person the just and reasonable costs, charges and expenses of such accused person and his witnesses (if any) caused or occasioned by or consequent upon the preferring of such bill of indictment, to be taxed by the proper officer of the court; and upon non-payment of such costs, charges and expenses within one calendar month after the date of such direction and order, it shall be lawful for any of the superior courts of law at Westminster (i.e. now of the High Court of Justice), or any judge thereof, or for the justices and judges of the Central Criminal Court (if the bill of indictment has been preferred in that Court), to issue against the person on whom such order is made such and the like writ or writs, process or processes as may now be lawfully issued by any of the said superior courts for enforcing judgment thereof." Where the indictment is preferred to the grand jury by a private prosecutor, and a true bill found, and the director of public prosecutions afterwards undertakes the case, and on the trial the defendant is acquitted, no order can be made on such director for payment of the defendant's costs under this section, notwithstanding 42 & 43 Vict. c. 22, s. 7. Stubbs v. Director of Public Prosecutions, 24 Q. B. D. 577; 17 Cox, 1. It seems doubtful, indeed, whether in any case an order under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 35, s. 2, can be made on such director. It is very difficult to conceive what the circumstances could be which would justify such an order upon him. Id. Judgment of Cave, J., ad fin. As to costs see further, post, Book I. ch. vi.

SECT. 2.

AGAINST WHOM AN INDICTMENT LIES.

AN indictment lies against all persons who actually commit, or who procure, or assist in, the commission of any crime, or who knowingly harbour a traitor or felon; for each, in contemplation of law, is guilty, and liable to punishment according to the part which he takes in the perpetration or concealment of the offence.

Number and gender.]—When a statute (whether passed before or after 1850) creates or defines an offence punishable on indictment or on summary conviction, unless the contrary intention appears in the statute, words importing the masculine gender include females, and words in the singular include the plural, and words in the plural include the singular: s. 1 of the Interpretation Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, which re-enacts part of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 14)).

Corporations.]—By s. 2 (1) of the same Act "in the construction of every enactment relating to an offence punishable on indictment or summary conviction, whether contained in an Act passed before or after" January 1, 1890, "the expression 'person' shall, unless a contrary intention appears, include a body corporate." See R. v. Tyler [1891] 2 Q. B. 588, 594, Bowen, L.J. A contrary intention would be inferred in the case of treason, felony, or misdemeanors involving personal violence: Pharmaceutical Society v. London & Provincial Supply Association, 5 App. Cas. 857, 869; 49 L. J. (Q. B.) 736; R. v. Great West Laundry Co., 13 Manitoba, 66: and in cases where the only penalty for the offence is imprisonment or corporal punishment. See Pearks Gunston & Tee v. Ward [1902], 2 K. B. 1, 11, Channell, J.: and a corporation aggregate has been held incapable of perjury. Wych v. Meal, 3 P. Wms. 310; 24 Eng. Rep. 1078. But a corporation aggregate may be indicted, by their corporate name, for breaches of public duty, whether in the nature of nonfeasance, such as the non-repair of highways or bridges which it is their duty to repair: R. v. Birmingham & Gloucester Rail. Co., 2 Q. B. 47; 9 C. & P. 469; or of misfeasance, such as the obstruction of a highway by a railway company in a manner not authorized by their act of parliament. R. v. Great North of England Rail. Co., 9 Q. B. 315; 16 L. J. (M. C.) 16: Att.-Gen. v. London & North Western Rail. Co. [1900]; 1 Q. B. 78. It would seem, also, that a corporation may be indicted by its corporate name, and fined, for a libel published by its order. See Pharmaceutical Society v. London & Provincial Supply Association, at p. 870, per Lord Blackburn: Eastern Counties Rail. Co. v. Broom, 6 Ex. 314: Whitfield v. South-Eastern Rail. Co., E. B. & E. 115; 27 L. J. (Q. B.) 229. Trial of an indictment against a corporation cannot take place before a court of quarter sessions. See Certiorari, post, Book I. ch. i. s. 13.

Capacity.]—The capacity to commit crime presupposes an act of understanding and an exercise of will; and "the full definition of every crime contains expressly or by implication a proposition as to a state of mind. In all cases whatever, competent age, sanity, and some degree of freedom from coercion are assumed to be essential to criminality." R. v. Tolson, Q. B. D. 168, 187, Stephen, J.

Degrees of Complicity.]—We proceed to consider the liability of the respective parties to an offence, and the several grounds of exemption from criminal liability, under the following heads:—

Principals in the first degree.]—The general definition of a principal in the first degree is, one who is the actor or actual perpetrator of the fact. 1 Hale, 233, 615. But it is not necessary that he should be actually present when the offence is consummated; for if one lay poison purposely for another who takes it and is killed, he who laid the poison, though absent when it was taken, is a principal in the first degree. Vaux's case, 4 Co. Rep. 44 b; Fost. 349: R. v. Harley, 4 C. & P. 369. Nor is it necessary that the act should be perpetrated with his own hands; for if an offence be committed through the medium of an innocent agent, the employer, though absent when the act is done, is answerable as a principal in the first degree. See R. v. Giles, 1 Mood. C. C. 166: R. v. Michael, 2 Mood. C. C. 120; 9 C. & P. 356: R. v. Mazeau, 9 C. & P. 676: R. v. Bull, 1 Cox, 281: R. v. Manley, Id. 104: R. v. Clifford, 2 C. & K. 202: R. v. Bleasdale, Ib. 765: R. v. Butt, 15 Cox, 564 (C. C. R.). Thus, if a child, under the age of discretion, or any other instrument excused from the responsibility of his actions by defect of understanding, ignorance of the fact, or other cause, be incited to the commission of murder or any other crime, the inciter, though absent when the fact was committed, is liable for the act of his agent, and a principal in the first degree. Fost. 349; 1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 7: R. v. Palmer, 1 B. & P. (N. R.) 96; 2 Leach, 978: R. v. Butcher, Bell, 6; 28 L. J. (M. C.) 14; 8 Cox, 77. But if the instrument be aware of the consequences of his act, he is a principal in the first degree, and the employer, if he is absent when the fact is committed, is an accessory before the fact: R. v. Stewart, R. & R. 363: R. v. Williams, 1 Den. 39; 1 C. & K. 589; or, if he be present, is a principal in the second degree; Fost. 349; unless the instrument concur in the act merely for the purpose of detecting and punishing the employer, in which case he is considered to be an innocent agent. R. v. Bannen, 2 Mood. C. C. 309; 1 C. & K. 295: R. v. Johnson, C. & Mar. 218.

Principals in the second degree.]—Principals in the second degree are those who are present at the commission of the offence, and aid and abet its commission.

A person may be a principal in the second degree even if from sex or age incapable of being a principal in the first degree. R. v. Ram, 17 Cox, 609, Bowen, L.J.: Lord Baltimore's case, 4 Burr. 2179: R. v. Eldershaw, 3 C. & P. 396.

Presence, in this sense, is either actual or constructive. It is not necessary that the party should be actually present, an ear or eye-witness of the transaction; he is, in construction of law, present, aiding and abetting, if, with the intention of giving assistance, he be near enough to afford it, should occasion arise. Thus, if he be outside the house, watching, to prevent surprise, or the like, whilst his companions are in the house committing a felony, such constructive presence is sufficient to make him a principal in the second degree. Fost. 347, 350; 2 Hawk c. 29, ss. 7, 8; 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 162; 1 Hale, 555. See R. v. Borthwick, 1 Doug. 207: Coalheavers' case, 1 Leach, 64; 1 East P. C. 343: R. v. Gogerly, R. & R. 343: R. v. Owen, 1 Mood. C. C. 96. But he must be sufficiently near to give assistance; R. v. Stewart, R. & R. 363; and the mere circumstance of a party going towards a place where a felony is to be committed, in order to assist to carry off the property, and assisting in carrying it off, will not make him a principal in the second degree, unless, at the time of the felonious taking, he was within such a distance as to be able to assist in it. R. v. Kelly, R. & R. 421; 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 164. So, where two persons broke open a warehouse, and stole thereout a quantity of butter, which they carried along the street thirty yards, and then fetched the prisoner, who, being apprised of the robbery, assisted in carrying away the property, it was held that he was not a principal, but only an accessory. R. v. King, R. & R. 332. See R. v. M'Makin, R. & R. 333, n.: R. v. Dyer, 2 East, P.C. 767. And although an act be committed in pursuance of a previous concerted plan between the parties, those who are not present, or so near as to be able to afford aid and assistance at the time when the offence is committed, are not principals, but accessories before the fact. R. v. Soares, R. & R. 25: R. v. Davis, Id. 113: R. v. Else, Id. 142: R. v. Badcock, Id. 249: R. v. Hurse, 2 M. & Rob. 360: R. v. Manners, 7 C. & P. 801: R. v. Howell, 9 C. & P. 437: 3 St. Tr., N. S. 1087: R. v. Tuckwell, C. & Mar. 215. So, if one of them have been apprehended before the commission of the offence by the other, he can be considered only as an accessory before the fact. R. v. Johnson, C. & Mar. 218. But presence during the whole of the transaction is not necessary; for instance, if several combine to forge an instrument, and each executes by himself a distinct part of the forgery, and they are not together when the instrument is completed, they are, nevertheless, all guilty as principals. R. v. Bingley, R. & R. 446: R. v. Atwell, 2 East, P. C. 768. As, if A. counsel B. to make the paper, C. to engrave the plate, and D. to fill up the names of a forged note, and they do so, each without knowing that the others are employed for that purpose, B., C., and D. may be indicted for the forgery, and A. as an accessory; R. v. Dade, 1 Mood, C. C. 307; for, if several make distinct parts of a forged instrument, each is a principal, though he do not know by whom the other parts are executed, and though it is finished by one alone in the absence of the others. R. v. Kirkwood, 1 Mood. C. C. 304. See R. v. Kelly, 2 C. & K. 379. "Although the prisoner might not be able to write himself, yet if he got any one to write the name, he is as much guilty of forgery as if he wrote it himself." R. v. James, 4 Cox, 90, Erle, J.

There must also be a participation in the act; for even if a man is present whilst a felony is committed, if he takes no part in it and does not act in concert with those who commit it, he will not be a principal in the second degree, merely because he did not endeavour to prevent the felony, or failed to apprehend the felon. 1 Hale, 439; Fost. 350. See post, Book II., Part IV., Misprision. It is not necessary, however, to prove that the party actually aided in the commission of the offence; if he watched for his companions in order to prevent surprise, or remained at a convenient distance, in order to favour their escape, if necessary, or was in such a situation as to be able readily to come to their assistance, the knowledge of which was calculated to give additional confidence to his companions, in contemplation of law, he was present aiding and abetting. So, a participation, the result of a concerted design to commit a specific offence, is sufficient to constitute a principal in the second degree. Thus, if several act in concert to steal a man's goods, and he is induced by fraud to trust one of them, in the presence of the others, with the possession of the goods, and then another of the party entices the owner away in order that he who has the goods may carry them off, all are guilty as principals. R. v. Standley, R. & R. 305; 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 167: R. v. Passey, 7 C. & P. 282: R. v. Lockett, Id. 300. So it has been held, that to aid and assist a person, to the jurors unknown, to obtain money by ring-dropping, is felony, if the jury find that the prisoner was confederate with the person unknown to obtain the money by means of the practice. R. v. Moore, 1 Leach, 314: 2 East, P. C. 679. So, if two persons driving carriages incite each other to drive furiously, and one of them run over and kill a man, it is manslaughter in both. R. v. Swindall, 2 C. & K. 230; 2 Cox 141. So, also if three persons amuse themselves by shooting with a rifle at a target, without taking proper precautions to prevent injury to others, and one of the shots kills a man, all three are guilty of manslaughter, although there is no proof which of the three fired the fatal shot. R. v. Salmon, 6 Q. B. D. 79; 50 L. J. (M. C.) 25: 14 Cox 494. If one encourages another to commit suicide, and is present abetting him while he does so, such person is guilty of murder as a principal; and if two persons encourage each other to self-murder, and one kills himself, but the other fails in the attempt, the latter is a principal in the murder of the other. R. v. Dyson, R. & R. 523; R. v. Alison, 8 C. & P. 418: R. v. Jessop, 16 Cox, 204, Field, J.; R. v. Stormonth, 61 J. P. 729; Ridley, J.: R. v. Abbott, 67 J. P. 151, Kennedy, J. So, likewise, if several persons combine for an unlawful purpose, or for a purpose to be carried into effect by unlawful means; see Fost. 351, 352; particularly, if it is to be carried into effect notwithstanding any opposition that may be offered against it; Fost. 353, 354; and one of them, in the prosecution of it, kills a man, it is murder in all who are present, whether they actually aid or abet or not (Sissinghurst-house case, 1 Hale, 462) provided that the death were caused by the act of some one of the party in the course of his endeavours to effect the common object of the assembly. 1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 52: R. v. Hodgson, 1 Leach, 6: 1 East, P. C. 258: R. v. Plummer, Kel. (J.) 109: Fost. 352. But it is not sufficient that the common purpose is merely unlawful: it must either be felonious, or, if it be to commit a misdemeanor, then there must be evidence to show that the parties engaged intended to carry it out at all hazards. R. v. Skeet, 4 F. & F. 931: see R. v. Luck, 3 F. & F. 483: R. v. Doddridge, 8 Cox, 335. And the act must be the result of the confederacy; for, if several are out for the purpose of committing a felony. and, upon alarm and pursuit, run different ways, and one of them kills a pursuer to avoid being taken, the others are not to be considered as principals in that offence. R. v. White, R. & R. 99. Thus, where a gang of poachers, consisting of the prisoners and Williams, attacked a gamekeeper, beat him, and left him senseless upon the ground, but Williams returned, and whilst the gamekeeper was insensible upon the ground, took from him his gun, pocket-book, and money, Park, J., held that this was robbery in Williams only. R. v. Hawkins, 3 C. & P. 392. As to the proper directions to the jury in such a case, see R. v. Price, 8 Cox, 96, Byles, J. The purpose must also be unlawful; for, if the original object is lawful, and be prosecuted by lawful means, should one of the party in the prosecution of it kill a man, although the party killing, and all those who actually aid and abet him in the act, may, according to circumstances, be guilty of murder or manslaughter, yet, the other persons who are present, and who do not actually aid and abet, are not guilty as principals in the second degree. Fost. 354, 355; 2 Hawk, c. 29, s. 9.

A mere participation in the act, without a felonious participation in the design, will not be sufficient. 1 East, P. C. 258: R. v. Plummer, Kel. (J.) 109. Thus, if a master assaults another with malice prepense, and the servant, ignorant of his master's felonious design, takes part with him and kills the other, it is only manslaughter in the servant, though it is murder in the master. 1 Hale, 446.

In the case of murder by duelling, both of the seconds are principals in the second degree, as they give aid and assistance by their countenance and encouragement of the principals in the first degree, the actual fighters. R. v. Young, 8 C. & P. 644: R. v. Cuddy, 1 C. & K. 210, although Lord Hale considered, that, as far as relates to the second of the party killed, the rule of law in this respect had been too far strained; and he seems to doubt whether a second should be deemed a principal in the second degree. 1 Hale, 452, 453. A prize-fight is illegal, and all persons present, aiding and abetting therein, are guilty of assault as principals in the second degree. R. v. Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534; 51 L. J. (M. C.) 66. It was once held, that all persons present at a prize-fight, having gone thither with the purpose of seeing the prize-fighters strike each other, were principals in the breach of the peace, and guilty of an assault; R. v. Perkins, 4 C. & P. 537, Patteson, J.; see R. v. Murphy, 6 C. & P. 103. But it is now settled that mere voluntary presence as spectators at a prize-fight, does not as a matter of law necessarily render persons so present guilty of an assault as aiders and abettors of the fight: R. v. Coney, supra; although, semble, that the mere presence of a person, unexplained, at a prize-fight affords some evidence for the consideration of a jury of aiding and abetting in the fight. Id.

If the principal was insane at the commission of the act, no person can be convicted as an aider and abettor of his act. R. v. Tyler, 8 C. & P. 616. In R. v. Coombes [1895] Cent. Crim. Ct., Wood-Renton on Lunacy, 913, Kennedy, J., ruled that a man could not be convicted as accessory after the fact to a murder committed by an insane boy. It is submitted that in consequence of the alteration of the verdict in cases of insanity by the Trial of Lunatics Act, 1883, (post, ch. v. Trial, etc.), these two rulings are not in accordance with the present law. And in R. v. Tyler, ubi supra, where an insane man collected together a number of persons, who armed themselves with a common purpose of resisting the lawful authorities, and in their presence he shot a peace-officer who came to apprehend him under a warrant, it was held that they were guilty of murder as principals in the first degree; and that no apprehension of personal danger to themselves from him furnished any excuse to them for assisting in his illegal acts. Cf. McGrowther's case, Fost. 13, 217; 18 St. Tr. 391.

Aiders and abettors were formerly defined to be accessories at the fact, and could not be tried until the principal had been convicted or outlawed. Fost, 347. But it has long since been decided that all those who are present aiding and abetting when a felony is committed, are principals in the second degree, and may be arraigned and tried before the principal in the first degree has been found guilty; 2 Hale, 323; and may be convicted, though the party charged as principal in the first degree is acquitted. R. v. Taylor, 1 Leach, 360; 1 East, P. C. 351: Banson v. Offley, 2 Show, 510; 3 Mod. 121: R. v. Wallis, 1 Salk. 334: R. v. Towle, R. & R. 314; 2 Marsh. 465; 3 Price, 145.

In Stephen's Digest of the Criminal Law, p. 36 (5th ed.), it is laid down that principals in the second degree in felony, may in all cases be indicted as principals in the first degree. But where by particular statutes the punishment is different (of which it would be difficult now to find an instance), then principals in the second degree must be indicted specially as aiders and abettors. 1 East, P. C. 348, 350: R. v. Sterne, 1 Leach, 473: 2 East, P. C. 701. See, however, R. v. Manning, 2 C. & K. 903, n. If indicted as aiders and abettors, an indictment charging that A. gave the mortal blow, and that B., C. and D. were present aiding and abetting, would be sustained by evidence that B. gave the blow, and that A., C. and D. were present aiding and abetting; and even if it appeared that the act was committed by a person not named in the indictment, the aiders and abettors might nevertheless be convicted. R. v. Borthwick, 1 Doug. 207; 1 East, P. C. 350. See R. v. Swindall, 2 C. & K. 230; 2 Cox, 141. And the legal result is the same even where the jury say that they are not satisfied which gave the blow, if they are satisfied that one of them did, and that the others were present aiding and abetting. R. v. Downing, 1 Den. 52; 2 C. & K. 382: and see R. v. Salmon (ante, p. 14). Where a prisoner was convicted upon an indictment which charged him with rape as a principal in the first count, and as an aider and abettor in the second, it was held that the conviction upon the first count was good. R. v. Folkes, 1 Mood. C. C. 354: R. v. Gray, 7 C. & P. 164. See R. v. Crisham, C. & Mar. 187: R. v. Downing, supra.

In treason, and in offences below felony, and in all felonies in which the punishment of principals in the first degree and of principals in the second degree is the same, the indictment may charge all who are present and abet the fact as principals in the first degree; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 64: Mackalley's case, 9 Co. Rep. 67 b: R. v. Rogers, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 136: 37 L. J. (M. C.) 83; provided the offence permit of a participation; Fost. 345; or specially as aiders and abettors. R. v. Crisham, supra. By the Accessories, etc. Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 94), s. 8, "whoever shall aid, abet, counsel or procure the commission of any misdemeanor, whether the same be a misdemeanor at common law, or by virtue of any act passed or to be passed, shall be liable to be tried, indicted and punished as a principal offender." Where, therefore, upon the trial of an indictment charging A. with feloniously wounding, and B. with feloniously aiding and abetting him in the felony, the jury found A. guilty of unlawfully wounding, it was held that B. was properly convicted of aiding and abetting in the misdemeanor. R. v. Waudby [1895] 2 Q. B. 482; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 251 (C. C. R.). If the abettor and principal in a misdemeanor are indicted together as principals, the abettor may be convicted, although the principal is acquitted. R. v. Burton, 13 Cox, 71 (C. C. R.).

Accessories before the fact.]—An accessory before the fact is one who, though absent at the time of the felony committed, doth yet procure, counsel, command or abet another to commit a felony. 1 Hale, 615: R. v. Macdaniel, 19 St. Tr. 745; Fost. 121.

It is only in felonies that there can be accessories: in high treason, every instance of incitement, etc., which in felony would make a man an accessory before the fact, will make him a principal traitor; Fost. 341—346; and he must be indicted as such. 1 Hale, 233. And, all those who in felony would be accessories before the fact, in offences under felony are principals and indictable as such. 4 Bl. Com. 36: 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 174: R. v. Clayton, 1 C. & K. 128: R. v. Moland, 2 Mood. C. C. 276; R. v. Greenwood, 2 Den. 453; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 8, supra.

If the party be actually or constructively present when the felony is committed, he is, as we have seen (ante, p. 12), an aider and abettor, and not an accessory before the fact; for it is essential, to constitute the offence of accessory, that the party should be absent at the time the offence is committed. 1 Hale, 615: R. v. Gordon, 1 Leach, 515; 1 East, P. C. 315, 352. Acting upon this rule, Lord Coleridge, C. J., directed the acquittal of a woman indicted as accessory before the fact to a murder, it being proved that she was present at the time when the murder was committed, and was therefore liable, if at all, as a principal. R. v. Brown, 14 Cox, 144.

The procurement may be personal, or through the intervention of a third person; Fost. 125: R. v. Earl of Somerset, 2 St. Tr. 965, 19 St. Tr. 801, cit.: R. v. Cooper, 5 C. & P. 535.

It may also be direct, by hire, counsel, command, or conspiracy: or indirect, by evincing an express liking, approbation, or assent to another's felonious design of committing a felony; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 16; but the bare concealment of a felony to be committed will not make the party concealing it an accessory before the fact; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 23; nor will a tacit acquiescence, or words which amount to a bare permission, be sufficient to constitute this offence. 1 Hale, 616.

The procurement must be continuing: for if the procurer of a felony repents, and before the felony is committed, actually countermands his order, and the principal notwithstanding commits the felony, the original contriver will not be an accessory. 1 Hale, 618.

If the accessory orders or advises one crime, and the principal intentionally commits another; as, for instance, if he is ordered or advised to burn a house, and instead thereof commits larceny; or, to commit a crime against A., and instead of so doing commits the same against B.,—the accessory will not be answerable; 1 Hale, 617; but if the principal commits the same offence against B. by mistake, instead of A., it seems it would be otherwise. Fost. 370 et seq.; but see 1 Hale, 617; 3 Co. Inst. 51. But it is clear that the accessory is liable for all that ensues upon the execution of the unlawful act commanded; as, for instance, if A. commands B. to beat C., and he beats him so that he dies, A. is accessory to the murder. 4 Bl. Com. 37; 1 Hale, 617. Or if A. commands B. to burn the house of C., and in doing so the house of D. is also burnt, A. is accessory to the burning of D.'s house. R. v. Saunders, Plowd. 473. So, if the offence commanded is in fact committed, although by different means from those commanded: as, for instance, if J. W. hires J. S. to poison A., and instead of poisoning him, he shoots him, J. W. is, nevertheless, liable as accessory. Fost. 369, 370. Where the procurement is through an intermediate agent, it is not necessary that the accessory should name the person to be procured to do the act. R. v. Cooper, 5 C. & P. 535. If the agent is innocent the person procuring his act is a principal and not an accessory. R. v. Bull, 1 Cox, 281; R. v. Manley, 1 Cox, 104; 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 165.

To support an indictment for being accessory before the fact, there must be some active proceeding on the part of the defendant; i.e. he must procure, incite, or in some other way encourage the act done by the principal. Therefore where T. acted as stakeholder on the occasion of a prize-fight which ended in the death of one of the fighters, but was not present at the fight and took no other part in the circumstances attending it than to hold the stakes and afterwards hand them over to the winner, it was held that he was not liable to be convicted as accessory before the fact to the manslaughter. R. v. Taylor, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 147; 44 L. J (M. C.) 67; 13 Cox, 68.

Several persons may be convicted on a joint charge against them as accessories before the fact to a particular felony, though the only evidence against them is of separate acts done by each at separate times and places. R. v. Barber, 1 C. & K. 442.

In manslaughter, it has been said, there can be no accessories before the fact, for the offence is sudden and unpremeditated; and therefore where A. is indicted for murder, and B. as accessory, if the jury find A. guilty of manslaughter, they must acquit B. 1 Hale, 437, 466, 615; 1 Hawk. c. 30, s. 2. This doctrine rests on Bibithe's case, 4 Co. Rep. 43 b.: Goose's case, Moore, 461: Goff v. Byby, Cro. Eliz. 540; and is controverted by the late Mr. Greaves, Crim. Cons. Acts (1st ed.), p. 23. And where a man procured and gave a woman poison in order that she might take it and so procure abortion, and she did take it in his absence, and died of its effects, it was held that he might be convicted as an accessory before the fact to the crime of manslaughter. R. v. Gaylor, Dears. & B. 288; 7 Cox, 253. In the course of the argument in that case, Bramwell, B., said, "Suppose a man for mischief gives another a strong dose of medicine, not intending any further injury than to cause him to be sick and uncomfortable, and death ensues, would not that be manslaughter? Suppose, then, that another had counselled him to do it, would not he who counselled be an accessory before the fact?"

At common law an accessory could not, without his own consent, unless tried with the principal, be brought to trial until the guilt of his principal had been legally ascertained by conviction (1 Anne, st. 2, c. 9, s. 1, rep.) or outlawry. Plowden, 97: Fost. 360: 1 Hale, 623. But under the Accessories, etc., Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 2), "whosoever shall counsel, procure, or command any other person to commit any felony, whether the same be a felony at common law, or by virtue of any Act passed or to be passed, shall be guilty of felony, and may be indicted and convicted either as an accessory before the fact to the principal felony together with the principal felon, or after the conviction of the principal felon, or may be indicted and convicted of a substantive felony, whether the principal felon shall or shall not have been previously convicted, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice, and may thereupon be punished in the same manner as any accessory before the fact to the same felony if convicted as an accessory may be punished." An indictment will not lie under this section where no felony is in fact committed. R. v. Gregory, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 77; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 60. "No person who shall be once duly tried, either as an accessory before or after the fact, or for a substantive felony (under the provisions hereinbefore contained), shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for the same offence." Id. s. 7. And "if any principal offender shall be in anywise convicted of any felony, it shall be lawful to proceed against any accessory, either before or after the fact, in the same manner as if such principal felon had been attainted thereof, notwithstanding such principal felon shall die, or be pardoned, or otherwise delivered before attainder; and every such accessory shall upon conviction suffer the same punishment as he would have suffered if the principal had been attainted." Id. s. 5. S. 2 only applies where the accessory might at common law have been indicted with, or after the conviction of, the principal. And where a defendant was indicted as an accessory before the fact to the murder of S. W., who had by his procurement killed herself, it was held that a like statute did not apply. R. v. Russell, 1 Mood. C. C. 356: R. v. Leddington, 9 C. & P. 79. But by s. 1 it is enacted, that "whosoever shall become an accessory before the fact to any felony, whether the same be a felony at common law or by virtue of any Act passed or to be passed, may be indicted, tried, convicted, and punished in all respects as if he were a principal felon": so that the conviction of the principal is not now in any sense a condition precedent to the conviction of the accessory. R. v. Hughes, Bell, 242; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 71. In R. v. Chadwick, Stafford Sum. Ass. 1850, the prisoner was indicted as a principal for murder by arsenic, and the jury found that he procured the arsenic, and caused it to be administered by another person, but was absent when it was administered; and thereupon it was objected that 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, s. 1 (rep.), which is similar to 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 1, did not apply to murder, but Williams, J., overruled the objection and refused to reserve the point. Greaves' Criminal Law Acts (2nd ed.), p. 20. A person who induces a servant of the post-office to intercept and hand over to him a letter, which is in course of transmission by post, is either guilty, together with the post-office servant, of larceny as a principal, or is accessory before the fact to the larceny committed by the post-office servant, and in either view can be convicted on an indictment charging him with larceny of the letter. R. v. James, 24 Q. B. D. 439; 59 L. J. (M. C.) 96. He was a joint thief with the postman from whom he obtained the letter, or he was an accessory before the fact, in which case, by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 1, he was liable to be convicted in all respects as if he were a principal felon, per Lord Coleridge, C.J., Id. Where the principal and accessory are tried together, one being charged as principal and the other as accessory before the fact (which will now, probably, never occur), if the principal plead otherwise than the general issue, the accessory shall not be bound to answer until the principal's plea be first determined. 9 H. 7, c. 19 (rep.): 1 Hale, 624: 2 Co. Inst. 184. Where the principal was indicted for burglary and larceny in a dwelling-house, and the accessory was charged in the same indictment as accessory before the fact to the said "felony and burglary," and the jury acquitted the principal of the burglary, but found him guilty of the larceny; it seems the judges were of opinion that the accessory should have been acquitted; for the indictment charged him as accessory to the burglary only, and the principal being acquitted of that, the accessory should have been acquitted also. R. v. Dannelly, R. & R. 310; 2 Marsh. 571. And 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 6, enacts that "any number of accessories at different times to any felony, and any number of receivers at different times of property stolen at one time, may be charged with substantive felonies in the same indictment, and may be tried together, notwithstanding the principal felon shall not be included in the same indictment, or shall not be in custody or amenable to justice."

If a man be indicted as accessory to several persons in the same felony, and be found accessory to one, it is a good verdict, and judgment may be passed upon him. R. v. Lord Sanchar, 9 Co. Rep. 119; Fost. 361; 1 Hale, 624.

Incitement.]—The soliciting and inciting a person to commit a felony, where no felony is in fact committed by the person so solicited, still remains a misdemeanor only, notwithstanding 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 2 (ante, p. 18). R. Gregory, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 77; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 60.

Accessories after the fact.]—In high treason there are no accessories after the fact, those who in felony would be accessories after the fact being principals in high treason (ante, p. 16); yet in their progress to conviction they must be treated as accessories, and indicted specially for the receipt, etc., and not as principal traitors. 1 Hale, 238. So, in offences under felony there are no accessories after the fact; 1 Hale, 613; although, if the act of the receiver amount to a rescue, or to obstructing an officer of justice in the execution of his duty, or the like, he would undoubtedly be indictable for it as for a misdemeanor. 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 4: 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 164. An accessory after the fact is one who, knowing a felony to have been committed by another, receives, relieves, comforts, or assists the felon. 3 Co. Inst. 138: 1 Hale, 618: 4 Bl. Com. 37: Fost. 373: 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 1: 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 176: R. v. Burridge, 3 P. Wms. 439, 475; 24 Eng. Rep. 1133, 1146. Any assistance given to one known to be a felon, in order to hinder his apprehension, trial, or punishment, is sufficient to make a man an accessory after the fact; as, for instance, that he concealed him in the house; Dalt. c. 161; or shut the door against his pursuers, until he should have an opportunity of escaping; 1 Hale, 619; or took money from him to allow him to escape; Y. B. 9 H. 4, pl. 1; or supplied him with money, a horse, or other necessaries, in order to enable him to escape; Hale's Sum. 218: 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 26; or that the principal being in prison, J. W. bribed the gaoler to let him escape, or conveyed instruments to him to enable him to break prison and escape. 1 Hale, 621.

But merely suffering the principal to escape will not make the party an accessory after the fact; for it amounts at most but to a mere omission. Y. B. 9 H. 4, pl. 1 : 1 Hale, 619 : and see post, Book II., Part IV., Misprision. So, if a person supply a felon in prison with victuals or other necessaries for his sustenance; 1 Hale, 620; or relieve and maintain him if he be bailed out of prison; Id.; or if a physician or surgeon professionally attend a felon sick or wounded, although he know him to be a felon; 1 Hale, 332; or if a person speak or write in order to obtain a felon's pardon or deliverance; 26 Ass. 47; or advise his friends to write to the witnesses not to appear against him at his trial, and they write accordingly; 3 Co. Inst. 139 : 1 Hale, 621; or even if he himself agree, for money, not to give evidence against the felon; Moore 8; or know of the felony and do not discover it; 1 Hale, 371, 618; none of these acts would be sufficient to make the party an accessory after the fact. He must be proved to have done some act to assist the felon personally. R. v. Chapple, 9 C. & P. 355. But if he employ another person to do so, he will be equally guilty as if he harboured or relieved him himself. R. v. Jarvis, 2 M. & Rob. 40.

A wife is not punishable as accessory for receiving, etc., her husband, although she knew him to have committed felony; 1 Hale, 48, 621: R. v. Manning, 2 C. & K. 903, n.; for she is presumed to act under his coercion. See post, p. 30. But no other relation of persons can excuse the wilful receipt or assistance of felons; a father cannot assist his child, a child his parent, a husband his wife, a brother his brother, a master his servant, or a servant his master. Id. Even one may make himself an accessory after the fact to a larceny of his own goods, or to a robbery on himself, by harbouring the thief, or assisting in his escape. Post. 123 : Cromp. 41 b, pl. 4 & 5. If the wife alone, the husband being ignorant of it, receive any other person being a felon, the wife is accessory, and not the husband. 1 Hale, 621. And if the husband and wife both receive a felon knowingly, it shall be adjudged only the act of the husband, and the wife shall be acquitted. Id.

To constitute this offence, it is necessary that the accessory at the time when he assists or comforts the felon, should have notice, direct or implied, that he had committed a felony. 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 32. It is also necessary that the felony should be complete at the time the assistance is given; for, if one wound another mortally, and after the wound given, but before death ensues, a person assists or receives the delinquent, this does not make him accessory to the homicide; for until death ensues no murder or manslaughter is committed. 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 35 : 4 Bl. Com. 38.

Accessories after the fact could not until 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 46), except with their consent, be tried before the conviction of their principal. 1 Hale, 623 : 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 45. But they might be tried with their principal; 1 Hale, 623; or separately after the principal had been convicted; and having been once duly tried, they could not be again indicted or tried for the same offence. 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 10 (rep.) The Accessories and Abettors Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 94), s. 3, which re-enacts 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, s. 2, provides that "whosoever shall become an accessory after the fact to any felony, whether the same be a felony at common law or by virtue of any Act passed or to be passed, may be indicted or convicted either as an accessory after the fact to the principal felony, together with the principal felon, or after the conviction of the principal felon, or may be indicted and convicted of a substantive felony, whether the principal felon shall or shall not have been previously convicted, or shall or shall not be amenable to justice, and may thereupon be punished in like manner as any accessory after the fact to the same felony, if convicted as an accessory, may be punished;" i.e. under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 6, or any special statute dealing with the offence) "provided that no person who shall be once duly tried either as an accessory after the fact or for a substantive felony, shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for the same offence." Id. s. 7. See also s. 5, ante, p. 18.

On an indictment charging a man as a principal felon only, he cannot be convicted of the offence of being an accessory after the fact. R. v. Fallon, L. & C. 217; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 66: Richards v. R., 66 L. J. Q. B. 459; 61 J. P. 389. Where several persons are tried upon one indictment, some as principals in murder, others as accessories after the fact to the murder, and the principals are convicted of manslaughter only, the persons charged as accessories may be convicted as accessories to the manslaughter. R. v. Richards, 2 Q. B. D. 311; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 200; 13 Cox, 611 (C. C. R.).

As to the joinder of several accessories after the fact in the same indictment, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 6 (ante, p. 19).

The receipt of stolen goods did not at common law constitute the receiver an accessory, but was a distinct misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment; 1 Hale, 620; and although by several statutes, receivers were made accessories after the fact, and by 7 & 8 G. 4 c. 29 (rep.), ss, 54, 55, 60, might in certain cases be indicted either as accessories after the fact to felony, or for a substantive felony, or might be prosecuted for a misdemeanor, or punished upon summary conviction: (see now 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 91, 93, 95, 97:) yet the receipt of stolen goods is still a distinct and separate offence, and as such will be considered hereafter.

Misprision.]—It is a misdemeanor at common law for any person who knows that another has committed a felony to conceal or procure the concealment thereof. See Steph. Dig. Cr. Law (5th ed.) 122, 401: 3 Co. Inst. 140: 1 Hale, 374; and see post, Book II. Part IV., Accessories.

Exemptions and Excuses.

Aliens.]—British statutes are not construed to apply to acts of aliens on land outside the King's dominions or at sea except within territorial waters, or on British ships, or in cases of piracy jure gentium.

A British subject cannot naturalize himself as a subject of a foreign state at war with this country so as to exempt himself for criminal liability for treason. R. v. Lynch [1903] 1 K. B. 444: 20 Cox, 468: 67 J. P. 41.

An alien friend is subject to indictment for offences committed in England (R. v. Esop, 7 C. & P. 456: R. v. Barronet, 1 E. & B. 1; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 25), or upon British ships within the admiralty jurisdiction (see post, p. 39), and for piracy jure gentium. Att.-Gen. of Hong Kong v. Kwok a Sing, L. R. 5 P. C. 179, 199: 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 5. This liability appears not to extend to aliens who have diplomatic immunity. See Diplomatic Privileges Act, 1708 (7 Anne, c. 12): Law Mag. and Review (Nov. 1894), p. 43. Sed contrà, see case of Pantaleon Sa, 5 St. Tr. 461; and cf. 2 St. Tr. 881, n.; Fost. 187. The burden of proof that the accused is an alien appears to lie upon him. See R. v. Lindsay, 14 St. Tr. 987, 994: R. v. Macdonald, 18 St. Tr. 857; except perhaps where the offence is committed outside the realm: but see R. v. Jameson [1894] 2 Q. B. 425; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 218. The liability of an alien enemy is not clearly ascertained. See R. v. Molieres, Fost. 188, n.: R. v. Johnson, 6 East, 583, 593; 8 R. R. 550, Ellenborough, L. C. J.; 1 Hawk. c. 17, s 6.

Infants.]—It is a general rule, that infants under the age of discretion are not punishable by any criminal prosecution whatever; 1 Hale, 27: 1 Hawk. c. 1, s. 1: Mirror, c. 4, s. 16 (Selden Soc. Publ., vol. 7); but the age of discretion, by the law of England, varies according to the nature of the offence.

Infants under seven.]—An infant under the age of seven years cannot be guilty of felony, or be punished for any capital offence; for, under that age an infant is, by incontrovertible presumption of law, doli incapax, and cannot be endowed with any discretion. Reg. 309 b: 1 Hale, 27, 28: 4 Bl. Com. 23: Mirr. c. 4. s. 6: Fost. 349: Reniger v. Fogossa, Plowd. 1, 19: R. v. Carter [1774] 1 Cowp. 220, 223: Marsh v. Loader, 14 C. B., N. S. 535. This rule is recognized in s. 10 (5) of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49).

Infants under fourteen.]—Between the age of seven and fourteen years an infant is presumed to be doli incapax; but this presumption is not incontrovertible and may be rebutted by strong and pregnant evidence of a mischievous discretion, expressed in the maxim malitia supplet ætatem; for the capacity to commit crime, do evil and contract guilt, is not so much measured by years and days, as by the strength of the delinquent's understanding and judgment. 4 Bl. Com. 23: 1 Hale, 25, 27. Thus, it is said that an infant eight years of age may be indicted for murder, and shall be hanged for it; Dalt. c. 147; and an infant between the age of eight and nine years was executed for arson, it appearing that he was actuated by malice and revenge, and had perpetrated the offence with craft and cunning. 1 Hale, 25 n. So a girl of thirteen was burnt for killing her mistress; 1 Hale, 26; and where an infant nine years of age killed an infant of the like age, and confessed the felony, it appearing upon examination that he had hid both the blood and the body, the justices were of opinion that he might lawfully be hanged, but respited the judgment that he might be pardoned. Fitz. Cor. 57. See R. v. York, Fost. 70; 4 Bl. Com. 24; R. v. Wild, 1 Mood. C. C. 452. But in cases of this nature the evidence of a mischievous discretion, to rebut the primâ facie presumption of law arising from nonage, should be clear and strong beyond all doubt and contradiction. 4 Bl. Com. 23: 1 Hale, 25, 27: R. v. Vamplew, 3 F. & F. 520. Where a child between the age of seven and fourteen years is indicted for felony, two questions are to be left to the jury: first, whether he committed the offence; and secondly, whether at the time he had a guilty knowledge that he was doing wrong. R. v. Owen, 4 C. & P. 236: R. v. Smith, 1 Cox, 260. The fact that the child did the acts constituting the elements of the offence is not in itself any evidence whatever of the guilty state of mind which is essential for conviction. R. v. Kershaw, 18 T. L. R. 357, 37 L. J. N. 120; Bucknill, J. An infant under fourteen is presumed by law to be unable to commit a rape, and therefore cannot be found guilty of it; for though in other felonies malitia supplet ætatem, yet, as to this particular act, the law presumes him impotent, as well as wanting in discretion. This presumption was not affected by 9 G. 4, c. 31, ss. 16, 17 (rep.), which first made the offence complete upon proof of penetration, without evidence of emission; R. v. Groombridge, 7 C. & P. 582; nor by the present enactment, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 63, by which 9 G. 4, c. 31, is superseded: R. v. Waite [1892] 2 Q. B. 600; 61 L. J. (M. C.) 189; 17 Cox, 554. Nor is any evidence admissible to show that the defendant had in fact arrived at the full state of puberty, and could commit the offence. R. v. Philips, 8 C. & P. 736: R. v. Jordan, 9 C. & P. 118: R. v. Brimilow, Id. 366; 2 Mood. C. C. 122.

In R. v. Brimilow it was held that the boy had been properly convicted of an assault under 1 Vict. c. 85, s. 11 (rep.). Nor can a boy under fourteen be convicted of an assault with intent to commit a rape. R. v. Eldershaw, 3 C. & P. 396. This doctrine has been extended to other offences involving carnal knowledge. R. v. Waite, ubi supra. But a boy under fourteen may be a principal in the second degree in a rape, or like offence, if he aid and assist in the commission of the offence, and it appears that he had a mischievous discretion; for the excuse of impotency will not in such case apply. 1 Hale, 630: R. v. Eldershaw, 3 C. & P. 396. See R. v. Allen, 1 Den. 364; 2 C. & K. 869; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 72; 3 Cox, 270: R. v. Williams [1893] 1 Q. B. 320; 62 L. J. (M.C.) 69.

In R. v. Sutton, 3 A. & E. 597, 5 N. & M. 353, there are dicta to the effect that under certain circumstances an infant under fourteen might be liable to indictment in respect of public duties arising out of his occupation of property. See post, tit. Highways.

Infants over fourteen.]—The incapacity of infants to commit crime ceases upon their attaining the age of fourteen years, at which age they are presumed by the law to be doli capaces, and capable of discerning good from evil, and are, with respect to their criminal actions, subject to the same rule of construction as others of more mature age. 1 Hale, 25; Doct. and Stu. c. 26; Co. Litt. 79, 171, 247; Dalt. c. 147; 1 Hawk. c. 1, n. (1).

In some misdemeanors and offences which are not capital an infant is said to be privileged by reason of his nonage, if under twenty-one, because laches is not to be attributed to him. Co. Litt. 357; 4 Bl. Com. 22. But inasmuch as an infant is liable in tort, it is difficult to understand the grounds of this early distinction, as to misdemeanors, when an infant over seven could be liable for felony. And an infant who is indicted for any notorious breach of the peace, as riot, forcible entry, battery, or for perjury or cheating, or the like, is equally liable as a person of full age; because, upon his trial, the court, ex officio, ought to consider whether he was doli capax, and had discretion to do the act with which he is charged. 1 Hale, 20, 21; 4 Bl. Com. 22; 3 Bac. Abr., Infancy (H.). An infant, though incapable of making a contract of bailment, has been held liable to indictment for larceny as bailee. R. v. M'Donald, 15 Q. B. D. 323. But an infant cannot lawfully be adjudicated bankrupt, and consequently cannot be convicted of an offence under s. 12 of the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62), which depends on the existence of bankruptcy and the existence of valid debts by the infant. R. v. Wilson, 5 Q. B. D. 28; 49 L. J. (M. C.) 13: Lovell v. Beauchamp [1894] App. Cas. 607.

Summary remedy.]—Under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49), power is given to try summarily for any indictable offence committed in England except homicide, a child over seven and under twelve if the child's parent or guardian consent to this course (s. 10), and for certain indictable offences a person over twelve but under sixteen, if the youthful offender consents (s. 11). Similar provisions are made as to offences in Ireland by 47 & 48 Vict. c. 19, ss. 4, 6, 7, 9, as amended by 1 Edw. 7, c. 20, s. 14.

Persons of unsound mind.]—Every person at the age of discretion is, unless the contrary be proved, presumed by law to be sane, and to be accountable for his actions. R. v. Oxford, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 497; 9 C. & P. 525: R. v. Stokes, 3 C. & K. 185: R. v. Layton, 4 Cox, 149. The presumption in probate cases is the other way, as the person propounding the will must prove the testator competent. Banks v. Goodfellow, L. R.

5 Q. B. 549. And a grand jury ought not to ignore a bill of indictment on the ground of the insanity of the accused. R. v. Hodges, 8 C. & P. 195. But if there be an incapacity, or defect of the understanding, as there can be no consent of the will, the act cannot be culpable.

This species of non-volition is classified by Coke (Litt. 247) and Hale (1 Hist. P. C. 29) as either natural, accidental, or affected; it is either perpetual or temporary; and is by them reduced to three general heads: 1. A nativitate, vel dementia naturalis; 2. Dementia accidentalis, vel adventitia; 3. Dementia affectata.

1. Dementia naturalis is idiocy, or natural fatuity. An idiot is one who is of non-sane memory from his birth, by a perpetual infirmity, without lucid intervals: Co. Litt. 247; and those are said to be idiots who cannot number twenty, or tell the days of the week, who do not know their fathers or mothers, or the like; but these instances are mentioned as tests of insanity only, and are not always conclusive; and although idiocy or natural fatuity is in general sufficiently apparent, the question, whether idiot or not, is a question of fact triable by a jury. Bac. Abr., Idiot (A); Bro. Abr., Idiot, 4, and ought to be clearly made out, in order to exempt the accused from punishment. R. v. Arnold, 16 St. Tr. 695, 704; 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 121. A person deaf and dumb from his birth, who has no means of learning to discriminate between right and wrong, or of understanding the penal enactments of the law, as applicable to particular offences, is an idiot; but if it can be shown that he has the use of understanding, which many of that condition discover by signs, then he may be tried, convicted, and presumed to be punished, although great caution should be observed in such proceedings. 1 Hale, 34; Moore, 4, pl. 12; Fitzh. N. B. 233. See R. v. Jones, 1 Leach, 102: R. v. Steel, Id. 451: R. v. Dyson [1831] Parke, J., York Spring Ass., 7 C. & P. 305 n.; Matthews' Dig. 410: R. v. Pritchard, 7 C. & P. 303: R. v. Berry, 1 Q. B. D. 447; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 123; 13 Cox, 187.

2. Adventitious insanity, or dementia accidentalis, proceeds from various causes, and is of several kinds or degrees; it is either partial (an insanity upon some one subject, the party being sane upon all others), or total; permanent (usually called madness), or temporary (the object of it being afflicted with his disorder at certain periods and vicissitudes only, with lucid intervals), which is usually denominated lunacy. 3 Bac. Abr. 16.

The distinction between lunacy and madness made by Hale and Coke is not now observed, and the one word "insanity" covers both classes of mental aberration.

In the Lunacy Act, 1890 (53 Vict. c. 5) "lunatic" is defined as meaning an idiot or person of unsound mind (s. 341).

But the tests applied for the purpose of that act are not the same as the tests of insanity from the point of view of criminal responsibility: See Wood-Renton on Lunacy, 5.

3. Dementia affectata. See Drunkenness, post, p. 29.

Where the deprivation of understanding and memory is total, fixed and permanent, it excuses all acts; so likewise a man labouring under adventitious insanity is, during the frenzy, entitled to the same indulgence, in the same degree with one whose disorder is fixed and permanent. Beverley's case, 4 Co. Rep. 125; Co. Litt. 247; 1 Hale, 31. But difficulty arises in distinguishing between a total aberration of intellect and a partial or temporary delusion merely, notwithstanding which the patient may be capable of discerning right from wrong; in which case he will be guilty in the eye of the law, and amenable to punishment. Partial insanity, says Lord Hale, is the condition of many, especially of melancholy persons, who generally discover their defects in excessive fear and grief, and yet are not wholly destitute of the use of reason; and this partial insanity seems not to excuse them in the commission of any crime. 1 Hale, 30. Doubtless, he adds, most persons that are felons of themselves, and others, are under a degree of partial insanity when they commit these offences; it is very difficult to define the invisible line that divides perfect from partial insanity; but it must rest upon circumstances duly to be weighed and considered both by the judge and the jury, lest, on the one side, there be a kind of inhumanity towards the defects of human nature, or, on the other side, too great an indulgence given to great crimes. He concludes by suggesting, as the best measure, that such a person as, labouring under melancholy distempers, hath yet as great understanding as ordinarily a child of fourteen years hath, is such a person as can be guilty of treason or felony. 1 Hale, 30, 412.

Considerable uncertainty has been shown by the judges as to the application or acceptance of Lord Hale's rules. In R. v. Arnold, 16 St. Tr. 695, 764, and R. v. Earl Ferrers, 19 St. Tr. 885, it was ruled that a man cannot be acquitted on the ground of insanity unless he is totally deprived of understanding and memory, and does not know what he is doing any more than an infant or a brute or wild beast. In R. v. Hadfield, 27 St. Tr. 1281, the test accepted was, if a man be completely deranged so that he knows not what he does, if he be lost to all sense that he cannot distinguish good from evil, and cannot judge of the consequences of his actions, then he cannot be guilty of crime, because the will, which to a certain extent is the essence of every crime, is wanting. In R. v. Bellingham, Coll. Lun. 636, add., and R. v. Bowler, Id. 673, the test applied was whether, when the act was done, the prisoner was capable of distinguishing right from wrong and was under the influence of any delusion which rendered his mind insensible of the act. Cf. R. v. Parker, Id. 477. And in R. v. Oxford, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 497; 9 C. & P. 525, the ruling was in substance the same. In R. v. Offord, 5 C. & P. 168, it was ruled, that, to excuse a man from punishment upon the ground of insanity, it must be proved distinctly that he was not capable of distinguishing right from wrong at the time he did the act, and did not know it to be an offence against the laws of God and nature. The rule now generally adopted is based on the answers of the judges to the H. L. given in consequence of Macnaughton's case, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 847; 10 Cl. & F. 200; 8 Eng. Rep. 718. Tindal, C.J., at the trial directed the jury: "If upon balancing the evidence in your minds you should think the prisoner a person capable of distinguishing right from wrong with respect to the act of which he stands charged, he is then a responsible agent." This involves the proposition that if there be a partial degree of reason, a competent use of it sufficient to have restrained those passions which produce the crime; if there be thought and design, a faculty to distinguish the nature of actions, to discern the difference between moral good and evil,—then he will be responsible for his actions. See R. v. Higginson, 1 C. & K. 129. On this direction the jury returned a verdict of not guilty. In consequence of the direction and verdict a discussion took place in the House of Lords, and a series of questions were propounded to and answered by the judges, in relation to the law respecting alleged crimes committed by persons afflicted with insane delusions. Below are given the questions asked of the judges and the answers of all except Maule, J., who gave on his own account a more qualified answer.

Question 1.—"What is the law respecting alleged crimes committed by persons afflicted with insane delusion in respect of one or more particular subjects or persons: as, for instance, where at the time of the commission of the alleged crime the accused knew he was acting contrary to law, but did the act complained of with a view, under the influence of insane delusion, of redressing or revenging some supposed grievance or injury, or of producing some public benefit?"

Answer.—"Assuming that your lordships' inquiries are confined to those persons who labour under such partial delusions only, and are not in other respects insane, we are of opinion, that, notwithstanding the party did the act complained of with a view, under the influence of insane delusion, of redressing or revenging some supposed grievance or injury, or of producing some public benefit, he is nevertheless punishable, according to the nature of the crime committed, if he knew, at the time of committing such crime, that he was acting contrary to law, by which expression we understand your lordships to mean the law of the land." (4 St. Tr., N. S. 930.) The words italicized appear to have special reference to the cases of Hadfield, Bellingham, and Macnaughton.

Question 2.—"What are the proper questions to be submitted to the jury when a person alleged to be afflicted with insane delusion respecting one or more particular subjects or persons, is charged with the commission of a crime, (murder, for example,) and insanity is set up as a defence?"

Question 3.—"In what terms ought the question to be left to the jury as to the prisoner's state of mind at the time when the act was committed?"

Answers.—To the second and third questions:—"That the jury ought to be told in all cases that every man is presumed to be sane, and to possess a sufficient degree of reason to be responsible for his crimes, until the contrary be proved to their satisfaction; and that, to establish a defence on the ground of insanity, it must be clearly proved that, at the time of the committing of the act, the party accused was labouring under such a defect of reason, from disease of the mind, as not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing, or, if he did know it, that he did not know he was doing what was wrong. The mode of putting the latter part of the question to the jury on these occasions has generally been, whether the accused, at the time of doing the act, knew the difference between right and wrong, which mode, though rarely, if ever, leading to any mistake with the jury, is not, as we conceive, so accurate when put generally, and in the abstract, as when put as to the party's knowledge of right and wrong in respect to the very act with which he is charged. If the question were to be put as to the knowledge of the accused, solely and exclusively with reference to the law of the land, it might tend to confound the jury, by inducing them to believe that an actual knowledge of the law of the land was essential in order to lead to a conviction, whereas the law is administered upon the principle that every one must be taken conclusively to know it without proof that he does know it. If the accused was conscious that the act was one which he ought not to do, and if that act was at the same time contrary to the law of the land, he is punishable; and the usual course, therefore, has been to leave the question to the jury, whether the party accused had a sufficient degree of reason to know that he was doing an act that was wrong: and this course, we think, is correct, accompanied with such observations and explanations as the circumstances of each particular case may require." 4 St. Tr., N. S. 931. The words italicised appear to distinguish between the physical character and legal aspect of the act done. See Mayne, Ind. Cr. Law [ed. 1896] p. 378.

Question 4.—"If a person, under an insane delusion, as to the existing facts, commits an offence in consequence thereof, is he thereby excused?"

Answer.—"The answer must, of course, depend on the nature of the delusion; but making the same assumption as we did before, that he labours under such partial delusion only, and is not in other respects insane, we think he must be considered in the same situation as to responsibility as if the facts with respect to which the delusion exists were real. For example, if, under the influence of his delusion, he supposes another man to be in the act of attempting to take away his life, and he kills that man, as he supposes in self-defence, he would be exempt from punishment. If his delusion was that the deceased had inflicted a serious injury to his character and fortune, and he killed him in revenge for such supposed injury, he would be liable to punishment." 4 St. Tr., N. S. 932. See R. v. Townley, 3 F. & F. 839.

Question 5.—"Can a medical man, conversant with the disease of insanity, who never saw the prisoner previously to the trial, but who was present during the whole trial, and the examination of all the witnesses, be asked his opinion as to the state of the prisoner's mind at the time of the commission of the alleged crime, or his opinion whether the prisoner was conscious, at the time of doing the act, that he was acting contrary to law, or whether he was labouring under any and what delusion at the time?"

Answer.—"We think the medical man, under the circumstances supposed, cannot in strictness be asked his opinion in the terms above stated, because each of those questions involves the determination of the truth of the facts deposed to, which it is for the jury to decide: and the questions are not mere questions upon a matter of science, in which case such evidence is admissible. But where the facts are admitted or not disputed, and the question becomes substantially one of science only, it may be convenient to allow the question to be put in that general form, though the same cannot be insisted on as a matter of right." 4 St. Tr., N. S. 932.

These answers have in the main been accepted as laying down the law as to the definition of insanity with reference to criminal responsibility. R. v. Townley, 3 F. & F. 839: R. v. Southey, 4 F. & F. 864: R. v. Leigh, 4 F. & F. 915. But they have been the subject of much consideration and criticism by legal and medical writers. (See 2 Stephen, Hist. Cr. Law, 124–186; Mayne, Ind. Crim. Law (ed. 1896), pp. 368, 390; Wood-Renton on Lunacy, 885, 914.) Sir James Stephen came to the conclusion (2 Hist. Cr. Law, 186) that Macnaughton's case admitted, as a further exemption, the proposition "that a person should not be punished for any act when he is deprived by disease of the power of controlling his conduct, unless the absence of control has been caused by his own default." So far as this admits the medical theory of uncontrollable impulse, it conflicts with the following cases: R. v. Stokes, 3 C. & K. 185, Rolfe, B.: R. v. Barton, 3 Cox, 275, Parke, B.: R. v. Burton, 3 F. & F. 772, Wightman, J.: R. v. Dove [1884], Bramwell, B.; 3 Steph. Hist. Cr. Law, 429: Wood-Renton, Lunacy, 900; and with the opinions of the judges appointed to report on the Draft Code of 1878; but it is supported as a legal proposition by dicta of Denman, L.C.J., in R. v. Oxford, 9 C. & P. 525; Mellor, J., in R. v. Cockcroft, Taylor, Med. Jurisp. p. 788; and Lawrance, J., in R. v. Duncan, Wood-Renton, Lunacy, 901, 908; and see Tuke, Dict. Psych. Med. vol. 1, p. 314; Journal of Mental Science, vol. 43, p. 420 (a).

(a) Colonial and American Views.]—The tendency of judges and legislators in the United States and the British Colonies is not to accept the dicta in Macnaughton's case as an adequate definition of insanity with reference to criminal responsibility. In the Queensland Code of 1899 (s. 27), drafted by the Rt. Hon. Sir Samuel Griffith, C.J., of that Colony, after consideration of the English authorities and Continental and American legislation, the view of Sir J. Stephen is in substance adopted. The Moral insanity—i.e., disorder of the moral rather than of the mental powers—when a man's intellectual faculties are sound and he knows quite well what he is doing, but his moral sense is affected or diseased, is not yet accepted in England as falling within the rules in Macnaughton's case. R. v. Haynes, 1 F. & F. 666; R. v. Law, 2 F. & F. 836 (and see Wood-Renton, Lunacy, 909): R. v. Burton, 3 F. & F. 772.

Proof of Insanity.]—Whether the prisoner were sane or insane at the time the act was committed is a question of fact triable by the jury, and dependent upon the previous and contemporaneous acts of the party. Evidence of insanity of ancestors or blood relations is admissible. R. v. Tucket, 1 Cox, 103: R. v. Vyse, 3 F. & F. 247. So is evidence of illness exhausting the brain. R. v. Law, 2 F. & F. 836. Medical evidence is not essential. R. v. Dart, 14 Cox, 143. Mere absence of any evidence of motive for a crime is not a sufficient ground upon which to infer mania. R. v. Haynes, 1 F. & F. 666, Bramwell, B.: R. v. Dixon, 11 Cox, 341. Upon a question of insanity, a witness of medical skill may be asked whether, assuming certain facts, proved by other witnesses, to be true, they, in his opinion, indicate insanity, but not whether, having heard the whole evidence, he is of opinion that the prisoner at the time he committed the alleged act was of unsound mind. Id. R. v. Frances, 4 Cox, 57, Alderson B., and Cresswell, J.: R. v. Wright, R. & R. 456: R. v. Searle, 1 M. & Rob. 75. But a medical witness, who never saw the prisoner previously to the trial, but who was present during the whole trial and the examination of the witnesses, cannot, in strictness, be asked his opinion as to the state of the prisoner's mind at the time of the commission of the alleged crime, or his opinion whether the prisoner was conscious, at the time of doing the act, that he was acting contrary to law, or whether he was labouring under any and what delusion at the time, because each of these questions involves the determination of the truth of the matter deposed to, which it is for the jury to decide. (See the answer to the fifth question in R. v. Macnaughton, supra.) Nor can such a witness, although present in court during the whole trial, be asked whether, from the evidence he has heard, he is of opinion that the prisoner at the time he did the act was insane, nor whether the act with which the prisoner is charged was in his opinion an act of insanity, for these are the very article runs: "A person is not criminally responsible for an act or omission if at the time of doing the act or making the omission he is in such a state of mental disease or natural mental infirmity as to deprive him of capacity to understand what he is doing or of capacity to control his actions, or of capacity to know that he ought not to do the act or make the omission."

And in the case of R. v. Hay [1899], 16 Cape of Good Hope, Rep. Sup. Ct. 290, the Rt. Hon. Sir H. de Villiers, C.J., after hearing a full argument dealing with the law of England and the United States and the Roman-Dutch law, laid down as the law of the Cape, and as the tendency of legal opinion elsewhere, the following rules which also in substance coincide with the opinion of Sir J. Stephen:—

"(1) Where the defence of insanity is interposed in a criminal trial the capacity to distinguish between right and wrong is not the sole test of responsibility in all cases.

"(2) In the absence of legislation to the contrary courts of law are bound to recognize the existence of a form of mental disease which prevents the sufferer from controlling his conduct and choosing between right and wrong, though he may have the mental capacity to distinguish between right and wrong.

"(3) The defence of insanity is established if it be proved that the accused had by reason of such mental disease lost the power of will to control his conduct in reference to the particular act charged as an offence.

"(4) The capacity of the accused to control his own conduct must be presumed till the contrary is proved."

points to be decided by the jury. R. v. Frances, ubi supra: R. v. Wright, ubi supra. Counsel will not be allowed, upon a question of insanity, to quote in his address to the jury the opinions of medical writers as expressed in their books. R. v. Crouch, 1 Cox, 94: R. v. Taylor, 13 Cox, 77, Brett, J. As to the mode of ascertaining judicially the facts of insanity, see post, ch. v., s. 1, Arraignment; ch. v. s. 3, Trial.

Drunkenness.]—Drunkenness, which produces a perfect though temporary frenzy or insanity, usually denominated dementia affectata, or acquired madness, was formerly held not to excuse the commission of any crime; and an offender under the influence of intoxication could derive no privilege from a madness voluntarily contracted, and was regarded as equally answerable to the law as if he had been in the full possession of his faculties at the time; 1 Hale, 32: Co. Litt. 247: 1 Hawk. c. 1, s. 6. But legal opinion has altered on this subject, and it has been ruled that upon an indictment for murder the intoxication of the defendant may be taken into consideration, as a circumstance to show that the act was not premeditated. R. v. Grindley, 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 144: R. v. Pearson, 2 Lewin, 144: R. v. Thomas, 7 C. & P. 817. The same has been held in cases of attempts to commit suicide. R. v. Moore, 3 C. & K. 319: R. v. Doody, 6 Cox, 463. But there are contrary rulings in R. v. Carroll, 7 C. & P. 145: R. v. Meakin, Id. 297. When the crime alleged is such that the intention of the accused is one of its constituent elements, the jury may look at the fact that he was in drink in considering whether he formed the intent necessary to constitute the crime; R. v. Doherty, 16 Cox, 306, Stephen, J.: R. v. Cruse, 8 C. & P. 541, 546, Patteson, J.: Montgomery Election Petition, Day's Election Cases, 151, Wills, J. See also R. v. Monkhouse, 4 Cox, 55: R. v. Moore, 3 C. & K. 319 (a). And drunkenness and consequent delusions may assist to make out a defence of provocation or self-defence. R. v. Thomas, ubi supra: R. v. Pearson, ubi supra: R. v. Monkhouse, ubi supra: R. v. Gamlen, 1 F. & F. 90. The Scotch and Irish rulings on this subject are collected in Wood-Renton on Lunacy, 912, 913. If the primary cause of the frenzy be involuntary, or it have become habitual and confirmed, this species of insanity will excuse the offender to the same extent as any other form of insanity. Thus, for instance, if a man through the unskilfulness of his physician, or the contrivance of his enemies, take that which produces a temporary frenzy, he will not, whilst under the influence of the frenzy, be accountable for his actions. So neither will he be liable to be punished for any crime perpetrated under the influence of insanity which is habitual and fixed, though caused by frequent intoxication, and originally contracted by his own act. 1 Hale, 32. And delirium tremens, caused by drinking, if it produces such a degree of madness, although only temporary, as to render a person incapable of distinguishing right from wrong, relieves him from criminal responsibility for any act committed by him while under its influence. R. v. Davis, 14 Cox, 563, Stephen, J. This doctrine has been in one case extended to temporary derangement occasioned by drink: R. v. Baines, Liverpool Assizes [1886] (noted in Wood-Renton on Lunacy, 912), in which case Day, J., dissented from the contrary view expressed by Holroyd, J., in R. v. Barrow, 1 Lewin, 75, and R. v. Rennie, 1 Lewin, 76.

(a) See R. v. Egan [1897] 23 Vict. L. R. 159, as to whether and when a woman can be convicted of murder or manslaughter by overlaying her child when she has taken it to bed with her while she is drunk. In R. v. Glen, 9 Queensland L. J. 140, a verdict of guilty coupled with a rider that the prisoner was in drink and did not know what he was doing was held to be a finding that he had no animus furandi. In R. v. Corbett [1903] Queensland St. Rep. 246, Griffith, C.J., said, "Drunkeness is never a defence unless it amounts to unsoundness of mind."

By the Inebriates Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 60), it is enacted (s. 1, sub-s. 1) that "where a person is convicted on indictment of an offence punishable with imprisonment or penal servitude (i.e., of any non-capital felony and most misdemeanors), if the court is satisfied from the evidence that the offence was committed under the influence of drink, or that drunkenness was a contributing cause of the offence, and the offender admits that he is or is found by the jury to be a habitual drunkard, the court may, in addition to, or in substitution for any other sentence, order that he be detained in any State inebriate reformatory, or in any certified inebriate reformatory, the managers of which are willing to receive him." The procedure under the act, and the provisions as to reformatories, are dealt with so far as relevant to the purposes of this work, post, under Punishment, and Offences after Previous Convictions. The act of 1898 is to be read as one with the Inebriates Acts of 1879 and 1888 (s. 29). The term habitual drunkard is defined by s. 3 of the Inebriates Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 19), as meaning "a person who, not being amenable to any jurisdiction in lunacy, is notwithstanding, by reason of habitual intemperate drinking of intoxicating liquor, at times dangerous to himself or herself or to others, or incapable of managing himself or herself, and his or her affairs." The definition appears to apply only to the habitual use of alcohol, and not to include the use of narcotics. See Wood Renton, Lunacy, 954. The act of 1898 does not appear to accept the view that drunkenness falling short of insanity is a defence on a charge of crime, but gives the courts latitude in treatment of crimes directly or indirectly due to drunkenness, by permitting the reformative sentence as an alternative to the ordinary punishment for a crime. The doctrine of criminal responsibility in case of drunkenness due to alcohol is equally applicable to mental or bodily conditions caused by the drinking of narcotics or non-alcoholic stimulants, or exciting drugs, or their hypodermic injection. 1 Hale, 32.

Compulsion or coercion.]—The same principle which excuses those who have no mental will in the perpetration of an offence, protects from the punishment of the law those who commit crimes in subjection to the power of others, and not as the result of an uncontrolled free action proceeding from themselves. 4 Bl. Com. 27: 1 Hale, 44, 51. Thus, if A. by force take the hand of B. in which is a weapon, and therewith kill C., A. is guilty of murder, but B. is excused; but if merely a moral force be used, as threats, duress of imprisonment, or even an assault to the peril of his life, in order to compel him to kill C., it is no legal excuse. 1 Hale, 434; 1 East, P. C. 225. M'Growther's case, Fost. 13: 18 St. Tr. 391: R. v. Gordon, 1 East, P. C. 71: R. v. Tyler, 8 C. & P. 616. This protection also exists in the public and private relations of society: public, as between subject and prince, obedience to existing laws being a sufficient extenuation of civil guilt before a municipal tribunal; and private, proceeding from the matrimonial subjection of the wife to the husband, from which the law presumes a coercion, which, in many cases, excuses the wife from the consequence of criminal misconduct. The private relations which exist between parent and child, and master and servant, will not, however, excuse or extenuate the commission of any crime, of whatever denomination; for the command is void in law, and can protect neither the commander nor the instrument. 1 Hale, 44, 516. Obedience to usurped power is an excuse only where actual physical compulsion is used or directly available. See M'Growther's case, ubi supra: Sir H. Vane's case, 6 St. Tr. 119; Kel., (J.), 14: Axtell's case, Kel., (J.), 13.

The mere fact that two persons jointly charged with crime are married does not create any presumption that the wife was coerced by the husband to commit the crime. Brown v. Att.-Gen. of N. Z. [1898] App. Cas. 234, 237; 67 L. J. (P. C.) 7: R. v. Mary Baines [1900] 69 L. J. Q. B. 631: 19 Cox, 524: 64 J. P. 408. But, as a general rule, if a crime be committed by a feme couverte in the presence of her husband, the law presumes that she acted under his immediate coercion, and excuses her from punishment; 1 Hale, 45, 516; 1 Hawk. c. 1, s. 9. This protection, however, is not to be allowed in crimes which are mala in se, and prohibited by the law of nature, nor in such as are heinous in their character, or dangerous in their consequences; 1 Hale, 45, 47, 48; 1 Hawk. c. 1, s. 11; 4 Bl. Com. 29; 1 Harg. St. Tr. 28: R. v. Squires, 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 151. It seems not to apply to murder, R. v. Manning, 2 C. & K. 903, n.: R. v. Alison, 8 C. & P. 418; but has been applied to burglary and larceny (R. v. Knight, 1 C. & P. 116); to forgery (R. v. Hughes, 2 Lewin, 229); to felonious assaults (R. v. Smith, Dears. & B. 553); and to robbery (R. v. Torpey, 12 Cox, 45). In some cases the presumption has been extended to misdemeanors: e.g. uttering base coin, R. v. Connolly, 2 Lewin, 229; Matthews' Dig. 262: R. v. Price, 8 C. & P. 19; and see R. v. Torpey, ubi supra. But the contrary appears to have been held by all the judges in R. v. Cruse, 8 C. & P. 541; 2 Mood. C. C. 53; and this is the prevailing opinion. See R. v. Ingram, 1 Salk. 384. So a married woman may be indicted jointly with her husband for keeping a bawdy-house, R. v. Williams, 10 Mod. 63; 1 Salk. 384; or a gaming-house, R. v. Dixon, 10 Mod. 335; for these are offences connected with the government of the house, in which the wife has a principal share. 1 Hawk. c. 1, s. 12. So, they may be jointly convicted of an assault. R. v. Cruse, supra. But if, in the absence of her husband, the wife commit an offence; even by his order or procurement, her coverture will be no excuse; Anon., 2 East, P. C. 559: R. v. Morris, R. & R. 270; 2 Leach, 1096; 1 Hawk, c. 1, s. 11; even though he appear at the very moment after the commission of the offence; and no subsequent act of his, though it may render him an accessory to the felony of his wife, can be referred to what was done by his wife in his absence. R. v. Hughes, 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 153; 2 Lewin, 229. This presumption of coercion of the wife by the husband, may be rebutted by evidence; though it is doubtful whether a confession by a wife in presence of her husband should be received as such evidence. R. v. Laugher, 2 C. & K. 225. And if it appear that the wife was principally instrumental in the commission of the crime, acting voluntarily, and not by constraint of her husband, although he was present and concurred, she will be guilty and liable to punishment. 1 Hale, 516: R. v. Cohen, 11 Cox, 99; 16 W. R. 941: R. v. Torpey, ubi supra. Thus, a married woman who swore falsely that she was next of kin to a person dying intestate, and so procured administration to the effects, was held responsible for the offence, though her husband was with her when she took the oath. R. v. Dicks, 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 147. So where a husband delivered a threatening letter ignorantly, as the agent of the wife, she alone was held to be punishable. R. v. Hammond, 1 Leach, 447. And where the wife in the absence of her husband induced the prosecutor by false representations to meet her at a place, where the husband, the wife being present but taking no active part, by threats of violence induced the prosecutor to execute a valuable security, and the husband and wife were jointly indicted for that offence under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 48, Brett, J., directed the jury that if they should be of opinion that the wife in the husband's absence took an independent part in carrying out the crime, the fact of her being the wife would not absolve her. R. v. John, 13 Cox, 100. Where stolen goods are received by a married woman in the absence of her husband, and are concealed in his house, without his knowledge, she may be indicted and punished for the offence; but if the husband's ignorance of the transaction be not satisfactorily proved, the law will, in most cases, impute the receiving to him. Dalt. c. 157. Where husband and wife were convicted jointly of receiving stolen goods, it was held that the conviction of the wife could not be supported, though she had been more active than her husband, because it had not been left to the jury to say whether she received the goods in the absence of her husband. R. v. Archer, 1 Mood. C. C. 143; R. v. Matthews, 1 Den. 596; 4 Cox, 214: R. v. McClarens, 3 Cox, 425. See R. v. Wardroper, Bell, 249; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 116. But in R. v. Mary Baines (69 L. J. Q. B. 681; 19 Cox, 524; 64 J. P. 408), where a husband and wife were jointly indicted for receiving stolen goods, and there was evidence of a separate receiving by the wife in the absence of her husband, it was held that she was properly convicted in accordance with the provisions of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 94. And it is submitted that a married woman is indictable for receiving since the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75), if she knowingly deals with goods stolen by her husband in a business carried on by her under her own name. Husband and wife were jointly charged with felonious wounding, with intent to disfigure, and to do grievous bodily harm. The jury found that the wife acted under the coercion of the husband, and that she did not personally inflict any violence on the prosecutor. On this finding the wife was held entitled to an acquittal. R. v. Smith, Dears. & B. 553; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 204. And where the prisoner, a married woman, was indicted together with her husband, who was not in custody, for a robbery with violence, in which she had herself taken a very active part, and the jury returned as their verdict that they were of opinion that the whole matter was pre-arranged by the husband, and that the wife acted under his coercion and control at the time, this was held to amount to a verdict of not guilty. R. v. Torpey, 12 Cox, 45. Where upon an indictment for robbery with violence, D. and his wife were found guilty, the jury finding, however, that the wife had acted under her husband's compulsion, this was held to amount to a verdict of not guilty as to the wife. R. v. Dykes, 15 Cox, 771, Stephen, J. Husband and wife cannot alone be found guilty of a conspiracy, for they are considered in law as one person, and are presumed to have but one will. 1 Hawk. c. 72, s. 8.

If a married woman incite her husband to the commission of a felony, she is an accessory before the fact; 1 Hale, 516; 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 34: R. v. Manning, 2 C. & K. 903, n.; but she cannot be treated as an accessory for receiving her husband, knowing that he has committed treason or felony; 1 Hale, 47: R. v. Goode, 1 C. & K. 185; nor for concealing a felon jointly with her husband; Id.; 1 Hawk. c. 1, s. 10; nor (before the Married Woman's Property Act, 1882, supra) for receiving from her husband goods stolen by him. R. v. Brooks, Dears. 184; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 121. See R. v. Archer, 1 Mood. C. C. 143. And she will not be answerable for her husband's breach of duty, however fatal, though she be privy to his misconduct, if no duty be cast upon her, and she is merely passive. R. v. Squires, 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 151.

If a married woman, indicted jointly with her husband, be described in the indictment as his wife, she need not prove her marriage, but will be entitled to protection if it appear that she acted under his coercion: R. v. Knight, 1 C. & P. 116; but the mere description will be no ground for dismissing the indictment as to the wife, for the indictment is joint and several, according to the facts as they may appear. 1 Hale, 46. If she be described as a single woman, she must prove her marriage; R. v. Jones, Kel. (J.) 37; and such evidence must be given as will satisfy the jury of her marriage, although it is not absolutely necessary that the actual marriage should be proved. R. v. Atkinson, 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 159: R. v. Hassall, 2 C. & P. 434: R. v. Woodward, 8 C. & P. 561: R. v. McGinnes, 11 Cox, 391. Evidence of cohabitation and reputation will be sufficient. Morris v. Miller, 4 Burr. 2057, Lord Mansfield, C.J.

Ignorance of law.]—Ignorance of the law will not excuse from the consequences of guilt any person who has capacity to understand the law. 1 Hale, 42: R. v. Crawshaw, Bell, 303; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 58; 8 Cox, 375. If the offence be committed in England, a foreigner cannot be excused because he does not know the law. R. v. Esop, 7 C. & P. 456: R. v. Barronet, 1 E. & B. 1; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 25. And the same if it be committed in an English ship on the high seas, which is in law part of the territory of England. R. v. Lopez, R. v. Sattler, Dears. & B. 525; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 48. Where, however, a defendant was indicted for maliciously shooting at A. B. upon the high seas, and the offence was perpetrated within a few weeks after the passing of 39 G. 3, c. 37, and before notice of it could have reached the place where the offence was committed, the judges held, that as he could not have been tried before that act passed, and as he could not have heard of it, he ought to be pardoned. R. v. Bailey, R. & R. 1: and see Burns v. Nowell, 5 Q. B. D. 444, 454.

Ignorance or mistake of fact.]—Ignorance or mistake of fact may in some cases be allowed as an excuse for the inadvertent commission of a crime, where the accused acted under an honest and reasonable belief in a state of things which if true would have justified the act done. "At common law an honest and reasonable belief in the existence of facts, which if true would make the act for which the prisoner is indicted an innocent act, has always been held to be a good defence. This doctrine is embodied in the somewhat uncouth maxim, actus non facit reum nisi mens sit rea. Honest and reasonable mistake stands in fact on the same footing as absence of the reasoning faculty as in infancy, or perversion of that faculty as in lunacy." R. v. Tolson, 23 Q. B. D. 168, 181, Cave, J. For instance, if a man, intending to kill a thief in his own house, kill one of his own family, he will be guilty of no offence. 1 Hale, 42, 43; 4 Bl. Com. 27; R. v. Levett, Cro. Car. 538 cit. But this rule proceeds upon a supposition that the original intention was lawful; for if an unforeseen consequence ensue from an act which was in itself unlawful, and its original nature wrong and mischievous, the actor is criminally responsible for whatever consequence may ensue. 4 Bl. Com. 27.

"Mens rea."(a)]—The general rule of law is that a person cannot be convicted in a proceeding of a criminal nature unless it can be shown that he had a guilty mind; Chisholm v. Doulton, 22 Q. B. D. 736; 58

(a) As to statutory offences the true rule of English law seems to be correctly stated in Art. 23 of the Queensland Code of 1899, except as to public nuisances.

"Subject to the express provisions of this Code relating to negligent acts and omissions, a person is not criminally responsible for an act or omission which occurs independently of the exercise of his will or for an event which occurs by accident.

"Unless the intention to cause a particular result is declared to be an element of the offence constituted in whole or in part by an act or omission, the result intended to be caused by an act or omission is immaterial.

"Unless otherwise expressly declared, the motive by which a person is induced to do or omit to do an act or to form an intention is immaterial so far as regards criminal responsibility."

L. J. (M. C.) 183: R. v. Twose, 14 Cox, 327; but it is impossible now to apply the maxim as to "mens rea" generally to all statutes, and it is necessary to look at the object and terms of each act to see whether and how far knowledge or a particular intent is of the essence of the offence created; Cundy v. Lecocq, 13 Q. B. D. 207, Stephen, J.; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 125; Hardcastle on Statutes (3rd ed.) 459; Maxwell on Statutes (3rd ed.) 136. It has been held that it is not necessary to prove that a defendant charged with assaulting a constable in the execution of his duty knew that the constable was so acting; R. v. Forbes, 10 Cox, 362, Gurney, Recorder. Where the defendant was indicted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 55, for unlawfully taking an unmarried girl under the age of sixteen years, out of the possession and against the will of her father, it was held to be no defence that the defendant believed on good grounds that the girl was above sixteen years of age. R. v. Prince, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 154; 44 L. J. (M. C.) 122. All the judges in that case agreed on the general principle that an honest and reasonable mistake of facts furnishes a good defence for an act committed under such mistake, and which would otherwise be criminal, but they all, except Lord Esher, considered that the object of the legislature being to prevent a scandalous and wicked invasion of parental rights, it was to be supposed that they intended that the wrongdoer should act at his peril. R. v. Tolson, 23 Q. B. D. 168 at p. 190, per Stephen, J. The majority of the judges seem to have held that in order to make the defence of mistake of fact available in that case (R. v. Prince), the accused must have proved the existence in his mind of an honest and reasonable belief in the existence of circumstances which, if they had really existed, would have made his act not only not criminal but also not immoral. R. v. Tolson, 23 Q. B. D. 168, at p. 181, per Cave, J. A defendant was convicted under the repealed statute 8 & 9 Vict. c. 100, s. 44 (a similar provision to which is contained in 53 & 54 Vict. c. 5, s. 315), of receiving two or more lunatics into her house, not being a registered asylum or hospital, or a house duly licensed under the above act, or under any previous act, but it was specially found by the jury who convicted, that though the persons so received were lunatics, the defendant honestly, and on reasonable grounds, believed that they were not lunatic. It was held that having regard to the scope of the act, and the object for which it was apparently passed, such mistaken belief was immaterial, and that the conviction was right. R. v. Bishop, 5 Q. B. D. 259; 49 L. J. (M. C.) 45. But where the prisoner was convicted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 57, of bigamy, having gone through the ceremony of marriage within seven years after she had been deserted by her husband, and the jury found that at the time of the second marriage she, in good faith and on reasonable grounds, believed her husband to be dead, it was held on a case reserved by the court for the consideration of all the judges, that a bonâ fide belief by the prisoner on reasonable grounds in the death of the husband at the time of the second marriage, was a good defence, and that the conviction was wrong. R. v. Tolson, 23 Q. B. D. 168; 58 L. J. (M. C.) 97. The rationale of this decision, and the distinction between this case and that of R. v. Prince, ubi supra, seems to be contained in the following words of the judgment of Stephen, J., 23 Q. B. D. at p. 191—"The conduct of the woman convicted was not in the smallest degree immoral, it was perfectly natural and legitimate. Assuming the facts to be as she supposed, the infliction of more than a nominal punishment on her would have been a scandal. Why, then, should the legislature be held to have wished to subject her to punishment at all?" It is not, perhaps, easy to draw a distinction between R. v. Tolson and R. v. Bishop, ubi supra, but the same learned judge, at the page last cited, explained the decision in R. v. Bishop, as having gone on "the scope of the act constituting the offence, and the object for which it was apparently passed," cf. Cundy v. Lecocq, ubi supra. This question has been the subject of numerous decisions with regard to offences triable summarily against the statutes relating to licensing, Bond v. Evans, 21 Q. B. D. 249; Brooks v. Mason [1902] 2 K. B. 743; Sherras v. de Rutzen [1895] 1 Q. B. 918; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 218: and adulteration of food, Coppen v. Moore (No. 2) [1898] 2 Q. B. 306; 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 689. Brown v. Foot, 61 L. J. (M. C.) 110; 17 Cox, 509; 56 J. P. 581: Parker v. Alder [1899] 1 Q. B. 20; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 7; 62 J. P. 792. See also Jones v. Davies [1902] 20 Cox, 184: Greenwood v. Backhouse, 20 Cox, 196: Christie v. Cooper (1900) 2 Q. B. 522. Knowledge by the defendant that he is offending against the penal provisions of a statute is sufficient to constitute mens rea. Bank of N.S.W. v. Piper [1897] A. C. 383; 66 L. J. (P. C.) 73.

Sect. 3.

The form of an indictment.

An indictment consists of three parts: the commencement, the statement, and the conclusion. The caption is not part of it. See post, sect. 6.

1. The Commencement.

The commencement of every indictment is thus:—"Suffolk to wit:—The jurors for our lord the King upon their oath, present that," &c. [so proceeding to state the offence for which the defendant is to be prosecuted]. If one of the grand jurors be a Quaker, or other person entitled to affirm instead of taking an oath, the indictment ought to commence—"The jurors for our lord the King upon their oath and affirmation present," &c.; 9 C. & P. 78; but this is not necessary where, in any legal proceedings, other legal proceedings are set out by way of recital. In such cases it is enough to state that the jurors named acted as jurymen. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, s. 2. An indictment commencing—"The jurors of our lady the Queen, &c., was held not to be bad in arrest of judgment, or on writ of error: as the words "of our lady the Queen," might be rejected as surplusage, the jurors intended being those mentioned in caption of the indictment. R. v. Turner, 2 M. & Rob. 214; Broome v. R., 12 Q. B. 834. And now such defects are merely formal, and since 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 25) objections in respect of them must be taken before the petty jury is sworn; and if they are taken the Court may, if it think necessary, order the indictment to be forthwith amended.

The commencement of a second or subsequent count is in form thus: —"And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present that," &c. [so proceeding to state the offence]. As to offences which may be joined in one indictment, see post, p. 88.

(b) Venue.

Statutes.

14 & 15 Vict. c. 100 (Criminal Procedure Act, 1851), sect. 23.]—"It shall not be necessary to state the venue in the body of any indictment; but the county, city, or other jurisdiction named in the margin thereof shall be taken to be the venue for all the facts stated in the body of such indictment:

"Provided that, in cases where local description is, or hereafter shall be, required (see post, p. 67) such local description shall be given in the body of the indictment;

"And provided also that where an indictment for an offence committed in the county of any city or town corporate shall be preferred at the assizes of the adjoining county, such county of the city or town shall be deemed the venue, and may either be stated in the margin of the indictment, with or without the name of the county in which the offender is to be tried, or be stated in the body of the indictment by way of venue."

Sect. 24.]—"No indictment for any offence shall be held insufficient . . . for want of a proper and perfect venue. . . ." [This re-enacts and extends 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 20, which took away the right to object by motion in arrest of judgment, or by writ of error, for the want of a proper or perfect venue. See R. v. Albert, 5 Q. B. 37; Dav. & M. 89: R. v. Stowell, 5 Q. B. 44; Dav. & M. 189: R. v. Gregory, 7 Q. B. 274: R. v. O'Connor, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 935; 5 Q. B. 16.]

Venue defined.]—Venue is the common law term for the neighbourhood (visne) from which the jurors are to come (venire). It is of importance, because at common law only a jury of the district in which the offence was committed can convict of it. "The old jurisdiction of counties was local; they were like different kingdoms. There was no jurisdiction out of the county, no process out of it." R. v. Weston, 4 Burr. 2507, 2511, Lord Mansfield. Venue or local jurisdiction is quite distinct from national or territorial jurisdiction. Companhia de Moçambique v. British South Africa Co. [1893] App. Cas. 602: R. v. Ellis [1899] 1 Q. B. 230. C. C. R.; Badische Anilin und Soda Fabrik v. Basle Chemical Works [1898] App. Cas. 200, 204.

Venue, how stated.]—The venue is indicated at the commencement of an indictment in the margin, and is the only part of the commencement of an indictment that requires attention. The general common law rule upon the subject is, that the venue in the margin should be the county or other jurisdiction in which the offence was committed; e.g., "Norfolk to wit." 2 Hale, 166; See 1 Chitty, C. L. 193; 1 Stephen, Hist. Cr. L. 281. If the jurisdiction of the court in which the bill of indictment is to be preferred extends only to part of the county, or (as in the case of the Central Criminal Court constituted by 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 36, or of Winter Assizes held in a Winter Assize County under 39 & 40 Vict. c. 57, and 40 & 41 Vict. c. 46, or of Spring Assizes held in a Spring Assize County under 42 & 43 Vict. c. 1) includes more than one county, or an area specially constituted by Order in Council under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 77, s. 23. or is confined within the limits of a borough (as to which, see 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50: R. v. Piller, 7 C. & P. 337, and R. v. Gloucestershire Js., 4 A. & E. 689), the venue in the margin should be co-extensive with the jurisdiction of the court; e.g., "Central Criminal Court to wit," "Winter Assize County No. 3, Cambridge, to wit." "City of Norwich and County of the same city to wit." That is to say, it should be descriptive of the limit to which the jurisdiction of the court is confined, and the offence must be proved to have been committed within the limit so described. R. v. Stanbury, L. & C. 128; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 88.

Jurisdiction: General Rule.]—The courts of common law had apart from statute no power to try any offence not committed within the body of the realm, i.e., their national jurisdiction was territorial and not personal. Macleod v. Att.-Gen. of N. S. W. [1891] App. Cas. 455; Sirdar Gurdyal Singh v. Rajah of Faridkote [1894] App. Cas. 670; and apart from the obsolete jurisdiction of the constable and marshal, no person can be tried under English law for an offence committed on land abroad, except under the authority of a statute. See R. v. Lewis, Dears. & B. 182; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 104; 7 Cox, 277.

The jurisdiction of the courts of British colonies is limited to offences committed within their territories, unless imperial legislation or the provisions of their Constitution Acts otherwise provide. Macleod v. *Att.-Gen. for N. Statutory exceptions.]—To the general rule there are many statutory exceptions. In some statutes jurisdiction is given over offences not triable at common law. In others, latitude is given as to the place of trial of existing offences.

Treason abroad.]—In indictments for high treason or misprision committed out of the realm, the venue might, before the passing of the Local Government Act, 1888, be laid in Middlesex if the trial was to be "where the King's Bench shall sit and be kept;" or by special commission in such shire as the King should appoint. 35 Hen. 8, c. 2, s. 1. But now, by reason of 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 89, sub-s. 3, and R. S. C., Jan., 1903 (post, ch. v. sect. 2), the venue in indictments for treason abroad, if the trial is in the King's Bench Division and not before a special commission, is laid in "the county of the county of London and the county of Middlesex." This was the venue laid in R. v. Lynch [1903] 1 K. B. 744. 35 Hen. 8, c. 2 applies to treasons committed in the Isle of Man, Guernsey, Jersey, Sark, or Alderney, or in foreign possessions which, although parts of the dominions of the British Crown, are not parts of the realm of England. See 3 Co. Inst. 11, 111; 4 Co. Inst. 124; and post, tit. "Treason."

Murder, &c.]—"Where any murder or manslaughter shall be committed on land out of the United Kingdom, whether within the King's dominions or without, and whether the person killed were a subject of his Majesty or not, every offence committed by any subject of his Majesty, in respect of any such case, whether the same shall amount to the offence of murder or of manslaughter, or of being accessory to murder or manslaughter, may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined and punished in any county or place in England or Ireland in which such person shall be apprehended or be in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if such offence had been actually committed in that county or place." 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 9. A British subject, therefore, who, in a foreign country, within the dominion of a foreign power, murders either a British subject or a foreigner is triable in England under the express provisions of this section. See R. v. Azzopardi, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 21; 2 Mood. C. C. 288; 1 C. & K. 203: R. v. Sawyer, R. & R. 294. In R. v. Bernard, 8 St. Tr., N. S. 887; 1 F. & F. 240, the question was raised whether, under 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 7 (rep.), a foreigner resident in England could be indicted as accessory (by means of acts done by him in England) to a murder committed by a foreigner on foreigners in the kingdom of France; the prisoner, however, was acquitted. Such a case is now covered by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 4.

Where any person, being feloniously stricken, poisoned, or otherwise hurt upon the sea, or at any place out of England or Ireland, shall die in England or Ireland; or being feloniously stricken, etc., in England or Ireland, shall die of the same at sea, or at any place out of England or Ireland, the offence (whether in the case of principal or accessory) may be dealt with, etc., in the county or place in England or Ireland, in which the death, stroke, poisoning, or hurt happened. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 10. Where a man in a boat at a short distance from the shore was shot by a person on the shore, and died instantly, it was held that the stroke and death were both upon the high seas, and therefore triable under 28 Hen. 8, c. 15, infra, and not under 2 G. 2, c. 21. R. v. Coombes, 1 Leach, 388; 1 East, P. C. 367; 1 Hawk. c. 37, s. 17.

In indictments for burning or destroying the King's ships, magazines, etc., out of the realm, the venue may be laid in any county within the realm. 12 G. 3, c. 24, s. 2.

For all purposes of and incidental to arrest, trial, and punishment, a crime for which a person is liable to be punished under 46 & 47 Vict. c. 3 (Explosive Substances Act, 1883), when committed out of the United Kingdom, shall be deemed to have been committed in the place in which such person is apprehended or is in custody. 46 & 47 Vict. c. 3, s. 7, sub-s. 2.

Oppressions, crimes, and offences committed abroad by colonial governors, lieutenant governors, deputy governors, or commanders in chief, shall be inquired of, heard and determined in the King's Bench Division in England, or before such commissioners and in such county of this realm as shall be assigned by his Majesty's commission. 11 W. 3, c. 12 (11 & 12 W. 3, Ruffhead). Picton's case, 30 St. Tr. 225: R. v. Eyre, L. R., 3 Q. B. 487.

Misdemeanors committed in India may be tried in the King's Bench Division in England. 13 G. 3, c. 63. And in indictments for offences committed by persons employed in any public service "out of Great Britain" the venue may be laid in Middlesex. 42 G. 3, c. 85, s. 1. See R. v. Shawe, 5 M. & Sel. 403. The counties of London and Middlesex are now one for purposes of trial. 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 89; R. S. C., Jan. 1903 (post, ch. v. sect. 2).

In informations or indictments against the master of a ship for forcing on shore or leaving behind on shore or at sea, in any place in or out of his Majesty's dominions, any person belonging to his crew, the offence may be prosecuted in any court having criminal jurisdiction in his Majesty's dominions, at home or abroad, where such master or other person shall happen to be. 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, s. 187.

Offences against the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870, may be tried in any place where the offence was wholly or partly committed, or in any place within the King's dominions where the accused is: and the offence may be averred generally to have been committed in his Majesty's dominions, and the marginal venue may be the county only or place where the trial is held. 33 & 34 Vict. c. 90, ss. 16, 17; R. v. Jameson [1896] 2 Q. B. 425; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 218; 18 Cox, 392.

Offences against the Official Secrets Act, 1889, committed out of the United Kingdom may be tried in the High Court, or the Central Criminal Court. 52 & 53 Vict. c. 52, s. 6.

Offences against the Commissioners of Oaths Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 10, s. 9), and the Foreign Marriage Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 23, s. 15), committed outside the King's dominions may be tried in any county or place in England.

Offences in the Admiralty jurisdiction.]—Apart from statute offences in the Admiralty jurisdiction were triable by the admiral according to the civil law and not according to the course of the common law, and controversies occasionally arose as to whether the offence was committed within the jurisdiction of the admiral or within the body of the realm. In R. v. Coombes, 1 Leach, 388, it was held that where a shot fired on land killed a man on the sea the offence was triable in the Admiralty jurisdiction. This decision is criticised in Badische Anilin und Soda Fabrik v. Basle Chemical Works [1898] App. Cas. 200, 204, Halsbury, L.C. The distinctions and difficulties are now to a great extent removed by legislation. By 28 H. 8, c. 15, s. 1, it was provided that treasons, felonies, robberies, murder, and confederacies thereafter committed in or upon the sea, or in any other haven, river, creek, or place whereon the admiral had or pretended to have jurisdiction should be inquired of, etc., in such shores and places in the realm as should be limited for that purpose by the King's commission. This mode of trial was extended to the following offences if committed on the high seas :—Acts of hostility by a subject of this realm against a subject at sea under colour of a foreign commission; 11 & 12 W. 3, c. 7, s. 8; 18 G. 2, c. 30, s. 1; see R. v. Evans, 2 East, P. C. 798; forcibly boarding a merchant ship, and throwing over or destroying the goods; 8 G. 1, c. 24, s. 1; trading with pirates or fitting out a vessel for that purpose; 8 G. 1, c. 24, s. 1; master or seamen running away with the ship, goods, etc., or laying violent hands on or confining the master, or making a revolt in the ship, etc.; 11 & 12 W. 3, c. 7, s. 9; see R. v. M'Gregor, 1 C. & K. 429; dealing in slaves upon the high seas, or in any place where the admiral has jurisdiction, except as therein mentioned; 5 G. 4, c. 113; see R. v. Zulueta, 1 C. & K. 215; and to the offence of being accessory (before or after the fact, on land, or at sea) to piracy. 11 & 12 W. 3, c. 7, s. 10. See 8 G. 1, c. 24, s. 3. The offences above mentioned, when a commission was issued for their trial under 28 H. 8, c. 15, were inquired of, tried, and determined before the judge of the Admiralty Court, and two of the judges of the common-law courts, under a commission of oyer and terminer: and, in the indictment, no county was inserted in the margin as venue, but instead of it merely the words "Admiralty of England." According to Coke, rivers in this country to the furthest point of land next the sea, creeks and arms of the sea within the body of a county, and the sea-shore between the high and low watermarks when the tide is out, are not within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty, or within the meaning of the term "high seas." See Constable's case, 5 Co. Rep. 107; Hale de Jure Maris, c. 4, p. 10; Admiralty case, 12 Co. Rep. 79. According to Hale the Admiralty Court had concurrent jurisdiction in cases of murder and maiming, and exclusive jurisdiction in cases of piracy jure gentium, which is not a common-law offence. 2 Hale, 18. Hale's view is now accepted. See R. v. Bruce, R. & R. 243; 2 Leach. 1093: R. v. Keyn, 2 Ex. D. 76; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 17; 13 Cox, 403; Mayne, Ind. Cr. L. [ed. 1896] p. 271. The test whether an arm of the sea is within the body of a county is said to be, whether a man on one shore can see what is being done on the other. 2 East, P. C. 804. This has been held to include the Bristol Channel (R. v. Cunningham, Bell, 72 : 24 L. J. (M. C.) 66); Milford Haven (R. v. Bruce, 2 Leach, 1093); and Roundstone Bay, Galway (R. v. Mannion, 2 Cox, 158 C. C. R. Ir.). As to the offences by foreigners on foreign ships, see 41 & 42 Vict. c. 73 (post, p. 41.)

The jurisdiction of the Admiralty extends over British ships, not only on the high seas, but also in foreign rivers, below the bridges, where the tide ebbs and flows, and where great ships go, although the municipal authorities of the foreign country may have concurrent jurisdiction. R. v. Anderson, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 161; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 12. As to jurisdiction when a ship is in dock, see U. S. v. Hamilton, 1 Mason, 152, Story, J. If great ships go to the place, proof that the tide ebbs and flows is unnecessary. R. v. Allen, 1 Mood. C. C. 494. The jurisdiction extends to all persons on board the ship whether British subjects or foreigners. R. v. Lopez: R. v. Sattler, Dears. & B. 525; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 48: R. v. Lesley, Bell, 220; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 97. And therefore where a foreigner was convicted at the Central Criminal Court of manslaughter, committed on board a British ship in the river Garonne, in France, about 35 miles from the sea, and about 300 yards from the nearest shore, within the flow and ebb of the tide, the conviction was upheld. R. v. Anderson, ubi supra. So also where a larceny is committed by a person unknown on board a British ship lying afloat in the ordinary course of trading, in the open river at Rotterdam, moored to the quay, in a place where large vessels usually lay, and 16 or 18 miles from the sea, between which and the ship there were no bridges, and within the ebb and flow of the tide, it was held that the larceny took place within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty, and therefore that a person who afterwards, in England, received the property so stolen could be tried at the Central Criminal Court, as the thief himself, even if he had been a foreigner, not one of the crew, might have been so tried. R. v. Carr, 10 Q. B. D. 76; 52 L. J. (M. C.) 12. The liability of a foreigner is not affected by the fact that he was in the first instance brought illegally and by force on board the ship, unless the offence was committed merely for the purpose of freeing himself from such unlawful restraint. Therefore, where the defendant, a foreigner, having committed a crime in England, had fled to Hamburg, and was there arrested and forced on board an English ship, and while he was kept in custody on board such ship on the high seas, killed the officer who had arrested him, not for the purpose of escaping, but a malice prepense, it was held that, even assuming such arrest and detention to be illegal, he was guilty of murder. R. v. Sattler (ubi supra). Where on a trial for maliciously wounding on the high seas, it was stated by three witnesses that the vessel, on board of which the offence was alleged to have been committed, was a British ship of Shields, and that she was sailing under the British flag, but no proof was given of the register of the vessel or of the ownership; it was held that the court had jurisdiction, as the evidence was sufficient to prove that the vessel was British, and that being so, the court would have jurisdiction even if it had appeared that the vessel was not registered. R. v. Seberg, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 264; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 133: R. v. Allen, 10 Cox. 405.

In R. v. Bjornsen, L. & C. 545; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 180; 10 Cox, 74, the prisoner was one of the crew of a ship built in Holstein, whence she sailed to London. All the officers and crew were foreigners, R., the registered sole owner, was an alien born, but described in the register as "of London, merchant." The ship sailed from London under the British flag. While on the voyage the prisoner killed the master on board the vessel when several thousand miles from England, and 200 miles from land. On the trial of the prisoner for murder these facts were proved, and no evidence was given that R. had been naturalized or had obtained letters of denization; under these circumstances it was held that there was no evidence that the ship was British, and that consequently the prisoner could not be convicted in England. Nor can a foreigner be indicted in this country for casting away a foreign ship in foreign waters, if the act do not amount to piracy; but he may be indicted here for a conspiracy in this country to commit such an offence, provided the conspiracy be not limited to doing the act abroad. R. v. Kohn, 4 F. & F. 68, Willes, J.

A foreigner who kills another foreigner or an Englishman on the high seas on board a foreign ship, is in nowise amenable to the law of England, or triable in England except in a case of piracy. R. v. Lewis, Dears. & B. 182; 16 L. J. (M. C.) 104: R. v. De Mattos, 7 C. & P. 458: R. v. Depardo, 1 Taunt. 26: R. & R. 134; 9 R. R. 693. This rule applies where the ship has been illegally seized as a slaver by a British vessel. R. v. Serva, 1 Den. 104; 2 C. & K. 53; 1 Cox, 298. The foreigner is liable to extradition where the ship belongs to a state as to which the Extradition Acts have been applied. 33 & 34 Vict. c. 52, s. 16. A foreigner was indicted at the Central Criminal Court for manslaughter under the following circumstances. He was in command of a foreign ship, passing within three miles of the shore of England on a voyage to a foreign port; and whilst within that distance his ship ran into a British ship and sank her, whereby a passenger on board the latter ship was drowned. The facts of the case were such as, apart from the question of jurisdiction, to amount to manslaughter by English law. It was held by the majority of a court of 13 judges that the offence was not committed on board the British ship, and that there was no jurisdiction in the courts of this country to try the prisoner, a foreigner passing the English coast on the high seas in a foreign ship, though the occurrence took place within three miles of the English coast. R. v. Keyn, 2 Ex. D. 63; L. J. (M. C.) 17; 13 Cox, 403. Parliament approved the view of the minority, and at once passed the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 73). Sect. 2 of that Act declares (see R. v. Dudley, 14 Q. B. D. 273, 560; 54 L. J. (M. C.) 32) and enacts that "an offence committed by a person, whether he is or is not a subject of his Majesty, on the open sea, within the territorial waters of his Majesty's dominions, is an offence within the jurisdiction of the Admiral, although it may have been committed on board or by means of a foreign ship, and the person who committed such offence may be arrested, tried, and punished accordingly." The phrases and words "the territorial waters of his Majesty's dominions," "the jurisdiction of the Admiral," "offence," "ship," and "foreign ship," are defined by s. 7 of the same statute. And ss. 3 & 4 place certain restrictions on the prosecution of a person not a subject of his Majesty, and contain provisions as to procedure. The statute does not expressly exclude or include foreign public vessels. As to their position, see The Parlement Belge, 5 P. D. 197 (C. A.) and Report of Fugitive Slave Commission, 1876, Parl. Pap. 1878, vol. 28. The extent to which municipal jurisdiction outside the three miles limit is internationally recognized was fully discussed in the Behring Sea Arbitration.

The Central Criminal Court has jurisdiction to inquire of, hear, and determine any offence committed, or alleged to have been committed, within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England, and to deliver the appointed gaols of the Central Criminal Court of prisoners committed to or detained there for such offences; and all indictments found and proceedings had before the Court are valid. 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 36, s. 22; 44 & 45 Vict. c. 64, s. 2 (2): R. v. Anderson, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 161: R. v. Carr, 10 Q. B. D. 76; 52 L. J. (M. C.) 12.

By the Admiralty Offences Act, 1844 (7 & 8 Vict. c. 2), all offences alleged to have been committed on the high seas, and other places within the Admiralty of England, may be heard and determined by his Majesty's justices of the assize or others his Majesty's commissioners by whom any court shall be holden under any of his Majesty's commissions of oyer and terminer or general gaol delivery, and they shall have severally and jointly all the powers which by any act are given to the commissioners named in any commission of oyer and terminer for the trying of offences committed within the Admiralty of England, and may deliver the gaol, in every county and franchise within the limits of their several commissions, of any person committed to or imprisoned therein for any offence alleged to have been committed upon the high seas, etc., and all indictments found, and other proceedings had, by and before the said justices and commissioners shall be valid (s. 1). By sect. 2 of the same Act in all indictments preferred before the said justices and commissioners under that Act, the venue laid in the margin shall be the same as if the offence had been committed in the county where the trial is had; and all material facts, which, in other indictments, would be averred to have taken place in the county where the trial is had, shall, in indictments preferred under that Act, be averred to have taken place "on the high seas." The offence need not, therefore, now be averred to have been committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty. R. v. Jones, 1 Den. 101; 2 C. & K. 165. Sect. 3 provides for the commitment for trial of persons charged with such offences; and sect. 4 saves the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court, under 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 36, s. 22, ante, p. 41. Where any person shall within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England or Ireland, become accessory to any felony, whether at common law or by statute, and whether committed within that jurisdiction or elsewhere, or begun within it and completed elsewhere, or begun elsewhere and completed within it, his offence shall be felony, and the venue in the margin of the indictment shall be the same as if the offence had been committed in the county or place in which he is indicted, and his offence shall be averred to have been committed "on the high seas." 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 9. As to the trial of offenders in the British dominions beyond the seas for crimes committed on the high seas, or in places in which the Crown has power or jurisdiction out of his Majesty's dominions, see 12 & 13 Vict. c. 96; and 53 & 54 Vict. c. 37. By the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 60), s. 687, all offences against property or person committed in or at any place either ashore or afloat out of his Majesty's dominions by any master, seaman, or apprentice, who at the time when the offence is committed is, or within three months previously has been, employed in any British ship, shall be deemed to be offences of the same nature respectively, and be liable to the same punishments respectively, and be inquired of, heard, tried, determined, and adjudged in the same manner, and by the same courts, and in the same places as if such offences had been committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England; and the costs and expenses of the prosecution of any such offences may be directed to be paid as in the case of costs and expenses of prosecutions for offences committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England. R. v. Dudley, 14 Q. B. D. 273; 54 L. J. (M. C.) 32, decided on the similar provision in s. 267 of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104 (rep.). See Ilbert, Government of India, 410, and as to colonial jurisdiction under the Act, R. v. Hinde (1902) 22 N. Z. L. R. 436. A hulk retaining the general appointments of a ship, registered as a British ship, and hoisting the British ensign, although only used as a floating warehouse, is a British ship within the meaning of the above enactment. R. v. Armstrong, 13 Cox, 184, Archibald, J. 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, s. 686, sub-s. 1, also enacts, that where any person, being a British subject, charged with having committed any crime or offence on board any British ship on the high seas, or in any foreign port or harbour, or on board any foreign ship to which he does not belong, or not being a British subject is charged with having committed any crime or offence on board any British ship on the high seas, and that person is found (that is to say, is found to be at the time of his trial, R. v. Lopez: R. v. Sattler, Dears.

& B. 525; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 48; 7 Cox, 431) within the jurisdiction of any court of justice in his Majesty's dominions, which would have had cognizance of such crime or offence if committed within the limits of its ordinary jurisdiction, such court shall have jurisdiction to hear and try the case as if such crime or offence had been so committed; sub-s. 2 saves the effect of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 96. Each of the Criminal Law Consolidation Acts of 1861 contains a provision by which all indictable offences in those acts respectively mentioned committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty, are to be deemed to be offences of the same nature and subject to the same punishments as if they had been committed on the land in England or Ireland, and may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, and determined in any county or place in England or Ireland in which the offender shall be apprehended or be in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if the offence had been committed in that county or place. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96 [Larceny, etc.], s. 115; c. 97 [Malicious Injuries to Property], s. 72; c. 98 [Forgery], s. 50; c. 99 [Offences relating to the Coin], s. 36; c. 100 [Offences against the Person, s. 68]. These enactments give jurisdiction to a borough quarter sessions to try a man arrested in the borough for offences committed at sea. R. v. Peel, L. & C. 231; L. J. (M. C.) 69; 9 Cox, 220.

Offences during journeys.]—In indictments for felonies or misdemeanors committed upon any person, or on or in respect of any property, in or upon any coach, cart, or other carriage whatsoever employed in any journey, or on board any vessel whatsoever employed in any voyage or journey upon any navigable river, canal, or inland navigation, the venue may be laid in any county through which the coach, etc., or vessel shall have passed in the course of the journey or voyage during which the felony or misdemeanor was committed, in the same manner as if it had been actually committed therein; and where the side, bank, centre or other part of the highway, river, etc., shall constitute the boundary of two counties, the venue may be laid in either of the counties through, or adjoining to, or by, the boundary of any part whereof the coach, etc., or vessel shall have passed in the course of the journey or voyage. 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 13. This enactment is not confined to the carriages of common carriers, or to public conveyances, but extends to any carriage employed in any journey. R. v. Sharpe, Dears. 415; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 40; 6 Cox, 418. The fact that a person assaulted in a train changes into another carriage of the same train during the journey, does not take away the jurisdiction. R. v. French, 8 Cox, 252. Similar provisions are contained in s. 21 of the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 69), as to offences on journeys or voyages in which the vehicle or vessel passes through one or more British possessions.

Offences in more than one county or place.]—Where a felony or misdemeanor is committed on the boundary of two or more counties, or within the distance of 500 yards of the boundary, or is begun in one county and completed in another, the venue may be laid in either county, in the same manner as if it had been wholly committed therein. 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 12 (cf. 44 & 45 Vict. c. 69, s. 20). The distance is measured in a direct line as the crow flies. R. v. Wood, 5 Jur. 225; cf. Lake v. Butler, 5 E. & B. 92, and 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 34, which governs statutes passed since 1889. The first branch of this enactment extends to the boundaries of counties only, and not to prosecutions in limited jurisdictions. R. v. Welsh, 1 Mood. C. C. 175. 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 12 regulates venue only, and does not enable the prosecutor to lay the offence in one county and try it in the other; but only to lay and try it in either. R. v. Mitchell, 2 Q. B. 636; 2 G. & D. 274. It seems that in cases of murder or manslaughter, where the cause of death arises in one county, and the death takes place in another, the prisoner may, under this statute, be indicted in either county. 3 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.), 146.

In the case of misdemeanor persons who anywhere incite, procure, and abet, or assist its commission, can be indicted in the county in which the misdemeanor is committed. R. v. Johnson, 7 East, 65; 29 St. Tr. 81; 8 R. R. 597. Where an offence is done through an innocent agent (see ante, p. 12), the principal may be indicted in the county in which the agent acted, or in that in which the principal procured him to act. Fost. 349: R. v. Brisac, 4 East, 164. In indictments for conspiracies or other misdemeanors, the venue may be laid in any county in which it can be proved that an act was done by any one of the offenders in furtherance of their common design. R. v. Burdett, 4 B. & Ald. 95; 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1, 116. See R. v Brisac, 4 East, 164. So in indictments for compassing the King's death, or for any of the treasons in 36 G. 3, c. 7, s. 1 (made perpetual by 57 G. 3, c. 6, s. 1), the venue may be laid in any county in which a sufficient overt act can be proved. R. v. Lord Preston, 12 St. Tr. 645: R. v. Vane, Kel. (J.) 14, 15; 6 St. Tr. 119. See Deacon's case Fost. 9: 18 St. Tr. 365; and post, tit. "Treason." In an indictment for sending a threatening letter, the venue may be laid either in the county where the prosecutor received it; R. v. Girdwood, 2 East, P. C. 1120; 1 Leach, 142: R. v. Esser, 2 East, P. C. 1125; or in the county from which the offender sent it. So, if a libel, R. v. Burdett, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1, 124; 4 B. & Ald. 95: R. v. Ellis [1899] 1 Q. B. 230: R. v. Watson, 1 Camp. 215: or a letter containing a challenge (R. v. Williams, 2 Camp. 506) be sent from the county of A. to the county of B., the venue may be laid in either county. So, if an act done in one county prove a nuisance to another, in an indictment for it, the venue may be laid in either county, although it has been said to be more correct to lay it in the county in which the act was done. Staundf. b. 2, 91. See post, tit. Larceny. These rules appear not to apply to offences part of the essential elements of which take place outside England. R. v. Ellis [1899] 1 Q. B. 230, C. C. R. Cf. Badische Anilin und Soda Fabrik v. Basle Chemical Works [1898] App. Cas. 200, 204.

Offences in counties of cities or towns.]—Where an offence is committed within the county of a city or town corporate (except in London, Westminster, or the borough of Southwark, 38 G. 3, c. 52, s. 10), the prosecutor may prefer his indictment to the grand jury of the next adjoining county, at the sessions of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, and may have the offender tried there. 38 G. 3, c. 52, s. 2. See R. v. Gough, 2 Doug. 791: R. v. Mellor, R. & R. 144: R. v. Goff, R. & R. 179: R. v. Pinney, 3 St. Tr., N. S. 11. Or, if the bill have been found by a grand jury of the county of the city, etc., any court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, holden for such county of the city, etc., may order it to be tried by a jury of the next adjoining county. 38 G. 3, c. 52, s. 3. In such cases the venue should be stated as prescribed by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 23 (supra, p. 35), and the court before which the offender is tried and convicted may order the judgment to be executed either in the county of trial or in the county of the city or town corporate in which the offence was committed. 51 G. 3, c. 100, s. 1. By the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 19), "whenever any justice or justices of the peace, or coroner, acting for any county of a city or county of a town corporate, within which her Majesty has not been pleased for five years next before the passing of this act (1 Aug., 1851) to direct a commission of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery to be executed, and until her Majesty shall be pleased to direct a commission of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery to be executed within the same, shall commit for safe custody to the gaol or house of correction of such county of a city or town any person charged with any offence committed within the limits of such county of a city or town not triable at the court of quarter sessions of the said county of a city or county of a town, the commitment shall specify that such person is committed pursuant to this Act; and the recognizances to appear to prosecute and give evidence taken by such justice, justices or coroner, shall in all such cases be conditioned for appearance, prosecution, and giving evidence at the court of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery for the next adjoining county . . . and the justice, justices, or coroner, by whom persons charged as aforesaid may be committed, shall deliver or cause to be delivered to the proper officer of the court the several examinations, informations, evidence, recognizances, and inquisitions relative to such persons at the time and in the manner that would be required in case such persons had been committed to the gaol of such adjoining county by a justice or justices, or coroner, having authority so to commit; and the same proceedings shall and may be had thereupon at the sessions of oyer and terminer or general gaol delivery for such adjoining county, as in the case of persons charged with offences of the like nature committed within such county."

S. 23 of the same Act extends to prisoners bred in or removed for trial to the adjoining county (under s. 19) the provisions of 38 G. 3, c. 52, and 51 G. 3, c. 100, as to the execution of the sentences to be passed on such persons, and as to the payment of expenses (see post, Book I. ch. vi., Costs). By s. 188 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), (1) "Until her Majesty is pleased to direct a commission of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery to be executed within any borough, being a county of a city or county of a town, all bills of indictment for offences committed within that borough shall be preferred, and all proceedings thereon shall be had in the manner authorized by 38 G. 3, c. 52. (2) For the purposes of that Act, each borough named in the 6th schedule shall be considered as next adjoining the county named in conjunction therewith." 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 242, amends 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 24, by substituting for the purposes of the Act of 1851 the same 6th schedule. Under it, Northumberland is considered the next adjoining county to Berwick-upon-Tweed and Newcastle-upon-Tyne; Gloucestershire, to Bristol; Cheshire, to Chester; Devonshire, to Exeter; and Yorkshire, to Kingston-upon-Hull. Bristol, Chester, and Exeter were excepted from 38 G. 3, c. 52 (see s. 10), but the exception was repealed by the Municipal Corporations Act, 1835 (5 & 6 W. 4, c. 76, s. 109). See R. v. Holden, 8 C. & P. 606. As to the mode of stating that the county of trial is next adjoining, see R. v. Goff, R. & R. 179.

Separate commissions of assize, etc., are still issued and executed for the counties of the cities or towns of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Exeter, Bristol, Norwich, Gloucester, Lincoln, Nottingham, Worcester, York, Haverfordwest, and Carmarthen, and for the borough of Leicester.

The counties of cities or towns besides those already named are Canterbury, Southampton, Lichfield, and Poole.

Offences tried in the High Court.]—Where an indictment is tried in the High Court, the venue is the county in which the indictment was found, unless change of venue is ordered (see post, s. 13, Certiorari), or unless the trial is at bar. R. v. Amery, 1 T. R. 863; 1 R. R. 179:

Att.-Gen. v. Churchill, 8 M. & W. 171, 193: Dixon v. Farrer, 18 Q. B. D. 43 (C. A.).

Offences in Central Criminal Court District.]—In indictments preferred at the Central Criminal Court (the jurisdiction of which extends to the city of London and counties of London and of Middlesex, and certain specified portions of the counties of Essex, Kent, and Surrey; 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 36, s. 2; 38 & 39 Vict. c. 77. s. 23; 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 89), the district within the limits of its jurisdiction is to be deemed and taken to be one county for all purposes of venue, local description, trial, judgment, and execution not "thereinbefore" specially provided for; and the venue laid in the margin shall be as follows, "Central Criminal Court, to wit;" and all offences which in other indictments would be laid to have been committed in the county where the trial is had, and all material facts which would be in other indictments averred to have taken place in the county where the trial is had, shall, in indictments preferred and tried in the said court, be laid to have been committed and averred to have taken place "within the jurisdiction of the said court." 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 36, s. 3. As to the trial at this court of offences committed out of its jurisdiction, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, see post, s. 13, Certiorari. Persons subject to the military law, who have been committed for the murder or manslaughter of any person subject to that Act, may, under certain circumstances, where the offence has been committed in England or Wales, out of the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court, be indicted and tried before that court. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 65. The history of the jurisdiction of the court is given in 6 St. Tr., N. S. 1135, Appendix C.

Accessories.]—Accessories before or after the fact to any felony wholly committed within England or Ireland may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined, and punished by any court which shall have jurisdiction to try the principal felony, or any felonies, committed in any county or place in which the act by reason whereof such person shall have become such accessory shall have been committed: "and in every other case accessories before the fact may be dealt with, etc., by any court having jurisdiction to try the principal felony or any felonies committed in any county or place in which the accessory shall be apprehended or be in custody, whether the principal felony shall have been committed on the sea or on the land, or begun on the sea and completed on the land, or begun on the land and completed on the sea, and whether within his Majesty's dominions or without, or partly within his Majesty's dominions and partly without." 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 7. See R. v. Wallace, 2 Mood. C. C. 200; C. & Mar. 200. An accessory before the fact may however be indicted, etc., in all respects as if he were the principal felon. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 1. As to accessories where the offence is committed in the Admiralty jurisdiction, see ante, p. 42.

Bigamy.]—In indictments for bigamy, the venue may be laid either in the county where the offender was apprehended, or is in custody, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 57, or in the county in which the second marriage took place. Where the indictment is not preferred in the county where the second marriage was, but in the county where the prisoner was apprehended or is in custody, it need not state that the prisoner was apprehended or is in custody in the county in which the indictment is preferred. R. v. Whiley, 1 C. & K. 150 (wrongly reported in 2 Mood. C. C. 186). If the defendant, being in custody for a felony, be detained for bigamy, he may be indicted for the bigamy in the county in which he is so detained. R. v. Gordon, R. & R. 48.

Coinage offences.]—In indictments for offences with reference to false or counterfeit coin, "where any person shall tender, utter, or put off any counterfeit coin in any county or jurisdiction, and shall also tender, utter, or put off any other counterfeit coin in any other county or jurisdiction on the same day or within ten days next ensuing, or where two or more persons have acted in concert in different counties or jurisdictions to commit any offence against the Coinage Offences Act, 1861, the offence may be laid and charged to have been committed, and the offender may be dealt with, etc., in any one of those counties or jurisdictions." 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 23.

Customs, excise, and stamps.]—In indictments for violently assaulting or resisting officers of the excise (7 & 8 G. 4, c. 53, s. 43), or for offences against the Customs Acts (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 258), the venue may be laid in any county. In indictments for offences against the customs committed upon the water which is not or is not certainly known to be within any county, the venue may be laid in any place on land where the offender may be or be brought. 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 229.

The provisions of 53 G. 3, c. 108, s. 35, as to venue in offences relating to stamp duties, were repealed, etc., in 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 99), and not re-enacted. The Stamp Duties Management Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 38), contains no venue clause; but 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 91, infra, is sufficient to cover cases of forgery of stamps.

Escapes and prison breach.]—In indictments for escapes, breaches of prison, and rescues, the venue might formerly be laid either in the jurisdiction where the offence was committed, or in that where the offender should be apprehended and retaken. 4 G. 4, c. 64, s. 44. That statute was wholly repealed by 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, s. 73, sched. 3. But provisions similar to s. 44 are in force as to escapes from Parkhurst Prison (1 & 2 Vict. c. 82, s 18), and as to escapes from Pentonville (5 & 6 Vict. c. 29, s. 28).

In indictments for being at large before the expiration of a sentence of penal servitude, the venue may be laid either in the county where the defendant was apprehended or in that from whence he was ordered to be sent to penal servitude. 5 G. 4, c. 84, s. 22; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, s. 3.

Extortion.]—In indictments for extortion, the venue, it is said, may be laid in any county. 31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 4; 1 Hawk. c. 68, s. 6 n. (3); 2 Stark. Cr. Pl. (2nd ed.) 611, n. (k). Sed quære; 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 50; 2 Chitt. C. L. 234 (n). It is, however, doubtful whether 31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 4, ever applied to criminal proceedings: and this doubt is strengthened by the fact of its total repeal by the Civil Procedure Acts Repeal Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 59). The only safe course now is to lay the venue for extortion in the jurisdiction where the offence was committed.

Forgery and perjury.]—In indictments for forgery, and uttering forged matter, whether the offence be indictable at common law, or by virtue of any Act passed, or to be passed, the venue may be laid and the offender may be dealt with, etc., in any county or place in which he shall be apprehended or is in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if his offence had been actually committed in that county or place. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 93, s. 41. See R. v. James, 7 C. & P. 553: R. v. Smythies, 1 Den.

498; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 31, both decided under a similar Act, 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 66, s. 24 (rep.). And accessories before and after the fact, if the offence be felony, and aiders and abettors, if the offence be a misdemeanor, may be dealt with, etc., in any county or place in which they shall be apprehended or are in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if their offence, and the offence of their principal, had been actually committed in such county or place. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 41. Forgeries and perjuries punishable under the Commissioners for Oaths Act, 1889 "(whether committed within or without his Majesty's dominions), may be inquired of, dealt with, tried and punished in any county or place in the United Kingdom in which the person charged was apprehended or is in custody, and for all purposes incidental to or consequential on the trial or punishment the offence shall be deemed to have been committed in that county or place." 52 & 53 Vict. c. 10, s. 9.

Offences punishable as perjury under the Foreign Marriage Act, 1892, are triable in any county in England, and dealt with in the same manner in all respects as if committed in the county of trial. 55 & 56 Vict. c. 23, s. 15.

Perjury at a naval court martial wherever committed is triable in England. 29 & 30 Vict. c. 109, s. 67.

Larceny and receiving.]—If a man commit larceny, simple or compound, in one county, and carry the goods with him into another, he may be indicted for the simple or compound larceny in the county in which he committed it, or he may be indicted for it as for a simple larceny in the county into which, or in any of the counties through which, he carried the goods; for, in contemplation of law, there is such a taking and carrying away as constitute the offence of larceny at common law in every place through which, at any distance of time, the goods were carried by him. R. v. Parkin, 1 Mood. C. C. 45; 1 Hale, 507; 2 Hale, 163; 3 Co. Inst. 113; 1 Hawk. c. 33, s. 52; 4 Bl. Com. 301; 2 East, P. C. 771: Griffith v. Taylor, 2 C. P. D. 194, 202, Cockburn, L.C.J.: R. v. Fenley, 20 Cox, 252, Jelf, J. The larceny itself is ambulatory, but the aggravated circumstances are fixed and stationary. 1 Hale, 536: R. v. Thomson, 2 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 233: R. v. Millar, 7 C. & P. 665: R. v. Fenley, ubi supra. A country bank note was stolen during its transit through the post office from Swindon, in Wiltshire, to Bristol, and the same note was afterwards inclosed by the defendant in a letter posted by him in Somersetshire, and addressed to the bankers at Swindon, requesting payment of it, which letter with its contents arrived in due course at Swindon; the defendant was held triable in Wiltshire, the possession of the post office servants or of the bankers in Wiltshire being held for this purpose to be his possession. R. v. Cryer, Dears. & B. 324; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 192. Where a chattel was stolen in Liverpool, and was sent thence by the thief by rail, and delivered by the railway company to the receiver in the county of M. for the purpose of being disposed of by the receiver, and there was no evidence of any possession by the thief in the county of M., unless either the possession of the railway company or of the receiver could be deemed his possession, it was held that the thief retained control over the chattel in M., was therefore in possession thereof in M., and was liable to be tried in M. under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 114: R. v. Rogers, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 136; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 83. But if the nature of the property be changed, an indictment for stealing the article in its original state cannot be preferred in the county into which, when so changed, the property is carried. R. v. Edwards, R. & R. 497: R. v. Halloway, 1 C. & P. 127. Nor, where several commit a joint felony, in the county of A., and there divide the goods, and afterwards separately carry each his respective share into the county of B., can they be indicted for a joint felony in the latter county. R. v. Barnett, 2 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 284. But if two persons steal a thing in one county, though one of them alone carry the property into another county, yet, if both afterwards co-operate to secure the thing in the latter county, both may be indicted in the latter county; for the subsequent concurrence may be connected with the previous taking. R. v. County, 2 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 193, 285: R. v. M'Donagh, Carr. Supp. 23. The taking into the second county, however, must be animo furandi; the mere possession there is not sufficient. A constable took the defendant with two stolen horses in Surrey, and afterwards, at his request, rode with him on the horses into Kent, where he escaped; the defendant was afterwards indicted in Kent, and the judges were unanimously of opinion that there was no evidence of stealing in Kent. R. v. Simmonds, 1 Mood. C. C. 408. Where an indictment for compound larceny is found in a jurisdiction other than that in which the larceny took place there is no power to try it: and it is doubtful whether the court can acquire jurisdiction by striking out the circumstances of aggravation. R. v. Fenley, 20 Cox, 252, Jelf, J. In an indictment for embezzlement where the money is received in one county and the receipt denied in another, it has been held that the venue may be laid in either county. R. v. Taylor, R. & R. 63; 3 B. & P. 596: R. v. Hobson, R. & R. 56: R. v. Rogers, 3 Q. B. D. 28; 47 L. J. (M. C.) 11. A person who steals goods on a British ship within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England or Ireland may be indicted in any county or place in England or Ireland in which he is apprehended or in custody: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 115. It was otherwise at common law. 3 Co. Inst. 113; 1 Hawk. c. 33, s. 52.

If a person, having stolen or otherwise feloniously taken any chattel, money, or valuable security, or other property whatsoever, in any one part of the United Kingdom, afterwards have the same in his possession in any other part of the United Kingdom, he may be dealt with, etc., in that part of the United Kingdom in which he so had the property, in the same manner as if he had actually stolen it there. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 114. "And, if any person, in any one part of the United Kingdom, shall receive, or have any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, which shall have been stolen or otherwise feloniously taken in any other part of the United Kingdom, knowing such property to have been stolen or otherwise feloniously taken, he may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished for such offence in that part of the United Kingdom where he shall so receive or have such property, in the same manner as if it had been originally stolen or taken in that part." 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 114, 122.

"Whosoever shall receive any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever knowing the same to have been feloniously or unlawfully stolen, taken, obtained, converted, or disposed of, may, whether charged as an accessory after the fact to the felony, or with a substantive felony, or with a misdemeanor only, may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished in the county or place in which he shall have or shall have had any such property in his possession, or in any county or place in which the party guilty of the principal felony or misdemeanor may by law be tried, in the same manner as such receiver may be dealt with, etc., in the county where he actually received such property;" 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 96. Therefore, where the stealing is in county A., and the receiving in county B., both are triable in A., and the indictment may allege both the stealing and receiving to have been in A. R. v. Hinley, 2 M. & Rob. 524. But where A., B., and C. were indicted for stealing a sheep in Dorsetshire, and one count of the indictment also charged C., as for a substantive felony, with receiving the sheep in Somersetshire, not naming any one as the thief, he was held not to be triable for such receiving in Dorsetshire. R. v. Martin, 1 Den. 398; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 137.

Receiving goods stolen abroad.]—The Larceny Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 52) s. 1, sub-s. 1, enacts, "if any person, without lawful excuse, receives, or has in his possession, any property stolen outside the United Kingdom, knowing such property to have been stolen . . . he may be indicted in any county or place in which he has, or has had, the property." By sub-s. 2: "For the purposes of this section, property shall be deemed to have been stolen where it has been taken, extorted, obtained, embezzled, converted, or disposed of, under such circumstances that, if the act had been committed in the United Kingdom, the person committing it would have been guilty of an indictable offence, according to the law, for the time being, of the United Kingdom." By sub-s. 3: "An offence under this section shall be a felony, or misdemeanor, according as the act committed outside the United Kingdom would have been a felony, or misdemeanor, if committed in England or Ireland." The cases to the contrary cited in Archbold (21st ed.) are therefore now no longer law.

Mutiny.]—In indictments for endeavouring to seduce soldiers or sailors from their duty, or for inciting or stirring them up to mutiny, the venue may be laid in any county in England, whether the offence be committed on the high seas or in England. 37 G. 3, c. 70, s. 2.

Post-office offences.]—In indictments for offences against the Post-office Acts, the venue may be laid in the county or place in England or Ireland where the offence is committed, or where the offender is apprehended or is in custody; and, if the offence be "committed in or upon or in respect of a mail, or upon a person engaged in the conveyance or delivery of a post letter-bag, or post-letter, or in respect of a post letter-bag, or post-letter, or a chattel, or money, or valuable security sent by the post," the venue may be laid in the county where the offender is apprehended or is in custody, or in any county or place through any part whereof the mail, or the person, or the post letter-bag, or the post-letter, or the chattel, or the money, or the valuable security sent by the post, in respect of which the offence is committed, shall have passed in due course of conveyance or delivery by post: and, if the side, centre, or other part of a highway, or the side, bank, centre, or other part of a river, canal, or navigation, constitute the boundary of two counties, the venue may be laid in either county. 7 W. 4, & 1 Vict. c. 36, s. 37.

Public authorities and officers: offences by.]—In indictments against persons in the public service, or in the police, for larceny or embezzlement or fraudulent application or disposition of property in the possession or power of his Majesty, the venue may be laid in the county or place where the defendant is apprehended or is in custody, or in which the offence is committed. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 70.

Slave trade.]—Offences in connection with the slave trade may be tried either where committed, or in Middlesex, or in any place where the accused for the time being is if it be within the King's dominions, or a place where his Majesty has jurisdiction under the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts. 36 & 37 Vict. c. 88, s. 26.

Unlawful oaths.]—Offences against the Unlawful Oaths Acts of 1797 & 1802, if committed on the high seas or outside the realm, or in England, may be tried by a court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery for any county in England in the same manner as if committed in such county. 37 G. 3, c. 123, s. 6; 52 G. 3, c. 104, s. 7.

Wrecking.]—In indictments for plundering or stealing any part of any ship in distress or wrecked, stranded, or cast ashore, or any goods, merchandize, or articles of any kind belonging to such ship, the venue may be laid either in the county or place in which the offence was committed, or in any county or place next adjoining. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 64.

2. The Statement.

Statutes.

7 Geo. 4, c. 64 (Criminal Law Act, 1826.)

Sect. 19. Misnomer, want of addition.]—And for preventing abuses from dilatory pleas, be it enacted that no indictment or information shall be abated by reason of any dilatory plea of misnomer, or of want of addition, or of wrong addition of the party offering such plea, if the court shall be satisfied by affidavit or otherwise of the truth of such plea; but in such case the court shall forthwith cause the indictment or information to be amended according to the truth, and shall call upon such party to plead thereto, and shall proceed as if no such dilatory plea had been pleaded.

Sect. 21. Description of offences.] . . . Where the offence charged has been created by any statute, or subjected to a greater degree of punishment, or excluded from the benefit of clergy, by any statute, the indictment or information shall, after verdict, be held sufficient to warrant the punishment prescribed by the statute, if it describe the offence in the words of the statute (see post, p. 78).

11 & 12 Vict. c. 46 (Criminal Procedure Act, 1848).

Sect. 4. Amendment of certain misdescriptions, courts of assize.]—["Whereas a failure of justice frequently takes place in criminal trials by reason of variances between writings produced in evidence and the recital or setting forth thereof in the indictment or information, and the same cannot now be amended at the trial except in cases of misdemeanor;" for remedy thereof BE IT ENACTED, that] it shall and may be lawful for any court of oyer and terminer and general gaol delivery, if such court shall see fit so to do, to cause the indictment or information for any offence whatever, when any variance or variances shall appear between any matter in writing or in print produced in evidence and the recital or setting forth thereof in the indictment or information whereon the trial is pending, to be forthwith amended in such particular or particulars by some officer of the court, and after such amendment the trial shall proceed in the same manner in all respects, both with regard to the liability of witnesses to be indicted for perjury and otherwise, as if no such variance or variances had appeared.

[By 9 G. 4, c. 15 (rep. 53 & 54 Vict. c. 33, s. 1), judges at Nisi Prius, and courts of oyer and terminer and general gaol delivery, were empowered to amend the record upon which any trial might be pending, in any indictment or information for any misdemeanor, where any variance should

By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, s. 4, the same powers were given to the same courts and judges in all criminal trials. 9 G. 4, c. 15, was held to apply only to cases in which a particular written instrument was professed to be set out recited; Ryder v. Malbon, 3 C. & P. 594; and only to mere verbal alterations, and not to omissions which altered the effect of the part set out. See R. v. Christian, C. & Mar. 388: R. v. Newton, 1 C. & K. 469. And amendments were made under this statute very sparingly in criminal cases. R. v. Cooke, 7 C. & P. 559: R. v. Hewins, 9 C. & P. 786.]

12 & 13 Vict. c. 45 (Quarter Sessions Act, 1849).

Sect. 10. Amendments of certain misdescriptions by Courts of Quarter Sessions.]—Every court of general or quarter sessions of the peace, on the trial of any offence within its jurisdiction, whenever any variance or variances shall appear between any matter in writing or in print produced in evidence, and the recital or setting forth thereof in the indictment, shall have the same power in all respects to cause the indictment to be amended which is given to courts of oyer and terminer and general gaol delivery, with regard to offences tried before such last-mentioned courts, by virtue of an act of the twelfth year of her Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act for the Removal of Defects in the Administration of Criminal Justice" (11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, supra), and after such amendment the trial shall proceed in the same manner in all respects, both with regard to the liability of witnesses to be indicted for perjury and otherwise, as if no variance or variances had appeared.

14 & 15 Vict. c. 100 (Criminal Procedure Act, 1851).

["Whereas offenders frequently escape conviction on their trials by reason of the technical strictness of criminal proceedings in matters not material to the merits of the case: and whereas such technical strictness may safely be relaxed in many instances, so as to ensure the punishment of the guilty, without depriving the accused of any just means of defence: and whereas a failure of justice often takes place on the trial of persons charged with felony and misdemeanor by reason of variances between the statement in the indictment on which the trial is had and the proof of names, dates, matters, and circumstances therein mentioned, not material to the merits of the case, and by the misstatement whereof the person on trial cannot have been prejudiced in his defence:" BE IT THEREFORE ENACTED . . . as follows:—]

Sect. 1. Amendment of certain immaterial variances.]—From and after the coming of this Act into operation (Sept. 1, 1851), whenever on the trial of any indictment for any felony or misdemeanor there shall appear to be any variance between the statement in such indictment and the evidence offered in proof thereof,

In the name of any county, riding, division, city, borough, town corporate, parish, township, or place mentioned or described in any such indictment;

Or in the name or description of any person or persons, or body politic or corporate, therein stated or alleged to be the owner or owners of any property, real or personal, which shall form the subject of any offence charged therein;

Or in the name or description of any person or persons, body politic or corporate, therein stated or alleged to be injured or damaged or intended to be injured or damaged by the commission of such offence;

Or in the christian name or surname, or both christian name and surname, or other description whatsoever, of any person or persons whomsoever therein named or described;

Or in the name or description of any matter or thing whatsoever therein named or described, or in the ownership of any property named or described therein;

It shall and may be lawful for the court before which the trial shall be had, if it shall consider such variance not material to the merits of the case, and that the defendant cannot be prejudiced thereby in his defence on such merits, to order such indictment to be amended, according to the proof, by some officer of the court or other person, both in that part of the indictment where such variance occurs and in every other part of the indictment which it may become necessary to amend, on such terms as to postponing the trial to be had before the same or another jury, as such court shall think reasonable; and after any such amendment the trial shall proceed, whenever the same shall be proceeded with, in the same manner in all respects, and with the same consequences, both with respect to the liability of witnesses to be indicted for perjury and otherwise, as if no such variance had occurred; and in case such trial shall be had at nisi prius, the order for the amendment shall be endorsed on the postea, and returned together with the record, and thereupon such papers, rolls, or other records of the court from which such record issued as it may be necessary to amend shall be amended accordingly by the proper officer; and in all other cases the order for the amendment shall either be endorsed on the indictment or shall be engrossed on parchment, and filed, together with the indictment, among the records of the court: provided that in all such cases where the trial shall be so postponed as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for such court to respite the recognizances of the prosecutor and witnesses, and of the defendant, and his surety or sureties, if any, accordingly, in which case the prosecutor and witnesses shall be bound to attend to prosecute and give evidence respectively, and the defendant shall be bound to attend to be tried, at the time and place to which such trial shall be postponed, without entering into any fresh recognizances for that purpose, in such and the same manner as if they were originally bound by their recognizances to appear and prosecute or give evidence at the time and place to which such trial shall have been so postponed: provided also that where any such trial shall lie to be heard before another jury, the Crown and the defendant shall respectively be entitled to the same challenges as they were respectively entitled to before the first jury was sworn.

Sect. 2. Verdicts and judgments given after amendment to be valid.]—Every verdict and judgment, which shall be given after the making of any amendment under the provisions of this Act, shall be of the same force and effect in all respects as if the indictment had originally been in the same form in which it was after such amendment had been made.

Sect. 3. Records to be drawn up in amended form.]—If it shall become necessary at any time for any purpose whatsoever to draw up a formal record in any case where any amendment shall have been made under the provisions of this Act, such record shall be drawn up in the form in which the indictment was after such amendment was made, without taking any notice of the fact of such amendment having been made.

Sect. 5. Description of instruments in indictments for the stealing or destroying, etc., thereof.]—In any indictment for . . . stealing, embezzling, destroying, or concealing, or for obtaining by false pretences any instrument it shall be sufficient to describe such instrument by any name or designation by which the same may be usually known or by the purport thereof, without setting out any copy or fac-simile thereof or otherwise describing the same or the value thereof. [The portions of this enactment relating to forgery and uttering were repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95, s. 1, and re-enacted in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 42, q.v. post, tit. "Forgery."]

24 & 25 Vict. c. 98.

Sect. 42. Description of instruments in indictments for forgery, uttering, etc.]—post, tit. "Forgery."

14 & 15 Vict. c. 100.

Sect. 7. Description of instruments.]—In all other cases wherever it shall be necessary to make any averment in any indictment as to any instrument whether the same consists wholly or in part of writing, print, or figures, it shall be sufficient to describe such instrument by any name or designation by which the same may be usually known, or by the purport thereof, without setting out any copy or fac-simile of the whole or any part thereof.

Sect. 18. Description of coin and banknotes as money.]—In every indictment in which it shall be necessary to make any averment as to any money or any note of the Bank of England or any other bank, it shall be sufficient to describe such money or bank note simply as money, without specifying the particular coin or bank note: and such allegations, so far as regards the description of the property, shall be sustained by proof of any amount of coin or of any bank note, although the particular species of coin of which such amount was composed, or the particular nature of the bank note, shall not be proved, and in cases of embezzlement and obtaining money or bank notes by false pretences by proof that the offender embezzled or obtained any piece of coin or any bank note or any portion of the value thereof, although such piece of coin or bank note may have been delivered to him in order that some part of the value thereof should be returned to the party delivering the same or to any other person, and such part shall have been returned accordingly.

Sect. 24. Certain general defects not to vitiate indictments.]—No indictment for any offence shall be held insufficient for want of the averment of any matter unnecessary to be proved, nor for the omission of the words as "appear by the record" or of the words with "force and arms," or of the words "against the peace" (post, p. 85), nor for the insertion of the words "against the form of the statute" instead of the words "against the form of the statutes" or vice versâ (id.), nor for that any person mentioned in the indictment is designated by a name of office or other descriptive appellation, instead of by his proper name (post, p. 56), nor for omitting to state the time at which the offence was committed in any case where time is not of the essence of the offence (post, pp. 67, 94), nor for stating the time imperfectly, nor for stating the offence to have been committed on a day subsequent to the finding of the indictment, or on an impossible day, or on a day that never happened, nor for want of a proper or perfect venue (ante, p. 35), nor for want of a proper or formal conclusion (post, p. 85), nor for want of or imperfection in the addition of any defendant (post, p. 56), nor for want of the statement of the value or price of any matter or thing or the amount of damage, injury or spoil in any case where the value or price or the amount of damage, injury, or spoil is not of the essence of the offence (post, p. 77).

Sect. 25. Challenging and amending formal defects.]—Every objection to any indictment for any formal defect apparent on the face thereof shall be taken, by demurrer or motion to quash such indictment, before the jury shall be sworn and not afterwards: and every court before which any such objection shall be taken for any formal defect may, if it be thought necessary, cause the indictment to be forthwith amended in such particular by some officer of the court or other person; and thereupon the court shall proceed as if no such defect had appeared.

Sect. 30. Definitions of Indictment and Property.]—In the construction of this Act the word "indictment" shall be understood to include "information," "inquisition," and "presentment," as well as indictment, and also any "plea," "replication," or other pleading, and any nisi prius record:" . . . and the term "finding of the indictment" shall be understood to include "the taking of an inquisition," "the exhibiting of an information, and the making a presentment" . . . and the word "property" shall be understood to include goods, chattels, money, valuable securities, and every other matter or thing whether real or personal upon or in respect to which any offence may be committed.

Common Law.

In the statement, all the ingredients of the offence with which the defendant is charged, the facts, circumstances and intent constituting it, should be set forth with certainty and precision, without any repugnancy and inconsistency, and the defendant should be charged directly and positively with having committed it.

At common law these rules were strictly enforced in favorem vitæ (see 2 Hale, 193). By reason of the change in the scale of punishments and of the enactments quoted above, they are relaxed to the extent below indicated under the several sub-headings.

Certainty as to the party indicted.]—The defendant should be described in the indictment by his christian name and surname. 2 Hale, 175. And when a corporation is indicted it should be described by its proper corporate name or style (see post, p. 65). But where the inhabitants of a parish are indicted for not repairing a highway, or the inhabitants of a county for not repairing a bridge, it is enough to describe them as the inhabitants of a parish or county without naming any of them. 2 Rolle Abr. 79: 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 68.

Formerly it was necessary that the christian name of the defendant stated in the indictment should be such as he obtained at baptism or confirmation; see 2 Rolle Abr. 145; Co. Litt. 3, or both; Walden v. Holmes, 6 Mod. 115; and sundry minute questions were raised as to whether a man could have two christian names. 2 Hale, 175, and see Archbold Cr. Pl. (22*nd. ed.*) 47, 48. These refinements are rendered obsolete by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, ss. 1, 2, ante, p. 52. Under s. 1 the court may amend any variances between the indictment and the proof with respect to the christian name and (or) surname of the accused, which appears immaterial to the merits of the case if the amendment will not prejudice the defence or the merits.

The surname may be such as the defendant has usually gone by or acknowledged; and if there be a doubt which one of two names is his real surname, the second may be added in the indictment after an alias dictus, thus: "Richard Wilson, otherwise called Richard Layer" (Bro. Misnom. 47).

If the name of the prisoner be unknown, and he refuse to disclose it, he may be described as "a person whose name is to the jurors unknown, but who is personally brought before them by the keeper of the prison;" but an indictment against him as a person to the jurors unknown, without something to ascertain whom the grand jury meant to designate, would be insufficient. Anon., R. & R. 489.

Additions.]—It was formerly necessary, under 1 Hen. 5, c. 5 (the Statute of Additions) to add to the christian names and surnames of defendants the additions of their "estate or degree, or mystery," and also of the "towns, or hamlets, or places and counties of which they were or be, or in which they be or were conversant:" and many authorities are to be found in the books as to the sufficiency of the statement of these matters: estate and degree meaning the defendant's rank in life, mystery meaning his trade, art, or occupation; but 1 Hen. 5, c. 5, which became practically obsolete by reason of 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 19, was repealed as to civil proceedings by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 59, and was repealed in toto by 46 & 47 Vict. c. 49, s. 4: and before the actual repeal of (ante, p. 51) 1 Hen. 5, c. 5, the provisions of 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 19 were extended, and the insertion of additions rendered unnecessary, by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24 (ante, p. 54), which enacts that no indictment of any offence shall be held insufficient "for want of or imperfection in the addition of any defendant."

Certainty as to the person against whom the offence was committed.]—Names:—In indictments for offences against the persons or property of individuals, the christian name and surname of the party injured should be stated, if the party injured be known; 2 Hawk. c. 25, ss. 71, 72: R. v. Earl of Cardigan, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 601; for the murder of "John Styles," larceny of the goods of "John Styles," burglary in the dwelling-house of "John Styles," and therein stealing the goods of "John Nokes," and the like. If the name of the party injured be unknown to the prosecutor, as in the case of the murder of a stranger, or larceny from the person of a stranger who does not come forward to prosecute, or the like, he may be described in the indictment as a person unknown; 2 Hale, 181; thus, a man may be indicted for the murder of, or for stealing the goods of, "a certain person to the jurors aforesaid unknown." Partridge v. Strange, Plowd. 77. The name if stated must be either the real name of the party injured, or that by which he is usually or best known; R. v. Norton, R. & R. 510: R. v. Berriman, 5 C. & P. 601; Anon., 6 C. & P. 403; R. v. J. Williams, 7 C. & P. 298: R. v. Gregory, 8 Q. B. 508; 15 L. J. (M. C.) 38; 1 Cox, 263: (see post, "Larceny:") as, for instance, upon an indictment for the murder of a bastard child, it cannot be described by the name of its mother, unless that name has been gained by reputation. R. v. Clark, R. & R. 358: R. v. Waters, 1 Mood. C. C. 457; 7 C. & P. 250: R. v. Evans, 8 C. & P. 765: R. v. Stroud, 2 Mood. C. C. 270; 1 C. & K. 187. A bastard is quasi nullius filius, and can have no name or reputation immediately on birth: Co. Litt. 36; but may soon acquire a name by reputation. R. v. Scarborough, 3 Cox, 72. Where, upon an indictment for the murder of a female bastard child, whose name was to the jurors unknown, it appeared that the child had not been baptized, but that the mother, the prisoner, had said that she should like to have it called Mary Ann, and had herself called it Mary Ann and little Mary, it was held that the child had not acquired a name by reputation. R. v. Smith, 1 Mood. C. C. 402; 6 C. & P. 151. A child cannot be described as "a certain male infant of tender age, to wit, of the age of, etc., and not baptized." The indictment should either state its name, or, if it have no name, either by baptism or reputation (see R. v. Stroud, 2 Mood. C. C. 270; 1 C. & K. 187), state the name to be to the jurors unknown. R. v. Biss, 2 Mood. C. C. 93; 8 C. & P. 773: R. v. Hicks, 2 M. & Rob. 302. But the absence of a name was held to be sufficiently accounted for by the child being described as "then lately before born of the body of A. B.;" R. v. Hogg, 2 M. & Rob. 380; see R. v. Willis, 1 Den. 80; 1 C. & K. 722; or "a certain infant female child born of the body of A. B., and of tender age, to wit, of the age of two days, and not named." R. v. Sarah Waters, 1 Den. 356; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 53; 3 Cox, 390. Where the defendant was indicted for killing a woman whose name was to the jurors unknown, and who he sometimes said was his wife, and sometimes not, and there was no evidence of any name by which she was known, it was held, that if she was not his wife, and if her name could not be ascertained by any reasonable diligence, the description was correct. R. v. Campbell, 1 C. & K. 82. No addition is requisite; 2 Hale, 182; and if stated it need not be proved; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1 (ante, p. 52). Where it appeared that the party injured had a mother of the same name, the court held that it was not necessary to distinguish her in the indictment by the addition "the younger," although it was objected that in such a case, where such an addition is not given, the presumption is, that it is the parent and not the child that is intended; and some cases were cited to that effect. R. v. Peace, 3 B. & Ald. 579. But where the person injured has a name of dignity, as a peer, baronet, or knight, he should be described by it; and if he were described as a knight, when, in fact, he is a baronet, or the contrary, the variance would (but for the power of amendment given by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1, ante p. 52) be fatal, because a name of dignity (baronet, for instance) is not merely an addition, but is actually a part of the name. 2 Hawk. c. 25, ss. 71, 72. A baron has been held well described as Lord A. R. v. Pitts, 8 C. & P. 771: R. v. Elliott, Id. 722 n. As to the proper mode of describing an Irish peer, see R. v. Graham, 2 Leach, 547: R. v. Brinklett, 3 C. & P. 416; and the eldest son of a peer, Anon., 2 Salk, 451. An indictment for a libel upon a person who was formerly the reigning Duke of Brunswick and Luneburg, but was then residing as a private person in this country, but commonly called the Duke of Brunswick, was held to describe him sufficiently as "C., Duke of Brunswick and Luneburg." R. v. Gregory, 8 Q. B. 503. So, "His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge" has been considered sufficient without setting forth any of his christian names. R. v. Frost, Dears. 474; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 116. But since 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24, ante, p. 54) an indictment is not vitiated by describing a person by his name of office or other descriptive appellation instead of by his proper name.

Property of deceased persons.]—An indictment for stealing the shroud of a dead person must state it to be the goods and chattels of the executor or administrator; 2 Hale, 181. If there be no will and no administration, it may be laid to be the goods of the person who defrayed the expenses of the burial (R. v. Haynes, 12 Co. Rep. 113), or formerly of the ordinary, if the shroud were purchased with the money of the deceased; 2 Hale, 181. So, if a coffin be stolen, it may be described in the same manner. If, from length of time, it be difficult to ascertain the personal representatives of the deceased, the property stolen may be laid as the property of a person unknown; but it cannot be described as the property of the churchwardens of the parish from which it was stolen. Anon., 2 East, P. C. 652. If goods, the property of a deceased person, be stolen after his death, and before administration granted, the property must formerly have been laid in the ordinary, and not in the administrator; for the rights of the administrator commence only from the date of the letters of administration, and in this respect differ from those of an executor, which take effect from the death of his testator. R. v. Smith, 7 C. & P. 147. "But it is conceived that the law is otherwise settled by Tharpe v. Stallwood, 5 M. & G. 760, and that the property may be laid in the administrator in respect of a thing stolen before the grant, though probably it may also be laid in the ordinary, of whom the administrator seems to be merely the delegate or representative." Possession in the Common Law, by Pollock and Wright, 128. On an indictment for larceny, it was proved that the larceny took place after the death of the owner of the goods, and there was no proof of any will or letters of administration. The indictment laid the property as that of A. and B., who were not shown to be either executors or administrators of the deceased, but it was proved that on the death of the owner they had taken on themselves the general charge of his property. The indictment was held to be good, and the property to be well laid in A. and B. R. v. King, 4 F. & F. 493. Where the stealing was from the person of a corpse in the highway, in the diocese of W., and it appeared that the last place of abode of the deceased person was in the diocese of G., but that he had left it, and was on his way to come to live with his father in the diocese of W., the property was held to be well laid in the bishop of W. as ordinary. R. v. Tippin, C. & Mar. 545. Where some of the articles mentioned in an indictment for larceny were shown to have been in the possession of the deceased at the time of her death; as to the others, it was shown that they had belonged to the deceased, and were taken, on the day of her funeral, by the defendant, to the house of A.; and it was proved that search had been unsuccessfully made for a will in the deceased's drawers and boxes; and that no administration had been taken out; it was held, first, that there was sufficient evidence of an intestacy, and that the property was rightly laid in the ordinary; secondly, that a conviction for larceny of all the articles mentioned in the indictment was proper. R. v. Johnson, Dears. & B. 340; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 52. By the Court of Probate Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 95), s. 19, "from and after the decease of any person dying intestate, and until letters of administration shall be granted in respect of his estate and effects, the personal estate and effects of such deceased person shall be vested in the judge of the Court of Probate for the time being, in the same manner and to the same extent as heretofore they vested in the ordinary." And since this Act where the ordinary would have been at common law named as owner, it is usual to lay the property in "Sir A. B., President of the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice." Quære, as to the effect of s. 1 of the Land Transfer Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 65), which creates a real representative, on the description of the land of a deceased person before and after administration is taken out.

Larceny from bailees.]—If property be stolen out of the possession of a bailee, it may be described in the indictment as the property either of the bailor or bailee; 2 Hale, 181; although the goods were never actually in the real owner's possession, but in the possession of the bailee only. R. v. Remnant, R. & R. 136; R. v. Wymer, 4 C. & P. 391. See Pollock and Wright on Possession in the Common Law. As, for instance, goods left at an inn, R. v. Todd, 2 East, P. C. 653, or entrusted to a person for safe keeping, R. v. Taylor, 1 Leach, 356: R. v. Statham, Id. 357 cit.; or to a carrier for carriage, R. v. Deakin, 2 East, P. C. 653; 2 Leach, 862; see R. v. Spears, 2 Leach, 825; 2 East, P. C. 568; cloth to a tailor to make into clothes; linen to a laundress to wash, R. v. Packer, 2 East, P. C. 653; 1 Leach, 357 n.; goods pawned and the like—may be laid to be the goods and chattels of the person to whom they are so entrusted, etc., or of the owner, at the option of the prosecutor. See 2 Hale, 181; 1 Hale, 513; 2 East, P. C. 652; 1 Hawk. c. 33, s. 47; R. v. Wilkins, 1 Leach, 520; 2 Ib., 875 cit.: 2 East, P. C. 678. So, where cattle were alleged in the indictment to be the property of a person, who, it appeared in evidence, was merely the agister, and not the actual owner, the judges held it to be sufficient. R. v. Woodward, 2 East, P. C. 653. So, where A. had taken a house in which B., his relation, carried on a trade for the benefit of A. and his family, having himself neither a share in the property nor a salary, but having authority to sell any part of the stock and to buy goods for the shop, accounting to A., it was held that B. was the bailee of the goods in the shop, and that they might be laid as his property. R. v. Bird, 9 C. & P. 44. Iron stolen from the bed of a canal while it was being cleansed, was held to be well laid as the property of the canal company, though they were not themselves carriers of goods. R. v. Rowe, Bell, 93; 28 L. J. (M. C.) 128. But where a bailor steals his own goods from his bailee, they must be described in the indictment as the goods of the bailee. R. v. Wilkinson, R. & R. 470: R. v. Bramley, Id. 478. Where a bailee by mistake parts with the possession of a chattel to a person not entitled to it, his special property in it is not divested, and it may be described as his in the indictment. R. v. Vincent, 2 Den. 464; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 109. Goods must not, however, be described as the property of one who has neither the actual nor constructive possession of them. R. v. Adams, R. & R. 225. Thus, if it appear that the person named as owner is merely servant to the real owner, the defendant (before 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1 (ante, p. 52) must have been acquitted; 2 East, P. C. 652; for a servant has not a special property in the goods, the possession of the servant being the possession of the master. R. v. Hutchinson, R. & R. 412; 2 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 264. A boy of fourteen living and working with his father, whom the father left in charge of a stall of goods, was held not to be a bailee in whom the property of goods stolen from the stall could be laid. R. v. Green, Dears. & B., 113; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 17; 7 Cox, 186 (C. C. R.). Where, however, the money had never been in the possession of the master, as where it was received by the servant for him, but he is robbed of it before his arrival at home, it was held that it should be laid as the property of the servant, not of the master. R. v. Rudick, 8 C. & P. 237.

Married women.]—Where the person named as owner appears to be a married woman, the defendant must formerly, unless the indictment was amended, have been acquitted, because in law the goods were the property of the husband; 1 Hale, 513; and must be described as such except where the woman had married after the larceny and before indictment found. R. v. Turner, 1 Leach, 536. Thus, where a married woman was sent by her husband to sell sheep, and receive the money; she did so, and was robbed of 5*l.*, part of the price of the sheep; it was held that the money was properly described as the property of her husband. R. v. Roberts, 7 C. & P. 485; even though the wife was living apart from her husband upon an income arising from property invested in trustees for her separate use, because the goods cannot be the property of the trustees; and, in law, a married woman had formerly no property. R. v. French, R. & R. 491; see R. v. Wilford, Id. 517. This rule of the common law that the wife could have no property was made subject to exceptions by statute where the husband and wife had been judicially separated, or where the wife had obtained a protection order; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, ss. 21, 25; and is now virtually abolished by 45 & 46 Vict. c. 75 (Married Women's Property Act, 1882), which enacts, s. 12, that—"Every woman, whether married before or after this Act, shall have in her own name against all persons whomsoever, including her husband, the same civil remedies, and also (subject, as regards her husband, to the proviso hereinafter contained) the same remedies and redress by way of criminal proceedings, for the protection and security of her own separate property, as if such property belonged to her as a feme sole, but, except as aforesaid, no husband or wife shall be entitled to sue the other for a tort. In any indictment or other proceedings under this section it shall be sufficient to allege such property to be her property; and in any proceeding under this section a husband or wife shall be competent to give evidence against each other, any statute or rule of law to the contrary notwithstanding: Provided always, that no criminal proceeding shall be taken by any wife against her husband by virtue of this Act while they are living together, as to or concerning any property claimed by her, nor while they are living apart, as to or concerning any act done by the husband while they were living together, concerning property claimed by the wife, unless such property shall have been wrongfully taken by the husband when leaving or deserting, or about to leave or desert his wife:" and (s. 16) that "a wife doing any act with respect to any property of her husband which, if done by the husband with respect to property of the wife, would make the husband liable to criminal proceedings by the wife under this Act, shall in like manner be liable to criminal proceedings by her husband." It is not necessary that an indictment against a wife for stealing the goods of her husband should contain averments that the prisoner was the wife of the prosecutor, or that she took the goods in question when leaving or deserting, or about to leave or desert, her husband. R. v. James (1902), 1 K. B. 541; 71 L. J. Q. B. 211; 20 Cox, 156; 66 J. P. 217; and see post, tit. "Larceny."

Goods let with a ready-furnished lodging must, if a larceny of them be committed by a third person, be described as the goods of the lodger, for the owner neither has nor is entitled to the possession; R. v. Belstead, R. & R. 411; R. v. Brunswick, 1 Mood. C. C. 26; 2 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 254; but if a larceny be committed by the lodger, then the goods may be described as the property of the owner, or person letting to hire. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 74; see R. v. Healey, 1 Mood. C. C. 1; R. v. Hurrell, Ry. & M. 296. Goods seized under a writ of fieri facias may be described as the goods of the party against whom the writ issued; for, although they are in custodiâ legis, the original owner continues to have a property in them until they are sold. R. v. Eastall, 2 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 264, 320. So if A. steals the goods of B., and afterwards C. steals the same goods from A., they may be described as the goods of either B. or A., for the possession of the former is not divested by the tortious taking. R. v. Wilkins, 1 Leach, 52); 2 East, P. C. 673; see 2 East, P. C. 654. Sed quære, whether under such circumstances, the goods can be laid as the property of B. in indictment against C., for B. was out of possession when C. stole them. Possession in the Common Law, by Pollock and Wright, 152. Clothes or other necessaries furnished by a father to his child may, it seems, be laid as the property either of the father or of the child, particularly if the child be of tender age. R. v. Haynes, 12 Co. Rep. 113; Anon. 2 East P. C. 654; but it is safer, perhaps, to allege them to be the property of the child. See R. v. Forsgate, 1 Leach, 463, 464, n.: R. v. Hughes, C. & Mar. 593. The prisoner worked in a mill in the same room with three fellow workmen, and was sent by them on paynight for the wages of the four to the cashier of the works. The cashier gave the money for the four to the prisoner, who never gave any of it to his fellow workmen. He was indicted for the larceny, and it was held that the property in the money should be laid in the workmen, and not in the proprietors of the works. R. v. Barnes, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 45; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 204. The prisoners were charged with stealing brass, the property of H. The facts proved as to the ownership were that the brass was the property of a trading company (limited), and that it was seen on the company's premises about twelve days before it was missed; that the company was being wound up; and that H. was the official liquidator, but there was no proof that H. had ever taken possession of the brass or dealt with it as his property. It was held that although this evidence was sufficient to show that H. might have had a title to the brass, it was not sufficient to show that it had ever become his property, so as to warrant the property being laid in him in an indictment for larceny. R. v. Bell, 13 Cox, 623 (C. C. R.).

Property of joint owners.]—"In any indictment or information for any felony or misdemeanor whereon it shall be requisite to state the ownership of any property whatsoever, whether real or personal, belonging to or in the possession of more than one person, whether partners in trade, joint tenants, parceners or tenants in common, it shall be sufficient to name one of such persons and to state such property to belong to the person so named, and another or others, as the case may be: and whenever in any indictment for felony or misdemeanor it shall be necessary to mention for any purpose whatsoever any partners, joint tenants, parceners, or tenants in common, it shall be sufficient to describe them in the manner aforesaid: and this provision shall be construed to extend to all joint stock companies and trustees." 7 G. 4 c, 64, s. 14. In an indictment for stealing a bible, a hymn-book, etc., from a methodist chapel, the goods were laid as the property of John Bennett and others, and it appeared that Bennett was one of the society and a trustee of the chapel: Parke, J., held that the property was laid correctly. R. v. Boulton, 5 C. & P. 537.

But it is not necessary that a strict legal partnership should exist. Where C. and D. carried on business in partnership, and the widow of C., upon his death, without taking out administration, acted as partner, and the stock was afterwards divided between her and the surviving partner, but, before the division, part of the stock was stolen, it was holden that the goods were properly described as the joint property of the surviving partner and the widow, upon an objection that the children of C. ought to have been joined, or the goods described as the property of the surviving partner and the ordinary, no administration having been taken out. R. v. Gaby, R. & R. 178. And where a father and son took a farm on their joint account, and kept a stock of sheep, their joint property, and, upon the death of the son, the father carried on the business for the joint benefit of himself and his son's children, who were infants, it was holden, upon an indictment for stealing sheep bred from the joint stock, some before and some after the death of the son, that the property was well laid in the father and his son's children. R. v. Scott, R. & R. 13; 2 East, P. C. 655. The property in money stolen by the prisoner from the shop of an industrial society in which he is a partner, is well laid in the sole manager of the business, who is also a partner in the society and in possession of the shop, and responsible to the society for all moneys coming into his possession. R. v. Webster, L. & C. 77: 31 L. J. (M. C.) 17. So, where the prisoner stole money from the shop of an industrial society of which he was a member, and one of the committee of management, and the shop was under the management of a boy of thirteen, who accounted daily to the treasurer of the society for the moneys received by him, it was held that the property in the money was well laid in the boy. R. v. Burgess, L. & C. 299: 32 L. J. (M. C.) 185. A box belonging to a benefit society was stolen from a room in a public-house; two of the stewards had keys of this box, and by the rules of the society the landlord ought to have had a key, but, in fact, had not; it was held that the prisoner might be convicted on a count laying the property in the landlord alone. R. v. Wymer, 4 C. & P. 391. See R. v. Cain, C. & Mar. 309: 2 Mood. C. C. 204. As to larceny or fraudulent conversion by trustees (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 80), by directors of companies (Id. s. 81), by members of co-partnership and beneficial owners (31 & 32 Vict. c. 116, s. 1), by persons entrusted with property for a special purpose (1 Edw. 7, c. 10), see post, tit. "Fraudulent Conversion."

Property of Joint Stock Banks.]—By the Country Bankers Act, 1826 (7 G. 4 c. 46), s. 9, in indictments or informations by or on behalf of joint-stock banking co-partnerships, for stealing or embezzling money, goods, effects, bills, notes, securities or other property belonging to them, or for any fraud, forgery, crime or offence committed against or with intent to injure or defraud such co-partnerships, the money, etc., may be stated to be the property of, and the intent may be laid to defraud, any one of the public officers of such co-partnerships; and the name of any one of their public officers may be used in all indictments or informations where it otherwise would be necessary to name the persons forming the company. It was at one time considered that, in an indictment against a person not a member of the company, under 7 G. 4, c. 46, s. 9, or in an indictment under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 96 (continued and extended by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 111, and made perpetual as so extended by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 85, s. 1), against a share-holder in a joint-stock banking company, for stealing or embezzling the goods or money of the company, the intent must be alleged to be to defraud, or the property must be laid in, a public officer of the company, duly appointed and registered under the Acts. Chapman v. Milvain, 5 Ex. 61; see R. v. Atkinson, 2 Mood. C. C. 278: C. & Mar. 525. These acts apply only to certain unincorporated partnerships, and it has been held that 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 14, applies to such partnerships, and that, under it, an indictment laying the property in one of the members of the company, and others is proper. R. v. Pritchard, L. & C. 34; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 169. 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 30, note by Mr. Greaves. Where a banking company is registered under the Companies Act, 1862, 25 & 26 Vict. c. 89, the property may be laid in the company by its corporate name. See sect. 18.

County Property.]—"In any indictment or information for any felony or misdemeanor committed in, upon, or with respect to any bridge, court, gaol, house of correction, infirmary, asylum, or other public building, erected or maintained in whole or in part at the expense of any county, riding or division, or on or with respect to any goods, or chattels whatsoever, provided for or at the expense of any county, etc., to be used for making, altering, or repairing any bridge or any highway at the ends thereof, or any court or other such building as aforesaid, etc., or to be used in or with any such court or other building, the property, whether real or personal, may be described as belonging to the inhabitants of such county, etc., without specifying their names." 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 15. See 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 27 n. County gaols and houses of correction are now vested in the prison commissioners (40 & 41 Vict. c. 21, s. 48). The other property referred to in this enactment is now for the most part, if not wholly, vested in the county council of the administrative county by 51 & 52 Vict. 41, s. 3 (iv.) and may be laid in such council by its corporate name; and property of a county not specified in the enactment may be described as the property of the County Council.

Parish Property.]—In indictments for stealing, taking or carrying away, or buying or receiving goods, chattels, furniture, provisions, clothes, linen and wearing apparel, boot materials, utensils, materials or things had, bought, procured or provided for the use of the poor of any parish, township or hamlet, the property may be laid in "the overseers for the time being," of the parish, township or hamlet, without stating or specifying the names of any of them. 55 G. 3, c. 137, s. 1. See R. v. Went, R. & R. 359.

"In any indictment or information for any felony or misdemeanor committed in, upon, or with respect to any workhouse or poor-house, or on or with respect to any goods or chattels whatsoever, provided for the use of the poor of any parish or parishes, township or townships, hamlet or hamlets, place or places, or to be used in any workhouse or poor-house in or belonging to the same, or by the master or mistress of such workhouse or poor-house, or by any workmen or servants employed therein, the property may be described as belonging to the overseers of the poor for the time being of such parish, etc., without specifying their names." 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 16. By the Poor Law Act, 1835 (5 & 6 W. 4 c. 69), s. 7, the guardians of the poor of every union formed under the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834 (4 & 5 W. 4, c. 76), and of every parish placed under the control of a board of guardians by virtue of that Act, are made a corporation by the name of the "Guardians of the poor of the —— union, (or of the parish of ——,) in the county of ——;" and as such corporation are empowered to accept, take, and hold for the benefit of the union or parish any buildings, lands or hereditaments, goods, effects, or other property; and by that name to bring actions, to prefer indictments, etc.; and in every such action or indictment relating to any such property, it shall be sufficient to lay or state the property to be that of the guardians of the —— union, or of the parish of ——.

The Poor Law Amendment Act, 1842 (5 & 6 Vict. c. 57), s. 16, empowers boards of guardians to accept and hold on behalf of their union or parish any lands, buildings, goods, effects, or other property as a corporation and in all cases to sue and be sued in their corporate name. Except in cases within that section the legal estate in such property vested in overseers by 55 G. 3, c. 137, is not divested by the subsequent Poor Law Acts. Doe d. Norton v. Webster, 12 A. & E. 442. In rural parishes the legal estate of the overseers in certain of the property held for parish purposes is now vested in the parish council, or if there is none, in the chairman of the parish meeting and the overseers. (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, ss. 5, 19, 52 (5)). But notwithstanding the last-mentioned statute, an assistant overseer, indicted for embezzling money collected by him from the ratepayers, is still properly described in the indictment as the servant of the inhabitants of the parish, and the money so embezzled is rightly laid as the property of such inhabitants. R. v. Smallman [1897] 1 Q. B. 4: 66 L. J. Q. B. 82 (C. C. R.): 18 Cox, 451.

In respect of any indictment or any criminal proceeding every collector or assistant overseer appointed under the authority of any order of the Local Government Board shall be deemed and taken to be the servant of the inhabitants of the parish whose money or other property he shall be charged to have embezzled or stolen, and shall be so described; and it shall be sufficient to state any such property to belong to the inhabitants of such parish without the names of any such inhabitants being specified. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 105, s. 15. The orders governing the appointment of assistant overseers and collectors are tabulated in the Index to the Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), tit. "Poor, England."

Highway authorities.]—"In any indictment or information for any felony or misdemeanor, committed on or with respect to any materials, tools, or implements provided for making, altering, or repairing any highway, within any parish, etc., otherwise than by the trustees or commissioners of any turnpike road, it shall be sufficient to aver that any such things are the property of the surveyor or surveyors of the highways for the time being of such parish, township, hamlet or place, and it shall not be necessary to specify the name or names of any such surveyor or surveyors." 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 16.

Under the present law local authorities have in all cases been made surveyors of the highways within their districts, i.e. in a borough or urban district, the town council or urban district council. (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 144.) And the materials, implements, etc., are vested in borough and urban councils by 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 149, and the materials, etc., vest, in rural districts, in the rural district councils, as successors to Highway Boards. (25 & 26 Vict. c. 61, s. 11; 56 & 57 Vict, c, 73, s. 25.)

In London the Metropolitan Borough Councils are surveyors of highways as to all roads within their districts except certain bridge approaches and embankments vested in the L.C.C. (18 & 19 Vict. c. 20, s. 96: 62 & 63 Vict. c. 14, s. 6.)

Main roads and their materials in every county but London vest in the county council. 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 11 (6).

Commissions of sewers.]—"In any indictment or information for any felony or misdemeanor committed on or with respect to any sewer, or other matter within or under the view, cognizance, or management of any commissioners of sewers, it shall be sufficient to state any such property to belong to the commissioners of sewers, within or under whose view, cognizance, or management any such things shall be; and it shall not be necessary to specify the names of any of such commissioners." 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 18.

Crown property.]—Moneys, chattels, or valuable securities stolen or embezzled by persons in the public service, or by constables or other persons employed in the police of any county, city borough, district, or place whatsoever, may be described as the property of the King. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 69, 70.

Property of societies.]—The moneys, goods, chattels, securities for money, and all other effects whatever, belonging to any friendly society, or any branch of a friendly society, must be stated to be the property of the trustees for the time being, in their proper names as trustees for the society or branch (as the case may be) without further description. R. v. Marks, 10 Cox, 367; 59 & 60 Vict. c. 25, s. 51; from which it follows that the trustees cannot be guilty of larceny in stealing the property of the society. R. v. Loose, Bell, 259; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 132; 8 Cox, 302; unless, besides being trustees, they are also part beneficial owners thereof. 31 & 32 Vict. c. 116, s. 1: post, tit. "Larceny." The property in money, etc., belonging to registered industrial and provident societies, should be laid in the society by its corporate name. See 56 & 57 Vict. c. 39, ss. 3, 21. The same is true of societies within the Building Societies Acts. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 42, s. 9. The property in money, etc., belonging to a registered trade union should be laid in the person or persons for the time being holding the office of trustee, in his or their proper name or names, as trustees of such trade union, without any further description. 34 & 35 Vict. c. 31, s. 8: 39 & 40 Vict. c. 22, s. 3. The same rule applies as to the property of trustee savings banks, 26 & 27 Vict. c. 87, s. 10; R. v. Bull, 1 Cox, 137; and of loan societies, 3 & 4 Vict. c. 110, s. 8. In the case both of friendly societies and industrial and provident societies and trade unions, the property may also be laid in the person in whose possession the money, etc., was at the time it was stolen, and who was accountable to the society or union for it. See ante, p. 61.

Chelsea Hospital property.]—In indictments for stealing, pawning, selling, buying, exchanging, receiving, embezzling, secreting, or disposing of, or not accounting for clothes, linen or other goods, belonging to the hospital at Chelsea, or the commissioners thereof, the property may be laid to be in "The Lords and others, Commissioners of the royal hospital for soldiers at Chelsea, in the county of Middlesex:" and in all prosecutions under the Chelsea Hospital Act, 1826 (7 G. 4, c. 16), it is sufficient to charge the act as done with intent to defraud "the Lords and others, Commissioners of the royal hospital for soldiers at Chelsea in the county of Middlesex," in any case in which it is necessary to state a particular intent to defraud. 7 G. 4, c. 16, s. 35.

Post Office property.]—In indictments for stealing post letters, etc., etc., the property may be laid in the Postmaster-General; 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 36, s. 40; and in indictments for offences committed in respect of telegraphic messages sent by or entrusted to the Postmaster-General, the property of such telegraphic messages may be laid in him. 31 & 32 Vict. c. 110, s. 21; 32 & 33 Vict. c. 73, s. 23.

Customs property.]—Any moneys, chattels, or other valuable securities, which shall or may be received by any officer, clerk, or other person in the service of the customs, either as duties of customs, or under or by virtue of any statute, or by the order or direction of the commissioners of customs, or in virtue of his office or employment, or otherwise, for the use and service of his Majesty or of any public department, shall be deemed to be moneys, chattels or valuable securities for the public service, and shall be considered as such within the meaning of the Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96), and in any information, indictment or other instrument in relation thereto, the same may be laid as the property of his Majesty. 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 29.

Bankrupt's estate.]—In indictments for stealing or embezzling property vested in the trustee of a bankrupt, by virtue of his appointment, such trustee may be designated as "the trustee of the property of A. B., a bankrupt," without inserting the proper name of the trustee. 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 83.

Corporation property.]—Property vested in a body of persons should not be laid as the property of that body, unless it be incorporated, but should be described as the property of the individuals who constitute that body, or of some of them, as in the case of partners, trustees, or unincorporated joint-stock companies. R. v. Sherrington, 1 Leach, 513: R. v. Beacall, 1 Mood. C. C. 15. But when goods of a corporation are stolen, they should be laid to be the property of the corporation, in their corporate name, and not in the names of the individuals who compose it; R. v. Patrick, 2 East, P. C. 1059; 1 Leach, 253; and there is a difference in this respect between an ancient corporation and a corporation newly created. An ancient corporation may by use have a special name, differing in substance from that by which they were originally incorporated, and they may plead and be impleaded by that name; but a corporation created within memory must plead and be impleaded by the name by which they were incorporated. 10 Co. Rep. 29 b.; Hob. 211; Noy. 54; 2 Brownl. 292; Latch. 229; 3 Mod. 6; Cro. Eliz. 351; Bac. Abr. Corp. (C. 3). This in case of a municipal corporation is the name specified in their charter of incorporation.

In the case of metropolitan borough councils it is the name given by the order creating the council or by letters patent subsequently issued.

In the case of urban, rural, or parish councils, the corporate name is that stated in the order constituting them. At boards of guardians, see ante, p. 63.

Most of the trading companies, familiarly known as joint-stock companies, are now incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1900 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 89, etc.; see s. 18). Where on an indictment against the prisoner as servant to A. and others, for embezzlement, proof was given that the prisoner was servant to a trading company, calling itself "The R. Coal Company, Limited;" that this name was over the office door of the company; that there were eighty shareholders, of whom A. was one; that its affairs were managed by directors; that its shares were transferable by certificate without the consent of the other shareholders; and that a minute book of resolutions was kept, but no certificate of incorporation was put in evidence,—it was held that there was no evidence that the company was incorporated, and that on the evidence the prisoner was properly alleged in the indictment to be the servant of A. and others. R. v. Frankland, L. & C. 276; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 69. The existence of a company under its corporate name is sufficiently proved by parol evidence that it has carried on business under that name. R. v. Langton, 2 Q. B. D. 296; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 136; 13 Cox, 345. But it is preferable to prove the existence and name of the company by the certificate of incorporation: R. v. May, 64 J. P. 570. (a)

Amendment of misdescriptions.]—Prior to 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, ss. 1, 24 (ante, pp. 52, 54), variances, if material, were fatal, and could not be amended. 2 East, P. C., 651, 781.

For the old law as to immateriality of variances where the words were idem sonantia (see 1 Chit. Cr. L., 216: Archbold, Cr. Pl. (22nd ed.) 58, 59.

Certainty as to age of person injured.]—Where it is essential to constitute the offence that the party injured should have been of a certain age, the party must be stated in every count of the indictment to be of (a) As to judicial notice of the incorporation of a company referred to in a statute, see R. v. Connell, 6 Queensland, L. J., 209.

It is not clear that R. v. Langton could be applied to a foreign corporation, R. v. Whitehouse, 6 Queensland L. J., 313, Griffith, C. J., but it would seem to apply to companies proved to carry on business under a name containing the word "limited." R. v. Cawley, 7 Queensland L. J. 45.

that age; and it will not be sufficient to state the age in the first count only, and in a subsequent count merely to describe the party as "the said A. B." R. v. Martin, 9 C. & P. 213. See R. v. Sarah Waters, 1 Den. 356; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 53; 3 Cox, 303.

Certainty as to time and place.]—Under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24 (ante, p. 54) immaterial defects as to statement of time or place are not fatal to an indictment. See R. v. Nicholls, 68 J. P. 452 (C. C. R.). Formerly time and place must have been laid with certainty. The date, and in certain cases (see post, local description) the place of the offence, should be stated in the indictment. Staundf., 95 a: R. v. Hollond, 5 T. R. 607: R. v. Aylett, 1 T. R. 63, 69: R. v. Haynes, 4 M. & Sel. 214. But it never was necessary that they should be laid according to the truth, unless time was of the essence of the offence, or unless local description was required, for in other cases if the time stated were previous to the finding of the indictment, and the place were within the county or other extent of the court's jurisdiction, a variance between the indictment and evidence in the time when the offence was committed, 2 Co. Inst. 318; 3 Co. Inst. 230: Sir H. Vane's case, Kel. (J.), 16: R. v. Aylett, ubi supra, or in the place where committed, provided the place proved were within the jurisdiction of the court, 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 84, was not material. And for this reason, in practice all the facts in an indictment usually were stated to have occurred at the same time and place, time and special venue being laid as to the first fact, and afterwards referred to by the words "then and there," as to the others. Where larceny of a number of articles is charged without specification of time the prosecution may be put to elect as to the three cases on which they will proceed if the evidence proves that the articles were taken on different occasions: R. v. Nicholls, ubi supra.

The time, if laid, should be the day of the month and year upon which the act is supposed to have been committed. In no case is it necessary to state the hour at which the act was done, unless rendered essential by the statute upon which the indictment is framed. 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 76. See Combe v. Pitt, 3 Burr, 1423, 1434: R. v. Clarke, 1 Bulst. 203; March, pl. 127; 2 Co. Inst. 318. In burglary, indeed, it is usual to state it; but alleging the offence to have been committed "in the night," without mentioning the hour, seems to be sufficient; but see 1 Hale, 549; 2 Hawk. c. 25, ss. 76, 77: R. v. Waddington, 2 East, P. C. 513. And an indictment for burglary, alleging that the offence was committed "burglariously," but without any statement of time or "in the night," has been held good. R. v. Thompson, 2 Cox, 377. In an indictment under the Night Poaching Act, 1828 (9 G. 4, c. 69), for unlawfully entering or being in a close by night for the purpose of taking game, armed, it is not necessary to state the hour of the night. Davies v. R., 10 B. & C. 89. Where a time is limited for preferring an indictment, the time laid should appear to be within the time so limited. See R. v. Brown, M. & M. 163; and post, p. 94.

Local description or special venue.]—Formerly, the place (or special venue, as it is technically termed) must have been such as in strictness the jury who are to try the cause should come from. But since 1851 the common law has been to a great extent abrogated (see Stephen, 1 Hist. Cr. L. 281; as 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 23 (ante, p. 35)), makes it unnecessary to state any venue in the body of an indictment; but requires a local description to be inserted when necessary.

The cases in which local description seems to be required are, keeping disorderly houses; burglary (Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 44; R. v. St. John, 9 C.

& P. 40); housebreaking (R. v. Bullock, 1 Mood. C. C. 324 n.); stealing in a dwelling-house (R. v. Napper, 1 Mood. C. C. 44); poaching or being armed at night on land for the purpose of killing game (R. v. Ridley, R. & R., 515); being found by night armed with intent to break into a dwelling-house, etc., and to commit a felony therein (R. v. Jarrald, L. & C. 301; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 258); sacrilege (post, tit. "Burglary," etc.); riotously demolishing churches, houses, machinery, etc. (R. v. Richards, 1 M. & Rob. 177); maliciously firing a dwelling-house, perhaps an out-house, but not a stack (R. v. Woodward, 1 Mood. C. C. 323); forcible entry (2 Leon. 186); nuisances to highways (R. v. Steventon, 1 C. & K. 55; 4 Chit. Cr. L. 423); malicious injuries to sea banks, mill dams, or other local property, 1 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 209.

At the Central Criminal Court, the present practice is to insert the parish in all indictments, in order that the taxing officers of the court may see at a glance to which part of the Central Criminal Court district the case belongs, and upon what county treasurer the order for costs should be made.

It also enables the High Court, if the indictment is removed by certiorari, to determine in what county it should be tried. R. v. Connop, 4 A. & E. 942; and see Cr. Off. Rules, 1883, r. 41.

Before 1851 it was necessary to state accurately the dates of written instruments; but the mode of describing such instruments is now regulated by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, ss. 5, 7 (ante, p. 54), and under s. 1 of the same statute (ante, p. 52), the court may amend variances which it considers immaterial between the statement in the indictment and the evidence as to "the name or description of any matter or thing therein named or described."

Certainty as to the facts, circumstances and intent constituting the offence.] —Every offence consists of certain acts done or omitted under certain circumstances (ante, p. 11, 33); and as a general rule in an indictment for the offence, it is not sufficient to charge the defendant generally with having committed it, as, that he stole the goods of J., or committed burglary in the house of J. S., or the like; but every fact or circumstance which constitutes or is a necessary ingredient in the offence must be specifically and categorically stated in the indictment.

The offence must appear upon the face of the indictment to be a distinct substantive offence; you cannot charge a man with being a common thief, a common champertor or conspirator, common malefactor, or common robber; but if he have committed a larceny, robbery, etc., the indictment must set forth every fact and circumstance which is a necessary ingredient in the offence. Thus, an indictment for extortion, charging that the defendant took extorsively for every horse so much, and for every twenty sheep so much, was held bad: because it charged the defendant with extortion generally, and not upon any particular occasion. R. v. Roberts, 4 Mod. 101; 11 Show. 389. So, that the defendant was a calumniator, and a common and turbulent breaker of the peace, etc., was held bad for the same reason. R. v. Taylor, 2 Str. 849; R. v. Cooper, Id. 1246; 2 Hale, 182. And the same where a constable was indicted for behaving badly and negligently in the execution of his office, without specifying any particular instance of negligence, etc. R. v. Winteringham, 1 Str. 2. See also R. v. O'Callaghan, 14 Cox, 499. The exceptions to this rule are:—

1. In indictments and inquisitions for murder or manslaughter it is now unnecessary to set forth the manner in which or the means by which the death was caused. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 6.

2. A person may be indicted for being "a common barrator," without detailing the particulars of the barratry; l'Anson v. Stuart, 1 T. R. 748, 752, 754; 1 R. R. 392; but according to Hawkins, bk. 1, c. 81, s. 13, it is settled practice not to let the prosecutor try an indictment of this kind until he has given to the defendant particulars of the matters which he proposes to prove. See R. v. Curwood, 3 A. & E. 815.

3. A woman may be indicted for being "a common scold," without detailing the particulars of her conduct. l'Anson v. Stuart, ubi supra.

4. A person may be indicted for keeping a common gambling-house or bawdy-house, without stating those circumstances which it may be necessary to give in evidence to show that it is a house of that description: Id., and see 2 Hawk. c. 25, ss. 57, 59.

5. In an indictment for soliciting or inciting to the commission of a crime, R. v. Higgins, 2 East, 5; 6 R. R. 615, or for aiding and assisting in the commission of it, it is not necessary to state the particulars of the incitement or solicitation, or of the aid or assistance, nor to state the offence contemplated with the precision which would be required as an indictment for the full offence: and this, it would seem, even where the full was actually committed. Thus in an indictment framed upon 37 G. 3, c. 70, which enacts that any person who shall maliciously and advisedly endeavour to seduce any person serving in his Majesty's forces from his duty and allegiance shall be guilty of felony, it is unnecessary to state the means by which the prisoner had endeavoured to seduce the soldier from his duty and allegiance. R. v. Fuller, 2 Leach, 790; 1 B. & P. 180. With respect to the description of the solicitation or endeavour it seems that general words are sufficient, because the endeavour, attempt, or solicitation is in general made up of a number of petty circumstances, which cannot be set out on the record. 1 Stark. Cr. Pl. 146 (2nd ed.).

6. In an indictment or information for bribery or undue influence at a parliamentary election, it is sufficient to allege that the defendant was, at the election at or in connexion with which the offence is intended to be alleged to have been committed, guilty of bribery or undue influence (as the case may require). 26 & 27 Vict. c. 29, s. 6. By s. 53 of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 51), this enactment is extended to any prosecution or indictment for the offence of any corrupt practice within the meaning of the following statutes, viz., at parliamentary elections, 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51 (Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883), s. 53: at municipal elections (a) generally, 47 & 48 Vict. c. 70 (Municipal Elections and Corrupt and Illegal Practices Act, 1884), s. 30: (b) in the City of London, Id. s. 35; at elections of guardians of the poor (Id. s. 36); of county councils, 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41 s. 75; of district and parish councils, 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, s. 48, sub-s. 3; and of metropolitan borough councils, 62 & 63 Vict. c. 14. An indictment under 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51, which merely charged the defendant with "corrupt practices" at a parliamentary election, without setting out the nature of such corrupt practices as "bribery" or "undue influence," was quashed on motion for want of certainty. R. v. Norton, 16 Cox, 59, Pollock, B. But after verdict no objection for want of certainty can be taken to an indictment so framed, although the majority of the judges were of opinion that if the objection had been taken by way of motion to quash the indictment it must have prevailed. R. v. Stroulger, 17 Q. B. D. 327; 55 L. J. (M. C.) 137.

7. In an indictment for an offence under the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62), as amended and extended by the Bankruptcy Acts of 1883 & 1890, it is sufficient to set forth the substance of the offence charged in the words of the Act, specifying the offence, or as near thereto as circumstances admit, without alleging or setting forth any debt, act of bankruptcy, trading, adjudication, or any proceedings in, or order, warrant, or document of any court acting under the Bankruptcy Acts, 1883 & 1890. See 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 19, and 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 149, sub-s. 2; 53 & 54 Vict. c. 71, s. 26. Where an indictment under s. 13, sub-s. 1 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62 (Debtors Act, 1869), alleged in the words of that sub-s. that the defendant "unlawfully in incurring a certain debt and liability to A. B., did obtain credit from the said A. B. under false pretences," without stating the false pretences with which the defendant was charged, it was held that such indictment was good by virtue of s. 19 of that statute, and that no objection to it could be taken by motion to quash or otherwise. R. v. Watkinson, 12 Cox, 271 (C. C. R.): R. v. Pierce, 16 Cox, 213 (C. C. R.); 56 L. J. (M. C.) 85, overruling R. v. Bell, 12 Cox, 37.

Where the offence cannot be stated with complete certainty it is sufficient to state it with such certainty as it is capable of. Thus in the case of a conspiracy to defraud a person of goods, it is not necessary to describe the goods as in an indictment for stealing them; and it has been held sufficient to describe them as "divers goods." Anon., 1 Chit. Rep. (K. B.) 698. See also R. v. Gill, 2 B. & Ald. 204; 20 R. R. 407: R. v. Kenrick, 5 Q. B. 49: Taylor v. R. [1895] 1 Q. B. 25; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 11. In indictments for perjury and offences of the same nature, also, the certainty formerly required according to the rules above mentioned is now no longer necessary; for under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 20 (which re-enacts and extends similar provisions contained in 23 G. 2, c. 11), it is necessary only to state the substance of the offence, and by what court, or before whom the oath, etc., was taken, etc., without setting out the bill, answer, etc., or any part of any proceeding in law or equity, and without setting out the commission or authority of the court or person before whom the offence was committed. See post, tit. "Perjury."

If any fact or circumstance which is a necessary ingredient of the offence be omitted in the indictment, such omission vitiates the indictment, and the defendant may avail himself of the defect in statement by demurrer, motion in arrest of judgment, or writ of error. Thus, in an indictment for assaulting an officer in the execution of process, without showing that he was an officer of the court out of which the process issued; R. v. Osmer, 5 East, 304; see R. v. Everett, 8 B. & C. 114; for contemptuous or disrespectful words to a magistrate, without showing that the magistrate was in the execution of his duty at the time; R. v. Leafe, Andr. 226 (Ir.); against a public officer for non-performance of a duty, without showing that he was such an officer as was bound by law to perform that particular duty; R. v. Hollond, 5 T. R. 607, 623; for obtaining money under false pretences (before the passing of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88) without showing whose money it was; R. v. Norton, 8 C. & P. 196: R. v. Martin, 8 A. & E. 481; 7 L. J. (M. C.) 89; that he feloniously did lead away a horse, etc., without saying "take;" 2 Hale, 184: in all these and the like cases the indictment is bad, and the defect may be taken advantage of in the manner above mentioned. See R. v. Cheere, 7 D. & R. 461; 4 B. & C. 902; and cf. R. v. Wade, 1 B. & Ad. 861. In an indictment for neglecting to provide sufficient sustenance for a child of tender years, the omission to state expressly that the prisoner had the ability to provide does not hurt if the indictment avers that it was the duty of the prisoner to provide, and that he unlawfully neglected to provide, the ability to provide being implied, and therefore sufficiently averred, by the word neglect. R. v. Ryland, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 99; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 10; 11 Cox, 101.

Particulars.]—There are certain decisions which indicate that where an indictment is in general terms the court, instead of exercising its discretionary power to quash the indictment, "may direct particulars to be delivered to the accused of any matter alleged in the indictment, and may adjourn the trial for the purpose of such delivery." Under these decisions orders have been made on the prosecution to furnish particulars in cases of barratry, nuisance, embezzlement, and conspiracy. It is sufficient to make a general charge of the offence in indictments for barratry and keeping a disorderly house; l'Anson v. Stuart, 1 T. R. 748, 752; and perhaps for other nuisances; see R. v. Curwood, 3 A. & E. 815 (gas works); R. v. Downshire, 3 A. & E. 816, cit. (obstructing highway). According to Hawkins (bk. 1, c. 81, s. 13), it was settled practice not to allow the prosecutor to try an indictment for barratry until he had given particulars. In an anonymous case, 1 Chit. (K. B.) 698, on a charge of conspiracy, the court seems to have considered barratry the only case in which particulars could be ordered.

But in R. v. Hodgson [1828] 3 C. & P. 422, Vaughan, B., on an indictment for embezzlement under 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29 (rep.), expressed an opinion that particulars ought to be given of the names of the persons from whom the embezzled sums were alleged to have been received (and see Carr. Suppl. (3rd ed.) 322). And in R. v. Bootyman [1832] 5 C. & P. 300, Littledale, J., made an order for particulars on a similar indictment. In R. v. Marquis of Downshire [1834] 4 A. & E. 698, Parke, J., on an indictment for obstruction on highway, ordered particulars of the situation of the ways alleged to have been obstructed; and in R. v. Curwood [1835] 3 A. & E. 816; 5 N. & M. 369, the Court of King's Bench without affidavit ordered particulars of the several acts of nuisance to be proved under an indictment for causing a public nuisance by the produce of gas works.

And since the decision in R. v. Gill, 2 B. & Ald. 204; 20 R. R. 407, that an indictment for conspiracy may be framed in a general form, there have been numerous instances of orders for particulars. In R. v. Hamilton [1836] 7 C. & P. 448, Littledale, J., made an order for particulars on a general indictment for conspiracy, and adjourned the trial. He stated that the particulars should contain the same information as a special count, so as to give the accused the same information as if the count had been framed specially.

In R. v. Rycroft [1852] 6 Cox, 77, Williams, J., made a similar order on a similar indictment, and said that it was a matter of right, although there had been a preliminary inquiry and committal for trial. In R. v. Roberts [1852] Dears. 30, 32, n., Crompton, J., granted a rule nisi for an order for particulars under general counts for conspiracy without an affidavit, and the general counts were in the end abandoned. And in R. v. Stapylton [1857] 8 Cox, 69; 6 W. R. 60, the Court of Queen's Bench on an indictment for conspiracy held that the defendant was entitled as of right to particulars of the acts relied upon in support of a general count for conspiracy. In this case application for particulars under special counts was refused, there being no affidavit by the defendant; but the court did not definitely decide whether, even on an affidavit, such particulars would be added as a special count. Under the present practice, whereby the evidence for the prosecution in almost every indictable case appears either in the depositions or in the notice of further evidence given before the trial (see post, tit. "Evidence," s. 8), occasion seldom arises for making an order for particulars.

Immaterial averments—surplusage.]—By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1 (ante, p. 52) no indictment is to be deemed insufficient for the want of any averment unnecessary to be proved. In other words, every fact and circumstance laid in an indictment, which is not a necessary ingredient in the offence, may be rejected as surplusage, and need not be proved at the trial; R. v. Jones, 2 B. & Ad. 611; and defects in the manner of stating such matter, will not vitiate the indictment. R. v. Walker, 4 Co. Rep. 41; R. v. Long, 5 Co. Rep. 121 b.: R. v. Holt, 2 Leach, 593: Att.-Gen. of New South Wales v. Macpherson, L. R. 3 P. C. 268. And see R. v. Howarth, 3 Stark. (N.P.) 29. When the indictment contains surplusage, but facts constituting a complete offence are sufficiently stated without such superfluous words, the indictment is not bad because such surplusage is erroneously stated. R. v. Parker, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 225; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 60, Cockburn, C.J.; cf. R. v. Radley, 1 Den. 450, 18 L. J. (M. C.) 154: R. v. Godfrey, Dears. & B. 426; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 151: R. v. Huntley Bell, 238; and see post, p. 78. The allegation usually inserted in an indictment for perjury, "that so the defendant did commit wilful and corrupt perjury," may be rejected as surplusage. Ryalls v. R., 11 Q. B. 781. Upon an indictment containing these words, charging the defendant with perjury in making a false affidavit under the Bills of Sale Act it was held that the offence was not perjury (but see now 41 & 42 Vict. c. 31, s. 17), but that these words might be rejected as surplusage, and that the indictment, even after disregarding them, sufficiently stated the common law misdemeanor of taking a false oath, and that the defendant was rightly convicted thereon. R. v. Hodgkiss, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 212; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 14. In an indictment against a defendant who has claimed to be tried by a jury under s. 17 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49) 1879, it is not necessary to aver that such claim has been made. R. v. Chambers, 65 L. J. (M. C.) 214; 18 Cox, 401 (C. C. R.).

Amount of certainty necessary.]—Not only must all the facts and circumstances which constitute the offence be stated, but they must be stated with such certainty and precision (a) that the defendant may be enabled to judge whether they constitute an indictable offence or not, in order that he may demur or plead to the indictment accordingly—that he may be enabled to determine the species of offence which they constitute, in order that he may prepare his defence accordingly—that he may be enabled to plead a conviction or acquittal upon this indictment, in bar of another prosecution for the same offence—and that there may be no doubt as to the judgment which should be given, if the defendant be convicted. See R. v. Horne, 2 Cowp. 672: 20 St. Tr. 651: R. v. Rowed, 3 Q. B. 180; 11 L. J. (M. C.) 74; White v. R., 13 Cox, 318; Ir. Rep. 10 C. L. 508 (C. C. R. Ir.): Taylor v. R. [1895] 1 Q. B. 25; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 11.

(a) Certainty to a certain intent in general, however, is all that is required. Co. Litt. 303 a.; R. v. Long, 5 Co. Rep. 121 a. Certainty is of three kinds: certainty to a certain intent in every particular, which is required only in pleas, etc., of estoppel and pleas in abatement; certainty to a common intent, which is required in ordinary pleas; and certainty to a certain intent in general, which is required in declarations and indictments. The latter is a medium between the other two; not so great a degree of certainty as the first, and a greater degree of certainty than the second. I shall endeavour further to define them. Where certainty to a certain intent in every particular is required, the court will presume the negative of everything the pleader has not expressly affirmed, and the affirmative of everything the pleader has not expressly negatived; or, in the words of Lord Coke, the pleader must exclude every conclusion against him. Where certainty to a common intent only is required, the court will presume in favour of the pleader every proposition which by reasonable intendment is impliedly included in the pleading, though not expressed; and where words are made use of, which admit of a natural sense, and also of an artificial one, or one to be made out by argument or inference, the natural sense shall prevail. Thus,

Therefore in indictments for offences of a local nature, such as burglary, arson, and stealing in the dwelling-house, etc., a local description of the house, etc., must be given, namely, the parish or place, and county in which it is situate (see ante, p. 67). In indictments for obtaining money by false pretences, the false pretences must be specified. R. v. Mason, 2 T. R. 581; 1 R. R. 545: R. v. Munoz, 2 Str. 1127. In an indictment against a person for not serving the office of constable, the mode of election must be set out, to show that he was legally elected; for if he were not legally elected, he cannot be guilty of a crime in not serving. R. v. Harpur, 5 Mod. 96. An indictment for extortion must show what fee was due, or that nothing was payable, R. v. Lake, 3 Leon. 268, as well as the fee exacted; and an indictment for stopping up the King's highway must specify what part is alleged to have been obstructed. R. v. Wright [1834] 1 A. & E. 434: R. v. Roberts, 4 Mod. 101; 1 Show. 389. Also, for the same reasons, an indictment is bad for uncertainty if it charges the defendant with one or other of two offences, in the disjunctive, as that he murdered, or caused to be murdered, forged or caused to be forged, 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 58; R. v. Stocker, 1 Salk. 342, 371; R. v. Stoughton, 2 Str. 900; R. v. Flint, Cas. (K. B.) temp. Hardw. 370; R. v. Morley, 1 Y. & J. 221; 1 Chit. Cr. L., 230: or if it charges him in two different characters, in the disjunctive, as quod A., existens servus sive deputatus, took, etc. Smith v. Mall, 2 Rolle Rep. 263: or if it may apply to either of two different definite offences, and does not specify which. R. v. Marshall, 1 Mood. C. C. 158. But uncertainty or ambiguity in stating matter which may be rejected as surplusage does not vitiate the indictment. R. v. Parker, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 225; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 60. The uncertainty of one count of an indictment cannot be aided by reference to the description of the offence in another count. R. v. Sarah Waters, 1 Den. 356; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 53, 11 Cox, 101. But after verdict, defective averments in a second count may be aided by reference to sufficient averments in the first count. R. v. Waverton, 2 Den. 340; 17 Q. B. 562; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 7.

The Court will construe the words of the pleading according to their ordinary and usual acceptation, and technical terms according to their technical meaning. And if the sense of a word is ambiguous in the ordinary acceptation of it, it should be construed according as the context and subject-matter require it to be, in order to render the whole consistent and sensible: thus the word "until" may be construed inclusive or exclusive of the day to which it is applied according to the context and subject-matter. R. v. Stevens, 5 East, 244. In R. v. Bigg, 1 Str. 18; 3 P. Wms. 419; 24 Eng. Rep. 1127, the defendant was indicted for erasing the indorsement of a bank-note, and it appeared that the words erased were on the face of the note, but the jury found that such was commonly if a plea state that the master and fellows of a college were seised in fee, it shall be intended in right of the college; Fulmerston v. Steward, Plowd., 102; if a man plead a feoffment, livery shall be intended, because it would not otherwise be a feoffment; Co. Litt. 303 b.; or, if he plead an assignment of dower, it shall be intended by metes and bounds, for otherwise it would not be a legal assignment. Bro. Pleader, 145; Kadwalader v. Bryan, Cro. Car. 162. Common intent, however, is a rule of construction only, and not of addition; it cannot add to a sentence words which are not impliedly included in it; and therefore, in trespass, if the defendant plead a release, without showing at what time it was made, the court cannot presume that it was made after the trespass, Plowd. 46 a., unless the particular trespass be specially mentioned in it. Certainty to a certain intent in general, being a medium between the two degrees of certainty above mentioned, may be inferred from what has just now been said respecting them; and it should seem, therefore, that in cases where it is required, everything which the pleader should have stated, and which is not either expressly alleged or by necessary implication included in what is alleged, must be presumed against him.

called an indorsement; and a majority of the judges held that the description was correct. An indictment will not be vitiated by ungrammatical language, if the real meaning be sufficiently expressed. R. v. Stokes, 1 Den. 307; 2 C. & K. 536; 17 L. J. (M. C.) 116. In indictments against officers for neglect of duty or malversation in their offices, it is sufficient to allege that they were such officers at the time of the offence committed, without showing their appointment; see R. v. Hollond, 5 T. R. 607, 623: 2 R. R. 678; for their regular appointment is presumed from their exercising the duties of their offices. Where it was stated that the justices of our lord the King were assigned by letters patent under "his seal of Great Britain," it was presumed to be the great seal, R. v. Yandell, 4 T. R. 521, for it could not be by any other.

Matter of inducement.]—Mere matter of inducement does not require so much certainty as the statement of the gist of the offence. R. v. Wright, 1 Vent. 169; Com. Dig. Indictment (G. 5). Thus, in an indictment for disobedience to an order of justices for payment of a church rate, made under 53 G. 3, c. 127, an averment, by way of inducement, that a rate was duly made as by law required, and afterwards duly allowed, and that the defendant was by it duly rated, was held sufficient, without setting out the facts which constituted the alleged due rating, etc., although in the statement of the offence itself it would not have been sufficient. R. v. Bidwell, 1 Den. 222; 17 L. J. (M. C.) 99: R. v. Wade, 1 B. & Ad. 861: R. v. Soper, 3 B. & C. 857: R. v. Sainsbury, 4 T. R. 451; 2 R. R. 433: R. v. Westley, Bell, 193; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 35. So, an averment in an indictment under 33 & 34 Vict. c. 90, s. 11, that "within the limits of her Majesty's dominions and after the coming into operation therein of the Act called the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870," certain offences against that Act were committed is a sufficient allegation that the Act was in operation in that part of his Majesty's dominions in which the alleged offences were committed. R. v. Jameson [1896] 2 Q. B. 425; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 218.

Description of writings.]—At Common Law, written instruments, wherever they formed a part of the gist of the offence charged (see R. v. Coulson, 1 Den. 592; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 182), must be set out verbatim. Thus, in the case of forgery, the instrument forged must, before 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 123, s. 3 (rep.), have been set out in the indictment in words or figures; R. v. Mason, 1 East, 180, n.; 2 East, P. C. 975; R. v. Powell, 1 Leach, 77: R. v. Hart, Id. 145: R. v. Lyon, 2 Leach, 597, 608; and on an indictment for not executing a warrant, the nature and tenor of the warrant must have been shown. R. v. Burrough, 1 Vent. 305; Com. Dig. Indictment (G. 3). The rule above stated never applied to written instruments made the subject of larceny by statute. R. v. Johnson, 3 M. & Sel. 539: 16 R. R. 352. But the indictment must follow some of the descriptions given in the statute. Thus, where an indictment upon 2 G. 2, c. 25, s. 3 (rep.), which applied to bank notes, bills of exchange and promissory notes, etc., described the instrument stolen as "a certain note, commonly called a bank note," it was held insufficient. R. v. Craven, R. & R. 14: 2 East, P. C. 601. And where the indictment described the instrument stolen as "a bank post bill," but did not set out the bill, the indictment was held bad, because it did not fall within any of the descriptions in that statute. R. v. Chard, R. & R. 488. The strictness of the common law rule has been relaxed by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, ss. 5, 7 (ante, p. 52), and ss. 42, 43 of the Forgery Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 98). Under these enactments it is sufficient to describe an instrument referred to in an indictment by any name or designation by which it is usually known without setting out a copy or facsimile. But it is still necessary that the description should be such as to bring the instrument within the words of the enactment on which the indictment is framed.

It was formerly essential where the written instrument or parts of it were set out verbatim to set them out correctly, but the Court can now under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1 (ante, p. 52), amend any variance between indictment and evidence in this respect if it considers the variance not material to the merits of the case, and that the amendment will not prejudice the defendant in his defence of the merits.

If an indictment describes a written instrument as purporting to be so and so, the instrument when produced in evidence must appear upon the face of it to be what it is described as purporting to be, otherwise the defendant may be acquitted for the variance, if not amended. As, for instance, if the instrument be described as a "certain paper writing purporting to be a bank-note," and the note produced, though made to resemble, vary materially in its form from a real bank-note. R. v. Jones, 1 Doug. 300; R. v. Reading, 1 East, 180, n.; 2 Leach, 590: R. v. Edsall, Id. 662, n. (a). As to the meaning of the word "purporting," see R. v. Keith, Dears. 486; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 110: R. v. Goldstein, R. & R. 473.

Words spoken or written.]—Where words, written or spoken, are the gist of the offence, they must be set forth verbatim or with particularity in the indictment; as, for instance, in an indictment for scandalous or contemptuous words spoken to a magistrate in the execution of his office; R. v. Bagg, 1 Rolle Rep. 79: R. v. How, 2 Str. 693; or, for defamatory libel, Zenobio v. Axtell, 6 T. R. 162: R. v. Callanan, 6 B. & C. 102; Abbott, C. J.; or for blasphemous or seditious words; R. v. Popplewell, 2 Str. 686: R. v. Sparling, 1 Str. 497; or sending a threatening letter. R. v. Lloyd, 2 East, P. C. 1122: R. v. Hunter, 2 Leach, 624, 631. And if there be any material variance between the words proved and those laid, even if laid as spoken in the third person, and proved to have been spoken in the second, R. v. Berry, 4 T. R. 217, the defendant will be acquitted, unless the judge think fit to amend the variance. But if some of the words be proved as laid, and the words so proved amount to an indictable offence, it will be sufficient. And see post, tit. "Treason."

An indictment charging the publication of an obscene libel must formerly have set out the words complained of. Bradlaugh v. R., 3 Q. B. D. 607 (C. A.): R. v. Bradlaugh, 48 L. J. (M. C.) 5. The rule laid down in this case has, however, now been set aside by 51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 7. See post, tit. "Libel," where the section is fully set out.

In indictments for perjury and like offences it is not necessary to set out in full the affidavit, answer, etc., on which perjury is assigned, and is sufficient to set out the substance of the offence charged. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 20. In indictments for obtaining, etc., money by false pretences the words constituting the alleged false pretence should be set out in full; see ante, p. 73; post, tit. "False Pretences." As to indictments for treason, see that title, post.

Description of records.]—Where any matter laid in an indictment is to be proved by a record, care must be taken that the statement corresponds exactly with the record. On this subject, and that of variances between written and printed instruments, and the statement or setting forth thereof upon the trial, see post, Part II. "Evidence." As to stating names of jurors in proceedings set out by way of recital, see 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, s. 2 (ante, p. 35).

Description of personal chattels.]—Where personal chattels are the subject of an offence, as in larceny, they should be described specifically by their appropriate names, and the number of each species or particular kind of goods should be stated: see 2 Hale, 182, 183: and formerly the value also, thus, for instance, "one coat [of the value of twenty shillings], two pairs of boots [of the value of thirty shillings], two sheets [of the value of thirteen shillings], of the goods and chattels of one J. S.," or, "one sheep of the price of twenty shillings," etc., and the like. If, for instance, it were "twenty wethers and ewes," the indictment would be bad for uncertainty; it should state how many of each. 2 Hale, 183. The statement of value can now in most cases be safely omitted; see post, p. 77. Goods may be described by the name by which they are known in trade; as, for instance, a set of new handkerchiefs in the piece may be described as so many handkerchiefs, though they are not separated from each other, if the pattern designate each, and they are considered in trade as so many handkerchiefs. R. v. Nibbs, 1 Mood. C. C. 25. Ingots of tin, or a bar of iron may be described as so many pounds weight of tin or iron; but where an article has obtained, in common parlance, a particular name of its own, it would be wrong to describe it by the name of the material of which it is composed. R. v. Mansfield, C. & Mar. 140. Under the present practice the main reason for enumerating all the goods, in cases where their value is not material, is to found an application for restitution on conviction of the thief.

The prosecutor is bound (subject to the power of amendment given by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1, ante, p. 52) by the description of the species of goods stated. Thus, an indictment for stealing a pair of shoes could not, before that statute, be supported by evidence of a larceny of a pair of boots. But a variance in the number of the articles is immaterial, provided that the value of the goods proved to have been stolen be sufficient to constitute the offence at law, that is to say, since the abolition of the distinction between grand and petty larceny in 1827, provided that such goods are of some value, though not necessarily of the value of the smallest coin known to the law. R. v. Morris, 9 C. & P. 349. So, if there be ten different species of goods enumerated, and the prosecutor prove a larceny of any one or more of a sufficient value, it will be sufficient, although he fail in his proof of the rest.

Description of animals.]—An indictment for a larceny of live animals need not state them to be alive, because the law will presume them to be so, unless the contrary be stated; but if, when stolen, the animals were dead, that fact should be stated; for, as the law would otherwise presume them to be alive, the variance would be fatal (unless amended). R. v. Edwards, R. & R. 497: R. v. Halloway, 1 C. & P. 128. See R. v. Williams, 1 Mood. C. C. 107. But if an animal have the same appellation whether it be alive or dead, and it makes no difference as to the charge whether it were alive or dead, it may be called, when dead, by the appellation applicable to it when alive. R. v. Puckering, 1 Mood. C. C. 242. An indictment for stealing chattels which are the subject of larceny only in particular cases or under certain circumstances, must show that they fall within the requisite description. Thus an indictment for stealing "three eggs" was ruled to be bad, because only the eggs of animals domitæ naturæ are the subject of larceny. R. v. Cox. 1 C. & K. 494; but see R. v. Gallears, 1 Den. 501; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 13. An indictment for stealing "fowls" ought to describe them as "tame" or "domestic;" and it was formerly doubted, whether the omission of such a description is the subject of amendment. R. v. Lonsdale, 4 F. & F. 56. But an indictment for bestiality, which described the animal as a "certain bitch," was held sufficiently certain, although the females of foxes and some other animals, as well as of dogs, are so called. R. v. Allen, 1 C. & K. 495. As to what animals are the subject of larceny, see post, tit. "Larceny."

Value.]—It is unnecessary to state value, except where it is of the essence of the offence (14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24, ante, p. 54), such as an offence against the Larceny Act, 1861, s. 60, or the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 11, sub-s. 4. Where value is essential to constitute the offence, and the value is ascribed in the indictment to many articles collectively, the offence must be made out as to all or a sufficient number of the articles, for the grand jury have ascribed the value to all the articles collectively. R. v. Forsyth, R. & R. 274.

Money.]—Until 1851, money was described in an indictment as so many "pieces of the current gold," or "silver," or "copper coin of the realm, called ——," and the particular species of coin must have been specified. See R. v. Fry, R. & R. 482: R. v. Warshaner, 1 Mood. C. C. 466: R. v. Radley, 1 Den. 450; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 154. And if a larceny of particular pieces of coin, as sovereigns, half-sovereigns, crowns, etc., was charged, the indictment was not supported by proof of the stealing of a sum of money, which must have consisted of some or other of the coins mentioned in the indictment, without proof of the stealing of some one or more of the specific coins named. R. v. Bond, 1 Den. 517; L. J. (M. C.) 138. Since 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 18, ante, p. 54), it has been sufficient to describe coin or bank-notes as "money" without specifying any particular coin or bank-note.

Notes of a provincial bank, which were not at the time of the commission of the offence in circulation for value, but which were paid in at one branch of the bank, and were in course of transmission to another branch, at which they had originally been issued, in order that they might there be re-issued or otherwise disposed of—it not being the practice of the bank to re-issue at one branch notes originally issued at another—were held to be bank-notes within 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 18. R. v. West, Dears. & B. 109; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 6. Where an indictment charged a prisoner with stealing "nineteen shillings in money of the moneys of A. B.," and the evidence is that the prisoner stole a sovereign in gold, it was held that he cannot be convicted of stealing nineteen shillings: R. v. Bird, 42 L. J. (M. C.) 44; but in such a case the court before which the indictment is being tried may order the indictment to be amended under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1 (ante, p. 52) by striking out "nineteen shillings," and inserting "money," which by s. 18 of the same statute is a sufficient description of the thing stolen, and the prisoner may be convicted upon the indictment as so amended. R. v. Gumble, L. R., 2, C. C. R. 1. In the report of R. v. Gumble, 42 L. J. (M. C.) 7, the amendment made, or rather suggested, for it appears from both reports that it was taken as made and not actually made, was the substitution of "one sovereign" for "nineteen shillings and sixpence." Either amendment would, however, have been within the power of the court, and either would have have been effectual; the one mentioned in the Law Reports, as furnishing a sufficient description of the things stolen, within s. 18 of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, and that mentioned in the Law Journal, as accurately describing the actual coin stolen.

Words of art.]—In an indictment for murder, the words "did murder" (murdravit), Dy. 261 a; in an indictment for rape the words "did ravish" (rapuit), Staundf. 26 a; and in an indictment for larceny the words "feloniously did take and carry away" (felonicè cepit et asportavit), 4 Bl. Com. 305, are absolutely necessary; they are technical words, essential to the definition of the offence, without which these offences respectively cannot be described upon the record: and if omitted, the defendant may demur, move in arrest of judgment, or bring a writ of error. An indictment for any offence is not now held insufficient for the omission of the words "as appears upon the record," or of the words "with force and arms" (formerly inserted in many indictments). 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24 (ante, p. 54). See 1 Chit. Cr. L. 240; 1 Step., Hist. C. L. 286.

Statement of intent.]—The intention of the party at the time he committed the offence is often a necessary ingredient in it; and in such cases it is necessary to state the intention in the indictment (ante, pp. 11, 33) as one of the facts and circumstances which constitute the offence. See R. v. Philipps, 6 East, 464. (See post, Part II. ch. i.) In some cases the law has adopted certain technical expressions to indicate the intention with which an offence is committed; and in such cases the intention must be expressed by the technical word prescribed, and no other. Thus, treason must be laid to have been done "traitorously;" all felonies, whether at common law or created by statute (R. v. Gray, L. & C. 365; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 78; R. v. Martin, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 925, 1093), to have been done "feloniously;" burglary is laid to have been done "feloniously and burglariously" and with intent to commit a felony; murder, "feloniously and of his malice aforethought;" 2 Hale, 184, 187; forgery, "feloniously," if made felony by statute, and "with intent to defraud," etc. All misdemeanors should be laid to have been done unlawfully even where that word does not occur in the definition of the offence.

Where a statute annexes a higher degree of punishment to a common-law felony, if committed under particular circumstances, an indictment for the offence, in order to subject the defendant to that higher degree of punishment, must expressly charge it to have been committed under those circumstances, and must state the circumstances with certainty and precision. 2 Hale, 170. But see 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21 (ante, p. 51).

Statutory offences.]—Lastly, as to indictments for offences created by statute. The statute contains a definition of the offence; and the offence consists of the commission or omission of certain acts by certain persons under certain circumstances, and in some cases with a particular intent. As to the construction of expressions relating to number, gender, or person in statutes, see ante, p. 11. An indictment for an offence against a statute, must with certainty and precision charge the defendant to have committed or omitted the acts, under the circumstances and with the intent mentioned in the statute; and if any one of these ingredients in the offence be omitted, the defendant may move to quash the indictment, demur, move in arrest of judgment, or bring a writ of error. The defect will not be aided by verdict: see Lee v. Clarke, 2 East, 333, nor will the conclusion contra formam statuti cure it. 2 Hale, 170: R. v. Jukes, 8 T. R. 542; 5 R. R. 455: Com. Dig. Information (D. 3).

Aider by verdict.]—But "where the offence charged has been created by any statute or subjected to a greater degree of punishment or excluded from the benefit of clergy by any statute the indictment or information shall after verdict be held sufficient to warrant the punishment prescribed by the statute if it describe the offence in the words of the statute." 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21 (ante, p. 51), as to the effect of the sub-s. R. v. Martin, 8 A. & E. 481.

It is, however, necessary to aver such facts and circumstances as are necessary to bring the case within the operation of the statute upon which the indictment is founded. See R. v. Warshaner, 1 Mood. C. C. 466; Hamilton v. Reg., 9 Q. B. 271; Douglas v. R., 13 Q. B. 74: R. v. Bowen, 13 Q. B. 790: R. v. Rowlands, 2 Den. 364; 17 Q. B. 671; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 81; Nash v. R., 4 B. & S. 935; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 94; R. v. Goldsmith, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 74; 42 L. J. (M. C.) 94: Heymann v. R., L. R. 8 Q. B. 102: Taylor v. R. [1895] 2 Q. B. 25. In an indictment upon 5 Eliz. c. 11, s. 2 (rep.) (which made it high treason to clip, round or file any of the coin of the realm, "for wicked lucre or gain's sake,") it was necessary to charge the offence to have been committed for the sake of wicked lucre or gain, otherwise it would be bad. 1 Hale, 220. So an indictment on that part of the Black Act (rep.) which made it felony "wilfully and maliciously" to shoot at any person in a dwelling-house or other place, was held bad, because it charged the offence to have been done "unlawfully and maliciously," omitting the word "wilfully;" R. v. Davis, 1 Leach, 493; some of the judges, indeed, thought that "maliciously" included "wilfully;" but the majority held, that as "wilfully" and "maliciously" were both mentioned in the statute as descriptive of the offence, both must be stated in the indictment. See also R. v. Bent, 1 Den. 157; 2 C. & K. 179; but see R. v. Harvey, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 284; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 63. So an indictment upon 7 & 8 G. 4 c. 30, s. 2 (rep.), for feloniously, voluntarily, and maliciously setting fire to a barn, was held bad, because the words of the statute are "unlawfully and maliciously." R. v. Turner, 1 Mood. C. C. 239. So an indictment upon 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 12 (rep.), charging the prisoner with "feloniously, wilfully, and maliciously cutting," etc., was not sufficient, the words of the statute being "unlawfully and maliciously." R. v. Ryan, 2 Mood. C. C. 15; R. v. Cook, 2 East, P. C. 616; 1 Leach, 105. See also R. v. Douglass, 1 Camp. 212. Where a word not in the statute is substituted in the indictment for one that is, and the word thus substituted is equivalent to the word used in the statute, or is of more extensive signification than it, and includes it, the indictment will be sufficient. As, for instance, if the word "knowingly" be in the statute, and the word "advisedly" be substituted for it in the indictment. R. v. Fuller, 1 B. & P. 180; 2 Leach, 790, or the word "wilfully" in the statute, and "maliciously" in the indictment (the words "advisedly" and "maliciously" not being in the statutes respectively), the indictment would be sufficient. An indictment framed upon 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 18, which enacts that whosoever shall unlawfully and maliciously by any means "cause" any grievous bodily harm to any person, shall be guilty of felony, was held sufficient though the word "cause" was used instead of "inflict." R. v. Bray, 15 Cox, 197 (C. C. R.). It is much better, however, to follow strictly the words of the statute, as it precludes all question about the meaning of the expressions used. And it is sufficient to follow the words of the statute or describe the offence unless indeed they are generic terms, in which case it is necessary to state the species, according to the truth of the case. Thus, in an indictment on the Incitement to Mutiny Act, 1797 (37 G. 3, c. 70), which makes it felony to endeavour to seduce a soldier or sailor from his duty, it is sufficient to charge an endeavour, etc., without specifying the means employed. R. v. Fuller, ubi sup. But where a statute (for instance) makes the maliciously killing of cattle a felony, it is not sufficient in an indictment on the statute to charge the defendant with killing "cattle" generally, but the species of cattle, as horse, mare, gelding, cow, ox, heifer, etc., must be stated. R. v. Chalkley, R. & R. 258. And where the subject of the indictment cannot be brought within the meaning of the statute without the aid of extrinsic evidence, it is necessary, besides charging the offence in the words of the statute, to aver such facts and circumstances as may be necessary to bring the matter within the meaning of it; as, for instance, where by the usage of a public office, the bare signature of a party upon a navy bill operates as a receipt, an indictment for forging such a receipt, setting forth the navy bill and indorsement, and charging the defendant with having forged "a certain receipt for money; to wit, the sum of 25*l.* mentioned and contained in the said paper upon a navy bill, which forged receipt was as follows; that is to say,—William Thornton, William Hunter," was held bad, because it did not show, by proper averments that these signatures imported a receipt. R. v. Hunter, 2 Leach, 624; 2 East, P. C. 928. See R. v. Barton, 1 Mood. C. C. 141: R. v. Thompson, 2 Leach, 910: R. v. Boardman, 2 M. & Rob. 147.

Exceptions and provisoes.]—Hale (1 Hist. P. C. 170, 171) says that in certain cases the indictment need not mention nor qualify a statutory offence so as to exempt it out of provisoes; and the defence may take the benefit of the provisoes under "not guilty." The general rule is stated in Thibault v. Gibson, 12 M. & W. 88, 94, by Lord Abinger, C.B., in the following terms:—

"In all cases where proceedings are taken against a party for the recovery of a penalty under a statute, if there be any exception in the clause which gives the penalty exempting certain cases from its operation, the declaration or information must show that the particular case is not within the exception. But where it comes by way of proviso in a subsequent part of the Act, it is not necessary to notice it in the declaration or information, but it is matter which the defendant must allege as ground for defence."

For other authorities to the like effect, see Spieres v. Parker, 1 T. R. 141; 1 R. R. 165: R. v. Earnshaw, 15 East, 456: R. v. Jarvis, 1 East, 643, n., 646, n.: R. v. Pratten, 6 T. R. 559: R. v. Baxter, 5 T. R. 83; 2 Leach, 578; 2 East, P. C. 781: R. v. Matters, 1 B. & Ald. 362: R. v. Pearce, R. & R. 174: R. v. Robinson, Id. 321: R. v. Palmer, 1 Leach, 102: Simpson v. Ready, 12 M. & W. 736, 740. In R. v. James [1902] 1 K. B. 540 (C. C. R.) the effect of the authorities on this subject was held to be that it is not necessary for the prosecution to negative a proviso, even though the proviso be continued in the same section of the Act of Parliament creating the offence, unless the proviso is in the nature of an exception which is incorporated directly or by reference with the enacting clause. See R. v. Hall, 1 T. R. 320: Steel v. Smith, 1 B. & Ald. 94. Where a statute makes the doing of an act "without lawful authority or excuse" criminal, it is sufficient if the indictment negatives "lawful excuse" without also negativing "lawful authority," as there can be no "lawful authority" which would not also be a "lawful excuse," and therefore to negative "lawful excuse" is also to negative "lawful authority." R. v. Harvey, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 284; 40 L. J. (M. C.) 63.

Citing statutes.]—It is not necessary in an indictment to cite or recite any statute. As to the mode proper at common law of stating the title, etc., of a statute in pleading, see R. v. Biers, 1 A. & E. 327: Gibbs v. Pike, 8 M. & W. 223: Beck v. Beverley, 11 M. & W. 845: R. v. Westley, Bell, 193; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 35.

It was to avoid risk of errors of statement that the conclusion "against the form of the statute" or "statutes," etc., was introduced. Palgrave v. Windham [1718] 1 Str. 214. But that conclusion is now unnecessary. See 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24, ante, pp. 54, 55.

By the Interpretation Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 63), s. 35 (1) in any Act, instrument or document, an Act may be cited (a) by reference to the short title, if any, of the Act, either with or without a reference to the chapter, or (b) by reference to the regnal year in which the Act was passed, and where there are more statutes or sessions than one in the same regnal year, by reference to the statute or the session as the case may require, and where there are more chapters than one by reference to the chapter, and any enactment may be cited by reference to the section or sub-section of the Act in which the enactment was contained." Most of the Acts still in force referred to in this work have been given short titles either by the Short Titles Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 14), or by other enactments.

Figures in indictment.]—No part of the indictment should be in figures; and therefore numbers, dates, etc., should be stated in words at length. 2 Hale, 170. In the old books on Crown practice it is generally stated that numbers in an indictment must be expressed in words. Burn's Justice (17th ed.), published in 1793, states the rule thus (vol. ii. p. 693): "Figures to express numbers are not allowable in an indictment, but numbers must be expressed in words (2 Hale, 170; Cr. Circ. Comp. 109; R. v. Haddock, Andr. 137), or at least in Roman numerals (R. v. Philips, 1 Str. 261)." 4 G. 2, c. 26 (rep.), which abolished Latin indictments, directed that indictments, etc., should be written in such legible hand and character as the Acts of Parliament are usually engrossed in, and the lines and words of the same to be written at least as close as the said Acts usually are, and not in any hand commonly called court hand, and in words at length and not abbreviated. 6 G. 2, c. 14, s. 5 (rep.), permitted indictments, etc., to be "written or printed in a common legible hand or character, and with the like way of writing or printing, and with the like manner of expressing numbers by figures as have heretofore or are now commonly used in the said courts respectively, and with such abbreviations as are now commonly used in the English language." In Rex v. Haddock, ubi sup., the objection was taken that in an indictment the year of our Lord and certain quantities of bricks were expressed in common figures. Counsel for the objection cited 2 Hale, 170; 1 Sid. 40; 1 Keb. 19; and Style, 88. Chief Justice Lee, at p. 146, held as to this objection: "There is great weight in it from the authority of the cases which have been cited in support thereof. There is no distinction as to this point between indictments capital or criminal, but the only difference between them is the consideration of the punishment; and therefore the passage cited out of Lord Hale's history is very material, and he is therein very express that figures ought not to be used in indictments. The cases in Style, 88; 1 Sid. 40; 1 Keb. 19, have been also cited. The case cited contra, 1 Vent. 256, doth not clash with the opinion contra of Lord Hale, because that is the case of a venue in a civil action. Nor is the other of Rex v. Yeomans strong enough to encounter his opinion, wherein he is so very express, and treats professedly of the subject, for there the figures were not Roman, so that the matter did not come in question." In R. v. Yeomans (Pasch., 11 Will. 3), referred to in Andrews, p. 141, a caption had been held bad for having the date in common English figures—1697—but it was held that if Roman had been used it would have been well. This accords with R. v. Philips, 1 Str. 261. The only exception to this is, where a fac-simile of a written instrument is set out, as was formerly necessary, and as is still done in certain cases in an indictment for forgery at common law (see post, tit. "Forgery"), in which case it must be set out in the indictment in words and figures, as in the original itself. R. v. Mason, 1 East, 180, n. Both the statutes discussed in Haddock's case were repealed in 1879 by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 59. The preamble of the Act describes the Acts to be repealed as relating to civil procedure or matters connected therewith, and describes them as spent or ceasing to be in force otherwise than by specific and express repeal by Parliament, or as by lapse of time and change of circumstances become unnecessary. But the form of the saving clause is calculated to create doubts as to the exact effect of the repeal.

But the use of figures for words is now not unusual, and seems at most to be merely a formal defect, amendable under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 25 (ante, p. 55). Lawrance, J., so held in R. v. Price, 17 T. L. R. 80; 35 L. J. Newsp. 647; 41 Sol. J. 71. In R. v. Edwards, Cumberland Summer Assizes, July, 1901, Ridley, J., ruled to the same effect. He consented to state a case on the point, but it seems never to have been stated.

Duplicity.]—The indictment must not be double; that is to say, no one count of the indictment should charge the defendant with having committed two or more offences: for instance, with having committed a murder and a robbery, or the like. So, two defendants cannot be jointly charged with murder or manslaughter by means of an injury done by one of them to the deceased on one day and another injury done by the other of them on a different day. R. v. Devett, 8 C. & P. 639. But where the offence charged, whether felony or misdemeanor, is one single act it may be made the subject of a single count. For instance, where the prisoner was charged in one count with uttering a number of forged receipts, and it was proved that all the forged receipts were uttered at one and the same time, in one bundle, the count was held good. R. v. Thomas, 2 East, P. C. 934. So, the indictment may charge the prisoner, in the same count, with felonious acts with respect to several persons—as in robbery, with having assaulted A. and B., and stolen from A. one shilling, and from B. two shillings—if it was all one transaction. R. v. Giddins, C. & Mar. 634. A man may be indicted for the battery of two or more persons in the same count where the battery is one transaction, or for a libel upon two or more persons when the publication is one single act, without rendering the count bad for duplicity. R. v. Benfield, 2 Burr. 980, 983, 984: where R. v. Clendon, 2 Str. 870; 2 Ld. Raym. 1572, was held not law: and see R. v. Jenour, 7 Mod. 400. A count charging a man with one endeavour to procure the commission of two offences, is not bad for duplicity, because the endeavour is the offence charged. R. v. Fuller, 1 B. & P. 180; 2 Leach, 790.

An exception to the rule as to duplicity is to be found in indictments for burglary, in which it is usual and proper to charge the defendant with having broken and entered the house with intent to commit a felony, and also with having committed the felony intended. Laying several overt acts in a count for high treason is not duplicity, Kelyng, (J)., 8, because the charge consists of the compassing, etc., and the overt acts are merely evidence of it; and the same as to conspiracy. That the defendant published and caused to be published a libel is not double, for they are the same offence. R. v. Bradlaugh, 15 Cox, 217.

An indictment under 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 66, s. 20 (rep.), which charged "destroying, defacing, and injuring" a register, is not bad for duplicity, the destruction, etc., being all one act. R. v. Bowen, 1 Den. 22; 1 C. & K. 501. And it is the practice to charge in indictments for libel that the defendant "did publish and cause to be published;" and in indictments under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 24, "did make and concur in making a false entry." An indictment under s. 7 of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 86, charging that the defendant "used violence to or intimidated" has been held bad for duplicity. R. v. Edmondes, 59 J. P. 776, Lawrance, J.: and semble it was also bad for uncertainty, ante, p. 72.

In criminal cases, the mode of objecting to duplicity is the same as in civil proceedings prior to the Common Law Procedure Act, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76; i.e., by special demurrer, perhaps also by general demurrer: or the court on motion may quash the indictment, which is now the usual procedure; but it seems that duplicity cannot be made the subject of a motion in arrest of judgment or of a writ of error; Nash v. R., 4 B. & S. 935; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 94; and it is cured by a verdict of guilty as to one of the offences, and not guilty as to the other. Duplicity is distinct from the joinder in one indictment of counts for different offences, as to which see post, p. 88.

Statements must be positive.]—Every fact and circumstance stated in an indictment must be laid positively: that is, the indictment must directly affirm that the defendant did so and so, or that such a fact happened under such and such circumstances: it cannot be stated by way of recital, "that whereas," etc., or the like. 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 60: R. v. Whitehead, 1 Salk. 371: R. v. Crowhurst, 2 Ld. Raym. 1363: R. v. Askman, 1 Sess. Cas. 159. Where an indictment for not obeying a justice's order set forth the order by way of recital, "that whereas a certain order," etc., although it charged the not obeying of the order positively, it was held bad. R. v. Crowhurst, 2 Ld. Raym. 1363. So, stating a matter by way of argument or inference would render the indictment bad; as, for instance, that by a certain indenture testatum existit that J. S. demised, etc.; and this, perhaps, even in mere matter of inducement, although in one case the contrary certainly has been decided. R. v. Goddard, 3 Salk. 171: 2 Ld. Raym. 920.

The reason for this rule is that the indictment is in form a finding of facts by the grand jury. See R. v. Pewtress, 2 Str. 1026.

A defect in these respects is not cured by verdict; and consequently the defendant may take advantage of it by demurrer, motion in arrest of judgment, or writ of error.

Statements must not be repugnant.]—Where one material part of an indictment is repugnant to another, the whole is void: as, for instance, an indictment charging the defendant with forging a bond by which J. S. was bound, etc. (which is impossible if the writing be forged); or with disseising A., and it appears upon the face of the indictment that A. had but an estate for years; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 62; with stealing the goods of the said J. S. where the name of J. S. was not previously mentioned; Id. s. 72; or in the parish aforesaid, where no parish was before mentioned; for forging a bill of exchange, stating it to be signed by the party whose signature was alleged to be forged; R. v. Carter, 2 East, P. C. 985; or the like. If the repugnancy be in an immaterial part, it may in general be rejected as surplusage, especially after verdict. Bac. Abr., Pleas (14): and see ante, p. 71, immaterial averments. Thus, upon an indictment, tempore 1 G. 4, for stealing a mare in the fourth year of the reign of G. 4, against the peace of our lord the now King, the words "fourth year of the" were rejected as surplusage. R. v. Gill, R. & R. 431. But still it is a general rule, that an allegation in pleading, which is sensible and consistent in the place where it occurred, and not repugnant to antecedent matter, cannot be rejected as surplusage, though laid under a videlicet, however inconsistent it may be with an allegation subsequent. R. v. Stevens, 5 East, 244. One count of an indictment charged A. with stealing a promissory note from B.; a second with stealing a bank-note from B.; and a third, with receiving goods "so as aforesaid feloniously stolen." It was held, after verdict, that the indictment was not objectionable on the ground of repugnancy; for, first, the words of reference in the third count did not necessarily import a stealing of the goods by A.; and, secondly, if they did the count was conceivably capable of proof. R. v. Craddock, 2 Den. 31; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 31.

Averments, how made.]—The usual way of making an averment in an indictment is thus: "And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present that," etc.; or if it is connected with what has immediately preceded it, it may be introduced simply thus: "And that," etc., then proceeding to state the matter of the averment. But when the matter of the averment is but a mere adjunct of some person or thing preceding, it does not require even this technical mode of introducing it; thus, "that A. being an officer," etc., is a sufficient averment that A. was an officer; see 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 112: R. v. Johnson, 2 Rolle Rep. 225: R. v. Boyall, 2 Burr. 832: R. v. Bootie, Id. 864: R. v. Higginson, Id. 1232: R. v. Somerton, 7 B. & C. 463; "that A., knowing that B. was indicted for forgery, concealed a witness against him," is a sufficient averment that B. was indicted. Fitzg. 122, 263. "So is "dans plagam mortalem," R. v. Long, 5 Co. Rep. 121 b; March, pl. 137, or "sciens that," etc., R. v. Lawley, 2 Str. 904, is a good averment. And, where an indictment for perjury stated that "at and upon the hearing of the said complaint," the defendant deposed, etc., this was held a sufficient averment that the complaint was heard. R. v. Aylett, 1 T. R. 63, 70: 1 R. R. 152. The ability of a person to perform an act is sufficiently implied in and averred by an averment that he unlawfully neglected to do that act. R. v. Ryland, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 99; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 10.

Consequences of defective statement.]—Defective statements in an indictment fall into three classes: 1. Defects which are incurable and fatal to the indictment. 2. Defects which are aided or cured by verdict. 3. Defects which may be cured by amendment before verdict.

1. Incurable defects.—If all the ingredients of the offence (whether it be an offence at common law or one created by statute) are not set forth in the indictment, or if any of them are not stated with sufficient certainty, the defendant may move to quash the indictment, or may demur, or may move in arrest of judgment, or bring a writ of error. Heymann v. R., L. R., 8 Q. B. 102: R. v. Goldsmith, L. R., 2 C. C. R. 74; 42 L. J. (M. C.) 94.

2. Defects aided by verdict.—In offences created by statute, or subjected to a greater degree of punishment by any statute (although the defendant may demur, if the indictment does not describe the offence with sufficient certainty), he cannot, if it describe the offence in the words of the statute, move in arrest of judgment, or bring a writ of error; for, after verdict, the indictment will, in that case, be sufficient to warrant the punishment. 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21 (ante, p. 51). A count of an indictment, under sect. 221 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1861 (rep.), charged that the defendant was adjudged bankrupt in the London District Court of Bankruptcy, and that, upon his examination in the said court, with intent to defraud and defeat the rights of his creditors, he did not fully and truly discover to the best of his knowledge and belief all his property, to wit, all his personal property in money and goods. The defendant having been found guilty, upon error brought, it was contended that the count was bad for uncertainty in not setting out the number and value, or even the kind of goods referred to in it; but it was held that any want of certainty which existed was cured after verdict by 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 61. Nash v. R., 4 B & S. 935; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 94.

There was no distinction at common law between the rules of pleading in civil and criminal cases. Heymann v. R., L. R., 8 Q. B. 102; 12 Cox, 383: Castro v. R., 6 App. Cas. 229, 243: R. v. Munslow [1895] 1 Q. B. 758; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 138 (C. C. R.). And, independently of 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21 (ante, p. 51), it is a general rule of pleading at common law, that where an averment which is necessary for the support of the pleading is imperfectly stated, and the verdict on an issue involving that averment is found, if it appears to the court after verdict, that the verdict could not have been found on this issue without proof of this averment then, after verdict, the defective averment, though it might have been bad on demurrer, is cured by verdict. Heymann v. R., ubi supra: R. v. Goldsmith, L. R., 2 C. C. R. 74; 42 L. J. (M. C.) 94. In pursuance of this rule, and independently of 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21, it was held that, assuming that an indictment for receiving goods obtained by false pretences, might have been quashed or held bad on demurrer for not setting out the false pretences, the defect, if any, was cured by verdict. R. v. Goldsmith, ubi supra: Taylor v. R. [1895] 1 Q. B. 25; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 11. So also where defendant was indicted under 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51 for "corrupt practices" at a parliamentary election, without setting out the nature of such corrupt practices, as "bribery," "undue influence," etc., it was held that after verdict no objection could be taken to the indictment for want of certainty. R. v. Stroulger, 17 Q. B. D. 327; 55 L. J. (M. C.) 137. The above rule is applicable only to an averment imperfectly stated, i.e., an averment which is stated but which is imperfectly stated. It is not applicable to the case of the total omission of an essential averment. For such a total omission the verdict is no cure. And when it is said in the rule that the verdict could not have been found without proof of the averment, the meaning is, the verdict could not have been found without finding this imperfect averment to have been proved in a sense adverse to the accused. See the judgment of Brett, J. A., in R. v. Aspinall, 2 Q. B. D. 48, 58; 46 L. J. (M. C.) at pp. 149, 150: Heymann v. R., L. R. 8 Q. B. 102; 12 Cox, 383: R. v. Silverlock [1894] 2 Q. B. 766, 772; 63 L. J. (M. C.) 233 (C. C. R.).

3. Defects cured by amendment.—These defects have been treated seriatim under the preceding paragraphs of this chapter, and the power of amendment depends on the statutes set out, ante, pp. 51-55.

3. Conclusion of the Indictment.

For an offence at common law.]—An indictment for an offence at common law concludes thus: "Against the peace of our lord the King, his crown and dignity." Indictments for nuisance usually conclude: "to the great damage and common nuisance of all the liege subjects of our said lord the King," etc., as well as "against the peace," etc.: but this conclusion, ad commune nocumentum, never seems to have been essential.

Where the offence was committed in one reign and the indictment is preferred in another reign, the proper form of conclusion is "against the peace of our late lord the King," etc. See 1 Chit. Cr. L. 247; Lookup v. R., 4 Bro. Parl. Cas. 332; 2 Eng. Rep. 225; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 92; and for the conclusion of the indictment against the regicides, Kel. (J.) 11.

For an offence by statute.]—An indictment for an offence created by statute concludes thus; "Against the form of the statute [or statutes] in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our lord the King, his crown and dignity."

Formerly great care was necessary in ascertaining whether the indictment should conclude as for an offence at common law, or as for an offence by statute, and in the latter case whether the expression "against the form of the statute" or "against the form of the statutes" should be used, and in all cases a proper and formal conclusion was necessary. See R. v. Radcliffe [1838] 2 Mood. C. C. 68.

But by the Criminal Procedure Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 100), s. 24 (ante, p. 54), no indictment for any offence shall be held insufficient for the omission of the words "against the peace," nor for the insertion of the words "against the form of the statute," instead of "against the form of the statutes," or vice versâ, nor for want of a proper or formal conclusion. See 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 37 n.: R. v. Holmes, Dears. 207; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 122: Castro v. R., 6 App. Cas. 229; 50 L. J. (Q. B.) 497. The ruling in R. v. Mayor, etc., of Poole, 19 Q. B. D. 602, is admittedly not law on this point; see 19 Q. B. D. 683 n. It is still the practice, and useful for purpose of readily ascertaining the nature of the offence charged, to conclude indictments for offences at common law with the words "against the peace of our lord the King, his crown and dignity," and to conclude indictments for offences by statute with the words "against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our lord the King, his crown and dignity." But the statute and decisions above stated render the old learning on the subject obsolete.

Joinder of two or more defendants in one indictment.

Where several persons join in the commission of an offence, all or any number of them may be jointly indicted for it, or each of them may be indicted separately. Thus, if several commit a robbery, burglary, or murder, they may be indicted for it jointly, 2 Hale, 173, or separately; and the same where two or more together commit a battery, or are together guilty of extortion or the like. R. v. Atkinson, 1 Salk. 382. And though they have acted separately, yet if the grievance is the result of the acts of all jointly, all may be indicted jointly for the offence. R. v. Trafford, 1 B. & Ad. 874. Where money has been obtained under false pretences, and the false pretences were conveyed by words spoken by one defendant in the presence of the others, all of whom acted in concert together, they may all be indicted jointly. Young v. R., 3 T. R. 98. The same rule applies where two or more persons join in singing a libellous song; R. v. Benfield, 2 Burr. 980, 985, or in any other mode of publishing a defamatory libel. But if the publication of each party be distinct, as if two booksellers, not being partners, sell the libel at their respective shops, they must be indicted separately. But two or more cannot be jointly indicted for perjury, R. v. Philips, 2 Str. 921, or for seditious or blasphemous words, or the like, because such offences are in their nature several. And even where several commit a joint act, which act, however, is not of itself illegal, but becomes so merely by reason of some circumstances applicable to each individual severally and not jointly, they must be indicted separately; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 89; thus several partners could be indicted jointly for exercising their trade, without having served an apprenticeship. R. v. Atkinson, 1 Salk. 382; R. v. Weston, 1 Str. 623.

Principals in the first and second degree, and accessories before and after the fact may all be joined in the same indictment; 2 Hale, 173; or the principals may be indicted separately, and the accessories may be indicted either before or after the conviction of the principals, as for a substantive offence. (See ante, pp. 16, 19, and 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, ss. 2, 3.) It is said that several may be jointly indicted for severally erecting common inns, ad commune nocumentum, if it be said that they separaliter erexerunt, etc.; and the same as to keeping disorderly houses, etc.; 2 Hale, 174; but it is much better, and more usual in practice, to indict the proprietor of each house separately. As to separate trials of persons jointly indicted, see post, p. 186.

Misjoinder of defendants may be made the subject of a demurrer, motion in arrest of judgment, or writ of error; or the court may quash the indictment (see post, p. 120). But where there are different counts against different persons in the same indictment, this, though it may be a ground for moving to quash the indictment, is no cause for demurrer, R. v. Kingston, 8 East, 41, if the counts be such in substance as may be joined.

Upon an indictment against two persons charging them jointly with an offence, as stealing in the dwelling-house, both or either may be found guilty, but they cannot be found guilty of separate parts of the charge; and if they be found guilty separately, judgment cannot be passed upon one, unless a pardon be obtained or a nolle prosequi be entered as to the other. R. v. Hempstead, R. & R. 344. Before 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, if two were charged jointly with receiving stolen goods, a joint act of receiving must have been proved: proof that one received in the absence of the other, and afterwards delivered to him, would not suffice; R. v. Messingham, 1 Mood. C. C. 257: see R. v. Archer, Ib. 143; R. v. Parr, 2 M. & Rob. 346: R. v. Dovey, 2 Den. 86; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 105; but the 14th section of that statute (rep. and re-enacted as 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 94) provides that if, upon the trial of two or more persons indicted for jointly receiving any property, it should be proved that one or more of such persons separately received any part of such property, it should be lawful for the jury to convict upon such indictment such of the said persons as should be proved to have received any part of such property; and this enactment extends to cases where, upon an indictment for joint receiving, it is proved that the prisoners separately received the whole of the stolen property. R. v. Reardon, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 31, 35; L. J. (M. C.) 171. Several receivers may be charged in the same indictment with separate and distinct acts of receiving. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 93. R. v. Pulham, 9 C. & P. 280: R. v. Hayes, 2 M. & Rob. 155. Where several persons are indicted for burglary and larceny, one may be found guilty of burglary and larceny, and the others of the larceny only. R. v. Butterworth, R. & R. 520. On an indictment against A. and B. for larceny, with another count against B. for receiving, A. was acquitted; B. was found guilty, on evidence which proved that he was an accessory before the fact to the larceny, and a receiver, and the verdict against him was entered generally; it was held that he was not (since 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, s. 1 (rep.), of which 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 1, is a re-enactment) entitled to an acquittal for the larceny. R. v. Hughes, Bell, 242; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 71.

Sect. 5.

JOINDER OF SEVERAL OFFENCES IN DIFFERENT COUNTS IN ONE INDICTMENT.

We have already seen (ante, p. 82) that if a defendant is charged with two or more offences in the same count of an indictment, the count will be bad for duplicity. Different considerations apply to charging a defendant with different offences in different counts of the same indictment. Each count in an indictment is for the purposes of evidence and judgment a separate indictment. Latham v. R., 5 B. & S. 635: and see hereon Selvester v. U. S., 170 U. S. 262, where is pointed out the error in R. v. Hayes (1727, 2 Ld. Raym. 1518), where the contrary was held.

Joinder of different treasons.]—In an indictment for high treason, there may be different counts, each charging the defendant with a different species of treason against the King and his government, such as compassing the King's death, levying war, adhering to the King's enemies, within 25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 2, and the conspiracies to imprison or do bodily harm to the King, within 36 G. 3, c. 7, s. 1. And this power is extended by statute to treason felony, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, s. 5. See R. v. Mitchel, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 599, 619.

Joinder of different felonies.]—Although it is no objection in point of law to an indictment that it charges the prisoner with several different felonies in different counts, R. v. Heywood, L. & C. 451; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 133; R. v. Holman, 9 Cox, 201 (C. C. R.); Castro v. R., 6 App. Cas. 229, 244; 50 L. J. (Q. B.), at p. 504, yet as a matter of practice a prisoner ought not, in general, to be charged with different felonies in different counts of an indictment; as, for instance, a murder in one count and a burglary in another, or a burglary in the house of A. in one count, and a distinct burglary in the house of B. in another, or a larceny of the goods of A. in one count and a distinct larceny of the goods of B., at a different time, in another, because such a course of proceeding is calculated to embarrass the prisoner in his defence. As to whether an indictment may be quashed in such a case, see post, s. 11 (p. 120). It is well established by a long series of decisions that the joining of two felonies in one indictment (except where the same facts may constitute several felonies, Campbell v. R., 11 Q. B. 799, 812) is so necessarily unfair to the prisoner that the judge ought, upon an application being made to him, to put the prosecutor to his election and send them to two trials. Castro v. R., 6 App. Cas., at p. 244; 50 L. J. (Q. B.), at p. 504. Thus, where an indictment charged the prisoner in three several counts with three several felonies in sending three separate threatening letters, Byles, J., compelled the prosecutor to elect upon which count he would proceed. R. v. Ward, 10 Cox, 42. But the joining of several different felonies in different counts in the same indictment is no ground for arrest of judgment. Young v. R., 3 T. R. 98: R. v. O'Donnell, 7 St. Tr., N. S. 637, 706: R. v. Hinley, 2 M. & Rob. 524: O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1; 11 Cl. & F. 155; 8 Eng. Rep. 155. It is said that if objection is taken before plea, the court may quash the indictment. See post, s. 11, p. 120. When it is taken after the jury are sworn, it is established practice to put the prosecutor to his election upon which charge he will proceed. Young v. R., 3 T. R. 98, 106: R. v. Heywood, ubi supra: O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1, 784, Tindal, C. J.: R. v. Mitchel, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 599; except in those cases where a statute permits the joinder of counts for distinct felonies. But upon an indictment for receiving stolen goods, if it appears that the articles were received at different times, the prosecutor must elect as to the receipt of which articles he will prosecute for; but the mere probability that the goods were received at different times is no ground for putting the prosecutor to his election. R. v. Dunn, 1 Mood. C. C. 146: R. v. Hinley, 2 M. & Rob. 524. On the trial of an indictment for robbery, the jury may convict of an assault with intent to rob; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 41; so that the necessity of several counts in such a case is done away with. Where the defendant was indicted under 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85, ss. 2, 4, (rep.) in several counts, for stabbing, with intent to murder, with intent to maim and disable, and with intent to do some grievous bodily harm, it was held that the prosecutor was not bound to elect upon which count he would proceed, although the judgment was by the statute different, being on the first count capital, and on the others transportation. R. v. Strange, 8 C. & P. 172; Campbell v. R., 11 Q. B. 799, 812. And where to these counts was added a count for a common assault, and the prisoner being found guilty of a felonious assault, the verdict was entered on the count for stabbing with intent to do grievous bodily harm, under 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 85 s. 11 (rep.), the conviction was held good. R. v. Jones, 8 C. & P. 776; 2 Mood. C. C. 94; see also R. v. Ferguson, Dears. 427; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 61. In a case of arson, the indictment contained five counts, each charging a firing of a house of a different owner: but it being opened that the five houses were in a row, and the same fire burnt them all, the judge would not put the prosecutor to elect, it being all one transaction. R. v. Trueman, 8 C. & P. 727; and see R. v. Fussell, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 723. The application for a prosecutor to elect is an application to the discretion of the judge founded on the supposition that the case extends to more than one charge, and may therefore be likely to embarrass the prisoner in his defence. Id.: R. v. Hinley, 2 M. & Rob. 524. It is expressly provided by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 92, that in any indictment for feloniously stealing any property, it shall be lawful to add a count or several counts for feloniously receiving the same property knowing it to be stolen, and in any indictment for feloniously receiving any property knowing it to be stolen, it shall be lawful to add a count for feloniously stealing the same; and the prosecutor of such indictment is not to be put to any election, but the jury may find a verdict of guilty on either count, against all or any of the persons charged. But a count for stealing certain property ought not to be joined with a count for receiving the same and other property; and if it is, the prosecutor will be put to his election. R. v. Ward, 2 F. & F. 19. A defendant may be charged as an accessory before the fact in one count, and as accessory after the fact in another count, to the same felony, without putting the prosecutor to his election, and may be convicted on both counts. R. v. Blackson, 8 C. & P. 43 (per Parke, B., after consulting Patteson, J.); and see R. v. Mitchel, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 599, 620, 621. Where the defendant was charged as principal in one count, and as accessory after the fact in another count, to the same felony, the prosecution was compelled to elect upon which count they would proceed. R. v. Brannon, 14 Cox, 394, Cockburn, C.J. But this decision appears to have been given without due regard to s. 3 of the Accessories Act, 1861 (ante, p. 20), and in R. v. Tuffin, Guildford Assizes, July 22, 1903, Darling, J., held upon a similar indictment that the decision in R. v. Blackson should be preferred to that in R. v. Brannon. A defendant may be indicted as a principal in the first degree in one count, and as principal in the second degree in another count. R. v. Gray, 7 C. & P. 164. And a receiver may be indicted as an accessory in one count, and for a substantive felony in another count; and although, in his discretion, the judge may put the prosecutor to his election, he will not do so whenever it is clear that there is only one offence, and the joinder of counts cannot prejudice the defendant. R. v. Austin, 7 C. & P. 796: R. v. Hartall, Id. 475: R. v. Wheeler, Id. 170; R. v. Pulham, 9 C. & P. 280.

In indictments for embezzlement, the prosecutor may charge any distinct number of acts of embezzlement, not exceeding three, which may have been committed against the same master within six months inclusive; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 71. The proper course is to charge the several acts in several counts. And in indictments for larceny, it is lawful to insert several counts against the same person for any number of distinct acts of stealing, not exceeding three, which may have been committed by him against the same person within the space of six calendar months from the first to the last of such acts, and to proceed thereon for all or any of them. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 5. And if the larcenies are all charged in one count the indictment will not be quashed; but the prosecutor will be put to elect as to the three takings proved on which he will proceed. R. v. Nicholls, 68 J. P. 452 (C. C. R.). Where under this section the prisoner is charged in the same indictment with more larcenies than one, the indictment ought to aver that the subsequent larcenies were committed within six months of the first larceny charged. So where an indictment contained a charge of stealing on the 13th of February, and another charge of stealing on the 15th of the same month, but did not aver that the larcenies were within six months of each other, Pollock, C.B., put the prosecution to elect on which charge to proceed. R. v. Lonsdale, 4 F. & F. 56. By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 6, if, upon the trial of any indictment for larceny, it shall appear that the property alleged to have been stolen was taken at different times, the prosecutor shall not by reason thereof be required to elect upon which taking he will proceed, unless it shall appear that there were more than three takings, or that more than six calendar months elapsed between the first and the last of such takings; and in either of such last-mentioned cases, the prosecutor shall be required to elect to proceed for such number of takings, not exceeding three, as appear to have taken place within the period of six calender months from the first to the last of such takings. As to indictments where the offence charged is continuous, see R. v. Hinley, 2 Mood. & Rob. 524: R. v. Bleasdale, 2 C. & K. 765, Erle, J.: R. v. Shepherd, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 118: R. v. Firth, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 172: R. v. Henwood, 11 Cox, 526 (C. C. R.).

So, upon an indictment for embezzlement, if the offence upon the evidence appear to be larceny, the jury may acquit the prisoner of the embezzlement, and find him guilty of simple larceny, or of larceny as clerk or servant; or upon an indictment for larceny, if upon the evidence it appear to be embezzlement, the jury may acquit of the larceny, and find the party guilty of the embezzlement. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 72.

In framing an indictment under 46 & 47 Vict. c. 3 (Explosive Substances Act, 1883), it is provided by s. 7, sub-s. 2 of that Act, that the same criminal Act may be charged in different counts as constituting different crimes under that Act, and upon the trial of any such indictment the prosecutor shall not be put to his election as to the count on which he must proceed.

Although a prosecutor is not, in general, permitted to charge a defendant with different felonies in different counts, yet he may charge the same felony in different ways in several counts, in order to meet the facts of the case, or join counts, where they relate to one and the same transaction. R. v. Fussell, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 723, 726; or where the evidence applicable to each is the same. R. v. Basset, 1 Cox, 51: as, for instance, if there be a doubt whether the goods stolen, or the house in which a burglary or larceny was committed, be the goods or house of A. or B., they may be stated in one count as the goods or house of A., and in another as the goods or house of B. See R. v. Egginton, 2 B. & P. 508; 5 R. R. 689; Campbell v. R., 11 Q. B. 799, 812. And the verdict may be taken generally on the whole indictment. R. v. Downing, 1 Den. 52; 2 C. & K. 382. But, inasmuch as the word "felony" is not nomen collectivum (as "misdemeanor" is, see Ryalls v. R., 11 Q. B. 781, 795), if the verdict and judgment in such a case is against the defendant for "the felony aforesaid," it will be bad unless the verdict and judgment are warranted by each count of the indictment. Campbell v. R., 11 Q. B. 799, 814.

The proper course is to enter up the verdict and judgment separately on each count. O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1; Latham v. R., 5 B. & S. 635.

On the abolition of the benefit of clergy in 1827 it was specially provided that the change in the law should not prevent the joinder in any indictment of any counts which might have been joined before the passing of the Act. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 6.

Joinder of counts for felony and misdemeanor.]—The joinder of a count for felony, with a count for misdemeanor, would be held bad on demurrer, or, after a general verdict, on motion in arrest of judgment. Young v. R., 3 T. R. 98, 108; Starkie, Cr. Pl. 43. The reason is that the challenges and the incidents of trial are not the same in felony and misdemeanor, and therefore felony and misdemeanor could not be tried together. Castro v. R., 6 App. Cas. at p. 244: and it is universal practice not to join such counts. But where an indictment contains a count for felony, and also a count for misdemeanor, and the prisoner is convicted of the felony alone, such joinder of counts for felony and misdemeanor furnishes no ground for arresting the judgment. R. v. Ferguson, Dears. 427; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 61: R. v. Jones, 2 Mood. C. C. 94: 8 C. & P. 172. On an indictment for felony the jury can convict of the attempt to commit the felony if the jury are satisfied that the felony was not completed. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9.

Joinder of different misdemeanors.]—Indictments for misdemeanors may contain several counts for different offences, even, as it seems, though the judgments upon each be different. Young v. R., 3 T. R. 98, 105, 106: R. v. Towle, R. & R. 314: 3 Price, 145; 2 Marsh. (C. P.) 466: R. v. Johnson, 3 M. & Sel. 539; 16 R. R. 352: R. v. Kingston, 8 East, 41, 46: and see R. v. Benfield, 2 Burr. 980, 984: R. v. Jones, 2 Camp. 131; Dick. Q. S. 190 n. (t); Pritchard Q. S. (2nd ed.) 151; Starkie's Cr. Pl. 43. Even where several persons were charged in different counts with offences of the same nature, the court held that it was no ground for a demurrer, though it might be for an application to the discretion of the court to quash the indictment. R. v. Kingston, 8 East. 41, 46. Still, if an indictment for misdemeanor contains several counts charging distinct misdemeanors against the defendant committed on totally different occasions and relating to different subject matters, and the presiding judge sees that the accused may be embarrassed in his defence by the number of charges, the probability is that he would either quash the indictment or put the prosecutor to his election upon which charge he would proceed. R. v. Castro, L. R., 5 Q. B. D. 490, 501, 510: Castro v. R., 6 App. Cas. 229, 245; 49 L. J. (Q. B.), 747; 50 L. J. (Q. B.) 497. Though not illegal, it is hardly fair to put a man upon his trial on an indictment containing forty counts, involving several distinct charges of false pretences; for it would be almost impossible that he should not be grievously prejudiced as regards each one of the charges by the evidence which is being given upon the others. In such a case it would not be unreasonable for the defendant to make an application that each count or each set of counts should be taken separately; per Hawkins, J., R. v. King [1897] 1 Q. B. 214, 216: 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 81. If the joinder is embarrassing, the court may put the prosecutor to his election; R. v. Fussell, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 723; Wilde, C. J., Parke, B., and Maule, J.; or, it is said, may quash the indictment. But there is no precedent for the adoption of this course, and on principle it is difficult to see the right of the court to quash a count unless it is bad or illegally found. In R. v. Braun, 9 Cox, 284, Martin, B., on an indictment charging conspiracy and offences against the bankruptcy law, required the prosecution to elect on which set of counts they would go to the jury. Where two defendants were indicted for a conspiracy and a libel, and at the close of the case for the prosecution there was evidence against both as to the conspiracy, but against one only as to the libel, the judge then put the prosecutor to elect upon which charge he would proceed. R. v. Murphy, 8 C. & P. 297. On an indictment for conspiracy to defraud by making false lists of goods destroyed by fire, one set of counts related to a fire in June, 1864, and another to a fire in November, 1864. The prosecution was compelled to elect which charge of conspiracy should be first tried, and to confine the evidence wholly to that in the first instance. R. v. Barry, 4 F. & F. 389. And on an indictment against the manager and secretary of a joint-stock bank containing many counts, some charging that the defendants concurred in publishing false statements of the affairs of the bank, and others that they conspired together to do so, the prosecutors were put to elect on which set of counts they would rely. R. v. Burch, 4 F. & F. 407. Hereon see R. v. Solan, 21 N. Z. L. R. 217, 220. The exercise of the judge's discretion upon this point could not be reviewed by writ of error. R. v. Castro, 5 Q. B. D. 490, 501; 49 L. J. (Q. B.), at p. 752; and although where two separate felonies are charged in separate counts of the same indictment it is almost a matter of course for the judge, upon application, to compel the prosecutor to elect upon which charge he will proceed, it is by no means a matter of course for the judge to put the prosecutor to his election, where two or more separate misdemeanors are charged in different counts in the same indictment. Castro v. R., 6 App. Cas. at pp. 244, 245; 50 L. J. (Q. B.) at pp. 504, 505. If, where there are several counts charging different offences in law, the judgment be entered up generally upon all, that the defendant "for his said offences" be adjudged, etc., and it appears that any count was bad in law, the judgment will be reversed on error. O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1; 11 Cl. & F. 155: 8 Eng. Rep. 155. To prevent this, it is now usual, in cases of misdemeanor, to pronounce and enter up the same judgment separately, on each count of the indictment.

Where a prisoner is indicted for an offence, it is not necessary to add another count for an attempt to commit it; because upon an indictment for felony or misdemeanor, if upon the trial it appear that the defendant merely attempted to commit the offence, but did not complete it, the jury may acquit him of the offence charged, and find him guilty of the attempt. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9 (see post, p. 219). If upon an indictment for obtaining money or goods by false pretences, the offence upon the evidence turn out to be larceny, the defendant notwithstanding may be convicted of the false pretences. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88. So, upon an indictment for any misdemeanor, if the facts given in evidence to prove the misdemeanor amount in law to a felony, the defendant shall not on that account be acquitted of the misdemeanor, unless the court think fit to discharge the jury, and order the defendant to be indicted for the felony. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12. But this provision applies only where the facts given in evidence prove the act charged in the indictment; therefore, where on indictment for misdemeanor in having carnal knowledge of a girl between ten and twelve years of age, under 9 G. 4, c. 31, s. 17 (rep.), the girl was proved to be under ten years of age, and consequently a felony had been committed, it was ruled that the above section did not apply, that the indictment could not be amended under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1 (ante, p. 52), and that the prisoner must be acquitted, and the defendant if acquitted cannot be again tried on the same facts for the offence actually disclosed. R. v. Shott, 3 C. & K. 206, Maule, J.; sed quære, see 2 Taylor Ev. (9th ed.) 1128 n.

In these cases it is unnecessary to prefer a second bill, or to add a second count (where that can be done) for the offence of which the defendant may be thus convicted.

It has been held that the court will not order counts to be struck out of an indictment, because it is the finding of a grand jury, and not the mere suggestion of the party as in a civil pleading. R. v. Pewtress, 2 Str. 1026.

The Caption.

The caption is no part of the indictment. 2 Hale 165: O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1, 35; Arm. & Trevor (Ir.) 41. It is merely a copy of the entry of the style, and commission of the court where the indictment is preferred, and of the proceedings leading up to the finding of the bill (R. v. Martin, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 925, 1091; 12 Ir. L. R. 399), which is prefixed as a kind of preamble to the indictment upon the record, when the record is made up for the purposes of a count of error, or when it is returned to a certiorari. The following is a form of the caption to an indictment in a court of quarter sessions:—

"Westmoreland: Be it remembered that at the general quarter sessions of the peace of our sovereign lord the King, holden at Appleby, in and for the county aforesaid, the —— day of ——, in the —— year of the reign of our sovereign lord Edward the Seventh, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British dominions beyond the seas King, Defender of the Faith, before A. B. and C. D., Esquires, and other their associates, justices of our said lord the King, assigned to keep the peace of our said lord the King in the said county, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors, in the said county committed, by the oath of" [the grand jurors, naming them] "good and lawful men of the county aforesaid, sworn and charged to inquire for our said lord the King, and for the body of the county aforesaid, it is presented, in manner and form as appears by the indictment hereunto annexed."

By the Court,
A. B., Clerk of the Peace.

(See Short & Mellor Cr. Off. Pr. 103, 107: 2 Hale 165: R. v. Fearnley, 1 Leach, 425; 1 T. R. 316; and the forms, 4 Went. 41, 105, 132, 150, 174, 222; 6 Went. 1, 357, 373; 2 Hawk. c. 25, ss. 118, 126, 127, 128; 2 Salk. 605: R. v. Warre, 2 Str. 698. The words "sworn and charged" are not essential. R. v. Martin, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 925, 1091, and cases there cited. See also the form of caption suggested in Short and Mellor Crown Office Practice, p. 704.)

In R. v. McKeever [1871] Ir. Rep., 5 C. L. 86, a caption describing a session as held before "A. B., Esq., deputy chairman" of Quarter Sessions, was held sufficient.

A proper caption should show that the court of trial had jurisdiction, and that the indictment was found by a sufficient number of grand jurors. It has been usual to insert the names of twelve grand jurors at the least in the caption, and Hale says that this is necessary; for it may be that the presentment was by a less number than twelve, in which case it is not good; 2 Hale, 167; but in Aylett v. R., 3 Bro. P. C. 529; 1 Eng. Rep. 1479; 6 A. & E. 247, n., where it was objected upon error that the caption did not contain the names of any of the jurors, the House of Lords, after consulting the judges, affirmed the judgment of the court of King's Bench, that this was not essential; and in R. v. Marsh, 6 A. & E. 236, Denman, L.C.J., agreed that the insertion of the names is not necessary. See also R. v. Darley, 4 East, 174, 176, n.: R. v. Davis, 1 C. & P. 470. The caption ought to state them to be jurors of the county; Whitehead v. R., 7 Q. B. 582. It should also state them to be good and lawful men (probi et legales homines), Id., 2 Hale, 167, and early cases collected in Huband, Grand Jury (Ir.), 201, 202. But the court will presume them to be so even if the statement is not made. Mansell v. R., 8 St. Tr., N. S. 831; 8 E. & B. 54; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 4; and see Martin v. R., 6 St. Tr., N. S. 925; 12 Ir. L. R. 399. No objection can be sustained to the caption of an indictment for an allegation that the grand jurors were "sworn and affirmed," without showing that those who were sworn were persons who ought to have been affirmed, or that those who were affirmed were persons who ought to have been sworn. Mulcahy v. R., L. R. 3 H. L. 306, 322: Ir. Rep. 1 C. L. 13. As to the mode of rectifying a mistake in the caption, see R. v. Justices of Middlesex, 5 B. & Ad. 1113, and R. v. Marsh, ubi supra.

The caption if erroneously drawn up may be amended. R. v. Darley, ubi supra: R. v. Davis, ubi supra: Faulkner's case, 1 Wms. Saunders (6th ed.), 248.

There is, it would seem, only one original general caption for the whole sessions. R. v. Marsh, 6 A. & E. 236, 249, Williams, J., Coleridge, J. Objection may be taken to the caption by demurrer; R. v. Fearnley, 1 T. R. 316; or by writ of error, whether the error be of fact or law. R. v. Marsh, ubi supra, at 243, Denman, L.C.J.: R. v. McKeever [1871]. Ir. Rep. 5 C. L. 86.

Sect. 7.

WITHIN WHAT TIME THE BILL MUST BE PREFERRED.

At common law, there is no time limited for commencing a suit by the King; and therefore, in all cases of treason, felony, and misdemeanor, where a time is not limited by statute, the indictment may be preferred at any length of time after the offence. In the case of offences punishable summarily, even where the accused may elect to be tried on indictment, the summary proceedings must be instituted within six months of the offence, unless it is a continuing offence: London County Council v. Worley [1894] 2 Q. B. 826; or unless another limitation is given by statute for the particular prosecution. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 11; see Douglas, Summary Jurisdiction Procedure (8th ed.), pp. 52–59. In criminal cases within the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, the laying of the information is the commencement of the prosecution; Beardsley v. Giddings [1904] 1 K. B. 847: Brooks v. Bayshaw [1904] 68 J. P. 514: R. v. Priestley [1886] 49 J. P. 148;

but quære when though the information is laid before process is granted after the expiration of the time limited. The oldest authorities seem to treat the arrest as the commencement of the prosecution at common law; 2 Hale, 72; but under the different statutes creating limitations (stated below) there have been somewhat varying interpretations of what constituted the commencement of the prosecution.

The following are the chief statutory limitations on the prosecution of indictable offences:—

Treason.]—Indictments for such high treasons as caused corruption of blood (with the exception of treason, by "designing, endeavouring, or attempting any assassination on the body of the King by poison, or otherwise" (7 & 8 W. 3, c. 3, s. 6), must be found by the grand jury within three years next after the offence committed, if the offence have been committed within England, Wales, Berwick-upon-Tweed (7 & 8 W. 3, c. 3, s. 5), or Scotland (see 7 Anne, c. 21, Fost. 249); but if committed on the high seas or in a foreign country, there is no time limited for the prosecution.

Blasphemy.]—An "information" for blasphemy by words spoken must be laid within four days of the speaking, and the prosecution must be within three months of the information. 9 W. 3, c. 35 (9 & 10 W. 3, c. 32, Ruffhead), s. 2; cf. 19 G. 2, c. 21, s. 12, as to profane swearing.

Riot.]—Prosecutions for offences against the Riot Act (1 G. 1, st. 2, c. 5) must be commenced within twelve months after the offence committed (s. 8).

Unlawful drilling.]—Prosecutions under the Unlawful Drilling Act, 1820 (60 G. 3 & 1 G. 4, c. 1), must be "commenced within six calendar months after the offence committed" (s. 7).

Night poaching.]—Prosecutions by indictment under the Night Poaching Act, 1828, must be "commenced within twelve calendar months after the commission of the offence." 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 4. For the cases hereon see post, p. 97.

Revenue offences.]—"Indictments, or informations brought or exhibited for any offence against the Customs Acts, in any court or before any justice, shall be brought or exhibited within three years next after the date of the offence committed." 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 257. See R. v. Thompson, 16 Q. B. 832; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 183; 5 Cox, 166, on the similar provisions of a repealed Customs Act.

Penal statutes.]—All indictments or informations upon any penal statute, whereby the forfeiture is limited to the King, must be brought within two years after the offence committed; if the forfeiture be limited to the King and prosecutor, the suit must be in one year; and in default thereof, the same must be sued for by the King within two years after that year ended; but where a statute limits a shorter time, the suit must be brought within such time limited. 31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 5. As to informations instituting summary proceedings, this Act is repealed by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 36.

Charges against officials.]—Prosecutions for "any act done in pursuance, or execution, or intended execution, of any Act of Parliament, or of any public duty or authority, or in respect of any alleged neglect or default in the execution of any such act, duty, or authority, shall not lie or be instituted unless commenced within six months next after the act, neglect, or default complained of, or "in case of a continuance of injury or damage" (e.g., in case of a public nuisance) "within six months next after the ceasing thereof." 56 & 57 Vict. c. 61, s. 1 (a). This Act expressly or impliedly repeals the particular limitation clauses in prior public general Acts. See s. 2, Schedule.

Corrupt or illegal practices.]—A proceeding against a person in respect of the offence of a corrupt or illegal practice or any other offence at parliamentary elections must be commenced within one year after the offence was committed, or if it was committed in reference to an election with respect to which an inquiry is held by election commissioners must be commenced within one year after the offence was committed, or within three months after the report of such commissioners is made, whichever period last expires, so that it be commenced within two years after the offence was committed. The issue of a summons, warrant, writ, or other process, shall be deemed to be a commencement of a proceeding, where the service or execution of the same on or against the alleged offender is prevented by the absconding or concealment or act of the alleged offender; but save as aforesaid the service or execution of the same on or against the alleged offender, and not the issue thereof, shall be deemed to be the commencement of the proceeding. 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51, s. 51. The same period of limitation applies to proceedings for similar offences at municipal elections, as the above section is incorporated in the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 70), by sect. 30 of the later Act; and it also applies to municipal elections in the city of London, 47 & 48 Vict. c. 70, s. 35; and to offences in connection with elections for county councils (51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 75), district or parish councils and boards of guardians (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, s. 48), and metropolitan boroughs (62 & 63 Vict. c. 14).

Offences against girls.]—Prosecutions for the offences of unlawfully and carnally knowing, or attempting to have unlawful carnal knowledge, of any girl being of or above the age of thirteen years and under the age of sixteen years, must be commenced not more than six months after the commission of the offence. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 5: as amended by 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 27. Commencement of a prosecution for rape within the six months is sufficient though in the result the accused is indicted and convicted under this section. R. v. West [1898] 1 Q. B. C. 174. 18 Cox, 675 (C. C. R.).

Registration of births and deaths.]—A prosecution on indictment for an offence under the Births and Deaths Registration Act, 1874, must be commenced within three years after the commission of such offence. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 88, s. 46.

Marriages.]—Prosecutions for the felony of unduly solemnizing marriage must be commenced "within the space of three years after the offence committed." 4 G. 4, c. 76, s. 21. A like limitation applies to prosecutions for offences under the Marriage Act, 1836 (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 41). Perjury under the Marriage Act, 1840 (3 & 4 Vict. c. 72), s. 4, must be prosecuted before "the expiration of eighteen calendar months from the solemnization of such marriage."

Merchandise Marks.]—No prosecution for an offence against the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887, shall be commenced after the expiration of three years next after the commission of the offence, or of one year next after the first discovery thereof by the prosecutor, whichever expiration first happens. 50 & 51 Vict. c. 28, s. 15.

Commencement of prosecution.]—The commencement of prosecution is the preferring of the indictment or laying of the information. The time is calculated by excluding the day on which the offence is said to have been committed, and including the day on which the prosecution begins. Pellew v. Inhabitants of East Wonford, 9 B. & C. 134: Williams v. Burgess, 12 A. & E. 635: Radcliffe v. Bartholomew [1892] 1 Q. B. 161: 61 L. J. (M. C.) 63. Sundays are included in computing the time unless expressly excluded. R. v. Middlesex Justices, 2 Dowl. (N. S.) 719, 724: Maxwell on Statutes (3rd ed.), 490. In Acts passed since 1850 "month" means calendar month. 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 3.

In R. v. Willace, 1 East, P. C. 186, it was held, upon the repealed statutes relating to coin, that the information and proceeding before the magistrate, upon the defendant's being taken, was to be deemed the "commencement of the prosecution" within the meaning of those Acts. Proof by parol that the prisoner was apprehended for high treason respecting the coin, within three months after the commission of an offence for high treason against the coin within 8 & 9 W. 3, c. 26, s. 1 (rep.), was held insufficient, where the indictment was after the three months, and the warrants to apprehend and to commit and the depositions taken before the justices were not produced. R. v. Phillips, R. & R. 369. The head note in this case seems to be inaccurate. See R. v. Jack, 6 Queensland L. J. 60, 63, Griffith, C.J.

The provisions of the Night Poaching Act, 1828 (9 G. 4, c. 69), s. 4, are satisfied if information is laid and warrant is issued and executed within the year. R. v. Brooks, 1 Den. 217; C. & K. 402; 2 Cox, 436. So, where the warrant of commitment for the offence was within the time limited, but the indictment not till afterwards, this was held sufficient. R. v. Austin, 1 C. & K. 621. The mere issuing of a warrant to apprehend the defendant has been held not to be a commencement of the prosecution, within 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 4, unless it be shown to have been executed within the time limited for the commencement of the prosecution. R. v. Hull, 2 F. & F. 16: R. v. Casbolt, 11 Cox, 385. And proof of the existence of a warrant to apprehend the defendants is not evidence of the commencement of such a prosecution, although the warrant was issued within the twelve months prescribed by that section, and although it recites the laying of the information. The information itself must be given in evidence. R. v. Parker, L. & C. 459; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 135. Where a man was indicted in 1869 for night poaching alleged to have been committed in 1863, and pleaded guilty, he was allowed to withdraw that plea and to plead not guilty, and an acquittal was directed on failure to produce an information and warrant showing that the prosecution had been commenced within twelve calendar months. R. v. Casbolt, 11 Cox, 385. In R. v. Killminster, 7 C. & P. 228, an indictment for night poaching was preferred against the defendant within twelve months after the commission of the offence, and was ignored; four years afterwards another bill was found against him for the same offence, and upon an objection that the proceeding was out of time, Coleridge, J., doubted whether the first indictment was not a proceeding sufficient to entitle prosecutor to proceed: he reserved the point, but the defendant was acquitted upon the merits. See also Adam v. Bristol Inhabitants, 2 A. & E. 389; S. C. sub nom. Sarah Till Adam, etc., 4 N. & M. 144; 4 L. J. (K. B.) 35.

Sect. 8.

INDICTMENT, HOW FOUND.

In ordinary cases, upon furnishing the clerk of assize, clerk of arraigns, or clerk of the indictments at the assizes, or the clerk of the peace at sessions, with the particulars of the offence, he will draw the indictment; but in cases where more than ordinary care may be requisite in framing the indictment, it is better to get it drawn by counsel, and then let it be engrossed on plain parchment, without stamp. Indorse on it the names of the witnesses intended to be examined before the grand jury.

"No clerk of assize, clerk of the peace or other person whatsoever . . . shall demand or receive more than two shillings for the drawing of any bill of indictment," against any felon against whom witnesses have been bound by recognizance to appear before a court of assize. 10 W. 3, c. 12 (c. 23, Ruffhead), s. 7. "If any clerk of assize, clerk of the crown, clerk of the peace, clerk of the indictments, or other proper office or their clerks or deputies, shall draw any bill of indictment defective, they shall draw new bills without demanding any fee or reward whatsoever, or forfeit the sum of £5 with full costs of suit" (Id. s. 8).

The grand jurors are summoned by the sheriff, or if he is disqualified for any cause, by the coroner. See R. v. McGuire [1898] 34 New Brunswick 430, and as to objections to the grand jurors, post, p. 101.

The grand jurors must be sworn or affirmed before they can find a bill of indictment laid before them. The form of oath as administered to the foreman is as follows:

"You, as foreman of the grand inquest for our Sovereign lord, the King, for the body of this county of ——, shall diligently enquire and true presentment make of all such matters and things as shall be given you in charge, or shall otherwise come to your knowledge touching this present service. The King's counsel, your fellows' and your own you shall observe and keep secret: you shall present no one through envy, hatred or malice: neither shall you leave any one unpresented through fear, favour or affection, gain, reward, or the hope thereof: but you shall present all things truly and indifferently as they shall come to your knowledge, according to the best of your skill and understanding. So help you God." (See 2 Hale, 161).

The other jurors take a similar oath. When all the grand jurors are sworn they are charged by the presiding judge as to the bills of indictment to be sent before them and advised as to whether the evidence (as disclosed by the depositions taken before the committing magistrates) is such as to constitute a primâ facie case against the accused: but they are entitled to exercise their own discretion on each bill when it comes before them. After being charged they retire to the grand jury chamber to consider the bills. As a general rule the solicitor for the prosecution is not admitted to the chamber: but at the Central Criminal Court the solicitor is admitted in very difficult or complicated cases, by written order of the clerk of the court (Rules, Dec. 12, 1892, r. 6).

It has always been usual in England to swear the witnesses to be called before the grand jury: R. v. Dickinson, R. & R. 401. In Ireland they were neither sworn nor examined until 1816 (56 G. 3, c. 87).

At common law it was necessary that some officer of the court (which term includes the crier), after the indictment was engrossed (R. v. Tew, Dears. 429; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 62) should administer the oath to the witnesses in open court, and then the indictment was laid by the proper officer before the grand jury. The Grand Jury Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict.

c. 54) dispensed with the swearing of the witnesses in open court (s. 2). Under that Act the "foreman" of the grand jury, or any other member of the grand jury who may for the time being act on behalf of the foreman in the examination of witnesses in support of any bill or indictment (s. 3), is authorised and required to administer an oath (or an affirmation, where by law it is required or allowed to be taken in lieu of an oath (s. 3) to all persons who appear before the grand jury to give evidence in support of any bill of indictment, and all such persons, attending before any grand jury to give evidence, may be sworn and examined upon oath by the grand jury touching the matters in question. The name of every witness examined or intended to be so examined shall be indorsed on the bill of indictment, and the foreman of the grand jury shall write his initials against the name of each witness so sworn and examined touching such bill of indictment. The Act does not affect the fees by law payable to any officer of any court for swearing witnesses. Similar provisions are made as to Ireland by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 37, which repealed 56 G. 3, c. 87. It would seem that the enactments as to endorsing the names of the witnesses and initialling the names of those sworn before the grand jury are directory only. O'Connell v. R., 11 Cl. & F. 155, 405; 8 Eng. Rep., 155, 404; 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1, 899, Lord Campbell: R. v. Townsend, 28 Nova Scotia, 468: R. v. Buchanan, 12 Manitoba, 190, 193.

It used to be held that two indictments founded on the same facts, one for capital felony under a statute, and another for a misdemeanor at common law, ought not to be preferred at the same time. See R. v. Doran (1790), 1 Leach, 538: R. v. Smith, 3 C. & P. 412: R. v. Flower, Id. 413, and it was usual to grant one indictment as to put the prosecutor to his election upon which indictment he would proceed. But if this course were not taken no objection or arrest of judgment could be taken after verdict. Young v. R., 3 T. R. 98, 106, Buller, J. But the High Court will not quash them if found. R. v. Stockley, 3 Q. B. 238; 11 L. J. (M. C.) 105. And it is now common practice to send up two indictments, where on the facts it is not clear whether a felony or a misdemeanor has been committed.

Indictments for offences within the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859 (22 & 23 Vict. c. 17), must not be sent before the jury unless the procedure prescribed by the statutes (ante, p. 7) has been followed; and, if presented or found in contravention of the statutes, may be quashed. See post, p. 120.

After the indictment has been taken to the grand jury-room, it comes under the consideration of the grand jury in its turn. The witnesses for the prosecution are then called in, in the order in which their names are indorsed on the indictment, and are sworn and examined by the grand jury. Refusal to be sworn is punishable as contempt of court. R. v. Lord Preston, 12 St. Tr. 645; and if there should appear to a majority of the jury (consisting of twelve at least) "probable evidence" of the offence charged (2 Hale, 157), the clerk of the grand jury will indorse on the indictment, "True Bill;" but if the majority should be of opinion that the offence has not been sufficiently proved, the words "No true bill" are in that case indorsed on the indictment. Afterwards, the foreman, accompanied by the other grand jurors, carries the indictments so indorsed into court, and delivers them to the clerk of arraigns or the court, who thereupon states to the court the substance of each, and the indorsement upon it. In strict legal parlance, an indictment is not so called, until it has been found a "true bill" by the grand jury; before that it is named a "bill of indictment" merely.

The grand jury may present an indictment on their own knowledge, nor can any inquiry be made as to whether witnesses were properly sworn before them (see form of oath, ante, p. 98, R. v. Russell, C. & Mar. 247: R. v. Bullard, 12 Cox, 353): but they may if they think fit require the same evidence, written and parol, as may be necessary to support the indictment at the trial. They are not, however, usually very strict as to the documentary evidence; they often admit copies where the originals alone are evidence; and sometimes even evidence by parol of a matter which should be proved by written evidence. But as they may insist on the same strictness of proof as must be observed at the trial, it is prudent in all cases to be provided, at the time the bill is preferred, with the same evidence with which you intend afterwards to support the indictment. In R. v. Clements, 2 Den. 251; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 193 (C. C. R.), the deposition of the prosecutrix, which had been allowed by the judge to be read in evidence before the grand jury after a statement by counsel for the prosecution that she was so ill as to be unable to travel, that the deposition had been taken by the magistrate in the presence of the prisoners, who had an opportunity for cross-examination, and was signed by the prosecutrix and the magistrate, and that witnesses to prove all the above facts were in attendance, was held to have been rightly so read; but the point as to whether evidence on oath should have been first given does not seem to have been raised. In R. v. Philip, 1 F. & F. 105, Erle, J., the evidence of a medical man was held necessary as a condition precedent to the deposition being read before the grand jury (cf. R. v. Wilson, 12 Cox, 622, Lush, J.). And in R. v. Beaver, 10 Cox, 274, Byles, J., held that this could not be done unless the presiding judge has, by evidence taken in the presence of the accused, satisfied himself of the existence of the facts required by s. 17 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, to make the deposition admissible. But this decision is adversely criticised in a note (at p. 275), and in a subsequent case, R. v. Bullard, 12 Cox, 353, the same judge, on the foreman of the grand jury coming into court and asking for the deposition of an absent witness, without whose evidence they had no material to find the bill, granted the application, without any proof that the deposition was admissible as evidence under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17, observing that the grand jury were not bound by any rules of evidence, that they were a secret tribunal, and might lay by the heels in gaol the most powerful man in the country by finding a bill against him, and for that purpose might even read a paragraph from a newspaper. So in R. v. Gerrans, 13 Cox, 158, where it was stated by counsel for the prosecution that a witness was unable to attend the trial through illness, Denman, J., permitted his deposition to be presented to the grand jury without any preliminary proof that the witness was ill, or that his deposition had been regularly taken, and directed that the grand jury should be told that the court permitted them to look at the deposition, and to act upon it if they thought proper. And in R. v. Lynch (K. B. D. 19, Dec., 1902) Lord Alverstone, L.C.J., allowed the deposition of a witness absent through illness to be read before the grand jury without requiring to hear evidence as to his condition, stating that such evidence was unnecessary.

Where a witness refuses to give evidence before the grand jury, they cannot use his deposition as evidence to enable them to find the bill. R. v. Rendle, 11 Cox, 209, Channell, B.

An improper mode of swearing the witnesses before the grand jury will not vitiate the indictment. R. v. Russell, C. & Mar. 247. See O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1: 11 Cl. & F. 155; 8 Eng. Rep. 155. A witness who gives false evidence before a grand jury is indictable for perjury (19 & 20 Vict. c. 54, s. 1), and the other witnesses examined on the same bill are good witnesses to prove it. R. v. Hughes, 1 C. & K. 519; but a grand juror is not an admissible witness in such a case: Id.; and see R. v. Marsh, 6 A. & E. 236, 237.

If witnesses will not come forward voluntarily to give evidence before the grand jury, you may sue out a subpœna or subpœna duces tecum, either at the crown office in London, or with the clerk of the arraigns in the country, for the assizes, or with the clerk of the peace for the sessions, and serve each of them with a copy, or subpœna ticket, as it is termed. Or, if the witness be in prison, he may, if in civil custody, be brought up by hab. corp. ad testificandum, if in criminal custody, he may be brought up by an order from a judge, under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 9: and whether in civil or criminal custody under an order of a secretary of state, under s. 11 of the Prison Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 41). (See Book I., Part II., chap. ii. sect. 5, par. 6, post.)

The grand jury have nothing to do with the defence (2 Hale, 157) and are not entitled to hear the evidence of the defendant, nor of his witnesses under the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 36). R. v. Rhodes [1899] 1 Q. B. 77. Nor is it their business to inquire into the sanity of the accused, which is for a petty jury to determine: nor have they any authority to ignore a bill on the ground of insanity. R. v. Hodges, 8 C. & P. 195.

Qualification.]—Grand jurors must be probi et legales homines, and ought to be of the same county where the crime was committed. A grand juror at common law must not be an alien or an outlaw; he must be returned by the proper officer, and not at the instance of the prosecutor. Bacon, Abr. III., Juries A., 725.

The grand jurors of county sessions of the peace must be qualified under s. 1 of the Juries Act, 1825 (6 Geo. 4, c. 50) (post, p. 192). In quarter-session boroughs every burgess may be a grand juror unless exempt or disqualified (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 186, sub-s. 1). Grand jurors at assizes need not be freeholders, Anon. R. & R. 177. British peers are not, but an Irish peer, who is a member of the House of Commons, is liable to serve upon the grand jury at the assizes. Lord Headley's case (1806), R. & R. 117. No man who has been or shall be attainted of any treason or felony, or convicted of any crime that is infamous, unless he shall have obtained a free pardon, nor any man who is under outlawry, is or shall be qualified to serve on juries or inquests in any court or on any occasion whatsoever." 33 & 34 Vict. c. 77, s. 10. Since the abolition of attainder (33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 1) and repeal of statutes referring to infamous crimes, it is difficult to say whom this s. disqualifies. But see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 46.

Objections to Grand Jurors.]—In Ireland it has been held that the proper mode of objecting to a grand juror is by plea in abatement and not by challenge. R. v. Sheridan, 31 St. Tr. 543. In England it is not clear that the objection would not be taken by way of challenge: 2 Hale, 155; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 16; R. v. Lewis, 7 St. Tr. 250; R. v. Sheares, 27 St. Tr. 255, 267; 8 Rep. C. L. Commrs., 1841, c. 2, art. 15. It may also be taken in arrest of judgment: R. v. Jackson, 25 St. Tr. 885.

Finding the Bill.]—The bill must be found by a majority of the jurors, and that majority must consist of twelve at least; 2 Hale, 161; R. v. Clynard, Cro. Eliz. 654; for which reason it is that the number of persons on the grand jury by inveterate practice never exceeds twenty-three, nor is less than twelve; 2 Burr. 1088, n.: R. v. Marsh, 6 A. & E., 236, 241, Denman, L.C.J.; 6 L. J. (M. C.) 153.

The finding must be indorsed on the indictment, and is "parcel of the indictment and the perfection of it," and "touches it principally, for it is the life of it." R. v. Ford, Yelv. 99. And the bill as found must be delivered in open court; R. v. Thompson, 1 Cox, 268; and it should be signed by the foreman; but absence of the signature is not fatal if the bill was delivered by the foreman in open court and read in his presence. R. v. Sidoli, 1 Lewin, 55.

It is said that the grand jury cannot find billa vera as to part, and ignoramus as to the other part of an indictment; for they ought to find the whole or nothing. 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 2: R. v. Ford, Yelv. 99: R. v. Serjant, 1 Sid. 414. Thus, if upon an indictment for libel, they find "quoad the words billa vera," "sed utrum malitiose ignoramus," the finding is void. 1 Leon, 287. But this has reference only to the same count in the indictment: for it is clear that they may find billa vera as to one count, and ignoramus to another. R. v. Fieldhouse, 1 Cowp. 325. They cannot, however, find the bill conditionally; as, for instance, "si messuagium sit in possessione domini regis, tunc billa vera." R. v. Lord Cromwell, Yelv. 15. Upon an indictment for murder against A. and B., the grand jury found billa vera as to A., and as to B., manslaughter only. The court, after holding that such a finding was possible, decided that the best course was to proceed on the indictment so far as it found murder, and to have a new indictment on the manslaughter charge. R. v. Carew, 3 Bulstr. 206; 1 Rolle Rep. 407. In R. v. Bubb, 4 Cox, 455, 457, a similar finding was on the authority of the case above cited, and 1 Chit. Cr. L. 322, treated as good for the murder and nugatory as to the manslaughter. And they may find billa vera as to A., and ignoramus as to B.; R. v. Cholmley, Cro. Car. 464; or they may find bills against one or both of them for manslaughter, although, in such a case, it is more usual for the grand jury to return the indictment to the court, with a desire that it may be altered to a bill for manslaughter, and, when so altered (which may readily be done), to find a true bill generally. Upon an indictment for murder, however, the jury even under the old law could not find billa vera se defendendo. R. v. Powle, 2 Rolle Rep. 52. Nor can they do so now, as such a finding would be practically a finding of no offence. See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 7.

Since 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38 (post, p. 126) the grand jurors of the sessions can find bills which the sessions have no jurisdiction to try. R. v. Allum, 2 Cox, 62, Parke, B.; R. v. Atkinson, 1 Wms. Saund. (6th ed.) 249, note 1. Prior to that Act the contrary was held. R. v. Rigby [1839] 8 C. & P., 770: R. v. Bainton, 2 Str. 1088. Where such a bill is found the proper course is to transmit it to the assizes for trial, or for the judge of assize to remove it to his court by certiorari under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 2 (see post, p. 129). See R. v. Wildman, 12 Cox, 354; Keating, J. For form of order to transmit, see Archbold, Q. S. (5th ed.) 238; Pritchard, Q. S. (2nd ed.).

Indictments found at the sessions, and transmitted by the justices to the assizes, must be tried at the assizes, although they be not removed by certiorari. R. v. Wetherell, R. & R. 381. The power of the justices at quarter sessions to remit indictments found there for trial at the assizes is not affected by 52 & 53 Vict. c. 12 (Assizes Relief Act, 1889): see s. 5 of that statute. Such transmission is, however, a matter in the discretion of the justices, and the judge of assize has no power to order it, even although the defendant may, after the finding of the indictment at sessions, have been bound by recognizance to appear and plead to it at the assizes. R. v. Wildman, ubi supra.

Although the grand jury have been formally discharged, yet if they have not left the precincts of the court, nor separated, they may be recalled and charged with other bills. R. v. Holloway, 9 C. & P. 43.

If a bill is thrown out, it can be preferred to the same grand jury during the same assizes or sessions. R. v. Simmonite, 1 Cox, 30, Wightman, J.: R. v. Newton, 2 M. & Rob. 503, Wightman, J. There are, however, authorities to the contrary; R. v. Humphreys, C. & Mar. 601, Patteson, J.: R. v. Austin, 4 Cox, 385; and it is not proper to do so unless new evidence is available. A fresh bill may, however, be preferred and found at the next assizes or sessions if no time be limited for preferring it, or if the time have not elapsed. It is usual to detain a prisoner a bill against whom is ignored until the grand jury are discharged to see whether any other bill will be sent up and found against him. See R. v. Simmonite, ubi supra.

The grand jury are not liable to action or prosecution for anything done by them with reference to finding a bill of indictment. Floyd v. Barker, 12 Co. Rep. 23: Earl of Macclesfield v. Starkey, 10 St. Tr., 1329, 1413.

And evidence by grand jurors as to what passed in the grand jury room will not be received. R. v. Marsh, 6 A. & E. 236, 237.

Sect. 9.

Process, after Indictment found, to compel Appearance of the Accused.

Proceedings by writ.]—If a defendant against whom an indictment has been found is present in court, or in the custody of the court, he may at once be arraigned upon the indictment, without any previous process. 2 Hawk. c. 27; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 338. Where the defendant is in the custody of another court, the court is to remove him by habeas corpus ad respondendum, and bring him up to plead. "Where recognizances shall have been entered into for the appearance of any person to take his trial for any offence at any court of criminal jurisdiction, and a bill of indictment shall be found against him, and such person shall be then in the prison belonging to the jurisdiction of such court, under warrant of commitment, or under sentence for some other offence, it shall be lawful for the court, by order in writing, to direct the governor of the said prison to bring up the body of such person, in order that he may be arraigned upon such indictment without writ of habeas corpus, and the said governor shall thereupon obey such order." 30 & 31 Vict. c. 35, s. 10. The attendance of the prisoner can also, it would seem, be obtained under a secretary of state's order. 61 & 62 Vict. c. 41, s. 11. Where a prisoner after his committal for trial, but before trial had been removed to a lunatic asylum by warrant from the secretary of state, under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 29 (rep.), whether he is or is not under recognizance to appear he could be brought up for trial by a habeas corpus issued by the judge of assize. R. v. Peacock, 12 Cox, 21, Brett, J. But it is doubtful whether this power exists in the case of a warrant of the secretary of state, issued under s. 2 of the Criminal Lunatics Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 64). See Ex parte Collins (Q. B. D. Feb. 16, 1899); 34 L. J. Newsp., 132; 43 Sol. Journ. 280.

When an indictment for a misdemeanor has been found, a writ of venire facias ad respondendum may be issued either by the King's Bench Division, a judge of assize, or a court of quarter sessions. Com. Dig. Process, A. 1; 5 Edw. 3, c. 11. On default in appearance a writ of distringas may be issued.

In the case of indictments in the High Court against the inhabitants of a county, parish, or district, or against a corporation aggregate, writs of venire facias and distringas are issued to compel appearance. Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 98. When the indictment is found in or removed to the High Court, the proper procedure in the case of defendants not parties to the removal, nor bound by recognizances to answer, is by issue of a writ of venire facias, or in the case of an information to issue a subpœna to answer, or venire facias: r. 94. If the defendant does not appear within four days of the return day specified in a subpœna he may be attached; r. 95. If he does not appear within four days of a return by the sheriff to a venire facias the prosecutor may issue a writ of distringas: r. 96. And if default in appearance is made after execution of the distringas the prosecutor may sue out a capias ad respondendum: r. 98.

The form of a writ of venire facias is as follows:—

Edward, etc., to the sheriff of ——, greeting. We command you that you cause to come before us in [the King's Bench Division of our High Court of Justice at the Royal Courts of Justice, London] on the —— day of ——, A. B. to answer to us for certain misdemeanors whereof he is indicted: and have you there then this writ. Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, form 52). Witness, etc.

This writ was issued by ——.

The form of a distringas is as follows:—

Edward, etc., to the sheriff of the county of ——, greeting. We command you that you omit not by reason of any liberty in your bailiwick, but that you enter the same, and distrain A. B., of ——, in your county [yeoman], by all his lands and tenements, etc., and that you answer for the issues thereof, etc.; and that you have his body before our justices assigned to keep our peace, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses and other misdemeanors in the said county committed, at —— in your said county, on the —— day of —— next ensuing, to answer unto us concerning divers trespasses, contempts and offences of which he is indicted [or, to answer unto us, upon certain articles presented against him the said A. B.] and have you there then this writ. Witness C. D. and E. F. [two justices of the peace] at ——, the —— day of ——, in the —— year of our reign.

If the defendant appears to the writ of distringas, a supersedeas may be obtained, either to stay the execution of the writ, or to procure a return of the amount levied. Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 115, and form 171: Bac. Abr. tit. Attorney, B. But if the defendant fails to appear within the time limited, and the sheriff makes a return that he has no lands, a writ of capias ad respondendum may be issued, and if he cannot be taken upon the first capias, second and third writs of capias called alias and pluries, may issue. 4 Bl. Com. 389: as to the duties and power of the sheriff see Bengough v. Rossiter, 4 T. R. 506; 2 H. Bl. 419. R. v. Yandell, 4 T. R. 521. Upon an indictment for felony a writ of capias is issued in the first instance; but this mode of proceeding is now rarely adopted, except as a step towards outlawry. See post, p. 109.

The following is the form of the writ of capias:—

Edward, etc., to the sheriff of the county of ——, greeting. We command you that you omit not by reason of any liberty in your bailiwick, but that you enter the same, and take A. B., of ——, in your county [labourer], if he should be found in your bailiwick, and him cause to be safely kept, so that you have his body before our justices assigned to keep our peace, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses and other misdemeanors in the said county committed at —— in your county, on the —— day of —— next ensuing, to answer unto us concerning divers trespasses, contempts, and of which he is indicted, and have you there then this writ. Witness C. D. and E. F. [two justices of the peace] at ——, the —— day of ——, in the —— year of our reign.

If the proceedings above fail the prosecutor can proceed to outlawry, post, p. 109.

Proceeding by warrant of a justice.]—Proceedings in ordinary cases are regulated by s. 3 of the Indictable Offences Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 42), by which it is provided that "where any indictment shall be found by the grand jury in any court of oyer and terminer or general gaol delivery, or in any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace, against any person who shall then be at large, and whether such person shall have been bound by any recognizance to appear to answer to the same or not, the person who shall act as clerk of the indictments at such court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, or as clerk of the peace at such sessions at which the said indictment shall be found, shall at any time afterwards, after the end of the sessions of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery or sessions of the peace at which such indictment shall have been found, upon application of the prosecutor, or of any person on his behalf, and on payment of a fee of one shilling, if such person shall not have already appeared and pleaded to such indictment, grant unto such prosecutor or person a certificate (infra) of such indictment having been found; and upon production of such certificate to any justice or justices of the peace for any county, riding, division, liberty, city, borough, or place in which the offence shall in such indictment be alleged to have been committed, or in which the person indicted in and by such indictment shall reside or be, or be supposed or suspected to reside or be, it shall be lawful for such justice or justices, and he and they are hereby required to issue his or their warrant (see infra) to apprehend such person so indicted, and to cause him to be brought before such justice or justices, or any other justice or justices for the same county, riding, division, liberty, city, borough, or place, to be dealt with according to law; and afterwards, if such person be thereupon apprehended and brought before any such justice or justices, such justice or justices, upon its being proved upon oath or affirmation before him or them that the person so apprehended is the same person who is charged and named in such indictment shall, without further inquiry or examination, commit (see infra) him for trial, or admit him to bail, in manner hereinafter mentioned. . . ." (See BAIL, post, p. 110).

The forms scheduled to the Indictable Offences Act, 1848, are as follows:—

(F)

Form of certificate of indictment being found.]—I hereby certify that at [a court of oyer and terminer and general gaol delivery, or a court of general quarter sessions of the peace], holden in and for the [county] of ——, at ——, in the said [county], on —— a bill of indictment was found by the grand jury against A. B., therein described as A. B., late of —— [labourer], for that he [etc., stating shortly the offence], and that the said A. B. hath not appeared or pleaded to the said indictment. Dated this —— day of ——, 190 .

J. D., clerk of the indictments on the —— circuit, [or clerk of the peace of and for the said [county]].

(G)

Form of warrant to apprehend a person indicted.]—To the constable of ——, and to all other peace officers in the said [county] of ——. Whereas it hath been duly certified by J. D., clerk of the indictments on the —— circuit [or clerk of the peace of and for the [county] of ——] [that, etc., stating the certificate]: These are therefore to command you, in his Majesty's name, forthwith to apprehend the said A. B., and to bring him before [me], or some other justice or justices of the peace in and for the said [county], to be dealt with according to law. Given under my hand and seal this —— day of ——, in the year of our Lord ——, at ——, in the [county] aforesaid.

J. S. (L.S.)

(H)

Form of warrant of commitment of a person indicted.]—To the constable of ——, and to the keeper of the [common gaol or house of correction], at ——, in the said [county] of ——. Whereas by [my] warrant under [my] hand and seal, dated the —— day of ——, after reciting that it had been certified by J. D. [etc., as in the certificate], [I] commanded the constable of —— and all other peace officers of the said county, in his Majesty's name, forthwith to apprehend the said A. B., and to bring him before [me], the undersigned, [one] of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said [county]; or before some other justice or justices of the peace in and for the said [county], to be dealt with according to law: and whereas the said A. B. hath been apprehended under and by virtue of the said warrant, and being now brought before [me], it is hereupon duly proved to [me] upon oath that the said A. B. is the same person who is named and charged in and by the said indictment: These are therefore to command you, the said constable, in his Majesty's name forthwith to take and safely convey the said A. B. to the said [house of correction] at —— in the said [county], and there to deliver him to the keeper thereof, together with this precept; and I hereby command you the said keeper to receive the said A. B. into your custody in the said house of correction, and him there safely to keep until he shall be thence delivered by due course of law. Given under my hand and seal this —— day of ——, in the year of our Lord ——, at ——, in the [county] aforesaid.

J. S. (L.S.)

Backing justice's warrants.]—If the person against whom a justice's warrant has been issued with respect to an indictable offence has escaped or gone into, or resides, or is supposed to reside or be "in any place in England or Wales, out of the jurisdiction of the justice issuing such warrant," upon proof alone being made on oath of the handwriting of the justice issuing such warrant, it is lawful for any justice of the peace for the county or place in which the person against whom the warrant has been issued is, or is supposed to be, to indorse the warrant in the following form; and such indorsement shall be sufficient authority for the execution of the warrant in that county or place. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 11. An arrest under a warrant not backed by a justice of the county or borough within which it is executed is illegal. R. v. Cumpton, 5 Q. B. D. 341; 49 L. J. (M. C.) 41. A warrant issued by a Metropolitan Police Magistrate in respect of an offence committed within the Metropolitan Police District may be executed outside that district without backing by any of the constables to whom it is directed. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 17.

Under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, ss. 12, 13, 14, English warrants may be backed in Ireland, Scotland, or the Isles of Man, Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney or Sark. English warrants may also be executed in Ireland, after endorsement by the inspector-general or a deputy or assistant inspector of the Irish Constabulary, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 93, s. 29, and 30 & 31 Vict. c. 19, s. 1.

The form of indorsement used is as follows:—

(K)

[—— to wit: Whereas proof upon oath hath this day been made before me, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said [county] of ——, that the name of J. S. to the within warrant subscribed is of the handwriting of the justice of the peace within mentioned: I do therefore hereby authorize W. T., who bringeth to me this warrant, and all other persons to whom this warrant was originally directed, or by whom it may lawfully be executed, and also all constables and other peace officers of the said [county] of ——, to execute the same within the said last-mentioned [county], and to bring the said A. B., if apprehended within the same [county], before me [or before some other justice or justices of the peace of the same county], to be dealt with according to law. Given under my hand this —— day of ——, 190 .

Offenders fleeing from the United Kingdom.]—Where the offender has fled to a British possession or a place to which the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts apply, the warrants for his arrest are executed under the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 69).

Where the accused has fled to a foreign country to which the Foreign Jurisdiction Acts do not apply, his surrender is obtainable under the Extradition Treaty in force with such country, or in some cases by application to the foreign government, independently of any treaty. The procedure to be followed depends on the terms of the treaty or the requirements of the foreign government. See Clarke on Extradition (4th ed.); Biron and Chalmers on Extradition. For the text of the treaties see Statutory Rules and Orders (ed. 1904), vol. 5, tit. "Fugitive Criminal." The Extradition Acts of 1870, 1873, and 1895, in the main regulate only procedure for extradition from British dominions, but they forbid the trial of fugitives surrendered by foreign states, except on charges founded on the facts on which their surrender was made.

When the defendant is already in prison.]—If the person against whom the indictment has been found is "confined in any gaol or prison for any other offence than that charged in the said indictment, at the time of such application and production of the said certificate to such justice or justices as aforesaid (ante, p. 105), it shall be lawful for such justice or justices, and he and they are hereby required, upon it being proved before him or them upon oath or affirmation that the person so indicted and the person so confined in prison are one and the same person, to issue his or their warrant (see post, 108), directed to the gaoler or keeper of the gaol or prison in which the person so indicted shall then be confined as aforesaid, commanding him to detain such person in custody until by his Majesty's writ of habeas corpus he shall be removed therefrom, for the purpose of being tried upon the said indictment, or until he shall otherwise be removed or discharged out of his custody by due course of law." 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 3.

(I.)

Form of warrant to detain a person indicted who is already in custody for another offence.]—To the keeper of the [common gaol or house of correction], at ——, in the said [county] of ——: Whereas it hath been duly certified by J. D., clerk of the indictments on the —— circuit [or clerk of the peace of and for the county of——], that [etc., stating the certificate] : And whereas [I am] informed that the said A. B. is in your custody in the said [common gaol] at —— aforesaid, charged with some offence or other matter; and it being now duly proved, upon oath before [me] that the said A. B. so indicted as aforesaid and the said A. B. in your custody as aforesaid are one and the same person; These are therefore to command you, in his Majesty's name, to detain the said A. B. in your custody in the [common gaol] aforesaid, until by his Majesty's writ of habeas corpus he shall be removed therefrom for the purpose of being tried upon the said indictment or until he shall otherwise be removed or discharged out of your custody by due course of law. Given under my hand and seal this —— day of ——, in the year of our Lord ——, at ——, in the [county] aforesaid.

Proceeding by bench warrant.]—By a long course of practice, it is an established rule that any court before which an indictment is found may forthwith issue a bench warrant for arresting the party charged, and bringing him immediately before such court, to answer such indictment. 8 Rep. Crim. Com. L. 99; Dick. Sess. 230 (6th ed.); and see 5 Ed. 3, c. 11; 34 Ed. 3, c. 1; Cro. Cir. Comp. 15 (10th ed.); 1 Chitty, Cr. L. 340; Archbold Q. S. (5th ed.) 99; Pritchard, Q. S. (2nd ed.) 194. In 3 Burn's J., tit. "Process," 1338 (30th ed.), it is said that the practice refers only to cases of misdemeanor. If the warrant is issued at the assizes, it is signed by a judge: if at sessions, by two justices of the peace. Hawkins, bk. 2, c. 27, s. 8, says that the warrant is granted when the court is sitting. This statement applies to commissions of the peace, and is only another way of saying that the court is not continuous, and the act must be done in sessions. Where the party against whom the indictment has been found is already under recognizance to appear and answer any indictment that may be preferred against him, and he does not appear, the prosecutor may bespeak a bench warrant, which will be signed by the justices at the close of the sessions; for the sessions being in law but one day, the defendant has the whole period of the sessions to appear. 2 Salk. 607; Cro. Cir. Comp. 15 (10th ed.). When a prosecutor applies for a bench warrant at the Central Criminal Court, a recognizance to prosecute with effect against the defendant is required. Reg. Gen., Jan. 1847; Car. & M. 254. It is said that at that court the warrant is only current for the session in which it is issued. Archbold, Q. S. (5th ed.) 99. See R. v. Nichols, 64 J. P. 217, Fulton, Recorder. This opinion probably rests on the theory that the court is not a continuing court, which was held to be erroneous by Wright, J.; in R. v. Madge & Armstrong, Q. B. D., May 8, 1894, 29 Law. Jour. Newsp. 301, and Times, May 9, 1894, Wright and Collins, JJ., cited R. v. Parke (1903), 2 K. B. at 440. It is not now the practice to grant a bench warrant unless immediate arrest is necessary, or it is shown that the party charged was about to quit the country; R. v. Whittaker 2, F. & F. 1; and it is not granted for the arrest of defaulting witnesses. R. v. Crawford, 6 Cox, 481 (Ir.).

The following is the form of a bench warrant:—

County of London.]—To all constables, headboroughs, and other his Majesty's officers and ministers within the county of London, and to every one of them whom it may concern: These are to will and require, and in his Majesty's name to charge and command you, upon sight hereof, to bring before us his Majesty's justices of the peace for the county aforesaid, at the sessions of the peace [or general quarter sessions of the peace] now holden at the Sessions House on Clerkenwell Green, in and for the said county, the body of A. B., who stands indicted before us at this same session for a trespass and assault [nature of the offence], if the court be then and there sitting, or if not, before us or some other of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the same county, to find sufficient sureties for his personal appearance at this present sessions, to answer the said indictment and all such other matters as on his Majesty's behalf shall be objected against him: and if he cannot be taken during this present session, that then, as soon after as he shall be taken, you bring or cause him to be brought before us or some other of his Majesty's justices of the peace of the said county to find sufficient sureties: that is to say, two sureties in £—— each for his personal appearance at the next session of the peace to be holden for the said county, to answer as aforesaid, and further to be dealt with according to law. Hereof you are not to fail at your peril. Dated in open session at the Sessions House, Clerkenwell Green, aforesaid, this —— day of ——, in the year of our Lord ——.

C. D. and E. F.

Warrant by judge of the High Court.]—Under 48 G. 3. c. 58, s. 1, any judge of the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice upon affidavit or certificate of the fact (R. v. Redfern, 2 A. & E. 387) that an indictment has been found, or information filed in that court, against any person for an offence other than treason or felony, may issue his warrant for apprehending him and taking him before a judge of the High Court or a justice of the peace, to be by him held to bail with two sufficient sureties as the court specified in the warrant for appearance in the King's Bench Division at the time mentioned in the warrant to answer the indictment or information; and if such defendant neglects or refuses to provide bail, the judge or justice before whom he is brought may commit him to prison. After the termination of the assizes or sessions of the peace, upon a certificate from the clerk of assize, or the clerk of the peace (see form, ante, p. 105), a judge of the King's Bench Division, or a justice of the county in which the indictment has been found, may, by warrant under his hand, cause the party indicted to be arrested, and, in default of bail, commit him for trial. R. v. Downey, 17 Q. B. 281; 15 L. J. (M. C.) 29; 4 Bl. Com. 319. The statute does not preclude the use of a capias ad respondendum (ss. 1, 3), but that is now only needed as a step to outlawry. For form of warrant, see Short & Mellor, Crown Office Practice, p. 607 (No. 44); 8 Rep. Crim. L. 348.

As to process on coroners' inquisitions, see post, p. 159.

Outlawry.]—Where an indictment for treason, felony, or misdemeanor has been found by a grand jury against any person, whether a peer or a commoner, and summary process proves ineffectual to the apprehension of the defendant, process of outlawry is issued:—outlawry being a punishment inflicted upon an offender by the law for contumacy, in refusing to render himself amenable to the justice of the King's courts. (a) Doct. & Stud. dial. 2, cap. 3; Bac. Abr. Outlawry; Com. Dig., Utlagary; 1 Chitty, Crim. L. 347; 2 Hale, 194; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 113. An outlawry in treason or felony still amounts to a conviction and attainder of the offence charged in the indictment, as much as if the offender had been found guilty by a jury; 4 Bl. Com. 319; 2 Hawk. c. 48, ss. 21–25; 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 1; but outlawry, in a case of misdemeanor, does not enure as a conviction for the offence, but merely as a conviction of the contempt for not answering. R. v. Tippin, 2 Salk. 494. Process of outlawry may be awarded by justices of oyer and terminer, and also by justices of the peace at quarter sessions, on indictments taken before them; 3 Burn's J., Process, 1339 (30th ed.); Dick. Q. Sess. 228 (6th ed.); but the practice of proceeding to outlawry in courts of quarter sessions seems to have become obsolete: 8 Rep. Crim. L. 103; and the usual course is to remove the indictment found at sessions by certiorari, and proceed to outlawry in the King's Bench Division. The most scrupulous exactness is required in all the proceedings in outlawry, which may be set aside on writ of error for any informality. 1 Chitty, Crim. L. 347. Although outlawry is still an integral, and has been described as an essential part of the criminal law (R. v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2527, 2551, Lord Mansfield, C.J.), proceedings in outlawry are exceedingly rare, and may almost be said to be extinct. Short & Mellor, Crown Office Practice, 384. It is therefore sufficient to refer to that work, which contains a full account of the proceedings in outlawry, and to the Crown Office Rules, 1886, rr. 99–121, which now regulate the practice in outlawry and reversal of outlawry, when the proceedings are in the King's Bench Division. Under s. 1, sub-s. 2, of the Statute Law Revision Act, 1888 (51 Vict. c. 3), the Lord Chancellor may, if he thinks fit, by order extend the Crown Office Rules in force for the time being, as to proceedings in outlawry, to proceedings in outlawry in courts of assize, oyer and terminer, and gaol delivery, and in other courts in England, with such modifications as to him may seem expedient, and as from the date of the order the old statutes as to outlawry scheduled to that Act are to be repealed. No order had up to the end of 1904 been made by the Lord Chancellor, and the old statutes remain in force as to the courts last named.

Sect 10.

BAIL.

Nature of bail.]—Bail are sureties taken by a person duly authorized, for appearance at a certain day and place, to answer and be justified by law. Hale's Sum. 96; Dalt. c. 166, pt. 2. The defendant is placed in the custody of his bail; who may re-seize him (1 Hale, 124; Dalton, c. 166, pt. 2) if they have reason to suppose that he is about to fly, and bring him before a justice, who will commit the prisoner in discharge of the bail; R. v. Butcher, Peake, 226 (3rd ed.): 3 R. R. 678; and any attempt to rescue him from their custody is illegal. Id.

When granted.]—Bail in treason or felony is discretionary in the High Court or courts having jurisdiction to try the offence. R. v. McCartie, [1859] 11 Ir. C. L. R. 188, 192: R. v. Platt, 1 Leach, 157. Bail in misdemeanor is said to be of right at common law. R. v. Spilsbury [1898] 2 Q. B. 615, 620: R. v. Badger, 4 Q. B. 468, 472; 12 L. J. (M. C.) 66; 4 St. Tr., N. S. 1387: Re Frost, 4 T. L. R. 757, Coleridge, L.C.J.; and see 31 Car. 2, c. 2: 2 Hawk. c. 15, ss. 7, 13, 16. Refusal or delay by any judge or magistrate to bail any person bailable is by the common law an offence against the liberty of the subject. 4 Bl. Com. 297. It is also a violation of the Habeas Corpus Act, 1679 (31 Car. 2, c. 2) and of the Bill of Rights (1 Will. & M., Sess. 2, c. 2). But the duty of a magistrate in respect of admitting a prisoner to bail is judicial, and not merely ministerial, and therefore an action will not lie against him without proof of malice for refusing to admit to bail a person charged with a misdemeanor, entitled to be admitted to bail. Linford v. Fitzroy, 13 Q. B. 240; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 108: R. v. Badger, 4 Q. B. 468; 12 L. J. (M. C.) 66: Osborne v. Gough, 3 B. & P. 551. See Bac. Abr., Bail; Com. Dig. Bail, F. 5, K. 6.

Bail is not to be withheld merely as a punishment. The requirements as to bail are merely to secure the attendance of the accused at the trial. R. v. Rose, 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 289: 17 Cox, 717 (C. C. R.).

The proper test of whether bail should be granted or refused is whether it is probable that the party will appear to take his trial. Re Robinson, 23 L. J. (Q. B.) 286; R. v. Scaife, 10 L. J. (M. C.) 144; 9 Dowl, Pr. Cas. 553.

The test should be applied by reference to the following considerations:

(1) The nature of the accusation. R. v. Barronet, 1 E. & B. 1; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 25: Dears. 51: R. v. Butler [1881] 8 L. R. Ir. 39: 14 Cox, 530.

(2) The nature of the evidence in support of the accusation. Re Robinson (ubi supra); R. v. Butler (ubi supra): R. v. McCormick, [1864] 17 Ir. C. L. R. 411.

(3) The severity of the punishment which conviction will entail. Re Robinson (ubi supra). The character or behaviour of the accused is said to be irrelevant. (Id.)

(4) Whether the sureties are independent, or indemnified by the accused. See R. v. Butler, 8 L. R. Ir. 39; 14 Cox, 530: Hermann v. Jeuchner, 15 Q. B. D. 561; 54 L. J. (Q. B.) 340; Consolidated Exploration, &c., Co. v. Musgrave [1900] 1 Ch. 37; 64 J. P. 89: contra, R. v. Broome, 18 L. T., O. S. 19, Martin, B., followed by Fulton, Recorder, in R. v. Stockwell [1902] 66 J. P. 376.

It is not usual to grant bail on charges of murder; Re Barthelemy, 1 E. & B. 8; Dears. 60; or after indictment found; R. v. Chapman, 8 C. & P. 558 (and see post, p. 115), except where the trial is adjourned. Anon. 2 Lewin, 260. As to the proper mode of taking a recognizance at quarter sessions, see ex parte Jeffreys, 52 J. P. 280. As to bail in the High Court, see post, p. 116. If insufficient bail has been taken, or if the sureties become afterwards insufficient, the accused may be ordered by any magistrate to find sufficient sureties, and in default may be committed to prison; and the justice who admitted a defendant to bail upon insufficient securities is responsible if the defendant does not appear. Hale's Sum. 97.

Who may be bail.]—The bail must be of ability sufficient to answer for the sum in which they are bound. 2 Hawk. c. 15, s. 4. They are usually householders; but it is for the magistrate or judge to act upon his discretion as to the sufficiency of the bail; R. v. Saunders, 2 Cox, 249; 1 Burn's J., Bail, 373 (30th ed.); 1 Chitty, Crim. L. 99; and the proposed bail may be examined upon oath as to his means, though in criminal cases no justification of bail is requisite. R. v. Hall, 2 W. Bl. 1110; Tidd's Prac. 250; 1 Chitty, Crim. L. 100. And the court or magistrate may, at discretion, order that reasonable notice shall be given to the prosecutor and the police, to enable him or them to inquire or object as to the sufficiency of the bail. No person convicted of any crime by which he has become infamous was allowed to be surety for any person charged or suspected of an indictable offence. R. v. Edwards, 4 T. R. 440; 2 R. R. 427. It is not expedient to accept the solicitor of the accused as bail for his client. R. v. Scott-Jarvis (Q. B. D., Times, 20th Nov., 1876): Douglas, Summary Jurisdiction Procedure (8th ed.) 371. Nor is a person who has been indemnified by the accused; supra (3). Persons in custody cannot be bail. Infants cannot be bail; nor could a married woman at common law; but since the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, married women having separate estate are accepted as bail. Personation of bail is a felony under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 34.

Where persons who have become bail for any defendant discharge themselves by taking and surrendering him before the court or magistrate by whom he has been bailed, it is competent for the defendant to find new sureties. 2 Hale, 124; Hawk. c. 15, s. 3.

Bail by justices of the peace: when discretionary.]—"Where any person shall appear or be brought before a justice of the peace charged with any felony, or with any assault with intent to commit any felony, or with any attempt to commit any felony, or with obtaining or attempting to obtain property by false pretences, or with a misdemeanor in receiving property stolen or obtained by false pretences, or with perjury or subornation of perjury, or with concealing the birth of a child by secret burying or otherwise, or with wilful or indecent exposure of the person, or with riot, or with assault in pursuance of a conspiracy to raise wages, or assault upon a peace officer in the execution of his duty, or upon any person acting in his aid, or with neglect or breach of duty as a peace officer, or with any misdemeanor for the prosecution of which the costs may be allowed out of the county rate." [For a list of these offences, see post, ch. vi., p. 247: they seem to include common assault. R. v. Waldron, 18 Cox, 373.] "Such justice of the peace may, in his discretion, admit such person to bail, upon his procuring and producing such surety or sureties as in the opinion of such justice will be sufficient to ensure the appearance of such accused person at the time and place when and where he is to be tried for such offence; and thereupon such justice shall take the recognizance (see infra) of the said accused person and his surety or sureties, conditioned for the appearance of such accused person at the time and place of trial, and that he will then surrender and take his trial, and not depart the court without leave." 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 23; and see 1 Chitty, Crim. L. 95; 4 Bl. Com. 298: Linford v. Fitzroy, 13 Q. B. 240; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 108: R. v. Rose, 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 289; 18 Cox, 717: and Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Practice, pp. 374, et seq.

When compulsory.]—"Where any person shall be charged before any justice of the peace with any indictable misdemeanor other than those hereinbefore mentioned, such justice, after taking the examinations in writing as aforesaid, instead of committing him to prison for such offence, shall admit him to bail in manner aforesaid, or if he have been committed to prison and shall apply to any one of the visiting justices of such prison or to any other justice of the peace for the same county, riding, division, liberty, city, borough or place, before the first day of the sitting or session at which he is to be tried, or before the day to which such sitting or session may be adjourned, to be admitted to bail, such justice shall accordingly admit him to bail in manner aforesaid." 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 23; and see 2 Hale, 127; 4 Bl. Com. 298; Burn's J. (30th ed.), Bail; 1 Chitty, Crim. L. 97; and remarks of Lord Denman, Linford v. Fitzroy, supra.

Under the Bail Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 7, s. 1), "where a justice has power under s. 23 of the Indictable Offences Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 42), to admit to bail for appearance, he may dispense with sureties, if it is his opinion the so dispensing will not tend to defeat the ends of justice;" and it is his duty to admit to bail in all cases where there is a reasonable belief that the accused will attend to take his trial.

When forbidden.]—"No justice or justices of the peace shall admit any person to bail for treason, nor shall such person be admitted to bail, except by order of one of his Majesty's secretaries of state, or by the High Court of Justice (King's Bench Division), or a judge thereof in vacation. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 23; 35 & 37 Vict. c. 66, ss. 16, 34; 38 & 39 Vict. c. 77, s. 19.

Bail on remand.]—11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 23, applies only where the accused is committed for trial: and does not apply to bail on remand. There is some difference of opinion as to the power of the High Court to interfere where justices have refused bail on remand. See Douglas, Summary Jurisdiction Procedure (8th ed.), pp. 371, 372: but in R. v. Beall (Q.B.D., July, 1899), Channell, J., said that if the power existed the Court would be very slow to interfere with the justices' decision.

Form of recognizance of bail taken by a justice of the peace.]—The following is the form of the recognizance to be entered into by bail before a justice of the peace, prescribed by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42:—

(S 1.)

Be it remembered, that on the —— day of ——, in the year of our Lord ——, A. B. of —— [labourer], L. M. of —— [grocer], and N. O. of —— [butcher], personally came before [us] the undersigned, two of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said [county], and severally acknowledged themselves to owe to our lord the King the several sums following: (that is to say), the said A. B. the sum of —— and the said L. M. and N. O. the sum of —— each, of good and lawful money of Great Britain, to be made and levied of their several goods and chattels, lands and tenements respectively, to the use of our said lord the King, his heirs and successors, if he the said A. B. fail in the condition indorsed. Taken and acknowledged the day and year first above mentioned, at ——, before us, J. S.
J. N.

The condition of the within-written recognizance is such, that whereas the said A. B. was this day charged before [us], the justices within mentioned for that [etc. as in the warrant]; if therefore the said A. B. will appear at the next court of oyer and terminer and general gaol delivery [or court of general quarter sessions of the peace] to be holden in and for the county of ——, and there surrender himself into the custody of the keeper of the [common gaol] there, and plead to such indictment as may be found against him by the grand jury for or in respect of the charge aforesaid, and take his trial upon the same, and not depart the said court without leave, then the said recognizance to be void, or else to stand in full force and virtue.

Notice of the said recognizance to be given to the accused and his bail.]—Take notice, that you A. B. of ——, are bound in the sum of ——, and your sureties [L. M. and N. O.] in the sum of —— each, that you A. B. appear [etc. as in the condition of the recognizance], and not depart the said court without leave; and unless you the said A. B. personally appear and plead, before a justice of the peace, where it would be inconvenient to bring the prisoner and his bail before the court or judge in town; or, on just cause being shown, to order that a party not in custody shall be admitted to bail on surrendering to a warrant. At common law the powers of the court were exercised by means of a writ of habeas corpus. Hale's Sum. 104; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 98; Burn's J., tit. "Bail," 369 (30th ed.). Under the present practice of the Court, "applications for bail in felony or misdemeanor where the party is in custody, shall be in the first instance by summons before a judge at chambers for a writ of habeas corpus, or to show cause why the defendant should not be admitted to bail either before a judge at chambers or before a justice of the peace, in such an amount as the judge may direct." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 122. No summons to show cause before a judge at chambers for bail in felony shall be issued without the leave of a judge upon an ex parte application. Rule 305. For the requisite forms on applications for bail, see Appendix to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Nos. 69 to 77. Affidavits must be entitled "In the High Court of Justice, King's Bench Division." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 7.

If the judge at chambers refuses bail, a further application may be made to a divisional court, not by way of appeal, but de novo; Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pract. 382; but there is no appeal to the Court of Appeal from the decision of a divisional court of the King's Bench Division upon an application for bail by a prisoner. R. v. Foote, 10 Q. B. D. 378; 52 L. J. (Q. B.) 528.

To avoid expense and inconvenience it is now the practice in almost all cases, instead of applying for a writ of habeas corpus, to apply for a summons before a judge in chambers, to show cause why the prisoner should not be admitted to bail before a justice of the peace. If the order be made, upon its being produced to a justice, he will admit the prisoner to bail.

Where there is no inconvenience in the appearance of the prisoner and his bail in the court, counsel applies for a writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum, and also for a writ of certiorari, directed to the magistrate or coroner, as the case may be, to bring before the court the depositions on which the prisoner has been committed. The affidavits are entitled as in the case of a bail summons, and should verify the depositions (R. v. Barthelemy, 1 E. & B. 8; Dears. 60), and should be accompanied by a certified copy of the commitment, to which the accused is entitled as of right, under 31 Car. 2, c. 2, s. 4 (see Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 35, Forms 172, 173), and by a copy of the depositions. If these are not obtained, a certiorari to bring them up is necessary.

Twenty-four hours' notice of bail, in cases of murder or manslaughter, must be served on the widow, if any there be, or next of kin of the deceased, and in other cases upon the prosecutor, and also on the coroner, or committing magistrate—personal service is not requisite. Returns having been duly made to the writs, when the prisoner is brought into court counsel moves that he be admitted to bail, and if there be no opposition the court will in its discretion admit the prisoner to bail, and the officer of the court will take the recognizance. In cases of felony the court usually requires four sureties; but for the inferior offences two are sufficient. R. v. Shaw, 6 Dow. & Ry. 154. The application to admit the prisoner to bail may be opposed by counsel, and affidavits may be used in answer to the application. When a prisoner is brought up to be bailed at chambers, the proceedings are nearly the same as those in court. Short & Mellor's Cr. Off. Pr. 380.

Bail in case of removed indictments.]—See post, Certiorari, p. 184.

Bail on coroner's inquisition.]—See post, p. 160.

Estreat of recognizance.]—If the condition of a recognizance entered into either by a party or by his sureties be broken, the recognizance may be forfeited, and on forfeiture the obligees become debtors to the Crown for the sums in which they are respectively bound.

Former practice.]—The ancient mode of enforcing a forfeited recognizance was to order its estreat into the Exchequer. The word "estreat" (extractum) means a true note of entries in the rolls of a court containing orders in favour of the revenue of the Crown: Westm. c. 2, Termes de la Ley. It was the duty of the clerks of all the King's courts to make up an accurate estreat roll showing the nature and details of all fines, forfeitures, etc., enforced by the court, and to return it to the Exchequer. The roll had to be verified by oath (4 W. & M. c. 24, s. 4); wilful misstatements were punishable (22 & 23 Car. 2, c. 22, s. 5); and failure to make the returns was ground for amercement (3 G. 1, c. 15, s. 12).

The sums not received before the return of the roll were levied by the sheriff under the orders of the Court of Exchequer until 1822 (3 G. 4, c. 46). The Court of Exchequer had jurisdiction over recognizances forfeited before justices of the peace in or out of sessions. The jurisdiction was abolished by 3 G. 4, c. 46, s. 2. R. v. Yorkshire, West Riding, JJ., 7 A. & E., 583, 590; 7 L. J. (M. C.) 9: R. v. Thompson, 3 Tyr. 73: R. v. Hankins, M'Cl. & Y. 27. But this change in the law did not affect the power of the court to bring up the recognizance by certiorari from sessions: ex parte Pellow, M'Cl. 111; 28 R. R. 683; R. v. Brooke, 59 J. P. 6, and did not affect the assizes: R. v. Hankins, ubi supra.

The powers of the Court of Exchequer passed in 1875 to the H. C. J., and in 1880 to the K. B. D. (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, ss. 16, 32, Order in Council, 16 Dec., 1880. Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 12, p. 1, tit. "Supreme Court England."

Present practice—Superior Courts.]—The practice of parliament, the Supreme Court, and courts of assize, respecting the estreat of recognizances, is governed by the Fines Act, 1833 (3 & 4 W. 4, c. 99), which repealed 22 & 23 Car. 2, c. 22. By ss. 26, 27, 28, provision is made for the rendering of an account to the Treasury, by the King's coroner and attorney, and the King's Remembrancer, of fines, amerciaments, penalties, and recognizances set, imposed or forfeited in the High Court, and for the estreat by those officers under order of the court or a judge of such fines, etc., levied and not received, and for their payment over of the fines, etc., as directed by the Treasury. By s. 29 it is provided, that an account in writing of all recognizances forfeited to or for the use of the crown, by or before any judge or judges of assize throughout England, shall within fourteen days next after such recognizances are forfeited be made out by the clerk of assize, with the names and residences of the parties liable to make payment thereof, and he shall make out two copies, one to be sent to the Treasury, and such recognizances shall, within the time last aforesaid, be duly certified and estreated by the clerk of assize into the court of Exchequer. Under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 21, s. 32, clerks of assize ceased to estreat fines, etc., into the court of Exchequer, and now enrol the fines and send a copy to the sheriff unless under s. 38 the Treasury requires return of the estreat to the King's Remembrancer. The court of Exchequer, under a writ of privy seal, had power over penalties and forfeitures occurring at assizes, and could compound, or, in its discretion, discharge, any recognizances. 33 H. 8, c. 39, ss. 40–42; R. v.

Hankins, M'Cl. & Y. 27, and n., p. 31. The Treasury has a concurrent power under 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 99, ss. 33, 38.

The court has a discretion as to whether to order the estreat of a recognizance.

In R. v. Doyen, Lewes assizes, 1899, 34 L. J. Newsp. 645, a Frenchman was admitted to bail, his father being taken as surety, and went to France, where he became dangerously insane, so that, through no fault of the surety, he could not be produced at the trial. Wills, J., refused an application to estreat the recognizance, and said he could not make any order on the justices' clerk as to the amount, which was deposited with him.

In R. v. Sangiovanni [1904] 68 J. P. 54, an estreat of the recognizances of sureties for a person committed for trial had been ordered on his failure to surrender. Fulton, Recorder, directed that the estreat should not issue, on being satisfied that the sureties had taken all reasonable steps to secure the attendance of the defendant. On finding that he had left for the United States, they had informed the police, and had telegraphed at their own expense to have the defendant detained on arrival. In consequence of their action he was not allowed to land, and was forced to return in the ship; but this being a Belgian vessel, it took him to a Belgian port.

The estreat of recognizances on the Crown side of the King's Bench Division is regulated by the Crown Office Rules, 1886.

"Every recognizance acknowledged on the removal of an indictment, order, or other proceeding, or to prosecute any information granted by the King's Bench Division, or for the appearing or answering of any party in the said Division, or for good behaviour, or for any other purpose, shall after the acknowledgment thereof, be transmitted to the crown office and filed there." R. 123.

"No recognizance shall henceforth be forfeited, estreated, or put upon the estreat roll without the order of the court or a judge, nor unless an order or notice shall have been previously served upon the parties by whom such recognizances shall have been given, calling upon them to perform the conditions thereof, and no default shall be considered to be made in performing the conditions of a recognizance by reason of the trial of any indictment or presentment or the argument of any order or conviction or other proceeding having stood over where such indictment has been made a remanet, or such indictment or order has stood over by order of the court, or by consent in writing of the parties." R. 124.

"Whenever it has been made to appear to the court or judge that a party has made default in performing the conditions of any recognizance, into which he has entered, filed in the crown office, the court or a judge upon notice to the defendant and his sureties, if any, may order such recognizance to be estreated into the Exchequer without issuing any writ of scire facias." R. 126.

"No proceedings shall be taken in the crown office by scire facias upon recognizance." R. 127.

Practice at sessions of the peace.]—The practice for courts of quarter sessions as to the estreat of recognizances other than those of the defendant and his sureties is governed by s. 31 of the Criminal Law Act, 1826, (7 G. 4, c. 64), which provides that in every case where any person bound by recognizance for his or her appearance, or for whose appearance any other person shall be bound to prosecute or give evidence in any case of felony or misdemeanor, or to answer for any common assault, or to articles of the peace, or to abide an order in bastardy (this form of recognizance was abolished by 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 76, s. 70), shall therein make default, the officer of the court by whom the estreats are made out shall prepare a list in writing, specifying the name of every person so making default and the nature of the offence in respect of which every such person, or his or her surety, was so bound, together with the residence, trade, profession or calling of every such person or surety, and shall in such list distinguish the principals from the sureties, and shall state the cause, if known, why each such person has not appeared, and whether by reason of the non-appearance of such person the ends of justice have been defeated or delayed: and every such officer shall and is hereby required before any such recognizance shall be estreated to lay such list, if at a court of oyer and terminer in any county besides Middlesex and London" (i.e. City) . . . "before one of the justices of these courts respectively; if at a court wherein a recorder or other corporate officer is the judge or one of the judges, before such recorder or other corporate officer; and if at a session of the peace, before the chairman or two other justices of the peace who shall have attended such court, who are respectively authorized and required to examine such list, and to make such order touching the estreating or putting in process of any such recognizance as shall appear to them respectively to be just; and it shall not be lawful for the officer of any court to estreat or put in process any such recognizance without the written order of the justice, recorder, corporate officer, chairman, or justice of the peace before whom respectively such list shall have been laid."

Subject to the special provisions of the Act above quoted, the general practice of courts of quarter sessions is governed by the Levy of Fines Act, 1822 (3 G. 4), c. 46, which directs (s. 2) that the clerk of the peace or town clerk shall copy on a roll such forfeited recognizances, and shall within such time as shall be fixed by the court of quarter sessions, not exceeding twenty-one days from the adjournment of such court, send a copy of such roll, with a writ of distringas and capias [see forms, ante, pp. 104, 105], or a writ of fieri facias and capias, to the sheriff of such county, which shall be the authority to him for proceeding to the immediate levying and recovering of such forfeited recognizances. Sect. 8 of the same Act requires the sheriff to return the writ and roll on the first day of the quarter sessions with a return of what has been done under it, and s. 5 of the Levy of Fines Act, 1823 (4 G. 4, c. 37), requires the clerk of the peace or town clerk to send to the Treasury within twenty days after the holding of quarter sessions a copy or extract of all rolls returned by the sheriff, with an account of the causes of the discharge by the court of any forfeiture, and the reason of the sheriff for any failure to levy a forfeited recognizance. In municipal boroughs in which the town clerk and clerk of the peace are not the same person, the latter is to discharge the duties imposed on the town clerk by the Act of 1822; see 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 222. By s. 17 of the Quarter Sessions Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 45), the provisions of the Acts of 1822 and 1823 as to the procedure with respect to forfeited recognizances are applied also to fines and amercements: as to which see re Nottingham Corporation (1897), 2 Q. B. 502: R. v. Dover, 1 Cr. M. & R. 726: 1 Chit. Cr. L. 726: 4 Chit. Cr. L. 487.

In the case of a recognizance by the defendant the order to forfeit is made after he is called, and on his failure to appear during the sessions, without any further notice or summons. In the case of sureties, ss. 5, 6, of 3 G. 4, c. 46, give a right of appeal to the sessions to all persons whose recognizances have been forfeited if they give proper security: and on the appeal the court may discharge the whole or part of the forfeiture, and discharge the obligee if in custody, and by s. 2 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1853 (16 & 17 Vict. c. 30) courts of quarter sessions are empowered to forfeit recognizances by principals or sureties to keep the peace or be of good behaviour, on proof of the conviction of the principal of any offence which is by law a breach of the conditions of the recognizance. The procedure of the Acts of 1822 (3 Geo. 4, c. 46) is applied to recognizances so forfeited.

Sect. 11.

INDICTMENT, IN WHAT CASES QUASHED.

In what cases.]—If an indictment or inquisition is bad on the face of it, or there is any such insufficiency, either in the caption or in the body of an indictment or inquisition, as will make erroneous any judgment whatsoever given on any part thereof, the court may in its discretion quash the indictment. 2 Hawk. c. 25, ss. 146–149; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 298: R. v. Taylor, 9 Dowl. 600. Thus, before 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, indictments for perjury at common law or forgery found at sessions were quashed because the sessions had no jurisdiction to inquire of perjury or forgery. R. v. Bainton, 2 Str. 1088, and see R. v. Rigby, 8 C. & P. 770 (but see ante, p. 102). An indictment against six for exercising a trade was quashed because it was a distinct offence in each, and could not be made the subject of a joint prosecution. R. v. Tucker, 4 Burr. 2046: R. v. Weston, 1 Str. 623. In R. v. Philips, 2 Str. 921, judgment was arrested on an indictment of six for perjury (to which four pleaded and were convicted), on the ground that the offence was in its nature several, and two could not be indicted together for it. And in several instances indictments have been quashed, because the facts stated in them did not amount to an offence punishable by law; see R. v. Burkett, Andr. 230: R. v. Sarmon, 1 Burr. 516: R. v. Wright, 1 Burr. 543: R. v. Philpotts, 1 C. & K. 112; as, for instance, an indictment for contemptuous words spoken to a justice of peace, not stating that they were spoken to him whilst in the execution of his office. R. v. Leafe, Andr. 226: and an indictment against an overseer for misconduct in preparing electoral registers on the ground that the offence, if any, was not punishable on indictment. R. v. Hall [1891] 1 Q. B. 747: 60 L. J. (M. C.) 129. Where a defendant who has been committed for obtaining a chattel by false pretences, is indicted in one count for that offence, and in another count for obtaining another chattel by false pretences, without any authority obtained under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 17 (The Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859), or arising from the provisions of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 35 (which had not then been passed), to prefer such second charge, it was held that the judge at the trial should direct the second count to be quashed. R. v. Fuidge, L. & C. 390; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 74 (ante, p. 9). See also R. v. Bradlaugh, 15 Cox, 156 (ante, p. 10). A count of an indictment may also be quashed as being too general. On this ground a count under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62 (Debtors Act, 1869), s. 13 (1) which alleged that the defendant did obtain credit from the prosecutor "by means of fraud other than by false pretences" without setting out the means, was quashed. R. v. Bell, 12 Cox, 37, Montague Smith, J. But the effect of s. 19 was not considered, and the case is virtually overruled by R. v. Pierce, 56 L. J. (M. C.) 85; 16 Cox, 213 (C. C. R.) (ante, p. 70). An indictment under 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51, which charged the defendant with "corrupt practices," at a parliamentary election, without setting out the nature of such corrupt practices as "bribery," etc., was quashed as being too general. R. v. Norton, 16 Cox, 59, Pollock, B., approved by the majority of the judges in R. v. Stroulger, 17 Q. B. D.

327; 55 L. J. (M. C.) 137 (C. C. R.). An indictment for obtaining money by false pretences was quashed by the judge at the trial, after the case for the prosecution had closed, on the judge discovering that the indictment did not contain the words "with intent to defraud." R. v. James, 12 Cox, 127, Lush, J. An indictment for libel was quashed, the expressions used in the alleged libel not being primâ facie libellous, and the indictment containing no averments or innuendoes showing that those expressions were intended to impute improper conduct to the prosecutor. R. v. Yates, 12 Cox, 233, Quain, J. So, the judge may in his discretion put the prosecutor to his election, or perhaps quash the indictment, where the defendant is charged with distinct felonies in different counts (ante, p. 86), or with different misdemeanors in different counts (ante, p. 91), or with several offences in the same count (ante, p. 82).

If the application be made on the part of the prosecution, the court will quash the indictment in all cases where it appears to be so defective that the defendant cannot be convicted on it, and where the prosecution appears to be bonâ fide, and not instituted from malicious motives, or for the purposes of oppression. If the prosecution be instituted by the attorney-general, an application to quash the indictment is never made upon the part of the prosecutor, because the attorney-general may himself enter a nolle prosequi, which will have the same effect (see post, s. 14). R. v. Stratton, 1 Doug. 239: cf. R. v. Colling, 2 Cox, 184, as to the procedure where the indictment has been removed by certiorari.

An application to quash may, it would seem, be made upon the part of the prosecution at any time before the defendant has been actually tried upon the indictment. See R. v. Webb, 3 Burr. 1468: 1 W. Bl. 460. But after judgment for the prisoner on demurrer, the indictment cannot be quashed at the instance of the prosecutor. R. v. W. Smith, 2 M. & Rob. 109. Where the application is made to the High Court, the rule is absolute in the first instance, if the defendant has not appeared and pleaded. R. v. Stowell, 1 Dowl. N. S. 320.

Before an application of this kind is made on the part of the prosecution, a new bill for the same offence must have been preferred against the defendant and found. R. v. Wynn, 2 East, 226. And when the court, upon such an application, orders the former indictment to be quashed, it is usually upon terms, namely, that the prosecutor shall pay to the defendant such costs as he may have incurred by reason of the former indictment. R. v. Webb, 3 Burr. 1468: 1 W. Bl. 460. R. v. Dunn, 1 C. & K. 730; that the second indictment shall stand in the same plight and condition to all intents and purposes that the first would have done if it were not quashed; R. v. Glenn, 3 B. & Ald. 373: R. v. Webb, ubi supra; and (particularly where there has been any vexatious delay upon the part of the prosecutor, Id.) that the name of the prosecutor be disclosed. R. v. Glenn, ubi supra.

Where the application is made upon the part of the defendant, the court have almost uniformly refused to quash an indictment, where it appeared to be for some enormous crime, such as treason or felony; Com. Dig. Indictment (H.); 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 146; 1 East, P. C. 110: R. v. Sheares, 27 St. Tr. 255, 266; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 298: R. v. Lynch [1903] 1 K. B. 444: R. v. Johnson, 1 Wils. 325; or for forgery, perjury, subornation, or nuisance to highways. R. v. Belton, 1 Salk. 372; Anon., 1 Vent. 369: cf. 1 Sid. 54; R. v. Thomas, 3 D. & R. 621: R. v. Burnby, 5 Q. B. 348; 13 L. J. (M. C.) 29: R. v. Withers, 4 Cox, 17. They have also refused to quash indictments for cheating, R. v. Orbell, 6 Mod. 42; for selling flour by false weights, R. v. Crookes, 3 Burr. 1841; for extortion or oppression, R. v. Wadsworth, 5 Mod. 13; for not executing a magistrate's warrant,

R. v. Bailey, 2 Str. 1211; against overseers for not paying money over to their successors, R. v. King, 2 Str. 1268, and the like. The court also will not quash indictments for not repairing highways or bridges, or for other public nuisances, R. v. Belton, 1 Salk. 372; Anon., 1 Vent. 369: R. v. Bishop, Andr. 220: R. v. Sutton, 4 Burr. 2116, unless there be a certificate that the nuisance is removed; R. v. Leyton, Cro. Car. 584: R. v. Wigg, 2 Salk. 460; 1 Ld. Raym. 1165; nor will they quash an indictment for forcible entry, R. v. Dyer, 6 Mod. 96, unless, perhaps, where the possession has been afterwards given up.

But when it is made clear, either on the face of an indictment or by affidavit, that it has been found without jurisdiction, the court will quash it on motion by the defendant after plea pleaded; although in a doubtful case they will leave him to his writ of error, R. v. Heane, 4 B. & S. 947; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 115; or to his right to demur, R. v. Brownlow, 11 A. & E. 119, 127, 128; or to move in arrest of judgment. R. v. Lynch [1903] 1 K. B. 444: R. v. Sheares, 27 St. Tr. 359. It is said that a motion to quash will not be granted upon a trial of an indictment, at nisi prius, if the objections taken appear on the record. R. v. Souter, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 423. It is no ground for quashing an indictment for non-compliance with the provisions of the Vexatious Indictments Act (22 & 23 Vict. c. 17, s. 1), that the charge arising in one petty sessional division of a county, the committal is by justices sitting in and acting for another petty sessional division of the same county, such a committal being good in point of law. R. v. Beckley, 20 Q. B. D. 187; 57 L. J. (M. C.) 22.

Where two indictments against the same defendant, one for felony and the other for misdemeanor, had been removed into the court of Queen's Bench by certiorari, the court refused to quash them on an affidavit that they both related to the same transaction. R. v. Stockley, 3 Q. B. 238; 11 L. J. (M. C.) 105. See ante, p. 99.

Where an indictment is clearly bad in law the court may refuse to try it, and discharge the jury from giving a verdict, though there has been no demurrer or motion to quash. R. v. Deacon, Ry. & M. 27: R. v. Tremearne, Id. 147: R. v. Hepper, Id. 210: 1 C. & P. 608.

How.]—The application to quash an indictment is made to the court where the bill is found; except in cases of indictments at sessions or in other inferior courts, in which cases the application may be made to the High Court of Justice (K. B. D.) after removing the record by certiorari. But a court of quarter sessions has itself authority to quash an indictment found there, before plea pleaded. R. v. Wilson, 6 Q. B. 620; 14 L. J. (M. C.) 3.

It was formerly held that the application, if made upon the part of the defendant, must in all cases be made before plea pleaded; Fost. 231: R. v. Rookwood, cas. temp. Holt, 684; 13 St. Tr. 139; but this, while just and convenient, is not essential; R. v. Wright, 1 Burr. 543: R. v. Chapple, 17 Cox, 455; and where it is clear that an indictment has been found without jurisdiction, or has a substantial and apparent defect, the court will quash it on motion by the defendant after plea pleaded; R. v. Heane, 4 B. & S. 947; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 115; and even after the case for the prosecution had closed. R. v. James, 12 Cox, 127. Where an indictment had already, upon the application of the defendant, been removed into the court of King's Bench by certiorari, the court refused to entertain a motion by the defendant to quash the indictment after a forfeiture of his recognizance by not having carried the record down for trial; Anon., 1 Salk. 380; and a motion to quash after certiorari, trial and conviction has been refused. R. v. Marsh, 6 A. & E. 236. A motion to quash an indictment for any formal defect apparent on the face of it must be made before the jury are sworn, and upon its being made the court may amend the indictment, and proceed with the trial as if no such defect had existed. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 25 (ante, p. 55).

SECT. 12.

INDICTMENT, WHEN AND WHERE TRIED.

When.]—Indictments for high treason or felony are usually tried at the same assizes or sessions at which they are preferred to and found by the grand jury. This practice accords with the requirements of s. 6 of the Habeas Corpus Act, 1679 (31 Car. 2, c. 2).

The same course is now pursued as to misdemeanors. By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 27, "no person prosecuted shall be entitled to traverse or postpone the trial of any indictment found against him at any session of the peace, session of oyer and terminer, or session of gaol delivery: provided always, that if the court, upon the application of the person so indicted or otherwise, shall be of opinion that he ought to be allowed a further time, either to prepare for his defence or otherwise, such court may adjourn the trial of such person to the next subsequent session, and upon such terms as to bail or otherwise as to such court shall seem meet, and may respite the recognizances of the prosecutor and witnesses accordingly, in which case the prosecutor and witnesses shall be bound to attend to prosecute and give evidence at such subsequent session without entering into any fresh recognizance for that purpose." This enactment abolished the old practice which entitled the defendant in cases of misdemeanor to postpone his trial till the next assizes or sessions. 4 Bl. Com. 351.

Postponement of trial.]—The trial may, however, be postponed to the next assizes or sessions at the instance of the prosecutor or the defendant, on showing to the court a sufficient cause for the delay, such as the sudden illness of the prisoner, or the unavoidable absence or illness of a necessary and material witness, the existence of prejudice in the jury, and the like. See 31 Car. 2, c. 2, s. 6: R. v. D'Eon, 3 Burr. 1513: R. v. Jolliffe, 4 T. R. 285: 2 R. R. 383: R. v. Morphew, 2 M. & Sel. 602: 15 R. R. 366: R. v. Hunter, 3 C. & P. 591: R. v. Streek, 2 C. & P. 413: R. v. Stevenson, 2 Leach, 546: R. v. Chapman, 8 C. & P. 558: R. v. Owen, 9 C. & P. 83: R. v. Macarthy, C. & Mar. 625: R. v. Mobbs, 2 F. & F. 18: R. v. Langhurst, 10 Cox, 353: R. v. Taylor, 11 Cox, 340: R. v. Dripps, 13 Cox, 25 (Ir.). In R. v. Palmer, 6 C. & P. 652, the Central Criminal Court postponed until the next session the presentment of a bill for arson to the grand jury, upon the ground of the illness of a witness sworn to be material, and refused to examine her deposition to ascertain whether she deposed to material facts. In R. v. Heeson, 14 Cox, 40, it was held by Lush, J., that the presentment of a bill to the grand jury cannot be postponed to the next assizes, on the ground that other and like charges may before that time be brought against the prisoner, and that if no bill was presented the prisoner would be entitled to her discharge on bail. His lordship said that the case of R. v. Palmer, ubi supra, was an application founded on the absence of a material witness for the crown, which was provided for by s. 6 of the Habeas Corpus Act, 1679 (31 Car. 2, c. 2). Where a witness for the Crown, on the ground of whose illness it is sought to postpone the trial, was not examined before the committing magistrate, the court will require an affidavit as to what the witness is expected to prove. R. v. Savage, 1 C. & K. 75: R. v. Lawrence, 4 F. & F.

901. In R. v. Taylor, 15 Cox, 8, Baggallay, L.J., postponed the presentment of a bill to the next assizes, on the ground that all the witnesses resided at a workhouse in which small-pox had broken out, and that their attendance at the assizes would be dangerous to the public, as they might carry infection, and admitted the prisoner to bail on his own recognizances to appear at the next assizes. The production by the prosecution at the trial of evidence not produced before the magistrate, and not communicated to the prisoner previously to the trial, may be ground for a postponement of the trial in the interests of the defendant. R. v. Flannagan, 15 Cox, 403. Where the defendant was indicted for having carnal knowledge of a girl under ten years old, and application by the prosecution for the postponement of the trial, with a view to the instruction of the girl, was refused. R. v. Nicholas, 2 C. & K. 216. It seems that the trial may be postponed, on the defendant's application, after the jury have been charged with the indictment, and before any evidence has been given in the case. R. v. Fitzgerald, 1 C. & K. 201. See R. v. Downey, 3 Cr. & Dix (Ir.) 314. Where the application is made by the defendant, he will be remanded and detained in custody until the next assizes or sessions; but where the application is made by the prosecutor, it is in the discretion of the court either to detain the defendant in custody or admit him to bail, or to discharge him on his own recognizances. R. v. Beardmore, 7 C. & P. 497: R. v. Parish, Id. 782: R. v. Osborne, Id. 799: R. v. Bridyman, C. & Mar. 271. After a bill has been found, if the offence be of a serious nature, or an absent witness has been kept out of the way by the defence, the court will not admit the prisoner to bail. R. v. Chapman, 8 C. & P. 558: R. v. Guttridge, 9 C. & P. 228: R. v. Owen, Id. 83: R. v. Bowen, Id. 509. See Bail, ante, pp. 110, 111.

Under the Assizes Relief Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 12), if a person committed for trial at sessions is not tried at the next sessions, the next court of assize may on his application try or discharge him or release him on bail, unless the delay is due to special reasons, such as the removal of the indictment by certiorari, or the impossibility of producing the witnesses for the crown. S. 3 (1) (3). If the next court of quarter sessions has not tried him before the next subsequent assizes, the judge of assize must try or discharge him. S. 3 (2).

S. 6 of the Habeas Corpus Act, 1679 (31 Car. 2, c. 2), provides for the release of persons committed for trial for high treason or felony if they are not indicted at the latest in the second term, assizes, or sessions after their committal.

Adjournment of trial.]—The powers as to adjourning a trial when once begun are dealt with under "Trial," post, p. 213.

Where.]—Indictments for felonies and misdemeanors are tried within the jurisdiction in which the offence is committed, or in which by some statute it may lawfully be tried (ante, p. 36, et seq.), and before the court in which the indictment is preferred, or into which it has been removed by certiorari or order of removal.

The following statement will show the courts competent to try any indictable offence, subject to the rules as to venue and national jurisdiction stated ante, pp. 36–51:—

High Court.]—The High Court of Justice (K. B. D.), as the successor of the court of King's Bench, has jurisdiction to try all indictable offences against the law of England. This jurisdiction is concurrent with that of the courts of oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery, or courts of quarter sessions. The jurisdiction is not exercised except (1) Where the indictment is removed into the court by certiorari; (2) Where the indictment is found in the counties of London or Middlesex by a grand jury summoned under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 52, and R. S. C., Jan. 15, 1903, made under s. 89 (3) of the Local Government Act, 1888 (see post, p. 195); (3) In the case of informations filed in the court (see post, p. 142). The court has special jurisdiction to try the following offences:—Wilful neglect or delay to deliver or transmit writs for the election of members of parliament (53 G. 3, c. 89, *s.*6); oppression and crimes by governors, etc., of colonies, or persons in public employment out of Great Britain (11 W. 3, c. 12; 42 G. 3, c. 85); offences by officials of the crown in India (10 G. 3, c. 47, s. 4; 13 G. 3, c. 63, s. 39; 21 G. 3, c. 70, s. 7). As to offences in India, see Ilbert, Government of India, 259, 265. None of these Acts appears to extend to treason or felony. R. v. Shawe, 5 M. & Sel. 403; 17 R. R. 370. Prosecutions under them have been rare. See R. v. Jones, 8 East, 31: Picton's case, 30 St. Tr. 225: R. v. Eyre, L. R. 3 Q. B. 487: R. v. Turner [1889] 24 L. J. Newsp. 466, 469, 479.

Courts of Assize, etc.]—Courts acting under a commission of assize only try such criminal offences as are sent to them for trial on a transcript of a record of the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice. See Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 90, and post, tit. "Certiorari." The ordinary circuit courts of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery have jurisdiction to try any offence triable at common law, or by statute, in the county or other district for which they are commissioned, and not specifically excluded from their jurisdiction. Courts of assize, oyer and terminer, and gaol delivery, were made part of the High Court by ss. 16, 29 of the Judicature Act, 1873: R. v. Dudley, 14 Q. B. D. 273, 560; R. v. Parke [1903] 2 K. B. 432, 436. Special commissions of oyer and terminer, etc., can be issued, but are now rare. The jurisdiction of these courts is concurrent with that of quarter sessions as to cases wherein the latter have jurisdiction.

Central Criminal Court.]—The Central Criminal Court is created by a commission of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery for the district allotted to it, and for the prisons appointed as its prisons (4 & 5 W. 4, c. 36, ss. 2-4; 44 & 45 Vict. c. 64, s. 2: R. v. Boaler, 17 Cox, 569: R. v. Marshall, 34 L. J. Newsp. 48). It has also a special admiralty jurisdiction (4 & 5 W. 4, c. 36, s. 22). The history of the court is to be found in 6 St. Tr., N. S. 1135: and see Leverson v. R., L. R. 4 Q. B. 394. Under the Judicature Act, 1873 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 66), ss. 16, 29, it has become a branch of the High Court. R. v. Parke [1903] 2 K. B. 432, 439, 442.

Courts of Quarter Sessions: 1. Relation to courts of assize.]—Where the quarter sessions of a county occur while the judge of assize is proceeding with the trial of prisoners in that county, after the grand jury have been discharged, it has been considered proper that the quarter sessions should not proceed with the trial of prisoners, but after disposing of their other business, should adjourn to a future day. See 9 C. & P. 790. But as the authority of a county or borough court of quarter sessions is not in law determined or suspended by the commission of assize, a trial at the sessions, during the continuance of the assizes in the same county, is valid in law. Smith v. R., 13 Q. B. 738; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 207. As regards quarter sessions within the Central Criminal Court district, this rule is expressly recognized by 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 36, s. 21.

It was the duty of the sheriff under 3 H. 7, c. 3, and is the duty of the governor of the prison, to lay before the court a calendar of prisoners in the prison for trial before it: 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 38, s. 3; 14 & 15 Vict. c 55, s. 19; and 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, s. 62.

Some judges of assize have in recent years considered it their duty to deliver the gaols of the prisoners whom they found there, although the offences for which such prisoners had been committed were within the jurisdiction of quarter sessions, and although the prosecutor and his witnesses had been bound over to prosecute and give evidence at quarter sessions. The English statutes and decisions on this question are collected in R. v. Clifford [1895] 16 New South Wales Rep. Law, 12. By the Quarter Sessions Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 6), courts of quarter sessions have power to fix or alter the time for holding the then next quarter sessions, so as to prevent their clashing with the next assizes. The dates of borough quarter sessions are fixed by the recorder subject to the directions of the Home Secretary (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 165): see Archbold, Q. S. (5th ed.) 72, 75.

The Assizes Relief Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 12), provides (s. 1) that whenever any person has been committed to gaol or admitted to bail by a justice or justices under s. 22 or s. 25 of 11 & 12 Vict c. 42, charged with an indictable offence triable at quarter sessions, the persons bound over to prosecute and give evidence shall be bound over to attend for that purpose at the next practicable court of quarter sessions having jurisdiction to try such person for such offence, unless such justice or justices for special reasons think fit otherwise to direct; and where the persons are so bound over, the person charged shall be tried at the said court of quarter sessions, and a court of oyer and terminer or general gaol delivery shall not be required to deliver such person from gaol, unless the High Court of Justice shall by order direct that such person shall be indicted and tried at a court of oyer and terminer or general gaol delivery having jurisdiction to try him for such offence. Sub-s. 2 of s. 1, prescribes the procedure where the High Court has made the order mentioned in sub-s. 1. S. 3 prescribes the course of procedure where a prisoner having been committed to gaol on a charge for an indictable offence, and persons having been bound over to prosecute and give evidence at quarter sessions, the prisoner is not tried at those sessions.

2. Jurisdiction.]—The present form of the Commission of the Peace (prescribed by Order in Council of Feb. 22, 1878, and printed in Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 1, tit. "Clerk of the Crown"), authorizes the justices to inquire "of all and all manner of crimes and trespasses, and all and singular other offences of which the justices of our peace may or ought lawfully to inquire," . . . except in cases of difficulty, which are to be transmitted to the assizes, "and to hear and determine all and singular the crimes, trespasses, and offences aforesaid according to the laws and statutes of our realm, as in the like case it has been accustomed or ought to be done." As to the jurisdiction of courts of quarter sessions under the commission of the peace, see Archbold, Q. S. (5th ed.) 269: Keen. v. R., 10 Q. B. 923: 2 Cox, 341. A court of county or borough quarter sessions has jurisdiction to try any indictable offence except those in the annexed list. This jurisdiction rests on the Quarter Sessions Act, 1842 (5 & 6 Vict. c. 33, s. 1) except in the cases in italics, which depend on the particular statutes specified:—

1. Treason, or misprision of treason;
2. Murder;
3. Capital felony, or any felony, except burglary (59 & 60 Vict. c. 57), which when committed by a person not previously convicted of felony, is punishable by penal servitude for life (20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, ss. 2, 6);

4. Offences against the King's title, prerogative, person, or government, or against either House of Parliament;

5. Offences subject to the penalties of præmunire;

6. Blasphemy, and offences against religion;

7. Administering and taking unlawful oaths;

8. Perjury and subornation of perjury;

9. Making or suborning any other person to make a false oath, affirmation, or declaration, punishable as perjury or as a misdemeanor;

10. Forgery;

11. Offences against the False Personation Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 36, s. 3);

12. Unlawfully and maliciously setting fire to crops of corn, grain, or pulse, or to any part of a wood, coppice, or plantation of trees, or to any heath, gorse, furze, or fern;

13. Offences against s. 9 of the Night Poaching Act, 1828 (9 G. 4, c. 69);

14. Bigamy and offences against the laws relating to marriage;

15. Abduction of women and girls, and indictable offences against the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 17);

16. Endeavouring to conceal the birth of a child;

17. Composing, printing, or publishing blasphemous, seditious, or defamatory libels;

18. Bribery [except bribery of and by members, etc., of corporations, within 52 & 53 Vict. c. 69, s. 6];

19. Corrupt practices at parliamentary or municipal elections, including elections of county, district, and parish councils, and of boards of guardians (17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, s. 10; 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51, s. 53; 47 & 48 Vict. c. 70, ss. 30, 35, & 36, sch.; 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 75; 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, s. 48), or elections in the city of London (47 & 48 Vict. c. 70, s. 35; 50 & 51 Vict. c. xiii.); or of metropolitan borough councils (62 & 63 Vict c. 14);

20. Unlawful combinations and conspiracies, except conspiracies and combinations to commit any offence which the justices or recorder respectively have or has jurisdiction to try when committed by one person;

21. Stealing or fraudulently taking, or injuring or destroying, records or documents belonging to any court of law or equity, or relating to any proceeding therein;

22. Stealing, or fraudulently destroying or concealing, wills of testamentary papers, or any document or written instrument being or containing evidence of the title to any real estate, or any interest in lands, tenements, or hereditaments;

23. Misdemeanors against ss. 77–86 of the Larceny Act, 1861 (which relate to frauds by persons entrusted with powers of attorney, factors, agents, trustees, and directors and officers of public companies, etc.), 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 87;

24. Misdemeanors against the Larceny Act, 1901 (1 Ed. 7, c. 10: fraudulent conversion of property by persons entrusted therewith);

25. Offences against the Official Secrets Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 52, s. 6 (3)).

Offences against the bankruptcy laws are now triable at quarter sessions: see 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 20, and 37 & 38 Vict. c. 96 (Stat. Law Rev.), which repealed the provision to the contrary in 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1.

The jurisdiction of quarter sessions to try a person for the common law misdemeanor of attempting to commit suicide, is not taken away by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 11–16, which render an attempt to commit murder a felony, punishable by penal servitude for life; for attempting to kill one's self is not an attempt to commit murder within the meaning of that statute. R. v. Burgess, L. & C. 258; 32 L. J. (M. C.) 55. Where an indictment charged that the defendants conspired by divers false pretences to defraud the prosecutor of his money; and it was objected that the facts ought to have been set out, so as to show that the false pretences were within the jurisdiction of the sessions, by which the indictment had been tried, the court of Queen's Bench held that, after verdict it must be taken that the jury had found the defendants guilty on facts, proving a conspiracy to defraud by such false pretences as were cognizable by the sessions. Latham v. R., 5 B. & S. 635; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 197.

A court of quarter sessions cannot try an indictment against a corporation. See ante, p. 11; post, p. 130.

Courts of quarter sessions have power to transmit to the assizes for trial indictments found before them which they have no jurisdiction to try, or which from the nature of the charge should more properly be tried at assizes. The power arises under the commission of the peace, and is preserved by s. 5 of the Assizes Relief Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 12). It is specifically given as to quarter sessions within the Central Criminal Court district by 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 36, s. 19. These powers are distinct from the procedure by certiorari, post, p. 129.

Indictments found at the sessions and transmitted by the justices to the assizes must be tried at the assizes, although they be not moved by certiorari. R. v. Wetherell, R. & R. 331. An indictment was found at quarter sessions against the defendant, who was, upon a certificate of such finding, taken before a justice under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 3, and bound by recognizances to appear and plead at the assizes. The indictment was not transmitted to the assizes, but remained in the custody of the clerk of the peace. It was held that the transmission of the indictment to the assizes was in the discretion of the justices, and that the judge of assize had no power to order such transmission, and that the indictment having been found at sessions and not transmitted for trial at the assizes, it could not be tried at the assizes. Another indictment against the defendant for the same offence having however been found by the grand jury at the assizes, it was held, that the defendant being bound by the above-mentioned recognizance, must be called upon it to plead to such second indictment. R. v. Wildman, 12 Cox, 354, Keating, J.

Change of place of trial.]—The King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice has jurisdiction to change the place of trial of any felony or misdemeanor, whenever it is necessary for the purpose of securing, so far as possible, a fair and impartial trial. R. v. Holden, 5 B. & Ad. 347, 354, Denman, L.C.J.: and see R. v. Boughton [1895] 2 Ir. Rep. 386. For this purpose a writ of certiorari must issue to remove the indictment into the King's Bench Division, unless the court or a judge think fit to direct the trial to be held at the Central Criminal Court, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, post, p. 136. Indictments may be removed from the Crown Court of Assize without a certiorari, because the court is made part of the High Court by the Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, ss. 16, 29. R. v. Dudley, 14 Q. B. D. 273, 560; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 32. An order, however, for their removal is requisite, which is obtained in the same way, and is subject to the same conditions, certiorari. See Cr. Off. Rules, rr. 28–34, post.

Sect. 13.

CERTIORARI.

The writ of certiorari is an original writ, usually issuing out of the King's Bench Division, when the crown would be certified of any record in any other court of record. Fitz. N. B. 245 a.; 36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, s. 34. It may also, under 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 36, s. 16, be issued by the judges of the High Court who are in the commission of the Central Criminal Court, and by the recorder of the city of London, to remove from courts of quarter sessions having jurisdiction within the Central Criminal Court district, indictments found in such courts for offences cognizable by the Central Criminal Court under the Act; and may be issued under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 2, by a judge of assize in respect of indictments found as taken before courts of quarter sessions (for any county or borough within his commission) in respect of offences which they have no jurisdiction to try (ante, p. 126). There seems, however, to be no power to remove by certiorari the order of a justice committing a person for trial for an indictable offence. See R. v. Roscommon. Justices [1894] 2 Ir. Rep. 158. The power to remove by certiorari an indictment found at quarter sessions is not affected by 52 & 53 Vict. c. 12 (Assizes Relief Act, 1889). See s. 5. The writ is directed in the King's name to the judges or officers of inferior courts, requiring them to return the records of a certain indictment or inquisition depending before them, in order that the party may have the benefit of a trial in the King's Bench Division, or before such justices as his Majesty shall assign to hear and determine the cause. For the removal of indictments into the King's Bench Division the writ is sued out of the King's Bench Division and issued from the crown office: that division of the High Court, as successor to the old court of King's Bench, having a general superintendence over all other courts of criminal jurisdiction, whether ancient or newly created (2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 22), and being the sovereign ordinary court of justice in criminal causes. 4 Bl. Com. 320: 36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, s. 34. This writ is frequently used in order the better to consider and determine the validity of indictments and the proceedings thereon, and to prevent a partial and insufficient trial, which it is apprehended would take place in the original jurisdiction. 1 Chit. Cr. L. 371; 2 Hale, 210. The effect of the writ is to remove all proceedings such as are described therein, which have taken place between the teste and return, although they may have been commenced after the teste. R. v. Battams, 1 East, 298; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 73. It may be applied for before or after the finding of any indictment. 60 G. 3 & 1 G. 4, c. 4, s. 4. The writ is of no effect unless it is delivered to the court below before the time for its return has expired.

Form of the writ.]—The following is the form of the writ of certiorari to remove an indictment into the King's Bench Division, addressed to the justices of quarter sessions:—

Edward the Seventh, by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British dominions beyond the seas King defender of the faith, to the keepers of our peace and our justices assigned to hear and determine divers crimes, trespasses, and other offences committed within our county of D., and to every of them, greeting: We, being willing for certain reasons that all and singular indictments of whatsoever felonies [or misdemeanors] whereof A. B. is [if indictment not yet preferred, add, or may be] before you indicted (as it said) be determined before us in the King's Bench Division of our High Court of Justice, and not elsewhere, do command you and every of you that you or one of you do forthwith send under your seals, or the seal of one of you, before us in our said court at the Royal Courts of Justice, London, all and singular the said indictments, with all things touching the same, by whatsoever name the said A. B. may be called therein, together with this our writ, that we may cause further to be done thereon what right of and according to the law and custom of England we shall see fit to be done. Witness, Richard Everard, Baron Alverstone, at the Royal Courts of Justice, London, the day of , in the year of our Lord, 190 .

The writ must bear the following indorsements:—

By order of court [or of Mr. Justice , as the case may be].
At the instance of the prosecutor [or defendant].
Recognizance by the prosecutor [or defendant] in the sum of £ , with [two] sureties in the sum of £ each.
This writ was issued by E. F., of , agent for C. D., of , solicitor for the prosecutor [or defendant].

[For other forms of the writ, see Appendix to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Forms 7, 8, & 9].

In what cases granted.]—The writ of certiorari is demandable as of right by the crown (R. v. Eaton, 2 T. R. 89; 1 R. R. 436; R. v. Thomas, 4 M. & S. 442; 16 R. R. 520), and issues as of course where the attorney-general or other officer of the crown applies for it, either as prosecutor or as conducting the defence on behalf of the crown; Id.: R. v. Lewis, 4 Burr. 2456, 2458; and this, even though the certiorari be expressly taken away by statute; for, as a general rule, the crown is not bound by statute unless expressly named therein: Hardcastle on Statutes (3rd ed.) pp. 383-402. (For form of attorney-general's fiat for application for certiorari, see Appendix to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Form 23.) By analogy to this rule, the certiorari was formerly granted almost of course to private prosecutors, who were said to represent the crown, at whose suit all indictments are preferred. But now, "no indictment, except indictments against bodies corporate not authorized to appear by solicitor in the court in which the indictment is preferred, shall be removed into the King's Bench Division, either at the instance of the prosecutor or of the defendant (other than the attorney-general acting on behalf of the crown), unless it be made to appear to the court or a judge, by the party applying, that a fair and impartial trial of the case cannot be had in the court below, or that some question of law of more than usual difficulty and importance is likely to arise upon the trial, or that a view of the premises in respect whereof any indictment is preferred, or a special jury, may be required for a satisfactory trial of the same." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 29, which supersedes 16 & 17 Vict c. 30, s. 4 (rep.), as to which see R. v. Gate Fulford, 6 Cox, 510. The reason for the provision as to bodies corporate is that they cannot appear by attorney in courts of oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery or at sessions of the peace. R. v. Birmingham and Gloucester Rail. Co., 9 C. & P. 469, Parke, B.

The difficult points of law likely to arise must be specifically pointed out in order to induce the court to grant a certiorari, and must be stated in the rule. R. v. Joule, 5 A. & E. 539; R. v. Josephs, 8 Dowl. 178. If it be clearly made out that there is a fair and reasonable probability of partiality and prejudice in the jurisdiction within which the indictment would otherwise be tried, the certiorari will be granted: R. v. Lewis, 2 Str. 704: R. v. Fawle, 2 Ld. Raym. 1452; R. v. Waddington, 1 East, 167; 6 R. R. 238: R. v. Penprase, 4 B. & Ad. 573; 1 Nev. & M. 312: R. v. Hunt, 3 B. & Ald. 444: R. v. Holden, 5 B. & Ad. 347; 2 Nev. & M. 167: R. v. Lever, 1 Wil., Wol. & Hod. 35: R. v. Palmer, 5 E. & B. 1024: as where a member of the court of magistrates was interested in the result of the trial: R. v. Jones, 2 Har. & Wol. 293 (but see R. v. Fellows, 1 Har. & Wol. 648; 4 Dowl. 607, contra): or where a magistrate, in the commission for the county, was indicted at the quarter sessions and circulated among the other magistrates a printed account of the charges. R. v. Grover, 8 Dowl. 325. So where the prosecutor or his solicitor is sheriff or under-sheriff, and could attend the grand jury when they considered the bill (R. v. Webb, 2 Str. 1068), the writ will be granted. Under some circumstances the court will grant a certiorari for the removal of an indictment for conspiracy: R. v. Wilks, 5 E. & B. 690; 25 L. J. (Q. B.) 47; R. v. Rowlands, 17 Q. B. 671; 2 Den. 364; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 81, even where one of several defendants makes the application without the consent of the others. R. v. Foulkes, 1 L. M. & P. 720; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 196; R. v. Boxall, 5 A. & E. 513: R. v. Probert, Dears. 30: R. v. Jewell, 7 E. & B. 140; 26 L. J. (Q. B.) 177. In those cases the writ was allowed on the application of one of several defendants, who was a responsible person, he entering into a recognizance to pay costs in case of the conviction of himself or of any of the other defendants. See Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 30, post, pp. 133, 134.

In what cases refused.]—An indictment for not repairing bridges and the highways at the end thereof, where the inhabitants of the county are chargeable with the repair of the same, is not removable by certiorari, out of the county where such bridges or highways lie. 1 Anne, st. 1, c. 18, s. 5: R. v. Hamworth, 2 Str. 900: R. v. Cumberland, 6 T. R. 194; 3 R. R. 149; 3 B. & P. 354 (H. L.). But this Act cannot apply where the indictment is of the inhabitants of the county from which the petty jury comes. See Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 205. An indictment against any person for keeping a bawdy-house, gaming-house, or other disorderly house is not removable by certiorari at the instance of the defendant. 25 G. 2, c. 36, s. 10. But where an indictment for keeping a disorderly house had been removed from the Middlesex Sessions to the Central Criminal Court, under 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 36, s. 16, the court granted a certiorari to remove the indictment into the Queen's Bench at the instance of the defendant, holding that where the indictment has been once removed by the prosecutor, 25 G. 2, c. 36, s. 10, which takes away the writ of certiorari, does not apply. R. v. Brier, 14 Q. B. 568; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 121. If an indictment charging an offence in which the certiorari is taken away by statute contains counts charging an offence where it is not taken away, the writ may still issue. R. v. Saunders, 5 D. & R. 611.

The writ is rarely if ever issued to remove an indictment after judgment in the court below except for the purpose of carrying the judgment into execution (Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 93), or as a step ancillary to the grant of a writ of error (post, ch. viii. sect. 2), which is the proper mode of questioning the legality of the judgment on an indictment: R. v. Dixon, 6 Mod. 61, cited in R. v. Nichols, 13 East, 412 n., 417 n.; 12 R. R. 486: R. v. Pennegoes, 1 B. & C. 142; 25 R. R. 334: R. v. Lucas, 2 Fox & Sm. (K. B., Ir.) 30; ex parte Collins, Q. B. D., Dec. 19, 1899; 34 L. J. Newsp., 132.

In Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 93 n., reference is made to a suggestion in an unreported case of R. v. Boaler (1888), that the writ might lie where error would not. But in R. v. Boaler [1892] 17 Cox, 569, it was held that certiorari will not go to the Central Criminal Court to bring up an indictment after judgment. In R. v. Seton, 7 T. R. 373; 4 R. R. 466, the court quashed a certiorari granted before, but not lodged till after judgment in an indictment for misdemeanor, and in R. v. Unwin, 7 Dowl. 578 a certiorari was refused in a case where the defendant had surreptitiously secured an acquittal by failing to give the notice of trial usual at the sessions where he was indicted.

The court can grant, but usually refuses to issue, the writ for removal of an indictment for felony or misdemeanor after verdict and before judgment. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 28: 1 Chit. Cr. L. 380: R. v. Oxfordshire, 13 East, 411; 12 R. R. 486: R. v. Garside, 2 A. & E. 266: R. v. Nichols, ubi supra: R. v. Boater, 17 Cox, 569.

The court will not, ordinarily, at the prayer of the defendant, grant a certiorari for the removal of an indictment for perjury, forgery at common law, or other heinous misdemeanor where the delay would tend to defeat the prosecution, 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 28: R. v. Pusey, 2 Str. 717; or for murder, R. v. Mead, 3 D. & R. 301: R. v. Thomas, 4 M. & Sel. 442; 16 R. R. 520; unnatural crime, R. v. Holden, 5 B. & Ad. 347; 2 Nev. & M. 167, or the like. See R. v. Penprase, 4 B. & Ad. 573; 1 Nev. & M. 312. So the court will not, in general, except by the consent of the prosecutor, remove an indictment from a court of competent jurisdiction where any of the judges of the High Court preside. See R. v. Kingston (Duchess), 1 Cowp. 283; 20 St. Tr. 355. The writ will not usually be granted to remove an indictment from the Central Criminal Court, or any other court in which judges of the Supreme Court sit, on the ground that a difficult question of law will arise: R. v. Templar, 1 Nev. & P. 91: R. v. Wartnaby, 4 A. & E., 435; and see Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 96.

Time when granted.]—The writ may be sued out in cases of misdemeanor, though at the time the indictment is not in esse; and it is sufficient if the indictment be found at any period before the writ is returnable. 60 G. 3, & 1 G. 4, c. 4, s. 4. The proper time for either party to apply for a certiorari is before issue joined on the indictment: 1 Chit. Cr. L. 380; but the certiorari is not too late, if delivered before the jury are sworn to try the case. 60 G. 3, c. 4, s. 3 (rep.): see R. v. Passman, 2 Dowl. 529; 1 A. & E. 603.

Mode of obtaining the writ.]—In all cases (except where the attorney-general applies for the writ on behalf of the crown) the application must be founded upon affidavit, suggesting some adequate ground for removal. See ante, p. 130.

The following form of an affidavit in support of an application for a certiorari to remove an indictment into the King's Bench Division, is given in Appendix to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, form 2:—

In the High Court of Justice,
King's Bench Division.
I, A. B., of, etc. make oath and say as follows:
1. That at the general quarter sessions of the peace holden at in and for the county of , on or about the day of , a bill of indictment was preferred to the grand jury who returned a true bill [or that it is intended to prefer a bill of indictment, as the case may be].
2. That in my judgment and belief, nice and intricate questions or points of law will arise on the trial of the said indictment, which will render it important that the same should be tried before one of the learned judges of the High Court of Justice, and particularly, that a question will, as I am advised, be raised as to whether [state the particular question that will arise, or that a question will arise upon the construction of an Act of Parliament].

3. That, in my judgment and belief, it will be material and necessary that the said indictment should be tried by a special jury, which cannot be had, unless the said indictment be removed into this honourable court. And that I [or as the case may be] will cause a special jury to be had if the said indictment shall be so removed.

4. That I verily believe that it will be important and necessary that a view of the place and premises in question should be had by some of the jurymen to be impannelled, to try the issue joined upon the said indictment, which I am informed and believe can only be had by the said indictment being removed into this honourable court.

[NOTE.—Where the view is to be had in the county where the bill is preferred certiorari is unnecessary. See R. v. Martin, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 378; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 113, and see post, p. 212.]

5. That, by reason of [here state what has occurred to create prejudice], I verily believe that strong prejudices have been created in the minds of some of the justices who may preside at the sessions upon the trial of the said indictment. And also among that class of persons in the said place, from whom the common jurors are selected for the trials at the said sessions, and some of whom are likely to be called upon the jury for the trial of the said indictment, unless the same be removed into this honourable court. And therefore, that a fair and impartial trial of the same cannot be had at the said sessions.

6. That [add any other allegation which may be likely to induce the court or a judge to grant the writ of certiorari, consistent with the facts and circumstances of the case required to be removed.]

[Omit any of the foregoing allegations which may not be applicable to the case.]

The affidavits, if sworn in England, must be sworn before a judge, district registrar, commissioner to administer oaths, see 52 & 53 Vict. c. 10 (Commissioners for Oaths Act, 1889), first or second class clerk in the Crown Office Department, or officer empowered under the Rules of the Supreme Court to administer oaths. Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 9. As to the persons before whom affidavits may be sworn out of England, see Id. r. 11. The affidavits must be entitled, "In the High Court of Justice, King's Bench Division." Id. r. 7. "Every application for a writ of certiorari, or for an order to remove an indictment found at the assizes into the King's Bench Division, at the instance of any person other than the attorney-general on behalf of the crown, shall, during the sittings, be made to a divisional court of the said division by motion for an order nisi to show cause, and in the vacation or when there is no sitting of a divisional court to a judge at chambers for a summons to show cause: Provided that where, from special circumstances, the court or a judge may be of opinion that the writ should issue forthwith, the order may be made absolute, or an order be made in the first instance, either ex parte or otherwise, as the court or judge may direct." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 28. No summons to show cause before a judge at chambers shall be issued for a writ of certiorari without the leave of a judge upon an ex parte application. Id. r. 305. For forms of summonses at chambers, see Appendix to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Forms 3 & 5, and for form of judge's order for certiorari to remove indictment into the King's Bench Division, see Id. Form 4; and for form of judge's order to remove indictment from assizes or Central Criminal Court into the King's Bench Division, see Id. Form 6.

Allowance.]—"No writ of certiorari for the removal of an indictment, or order to remove an indictment found at the assizes, shall be allowed by the court to whom it may be directed, unless the person (other than the attorney-general acting on behalf of the crown and the prosecutor of an indictment against a body corporate) at whose instance it has been issued shall have entered into a recognizance by himself, if he is the prosecutor, with sufficient sureties, conditioned on the return of such writ to make up the record, and give notice of trial and proceed to trial of the indictment at the next assizes to be held for the county wherein the indictment was found, or if in London or Middlesex forthwith at the sittings of the High Court of Justice, and to pay the costs of the defendant subsequent to the removal of the indictment, if he be acquitted; and if the party removing is the defendant, until he shall have entered into a recognizance with sufficient sureties conditioned to appear and plead (and in cases of felony in open court) to the said indictment, and give notice of trial, and proceed to trial of the indictment at the next assizes to be held for the county wherein the indictment was found, or if in London or Middlesex forthwith at the sittings of the High Court of Justice, and personally to appear from day to day at the trial of such indictment, and if necessary in the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice, and not depart till he shall be discharged by the court, and to pay the costs of the prosecution subsequent to the removal of the indictment, if the defendant or any of the defendants, if more than one, be convicted." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 30. A certiorari obtained by one of several co-defendants removes the indictment as to all. R. v. Boxall, 4 A. & E. 513.

This rule generalizes a provision made as to certain misdemeanors by 21 Jas. 1, c. 8, s. 4, and as to appeals from judgments and orders of quarter sessions by 5 G. 2, c. 19, ss. 2, 3.

On removing an indictment containing seven counts into the High Court, the prosecutors bound themselves to pay the defendant's costs if she were acquitted on the indictment. Defendant having been acquitted on five out of the seven counts, it was held that this was not an acquittal upon the indictment within the meaning of the recognizance, and that she could not claim her costs of the counts on which she had been acquitted. R. v. Bayard [1892] 2 Q. B. 181; 17 Cox, 502.

"If the person at whose instance any writ of certiorari for the removal of an indictment, or order to remove an indictment found at the assizes, shall have been awarded, shall not before the allowance thereof enter into a properly conditioned recognizance, the court to which such writ or order may be directed shall proceed to the trial of the indictment, as if such writ or order had not been awarded." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 31.

The "allowance" of the writ mentioned in this rule means by the person to whom it is directed. R. v. Abergele, 5 A. & E. 795: R. v. Dunn, 8 T. R. 217: R. v. Jones, 9 Dowl. 504.

When the certiorari is granted, the divisional court or judge at chambers on granting it fixes the amount of the recognizances (to be entered into before a judge, or a justice of the county or place in which the party resides), and the amount of the recognizances is indorsed on the writ. By r. 30, supra, the prosecutor of an indictment against a body corporate is not bound to enter into recognizances on the removal of an indictment by certiorari, because the corporation can plead only in the High Court. R. v. Birmingham and Gloucester Rail. Co., 9 C. & P.

469. The rule in this respect follows the construction put upon 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 5 (rep.), in R. v. Mayor, etc., of Manchester, 7 E. & B. 453; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 65. As to the mode of entering into recognizances when they are required from a parish, etc., or other such large quasi corporate body, see R. v. Abergele, 5 A. & E. 795. When they are required from a corporation, it is the practice to allow one of the members of the corporation, on behalf of himself and the rest of the corporation, to enter into the recognizance, with such sureties as may be required. Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 17.

For the forms of recognizances by prosecutor and defendant on certiorari to remove indictment into the King's Bench Division, see Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Forms 10, 11.

The following is the form of the rule to compel the defendant to put in better bail:—

The King against A. B. — Unless the defendant shall put in better bail within four days next after notice of this rule to him or his attorney given, let a procedendo issue.

ALVERSTONE.

The recognizance must be lodged, together with the writ, with the clerk of the peace or clerk of assize, as the case may be; and after they are lodged all proceedings upon the indictment in the court below are stayed.

"All recognizances to be entered into for the allowance of any writ of certiorari, or order to remove an indictment found at the assizes, or any writ of certiorari for the removal of any order, conviction, inquisition, or other proceeding removed thereby, shall be certified into the King's Bench Division with the writ of certiorari or order of removal." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 32. The recognizance when acknowledged must be transmitted to and filed in the Crown Office. Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 123.

Where a defendant has entered into insufficient recognizances, the court will discharge them, and compel him to give better security. R. v. Hooper, 1 Chit. Rep. (K. B.) 491.

Return to writ.]—The return is made by indorsing on the writ of certiorari the following memorandum:—The execution of this writ appears by the schedules hereunto annexed. The answer of A. B., Esquire, one of the keepers of the peace and justices within mentioned. This memorandum must be signed and sealed by A. B. The schedules mentioned in it as thereunto annexed, are the indictment and other documents to be returned in pursuance of the certiorari. See Appendix to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Form 21.

Sending back the record.]—If the writ of certiorari has been improvidently issued, e.g., if it appears to have been obtained by misrepresentation of the facts, the court (or a judge at chambers, R. v. Scaife, 18 Q. B. 773; 2 Den. 513; 3 C. & K. 211; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 221) may award a writ of supersedeas to the certiorari and a procedendo to carry back the indictment, and so send back the record to the original jurisdiction, there to be dealt with as if no certiorari had issued. See 1 Burn's J. 648 (30th ed.); 4 Co. Inst. 67. The same course may be taken if the defendant neglects to perform the condition of the recognizance, or if bad or insufficient bail be put in. R. v. Jones, 9 Dowl. 504: R. v. Dunn, 8 T. R. 217; R. v. Abergele, 5 A. & E. 795; Com. Dig. Certiorari (G.); 1 Chitty Cr. L. 397. And where the defendants in a case originally removed from quarter sessions by certiorari, having obtained a rule in the Queen's Bench for a new trial, neglected to bring down the record and proceed to trial at the assizes, a writ of procedendo was awarded, and the record was sent back to sessions, where the parties were tried and sentenced to transportation. R. v. Scaife, ubi supra.

For the form of writ of supersedeas to certiorari and procedendo to carry back indictment, see Appendix to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Form 169.

Trial at Central Criminal Court of indictments removed by certiorari.]—By 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, s. 1 ("Palmer's Act"), the court of King's Bench in term time, or any judge thereof in vacation, is authorized, whenever any indictment or inquisition for any felony or misdemeanor committed or supposed to have been committed at any place out of the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court shall have been removed by certiorari in the King's Bench, to order, if it appear to be expedient to the ends of justice, that such indictment or inquisition shall be tried at the Central Criminal Court. Or such court or judge may, in any such case of felony or misdemeanor, order a certiorari to issue to the court before which the indictment or inquisition shall be pending, or shall thereafter be found, or to the coroner before whom such inquisition shall have been or shall thereafter be taken, to remove the indictment or inquisition directly into the Central Criminal Court (s. 3). Provisions are made for the transmission of the indictment or inquisition, and for the return of the recognizances, depositions, etc., into that court (ss. 2, 4); for the removal of the offender to the prison appointed for the Central Criminal Court (s. 5); for his arraignment, pleading and trial at the Central Criminal Court (19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, ss. 6, 7); for the allowance of the expenses of prosecutions (s. 13); and otherwise in relation to the objects of the Act. The powers of the Court of King's Bench were transferred to the High Court of Justice (King's Bench Division) by 36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, s. 34. The court has refused to make it a condition, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, s. 24 (rep. and superseded by Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 30), that the prosecutor should furnish the defendant with evidence which it was suggested had been obtained by the prosecutor since the depositions were taken. R. v. Palmer, 5 E. & B. 1024.

"An application for an order that an indictment or inquisition removed into the King's Bench Division shall be tried at the Central Criminal Court, or a motion to remove an indictment or inquisition by certiorari into the Central Criminal Court for trial under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, shall, during the sittings, be made to the King's Bench Division by motion for an order nisi: and in the vacation, where there is no sitting of a divisional court, to a judge at chambers for a summons; and the order may be made absolute or granted upon such terms as to recognizance or otherwise as the court or judge may consider reasonable." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 42. No appeal lies from the refusal of the King's Bench Division to grant a certiorari to remove an indictment to the Central Criminal Court under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16. R. v. Rudge, 16 Q. B. D. 459; 55 L. J. (M. C.) 112.

Costs in certiorari.]—The provisions of 7 G. 4, c. 64, post, ch. vi., Costs, do not apply to the costs incurred on an indictment removed by certiorari. R. v. Richards, 2 Man. & Ry. 405; 8 B. & C. 420: R. v. Johnson, 1 Mood. C. C. 173; R. v. Treasurer of Exeter, 5 Man. & Ry. 167. See post, ch. vi., Costs. The liability to costs on the removal of an indictment by certiorari was first imposed by 21 Jas. 1, c. 8, s. 4, and 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 11, s. 3 (rep.), and was extended by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 5 (rep.). It is now regulated by Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 30 (ante, p. 134). Under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 5, it was held that the prosecutor is entitled to costs in the case of an indictment removed by the defendant by certiorari, where the defendant is convicted, though the prosecutor is not the party grieved or injured. R. v. Oastler, L. R. 9 Q. B. 132; 43 L. J. (Q. B.) 42; and as s. 5 is embodied in Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 30 (ante, p. 134), R. v. Oastler would be an authority on the construction of that rule. But a defendant who removes the indictment is not liable to costs, although he be found guilty by a jury, if judgment be arrested. R. v. Turner, 15 East, 570. [As to costs where a new trial is ordered, see post, ch. viii. s. 4.] If a defendant die after verdict and before judgment, his bail will be liable for the costs to the extent of their recognizances; R. v. Turner, 3 B. & C. 160: R. v. Finmore, 8 T. R. 409; but under ordinary circumstances the prosecutor is not entitled to costs till the court has pronounced judgment, for it may be that judgment will be arrested. R. v. Turner, 15 East, 570. If an indictment against several defendants be removed into the King's Bench Division without the consent of all of them, those who did not consent to the application for the certiorari are not liable for the costs, even though they have pleaded to the indictment and have been convicted upon it. R. v. Hassell, 5 Dowl. 531. But under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 5 (rep.), where the certiorari was applied for at the instance of one of two defendants, the judge might in his discretion make it a condition of the recognizance that the defendant applying for the writ should pay the prosecutor's costs, in case either he or the other defendant should be convicted, R. v. Jewell, 7 E. & B. 140; 26 L. J. (Q. B.) 177; and an express provision to that effect is contained in Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 30 (ante, p. 134). The prosecutor is not entitled to the costs of any counts of the indictment on which the defendant has been acquitted, R. v. Hawdon, 11 A. & E. 143, nor to costs incurred prior to the certiorari. R. v. Passman, 1 A. & E. 603, 606, n.: R. v. Higgins, 5 Dowl. 375; 6 L. J. (M. C.) 9. The defendant is to pay all reasonable costs occasioned by the removal of the indictment by the certiorari, or incurred in consequence of it, in order to carry the prosecution to its legal conclusion; R. v. Gilbie, 5 M. & Sel. 520; and the amount of costs is not limited by the recognizance. R. v. Teal, 13 East, 4; 10 R. R. 516. If a prosecutor, being entitled to costs, die after taxation of costs, his personal representatives are entitled to them.

The prosecutor's liability to pay costs to the defendant, if acquitted, only arises where the prosecutor has entered into the recognizance with the condition mentioned in r. 30 of the Cr. Off. Rules, 1886 (ante, p. 134). To entitle the defendant to costs he must be acquitted on all counts of the indictment. R. v. Bayard [1892], 2 Q. B. 181; 17 Cox, 572. If the prosecutor has merely entered into a recognizance conditioned to prosecute with effect, and to do and perform such orders and things as the court shall direct, he is not liable to costs. R. v. East Stoke, 6 B. & S. 536; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 190.

The costs are now taxed in the Supreme Court Taxing Office, and payment is enforced by estreat of the recognizances under Cr. Off. Rules, 124, 126, which is effected by order of the court made after calling upon the party liable to perform the conditions. 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 6, which permitted attachment, was repealed in 1892. As to costs of special jury, see R. v. Moate, 3 B. & Ad. 237; 1 L. J. K. B. 78; 37 R. R. 421.

As to the cases in which the defendant may, by reason of poverty or bankruptcy, have relief from the payment of the costs, see R. v. Thornton, 4 Ex. 820; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 113: R. v. Hills, 2 E. & B. 176; 22 L. J. (Q. B.) 322.

As to the costs in cases where the indictment, after its removal by certiorari, is tried at the Central Criminal Court, under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, ss. 25, 26, see post, ch. vi., Costs.

Change of venue.]—The removal of an indictment by certiorari at common law does no more than change the court of trial, and does not affect the venue. The original practice was to try the indictment at bar in the Court of King's Bench, unless after issue joined a writ of nisi prius were issued with the attorney-general's consent to try in the proper county. 2 Co. Inst. 421. The court was by 6 Hen. 8, c. 6 empowered thus to remit indictments of felonies. In the case of an offence committed outside the Central Criminal Court District, if it is desired to change the venue, this can be effected by obtaining an order under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, s. 3, for the trial of the offence in that court. On the removal of a case from that court the venue is determined by the court on issuing the certiorari and stated in the writ. Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 41, which provides that "every writ of certiorari for removing an indictment from the Central Criminal Court shall specify the county or jurisdiction in which the same shall be tried; and a jury shall be summoned, and the trial proceed, in the same manner in all respects as if the indictment had been originally preferred in that county or jurisdiction." The true construction of this rule is, that the King's Bench Division has discretion to name in the certiorari the county or jurisdiction in which the trial is to take place, and that by the jurors summoned from that jurisdiction the same issues shall be tried that would have been tried in the Central Criminal Court had the indictment not been removed. R. v. Castro, L. R. 9 Q. B. 350, 355; 43 L. J. (Q. B.) 105, 107.

In cases not dealt with as above it is necessary to obtain an order to change the venue, which may be made by a judge of assize without certiorari, or by the King's Bench Division after the grant of a certiorari and joinder of issue. Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 204. The right to make such an order appears to be established as to felonies. See R. v. Penprase, 4 B. & Ald. 573: R. v. Holden, 5 B. & Ad. 347; and R. v. Barrett, Ir. Rep., 4 C. L. 285: 18 W. R. 671: R. v. Fay, Ir. Rep. 6 C. L. 436: R. v. M'Eneany [1878] 2 L. R. Ir. 236: R. v. Phelan, 14 Cox, 579 (Ir.). And it is certainly established as to misdemeanors. But it is not exercised unless (1) demanded as of right by the attorney-general acting on behalf of the crown; (2) the inhabitants of a county are indicted and all are interested in the verdict: R. v. Southampton (Inhabitants), 17 Q. B. D. 424; (3) a view in another county is necessary: Clerk v. R. 9 H. L. C. 184: 31 L. J. (Q. B.) 175; R. v. Sheldon, 32 L. T. (N. S.) 27; or (4) a fair trial cannot be had in the original venue. R. v. Simpson, 5 Jur. 462: R. v. Dunn, 11 Jur. 287: R. v. Patent Eureka Co., 13 L. T., N. S. 365: R. v. Hunt, 3 B. & Ald. 444; 2 Chit. Rep. (K. B.) 130; R. v. Harris, 3 Burr. 1330: R. v. Duggan, Ir. Rep. 7 C. L. 94; R. v. Boughton [1895] 2 Ir. Rep. 386. Mere possibility of prejudice is not a sufficient reason for change of venue. R. v. King, 2 Chit. Rep. (K. B.) 217: R. v. Stephenson, 5 Jur. 341. Any extra expense caused by the change falls on the person who applies for it. R. v. Newton, 1 Cox, 195. It is usual, but not necessary, to change the venue to the nearest county on the same circuit in which a fair trial can be had. Anon., 6 Jur. 131: R. v. Browne, 6 Jur. 168: R. v. Palmer, 5 E. & B. 1024, 1028; Campbell, L. C. J. See Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 204. As to the trial in a county at large of offences committed in counties of cities, see ante, p. 44. An application to change the venue is made during the sittings to a Divisional Court of the King's Bench Division, in vacation to a judge. Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 205.

Trial at bar.]—Where an indictment has been removed by certiorari into the King's Bench Division the attorney-general, if prosecuting on behalf of the crown, has the right to demand a trial at bar; R. v. Hales, 2 Str. 816: R. v. Castro, L. R. 9 Q. B. 350; but not where he applies merely as counsel for a private prosecutor. R. v. Hales, ubi supra. See Dixon v. Farrer, 17 Q. B. D., pp. 666, 667, per Wills, J. The most recent instances of trials at bar are R. v. Jameson [1896] 2 Q. B. 425: 65 L. J. (M. C.) 218. In R. v. Lynch [1903] 1 K. B. 744, no demand was made by the attorney-general for a trial at bar, as treason committed abroad is triable before the King's Bench Division under 35 Hen. 8, c. 2, s. 1.

Sect. 14.

NOLLE PROSEQUI.

A nolle prosequi to stay proceedings upon an indictment or information pending in any court may be entered, by leave of the attorney-general, at the instance of either the prosecutor or the defendant, at any time after the bill of indictment is found, and before judgment. R. v. Dunn, 1 C. & K. 730; R. v. Colling, 2 Cox, 184. "This power of the attorney-general is not subject to any control by the courts; but does not interfere with the right of a judge to allow a case to be withdrawn on the application of a private prosecutor." R. v. Comptroller of Patents [1899] 1 Q. B. 909, 914, per Smith, L. J. If the office of attorney-general is vacant, semble that the solicitor-general may give leave to enter a nolle prosequi; Id., and see 42 & 43 Vict. c. 22, s. 9. Leave is never given except upon good cause shown, and it is never refused when the interests of justice require it. It is distinct from and has not the same effect as offering no evidence and submitting to acquittal. Elworthy v. Bird, 2 Bing. 258: 9 Moore C. P. 430. It appears to be preferable to an application to discharge the recognizances of the prosecutor and witnesses. See R. v. Freakley, 6 Cox, 75. The following is the form of the attorney-general's fiat or warrant to the coroner and attorney of the King's Bench Division to enter a nolle prosequi, in order to admit a prisoner, indicted for a conspiracy, as a witness for the crown:—

Whereas at the general quarter sessions of the peace holden for the West Riding of the county of York, etc., an indictment was found by the grand jury of the said Riding against H. S., T. S., G. E. and S. C., for a conspiracy falsely to charge J. H. to be the father of a bastard child, whereof the said H. S. was pregnant, which indictment has since been removed into the King's Bench Division of his Majesty's High Court of Justice; and whereas it is represented to me on the part of the prosecutor of the said indictment, that he considering that the said H. S. was rather an object of the conspiracy of the other defendants than a willing actress in it, and from recent information that she is comparatively innocent; and considering that the ends of justice would be best answered were she in a situation to undergo examination as a witness upon the subject-matter of the indictment, is desirous, with the advice of his counsel, to have a nolle prosequi entered as against the said H. S., and that he prays the same accordingly; these are therefore to authorize and require you to enter or cause to be entered a nolle prosequi upon the said indictment as to the said H. S. And for so doing this shall be your warrant. Dated, etc.

To J. R. M., Esq., coroner and attorney of the King's Bench Division of his Majesty's High Court of Justice.

Where the application is made at the instance of the prosecutor, the opinion of counsel as to the desirability of having the defendant examined as a witness is laid before the attorney-general, who will order the nolle prosequi to be entered without issuing any summons to the defendant: but where the application proceeds from the defendant, the attorney-general will direct his clerk to summon the prosecutor to show cause before him at his chambers why proceedings should not be stayed, and on hearing the parties grant his warrant, if he thinks the circumstances of the case demand it.

The attorney-general may, however, on an ex parte application by the defendant, and without calling the prosecutor before him, enter a nolle prosequi to an indictment. R. v. Allen, 1 B. & S. 850; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 129.

The usual occasion of granting a nolle prosequi is either where in cases of misdemeanor a civil action is depending for the same cause; R. v. Fielding, 2 Burr. 719; Jones v. Clay, 1 B. & P. 191; or where any improper and vexatious attempts are made to oppress the defendant, as by repeatedly preferring defective indictments for the same supposed offence; R. v. Guerchy, 1 W. Bl. 515; or if it be clear that an indictment is not sustainable against the defendant. R. v. Pond, 1 Comyns Rep. 312; 1 Chitty Cr. L. 479. Where an indictment is preferred against a defendant for an assault, and at the same time an action of trespass is commenced in one of the civil courts for identically the same assault, upon affidavit of the facts, and hearing the parties, the attorney-general will, if he sees fit, order a nolle prosequi to be entered to the indictment, or compel the prosecutor to elect whether he will pursue the criminal or civil remedy. R. v. Fielding, 2 Burr. 719; 1 Chitty Cr. L. 479.

The following may be the form of the affidavit in such a case:—

I, A. B., of the parish of ——, in the county of ——, etc., make oath and say, that I, this deponent, did see the clerk of the peace of the county of —— sign a certificate hereto annexed, on the —— day of ——, at ——, and that since [or before] the time of preferring the indictment, in the said certificate mentioned, I was served with a copy of a writ of summons, issuing out of the King's Bench Division of his Majesty's High Court of Justice, at the suit of C. D., the prosecutor of the said indictment, requiring me within eight days to cause an appearance to be entered for me in the said King's Bench Division, in an action of trespass at the suit of the said C. D.; and that on the —— day of —— I, this deponent, did receive a notice of a declaration being filed against me at the suit of the said C. D., the prosecutor of the said indictment, in the master's office of the said King's Bench Division, for assaulting him, the said C. D., which said declaration and indictment, I say, are for the same assault and not for different offences.

A certificate from the clerk of assize or clerk of the peace, stating the substance of the indictment, and the time when it was preferred, must be annexed to this affidavit. Cro. Circ. Comp. 25 (10th ed.). For form of certificate, see ante, p. 105). And if the attorney-general think the case a proper one for his interference, he will sign a warrant under his hand and seal, directed to the clerk of the peace, if the indictment has been found at sessions, directing him to enter a stet processus. R. v. Fielding, 2 Burr. 719: Jones v. Clay, 1 B. & P. 191. If the cause of the application be the vexatious conduct of the prosecutor, the attorney-general may direct the proceedings to be removed into the King's Bench Division, where counsel will be heard in support of the nolle prosequi. R. v. Guerchy, 1 W. Bl. 545. A nolle prosequi may be entered as to one of several defendants at any time before trial. R. v. Teal, 11 East, 307. And on motion for a new trial in the King's Bench on an indictment for a conspiracy against several defendants, the counsel for the crown, at the suggestion of the court, and having received the assent of the attorney-general (the attorney-general appearing as counsel for one of the defendants), entered a nolle prosequi as to two defendants, when the rule for a new trial was refused as to the rest; R. v. Rowlands, 17 Q. B. 671, 685; 2 Den. 364; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 81; and see R. v. Hempstead, R. & R. 344; and R. v. Butterworth, R. & R. 520. In R. v. Leatham, 30 L. J. (Q. B.) 205: 8 Cox, 498; 3 E. & E. 658; when the defendant had been found guilty on several counts of an information for bribery, the solicitor-general entered a nolle prosequi on one of them after a rule nisi for a new trial: and in R. v. Rowlands, ubi supra, on application for a rule nisi to arrest the judgment on an indictment for a conspiracy, a nolle prosequi was entered on three counts of an indictment, as to the sufficiency of which some doubts were entertained, and the court pronounced judgment on the remaining good counts, a verdict having been taken on each count. The following is the form of entering a nolle prosequi on record, given in Appendix to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Form 120:—

Afterwards on the —— day of ——, before our said lord the King at the Royal Courts of Justice, London, come as well the said coroner and attorney of our said lord the King, in the King's Bench Division of his Majesty's High Court of Justice, who for our said lord the King in this behalf prosecutes in his proper person, as the said A. B. by his solicitor. And the said coroner and attorney for our said lord the King says that he will not further prosecute (ait se nolle ulterius prosequi) the said A. B. upon the indictment [or information] aforesaid. Whereupon all and singular the premises being seen and fully understood by the court now here, it is considered and adjudged, by the said court here, that all proceedings upon the said indictment [or information] against the said A. B. be altogether stayed, and that the said A. B. be discharged of and from the said indictment [or information].

[NOTE.—In the case of an information filed by the attorney-general, his name must be used instead of that of the King's coroner and attorney.]

A nolle prosequi puts an end to the prosecution (see Gilchrist v. Gardner, 12 N. S. W. Rep. (Law) 184, and English authorities there cited) but does not operate as a bar or discharge or an acquittal on the merits. Goddard v. Smith, 6 Mod. 261: 3 Salk. 215: R. v. Ridpath, 10 Mod. 152; and the party remains liable to be re-indicted. It has been said that fresh process may be awarded on the same indictment. Goddard v. Smith, ubi supra; Com. Dig. Indict. (K.): but this dictum appears not to be law. See the judgment in R. v. Allen, 1 B. & S. 850; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 129; R. v. Mitchel, 3 Cox, 93; 6 St. Tr., N. S. 545; and Short & Mellor, Crown Office Practice, 249.

CHAPTER II.

INFORMATION.

SECT. 1. Preliminary, p. 142.
2. Information ex officio, p. 142.
3. Information by the Master of the Crown Office, p. 144.

SECT. 1.

PRELIMINARY.

PROSECUTIONS by information in respect of indictable misdemeanors or upon penal statutes, are not now in use before courts of oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery, or before courts of quarter sessions (Archbold, Quarter Sessions (5th ed.) 292). Informations on penal statutes are subject to the provisions of 18 Eliz. c. 5, and 31 Eliz. c. 5, except where the proceedings are of a civil nature, or are taken under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts. Informations for misdemeanor are still occasionally laid before the K. B. D. of the High Court. These are dealt with in sects. 2 & 3, post. Informations in that court in customs and revenue cases are now treated as civil proceedings for purposes of evidence: see the Crown Suits Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 104), s. 34 (which got rid of doubts expressed in Att.-Gen. v. Radloff, 10 Ex. 84: 23 L. J. (Ex.) 240), and s. 259 of the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 36). Informations in quo warranto, are now civil proceedings: 47 & 48 Vict. c. 61, s. 15.

SECT. 2.

INFORMATION EX OFFICIO.

What and in what cases.]—The information ex officio is a formal written suggestion on behalf of the King of a misdemeanor committed filed by the King's attorney-general (or, in the vacancy of that office, by the solicitor-general, R. v. Wilkes, 4 Burr, 2527; 19 St. Tr. 1075; 2 Eng. Rep. 244; 4 Bro. P. C. 360) in the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice, without the intervention of a grand jury. The attorney-general for the Duchy of Lancaster cannot file an ex officio information in the High Court. Att.-Gen. of Duchy of Lancaster v. Duke of Devonshire, 14 Q. B. D. 195: 54 L. J. (Q. B.) 271.

It lies at common law for misdemeanors only, and not for treason or felony; Com. Dig. Information (A. 1): R. v. Prynn, 5 Mod. 459: R. v. Berchet, 1 Show. 106: R. v. Magee, Rowe (Ir. K. B.) 416; nor for misprision of treason: for wherever any capital offence is charged, or an offence so highly penal as misprision of treason, the law of England requires that the accusation should be warranted by the oath of twelve men, before the defendant be put to answer it: 2 Hawk. c. 26 s. 3. The usual objects of an information ex officio are properly such enormous misdemeanors as peculiarly tend to disturb or endanger the King's government, or to molest or affront him in the regular discharge of his royal functions; 4 Bl. Com. 308; such, for instance, as seditious or blasphemous writings or speeches (R. v. Horne, 2 Cowp. 672: 20 St. Tr. 651: R. v. Wilkes, ubi supra: R. v. Burdett, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1: R. v. Waddington, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1339; 1 B. & C. 26: R. v. Mary Ann Carlile, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1033); seditious riots not amounting to high treason; libels upon the King or his ministers, the judges, or other high officers, reflecting upon their conduct in the execution of their official duties (R. v. Harvey, 2 St. Tr., N. S. 1: R. v. Hunt, 31 St. Tr. 367, 408: R. v. Lord George Gordon, 22 Id. 177); libels on foreign sovereigns or ambassadors (R. v. Peltier, 28 St. Tr. 529: R. v. Vint, 27 Id. 627); obstructing public officers in the execution of their duties; obstructing the King's officers in the collection, etc., of the revenues; bribery at parliamentary elections (R. v. Leatham, 8 Cox, 425, 498: R. v. Charlesworth, 1 B. & S. 460); bribery, corrupt or oppressive conduct or neglect of duty by magistrates and public officials (R. v. Pinney, 3 St. Tr., N. S. 11); or against public officials for misconduct outside Great Britain. See 11 & 12 W. 3, c. 12; 42 G. 3, c. 85: R. v. Shawe, 5 M. & Sel. 403; 17 R. R. 370: R. v. Turner [1889] 24 L. J. Newsp. 466, 469, 479. In R. v. Brown and others, Q. B. Feb. 1858; 7 Cox, 442; sub nom. R. v. Esdaile, 1 F. & F. 213, informations ex officio were filed against directors of a banking company, for a conspiracy to defraud the shareholders by false reports of the pecuniary condition of the bank and otherwise. In R. v. Parnell, 14 Cox, 508, an ex officio information was laid in Ireland for conspiracy to commit an offence against the State. Ex officio informations are now rarely filed in England. The latest was R. v. Cate & Tarry, 9 July, 1887, for a libel imputing corruptibility to the Middlesex Justices.

Form.]—The form of an information ex officio is thus:

MIDDLESEX, to wit:—Be it remembered that Sir R. B. F., knight, attorney-general of our present sovereign lord the King, who for our said lord the King in this behalf prosecutes in his own proper person, comes here into court, before the King himself, at the Royal Courts of Justice, London, on the —— day of ——, 190—. And for our said lord the King gives the court here to understand and be informed, that [state offence and then proceed in the same manner as if it were an indictment.] Second Count.—And the said attorney-general of our said lord the King, for our said lord the King, further gives the court here to understand and be informed that, etc. To conclude:—Whereupon the said attorney-general for our said lord the King prays the consideration of the court here in the premises, and that due process of law may be awarded against him, the said B. G., in this behalf to make him answer to our said lord the King touching and concerning the premises aforesaid.

Filing.]—This information is filed in the crown office, without any leave previously obtained of the court for that purpose; and the court will not entertain a motion by the attorney-general for a criminal information at the suit of the crown; R. v. Philipps, 3 Burr. 1564: R. v. Phillips, 4 Burr. 2089; 1 Deacon, Cr. Law, 672 n.; R. v. Magee, Rowe (Ir. K. B.) 416; nor will the court, upon the application of the defendant, restrain the attorney-general from filing an ex officio information upon the ground that a criminal information has already been granted for the same cause. R. v. Alexander, MS., E. T. 1830. But in that case, after both informations had been filed, the court stayed the criminal information until further order. See post, p. 152.

Quashing.]—The court will not quash an ex officio information at the instance of the prosecutor, because the attorney-general may, if he will, enter a nolle prosequi; R. v. Stratton, 1 Doug. 239; and even upon the motion of the defendant, they will seldom quash it, but will generally put the defendant to demur, etc.; see Com. Dig. Information (D. 4); R. v. Gregory, 1 Salk. 372. After demurrer the information may be amended. R. v. Holland, 4 T. R. 457; 2 R. R. 439. The attorney-general is also entitled as of right to amend the information on paying costs. Att.-Gen. v. Ray, 11 M. & W. 464.

Procedure.]—When the information has been filed, the defendant, after appearance, upon application to the court, is entitled to a copy of it free of expense. 60 G. 3 & 1 G. 4, c. 4, s. 8. This provision applies also to indictments where prosecuted by the attorney-general or solicitor-general in the King's Bench Division. Id. If the attorney-general delay bringing the information to trial, the defendant cannot take it down by proviso; R. v. M'Leod, 2 East, 202; but if it is not brought to trial within twelve calendar months next after the plea of not guilty has been pleaded, the defendant may, after twenty days' notice to the attorney-general or solicitor-general, apply to the court, which may authorize the defendant to bring on the trial, and he may bring it on accordingly, unless a nolle prosequi be entered. 60 G. 3 & 1 G. 4, c. 4, s. 9. See also Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, rr. 44, 45, for securing the speedy trial of the defendant, and his being speedily brought up for judgment, when he is in custody. The attorney-general is entitled, if he please, to a trial at bar; R. v. Johnson, 1 Str. 644: Paddock v. Forrester, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 557; 1 Man. & G. 583: R. v. Pinney, 3 St. Tr., N. S. 17, n.; and to bring on the case out of its turn. Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pract. 278. As to the venue and procedure on a trial at bar, see Dixon v. Farrer, 18 Q. B. D. 43; Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, rr. 160-163. At the trial the attorney-general has the right of reply, even though the defendant call no witnesses. R. v. Marsden, M. & M. 439. The cases on this subject are collected in 2 St. Tr., N. S. 1019; and see post, p. 212.

Costs.]—On the trial of an information there is no jurisdiction to give costs for or against the crown, nor to direct their payment out of the local rate. As to the position of the crown with respect to costs, see Hullock, 557: R. v. Beadle, 26 L. J. (M. C.) 111: Thomas v. Pritchard [1903] 1 K. B. 209: R. v. Archbishop of Canterbury [1902] 2 K. B. 572.

Sect. 3.

Information by the Master of the Crown Office.

What and in what cases.]—An information by the master of the crown office is a formal written suggestion of an offence committed, filed in the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice at the instance of an individual, with the leave of the court, by the master of the crown office, without the intervention of a grand jury. The right of private prosecutors to file informations for trespass, battery, or other misdemeanors without the leave of the court was taken away by 4 Will. & Mar. c. 18, ss. 1, 5. See R. v. Robinson, 1 W. Bl. 541.

This, as does the information ex officio (see ante, p. 142), lies for misdemeanor only (2 Hale, 151; 2 Hawk. c. 26, ss. 7–12), and not for treason, felony, or misprision of treason. The court has power to give leave to file a criminal information of this description for any misdemeanor whatever, but usually grants leave only in the case of gross and notorious misdemeanors, riots, batteries, libels, and other immoralities of an atrocious kind, not specially concerning the state; Ex parte Crawshay, 8 Cox, 356; nor peculiarly tending to disturb the government, for those are left to the care of the attorney-general (R. v. Harvey, 2 St. Tr., N. S. 1; 2 B. & C. 257; 3 D. & R. 464), but which, on account of their magnitude or pernicious example, deserve the most public animadversion. 4 Bl. Com. 309. In substance informations are granted only in cases which before the abolition of the Star Chamber went to that court as too serious for the ordinary courts, or because justice could not be obtained in them. See R. v. Sedley, 1 Sid. 168; 17 St. Tr. 155, n.; Baildon, Star Chamber Reports. In a few cases informations have been granted for non-repair of roads or bridges where the grand jury has ignored a bill of indictment. R. v. Upton St. Leonards, 10 Q. B. 827. The cases in which they have been granted fall under the following heads:—

Blasphemy.]—Informations have been granted for publishing a blasphemous libel; R. v. Richard Carlile, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 1423; 3 B. & Ald. 161; or an invective upon the established religion of the country. R. v. Waddington, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1339: 1 B. & C. 26; 25 R. R. 288: R. v. Curl, 2 Str. 788; 17 St. Tr. 153.

Bribery and corruption.]—An attempt to bribe a privy councillor to obtain a patent of an office under government; R. v. Vaughan, 4 Burr. 2494; an attempt to bribe at an election for members to serve in parliament; R. v. Robinson, 1 W. Bl. 541: R. v. Isherwood, 2 Ld. Ken. 202: R. v. Pitt, 1 W. Bl. 380; 3 Burr. 1335; bribing persons, either by money or promises, to vote at elections of officers of corporations; R. v. Plympton, 2 Ld. Raym. 1377: R. v. Mayor of Tiverton [1723] 8 Mod. 186; bribery in the election of an alderman, who, by virtue of his office, is a justice of the peace; R. v. Steward, 2 B. & Ad. 12; attempting to bribe jurymen; R. v. Young, 2 East, 14, cit.; or clerks in public offices; R. v. Beale, 1 East, 183, cit.; endeavouring to procure the appointment of certain persons to be overseers of the poor, with a view to derive a private advantage to the party. R. v. Jolliffe, 1 East, 154, n.; 4 T. R. 285.

Immorality.]—Where a music-master, in consideration of a sum of money, assigned over his female apprentice to a gentleman under pretence of her receiving lessons from him in music, but really for the purposes of prostitution, the court upon application granted a criminal information against the gentleman, the music-master, and the attorney who drew up the assignment. R. v. Delaval, 3 Burr. 1434; 1 W. Bl. 410, 439; and see R. v. Sedley, 1 Sid. 168; 17 St. Tr. 155, n.

Libel.]—The court at one time used to grant criminal informations for libels reflecting on the conduct of private individuals, if attended with circumstances of aggravation. R. v. Benfield, 2 Burr. 980: R. v. Miles, 1 Doug. 284: R. v. Haswell, Id. 387: R. v. Staples, Andr. 228. With the repeal of the Acts de scandalis magnatum and change in opinion and circumstances the rule established by modern decisions is that a criminal information for libel will not be granted at the suit of private persons, but only on the application of persons in a public office or position; R. v. Labouchere, 12 Q. B. D. 330; 53 L. J. (Q. B.) 362; for instance, for libels reflecting on the conduct of magistrates in the execution of their duties; R. v. Waite, 1 Wils. (K. B.) 22; of conduct of the mayor of a city during his term of office; R. v. O'Brien, Cooke & Alcock (Ir. K. B.) 128; of members of parliament in the execution of their duties in parliament; R. v. Haswell, 1 Doug. 387; of persons high in office under government in the execution of their several duties; of a public body; R. v. Williams, 5 B. & Ald. 595; 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1291; and the like. See R. v. Jenour, 7 Mod. 400; R. v. Dennison, Lofft, 148; R. v. Kinnersley, 1 W. Bl. 294, and n.

Offences against the administration of justice.]—Informations have been granted for prejudging a criminal case by representing in a theatrical exhibition a man in the act of committing the offence. R. v. Williams, 2 L. J., O. S., K. B. 30; 26 R. R. 624, and cf. Monson v. Tussauds, Ltd. [1894], 1 Q. B. 671. And in R. v. Tibbits & Windust [1902] 1 K. B. 77 it was held to be an indictable offence to attempt to pervert the course of justice by publishing articles affecting the conduct and character of persons about to be tried. The C. C. R., in coming to this decision, followed R. v. Williams, ubi supra, and R. v. Fisher, 2 Camp. 563. So, where a defendant in an information, immediately before the trial, distributed handbills in the assize town, vindicating his own conduct, and reflecting on that of the prosecutor, the court, considering the handbills to have been distributed by the defendant for the purpose of influencing the jury in his favour at the trial, granted a criminal information against him. R. v. Jolliffe, 4 T. R. 285; 2 R. R. 383. So, the court granted a criminal information against a person for publishing the proceedings before a coroner, with comments previously to the trial, although the statement was correct, and no malicious motive shown; for such publications have a tendency improperly to influence the public mind, and particularly the jury by whom the cause is afterwards to be tried. R. v. Fleet, 1 B. & Ald. 379; 19 R. R. 132. See R. v. Wright, 8 T. R. 293; 4 R. R. 649. It is now found more expeditious in such case to proceed for contempt of court where the proceeding affected is in one of the branches of the High Court: R. v. Parke [1903] 2 K. B. 432: R. v. Freeman's Journal [1902] 2 Ir. Rep. 82. But the existence of the summary remedy is no bar to proceedings by indictment or information: R. v. Tibbits, ubi supra. Informations have also been granted for procuring a grand jury to throw out bills: Anon., Rowe (Ir. K. B.) 644, 727; for attempting to suborn witnesses in a civil suit: R. v. Phillips, Cas. (K. B.), temp. Hardw. 241; and for attempting to induce witnesses to keep out of the way: R. v. Lawley, 2 Str. 904; and also for a conspiracy to obtain a false verdict: R. v. Opie, Wms. 1 Saund. 300 K.

And an information has been granted for publishing an invective against judges and juries, with a view to bring into suspicion and contempt the administration of justice. R. v. White, 1 Camp. 359; 30 St. Tr. 1131. And where an order was made by a corporation, and entered on their books, stating that J. S. (against whom a jury had given a verdict with large damages in an action for a malicious prosecution for perjury, which verdict had been confirmed in the court of Common Pleas) was actuated by motives of public justice, etc., in preferring the indictment, the court, deeming the order to be a libel reflecting upon the administration of justice, upon application granted a criminal information against the parties concerned in making it. R. v. Watson, 2]T. R. 199; 1 R. R. 461. See also R. v. Gray [1900] 2 Q. B. 36.

A criminal information will not be granted for words imputing misconduct to a justice of the peace in his office, unless tending to a breach of the peace, or spoken to the magistrate when sitting as such. Ex parte Duke of Marlborough, 5 Q. B. 955; Ex parte Chapman, 4 A. & E. 773.

Misconduct by judicial officers.]—There are no modern precedents of indictments or informations against judges of a superior court of record for oppression or extortions under colour of office. See Anderson v. Gorrie [1895] 1 Q. B. 668: Mayne, Ind. Cr. L. [1896] 342. For an early precedent, see Y. B. 14 & 15 Edw. 3 (ed. Pike), Preface. An information will lie against a judge of an inferior court of record for misconduct in office. A rule for a criminal information against a county court judge, for misconduct in his office, was discharged on the ground that the applicant had made the same misconduct the subject of a memorial to the Lord Chancellor, praying for inquiry, and so had elected his remedy. R. v. Marshall, 4 E. & B. 475; L. J. (Q. B.) 242; see Anon., 4 A. & E. 576, n.

The court can grant a criminal information against a justice of the peace for any illegal act committed by him from fraudulent, corrupt or vindictive motives, or for manifest illegality and oppression, or gross abuse of power, or partiality and wilful abuse of discretion, or wilful disobedience of the orders of a superior court. R. v. Wykes, Andr. 238; R. v. Soane, Id. 272: R. v. Cozens, 2 Doug. 426: R. v. Jones, 1 Wils. (K. B.) 7; cf. R. v. Newton, 1 Str. 413: R. v. Staffordshire JJ., 1 Chit. (K. B.) 217. The following cases illustrate the occasions on which the power has been exercised:—1. A justice acting where he had direct interest. R. v. Davis, Lofft, 62: R. v. Whateley, 4 Man. & Ry. 431: R. v. Hoseason, 14 East, 605, or failing without lawful excuse to return to the assizes examinations taken by him. R. v. Going, Rowe (Ir. K. B.) 563. 2. Grant or refusal of alehouse licences, from corrupt motives or resentment. R. v. Young, 1 Burr. 556, 560, 561: R. v. Nottingham JJ., Say. 216: R. v. Holland, 1 T. R. 692, 1 R. R. 362: R. v. Davis, R. v. Williams, 3 Burr. 1317: R. v. Hann, 3 Burr. 1716. In Boulter v. Kent Justices [1897] App. Cas. 556, it was held that justices sitting for the grant or renewal of liquor licences do not sit as a court: cf. R. v. Howard [1902] 2 K. B. 363 C. A.; so that it may be doubted whether the old cases as to information are now of authority. But see R. v. Manchester JJ. [1899] 1 Q. B. 571: R. v. Nicholson [1899] 2 Q. B. 455. 3. Illegal appointment of overseers from corrupt and improper motives. R. v. Somersetshire JJ., 1 D. & R. 443: cf. R. v. Jolliffe, 1 East, 154, cit. 4. Corruptly making a false return to a mandamus. R. v. Lancashire JJ., 1 D. & R. 485. 5. Abuse of authority by an obviously improper conviction; R. v. Webster, 3 T. R. 388: R. v. Martin, Rowe (Ir. K. B.) 726; or an obviously illegal sentence; R. v. Mather, 3 Barnard. 249; or by interfering with order of another justice; R. v. Brooke, 2 T. R. 190; or refusing bail from improper motives; R. v. Badger, 4 Q. B. 468; 4 St. Tr., N. S. 1387; destroying a house on not finding the men he was searching for; Anon., Rowe (Ir. K. B.) 645; or abusing the prosecutor in a case before him. R. v. Manley (Id.) 646. But to induce the court to act there must be primâ facie evidence that the justice acted from corrupt motives (C. O. R., 1886, r. 48), and not from mistake or ignorance of law or in bonâ fide exercise of discretion. R. v. Palmer, 2 Burr. 1162: R. v. Davie, 2 Doug. 588: R. v. Brooke, 2 T. R. 190: R. v. Jackson, 1 T. R. 653; 1 R. R. 343: R. v. Seton, 7 T. R. 373: R. v. Barker, 1 East, 186: R. v. Baylis, 3 Burr. 1318: R. v. Fielding, 2 Id. 719: R. v. Borron, 3 B. & Ald. 432; 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1347; 22 R. R. 147: Ex parte Fentiman, 2 A. & E. 127. If the act complained of was done at general or quarter sessions the evidence of deliberate misconduct or corruption must be very strong. R. v. Seaford JJ., 1 W. Bl. 432: R. v. Shrewsbury JJ., 2 Barnard. 272: R. v. Phelps, 2 Ld. Kenyon, 570: R. v. Eyres, 2 Barnard, 250.

Misconduct by ministerial officers.]—The court will grant an information against ministerial officers, for any act of oppression, or for any illegal act committed by them in the execution of their duties, from corrupt, vindictive, or other improper motives; but not where they act from ignorance or mistake merely. R. v. Friar, 1 Chit. Rep. (K. B.) 702. Informations have been granted against overseers for forcing a pauper to marry another pauper then pregnant with a bastard; R. v. Tarrant, 4 Burr. 2106; for a conspiracy by parish officers to marry persons settled in different parishes; R. v. Compton, Cald. 246: R. v. Herbert, 2 Ld. Ken. 466; and for procuring one to marry an idiot chargeable to the parish; R. v. Watson, 1 Wils. (K. B.) 41; but it has long been settled practice to refuse informations in such cases, and to leave the applicant to seek his remedy by indictment: see Cald. 447, n. (a); 2 Nolan, 262.

The court has granted a criminal information against a person for refusing to take upon himself the office of sheriff, because the vacancy of the office occasioned an interruption of public justice, and the year would be nearly expired before an indictment could be brought to trial. R. v. Woodrow, 2 T. R. 731. See R. v. Grosvenor, 2 Str. 1193; 1 Wils. (K. B.) 18: R. v. Shacklington, Andr. 201 n.

Discretion of the court.]—The grant of the information is in the discretion of the court, and is not of right nor ex debito justitiae, as the remedy is extraordinary and an alternative to proceedings by indictment. In the exercise of this discretion the court has refused to grant a criminal information for an illegal act committed by a person under a bonâ fide conviction that he was merely exercising a legal right; R. v. Parkyns, 3 B. & Ald. 668: 22 R. R. 519; and where the application was made against a poor man residing at a distance, to whom it would be very inconvenient, if not impossible, to show cause against the rule, or to appear afterwards to receive judgment if convicted. See R. v. Compton, Cald. 246; cf. Lofft, 155. They have refused it also against the members of a corporation, for a misapplication of the corporation funds, it being rather a subject for an application to the court of Chancery. R. v. Watson, 2 T. R. 199: 1 R. R. 461. They have also refused to grant it where the applicant himself was not free from imputation; Lofft, 314; or had already taken civil proceedings; Anon. 4 A. & E. 576, n.; or had, before applying for the rule, entered into a correspondence with the person sought to be made defendant. Ex. parte Haviland, 44 J. P. 789. So, where an application was made for a criminal information on a charge of raising great sums by subscription for trading purposes, as being one of those schemes denounced by 6 G. 1, c. 18, s. 18 (rep.), the court refused to grant it, as the statute had not been acted upon for a great length of time, and was now sought to be enforced by a private relator, who seemed not to have been deluded by the project, but to have subscribed with a view to an application to the court. R. v. Dodd, 9 East, 516. See R. v. Webb, 14 East, 406. Informations have been granted for sending a challenge to fight a duel. R. v. Younghusband, 4 N. & M. 850: R. v. Holmes, Rowe (Ir. K. B.) 239: R. v. Rowe, Id., 288, 418: R. v. Harman, Id., 441: R. v. Staunton, 1 Ir. Law Rec. (O. S.), 7: R. v. Maunsell [1839] 1 Ir. Law Rec., 257: Armstrong v. Kiernan, 7 Cox, 6 (Ir.). But an information for a challenge has been refused, when it appeared that the party applying had previously written letters to the other, provoking him to fight; but the court said that, if both parties had applied for informations, they would have granted them. R. v. Hankey, 1 Burr. 316. And an information has been refused, where the application was made by notorious gamesters against other gamesters, for a conspiracy to cheat them at a race. R. v. Peach, 1 Burr. 548. Even in cases which would warrant an information, if the court think it will be sufficient punishment for the defendant to pay the costs already incurred by the prosecutor, they will discharge the rule nisi upon these terms, if acceded to by the defendant. R. v. Morgan, 1 Doug. 314: R. v. Cozens, 2 Doug. 426.

When and how to be moved for, etc.]—"The application for a criminal information shall be made to a Divisional Court (of the King's Bench Division) by a motion for an order nisi within a reasonable time after the offence complained of." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 48, which adopts the practice as laid down in R. v. Harries, 13 East, 270; 12 R. R. 338: R. v. Marshall, 13 East, 322: 12 R. R. 340: R. v. Smith, 7 T. R. 80: R. v. Bishop, 5 B. & Ald. 612: 24 R. R. 494: R. v. Saunders, 10 Q. B. 484. The motion must be founded upon an affidavit disclosing all the material facts of the case. It is a strong, although not a conclusive, reason for rejecting an application for leave to file a criminal information that the applicant does not reside in this country. R. v. Labouchere, 12 Q. B. D. 320; 53 L. J. (Q. B.) 362. If the court grant the order nisi, it is afterwards, upon showing cause, discharged or made absolute, as in ordinary cases. But the court cannot compel the prosecutor to proceed to make it absolute. R. v. Sherwood, 2 L. J. (O. S.) K. B. 78: 26 R. R. 626.

Under the Crown Office Rules, 1886, r. 47, "No application shall be made for a criminal information against a justice of the peace for misconduct in his magisterial capacity unless a notice containing a distinct statement of the grievances, or acts of misconduct complained of, be served personally upon him, or left at his residence, with some member of his household, six days before the time named in it for making the application." This rule perpetuates what had been the established practice both in England and Ireland. R. v. Heming, 5 B. & Ad. 666; 3 L. J. (M. C.) 3: R. v. Rae, Ir. Rep. 8 C. L. 524.

"If the application be made against a justice of the peace for misconduct in his magisterial capacity, the applicant must depose on affidavit to his belief that the defendant was actuated by corrupt motives, and further, if for an unjust conviction, that the defendant is innocent of the charge." Id. r. 48. The rule embodies the practice as stated in R. v. Saunders, 2 Cox, 249.

The motion must be made by counsel, and is not entertained if made by a private individual. R. v. Lancaster JJ., 1 Chit. Rep. (K. B.) 602. Anon. 2 Ir. Law Rec. (O. S.) 479. The words "innocent of the charge" continue the practice as laid down in R. v. Athay, 2 Burr. 653: R. v. Webster, 3 T. R. 388, as to the necessity of removing or quashing the conviction before a rule will be granted; see R. v. Heber, 2 Str. 915. The abolition of the division of the legal year into terms so far as relates to the administration of justice by s. 26 of the Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), appears to render it unnecessary to refer (for the purposes of rule 48) to the old division into terms in computing the time within which an application may be made for a criminal information against a magistrate for anything done in execution of his office. On the construction of that section see re College of Christ, Brecknock and Martin, 3 Q. B. D. 16; 46 L. J. (Q. B.) 591.

The motion must in all cases be made upon affidavits disclosing all the material facts of the case; if a material fact be suppressed or misrepresented, the court will discharge the rule; R. v. Wroughton, 3 Burr. 1683, very probably with costs against the applicant: R. v. Wroughton (ubi supra); or perhaps, in an extreme case, against his solicitor: R. v. Anderson, [1840] 2 Ir. Law Rep. 262: R. v. Thomas, 7 A. & E. 608. And, as the court is in a manner substituted for a grand jury, it will in general expect that the fact so disclosed shall amount to such evidence as would satisfy a grand jury, if an indictment was preferred for the offence. R. v. Willett, 6 T. R. 294: R. v. Williamson, 3 B. & Ald. 582. The affidavit must connect the person complained of with the offence by legal evidence. R. v. Stanger, L. R., 6 Q. B. 352; 40 L. J. (Q. B.) 96. Therefore where a rule nisi had been granted calling upon S. to show cause why an information should not be exhibited against him publishing a libel in a newspaper, and the affidavit simply showed that copies of the newspaper had been purchased at the publishing office of the paper, that by a foot-note printed at the end of the copies S. was stated to be the printer and publisher of them, and that the deponent believed that S. was the printer and publisher, the court discharged the rule on the ground that the affidavit was insufficient. Id. The question was raised, but not decided, whether, under such circumstances, recourse can be had to the affidavits used by the defendant in showing cause, to supply the defect in those for the prosecution. Id. An information may be granted upon the uncontradicted affidavit of one who was particeps criminis. R. v. Steward, 2 B. & Ad. 12. If the subject of the application be a libel upon an individual charging him with a particular offence, the court always requires the prosecutor to deny the charge upon oath, before they will grant the information; R. v. Miles, 1 Doug. 284: R. v. Haswell, Id. 387. But it is otherwise if the charge be general or be against a public body of men; R. v. Williams, 5 B. & Ald. 595, 1 D. & R. 197; or if it relate to anything said, or supposed to have been said, by the prosecutor in parliament as a member: R. v. Haswell, 1 Doug. 387. As to the practice on such applications (before R. v. Labouchere, 12 Q. B. D. 320, ante, p. 146). See R. v. The Werld, 13 Cox, 305. Where a criminal information was applied for against a magistrate, for improperly convicting a person, the court refused to grant it, unless the party complaining would make an exculpatory affidavit denying the charge. R. v. Webster, 3 T. R. 388. The affidavit upon which the order nisi is moved for must not be intituled in any cause. R. v. Harrison, 6 T. R. 60: R. v. Robinson, Id. 642, cit. The affidavits, upon showing cause, are intituled The King v. the party complained of. R. v. Jones, 2 Str. 704: see King (qui tam) v. Cole, 6 T. R. 642. And all the affidavits used must now be entitled, "In the High Court of Justice, King's Bench Division."

If it be intended to file a joint information against several persons, the application should be joint against all in the first instance: for, where distinct rules were obtained against five persons severally, and one information thereupon filed against them jointly, the court, upon application, set aside the proceedings. R. v. Heydon, 3 Burr. 1270.

Proceedings for a criminal information once instituted cannot be withdrawn or compromised without the sanction of the court. R. v. Newton, 67 J. P. Rep. 453.

A rule for a criminal information was granted, and discharged upon an affidavit of the truth of the charge; subsequently it was discovered that the affidavit in answer to the rule was false, and the court granted another rule, which was made absolute. R. v. Eve, 5 A. & E. 780.

The Law of Libel Amendment Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 64, s. 8, which forbids prosecution by indictment of libels in registered newspapers without the leave of a judge of the High Court; see ex parte Pulbrook [1892], 1 Q. B. 86; does not prevent proceedings by way of criminal information.

That Act repealed s. 3 of the Newspaper Libel and Registration Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 60), which also did not affect proceedings by criminal information. R. v. Yates, 11 Q. B. D. 750; 52 L. J. (Q. B.) 778: Yates v. R., 14 Q. B. D. 648; 54 L. J. (Q. B.) 258.

Form.]—The form of an information filed by the master of the crown office is as follows:—

MIDDLESEX, to wit:—Be it remembered, that James Robert Mellor, esquire, coroner and attorney of our present sovereign lord the King, in the King's Bench Division of his Majesty's High Court of Justice, before the King himself, who for our said lord the King in this behalf prosecutes [proceeding as in the form of an information ex officio, ante, p. 143, substituting the name and style of the King's coroner and attorney for those of the attorney-general].

Filing, etc.]—After the court has made the rule absolute, the information may be filed at the crown office, upon the prosecutor's entering into the usual recognizances for costs. "With the exception of ex officio informations filed by the attorney-general on behalf of the crown no criminal information . . . shall be exhibited, received, or filed at the Crown Office Department without express order of the King's Bench Division in open court, nor shall any process be issued upon any information other than an ex officio information, until the person procuring such information to be exhibited shall have filed at the Crown Office Department a recognizance in the penalty of 50*l.* effectually to prosecute such information and to abide and observe such orders as the court shall direct, such recognizance to be entered into before the King's coroner and attorney or the master of the Crown Office, or a justice of the peace of the county, borough, or place in which the same may have arisen." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 46. See form of recognizance, App. to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Form 27.

Costs.]—The defendant upon acquittal is not entitled to any costs beyond the extent of the recognizance. R. v. Filewood, 2 T. R. 145: see R. v. Brooke, 2 Id. 190. See also R. v. Savile, 18 Q. B. 703, and Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 49, infra. In cases of informations for libel, however, a more extensive remedy for costs is given by the Libel Act, 1846 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 8), which enacts, that in case of any indictment or information by a private prosecutor for the publication of any defamatory libel, if judgment shall be given for the defendant, he shall be entitled to recover from the prosecutor the costs sustained by the defendant by reason of such indictment or information; and upon a special plea of justification to such indictment or information, if the issue be found for the prosecutor, he shall be entitled to recover from the defendant the costs sustained by the prosecutor by reason of such plea, such costs so to be recovered by the defendant or prosecutor respectively to be taxed by the proper officer of the court before which the said indictment or information is tried. Under this section it has been held, that, on a criminal information for libel, the defendant, having recovered judgment, was entitled to costs, though the only plea on the record was not guilty, and though the judge had certified, under 4 W. & M. c. 18, s. 2 (rep.), that there was reasonable cause for exhibiting the information; R. v. Latimer, 15 Q. B. 1077; 20 L. J. (Q. B.) 129; and that where, on such an information, judgment is given for the defendant, he is entitled to costs incurred previously to the filing of the information, as well as to costs incurred subsequently to the filing of the information. R. v. Steel, 1 Q. B. D. 482; 45 L. J. (Q. B.) 391. The provisions of s. 8 are embodied in Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 50.

Appearance and pleading.]—When the information is filed, process issues to compel the appearance of the defendant, if an appearance be not already entered for him. He then either pleads to it, or applies to quash it; and on issue joined, the proceedings are brought on to trial. See Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Practice, 272–278; Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, rr. 83–98, 128–133. "If the prosecutor on any information not ex officio does not proceed to trial within a year after issue joined, or if the prosecutor causes a nolle prosequi to be entered, or if the defendant be acquitted (unless the judge at the time of trial certifies that there was reasonable cause for the information), the court, on motion for the same, may award the defendant his costs to the amount of the recognizance entered into by the prosecutor on filing the information." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 49. See also rr. 44, 45, for securing the speedy trial of the defendant, and his being speedily brought up for judgment, when in custody.

In what cases quashed or stayed.]—The court will very seldom quash an information filed by the master of the crown office; indeed, in some of the books it is laid down that they will not quash it in any case. See R. v. Nixon, 1 Str. 185: R. v. Fountain, 1 Sid. 152. They have, however, interfered in this manner in a very few cases, under peculiar circumstances. See R. v. Roper, 2 Str. 1072: R. v. Williams, 1 Burr. 385. If quashed on the motion of the prosecutor, it must be upon payment by him of the defendant's costs, at least to the extent of the recognizance. (See ante, p. 121.) Where a criminal information had been granted, and the attorney-general afterwards, for the same cause, filed an information ex officio, the court stayed the former until further order. R. v. Alexander, MS., E. T. 1830. It seems to have been laid down as a rule of practice of the court, that a person who applies for a criminal information must waive his right of action in that court for the same cause, unless the court should, on hearing the whole matter, be of opinion that it was a proper subject to be tried in a civil action, and should specifically give him leave to do so; and it was said that, if an information was granted, it was of course to stay the proceedings in an action for the same cause. R. v. Sparrow, 2 T. R. 198. And in R. v. Mahon (1836), 4 A. & E. 575, the court refused to pass sentence in a conviction for assault by the O'Gorman Mahon while a civil action was pending for the assault. See Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Practice, 256. However, where a rule for a criminal information for a libel was discharged on cause shown, this was held not to preclude the applicant from bringing an action in another court for the publication of the same libel. Wakley v. Cooke, 16 M. & W. 822; 16 L. J. (Ex.) 225.

New trial.]—See post, ch. viii. sect. 4.

CHAPTER III.

CORONER'S INQUISITION.

CORONERS are ancient officers of the common law: so called because they deal principally with the pleas of The Crown, and were of old time the principal conservators of the peace within their county: 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 1; Stephen, 1 Hist. Cr. L. 217: Seld. Soc. Publ. vol. 9.

Coroner's inquisition as a mode of criminal prosecution.]—The finding of a coroner's inquest is equivalent to the finding of a grand jury; and a defendant may be prosecuted for murder or manslaughter upon an inquisition, which is the record of the finding of a jury sworn to inquire concerning the death of the deceased, super visum corporis. Such an inquisition amounts to an indictment (R. v. Ingham, 5 B. & S. 257; 33 L. J. (Q. B.) 183), and by Lord Coke, and the older law-writers, is frequently designated by that name, and a defendant is arraigned upon it in the same way as upon an indictment, and may plead, or take exception to it precisely as if it had been found by a grand jury, and he may be tried and sentenced on such inquisition. Re Ward, 30 L. J. Ch. 775, 776, per Lord Campbell. It is the practice at assizes, where a prisoner stands charged with murder or manslaughter, in order to guard against any failure of justice, also to prefer a bill of indictment for the same offence before the grand jury. It is usual when a bill of indictment for the offence charged in the inquisition has been ignored, to offer no evidence on the coroner's inquisition, but it is occasionally found more convenient to try on the inquisition, and cases have occurred when this was done and the defendant was convicted of manslaughter. If a true bill is found the defendant is arraigned on both the indictment and the inquisition at the same time: 1 East, P. C. 371. If the bill is ignored the defendant must still be arraigned on the inquisition. But where a defendant against whom a verdict of guilty has been found on the coroner's inquest, and against whom also the grand jury have found a true bill, is arraigned and tried upon one only and acquitted, he must afterwards be arraigned upon the other; to which, however, he may effectually plead autrefois acquit. 2 Hale, 61; 4 Bl. Com. 301; 1 Chitty, Cr. L. 163; R. v. Cole, 3 Camp. 371; 2 Leach, 1095; R. v. Maynard, R. & R. 240.

Authority and duty of coroner in holding inquests in cases of murder and manslaughter.]—The duty of a coroner, in cases "where any be slain or suddenly dead," was pointed out with great particularity by the statute 4 Edw. 1 (De Officio Coronatoris), which is said to have been merely directory, and in affirmance of the common law. (See Seld. Soc. Publ. vol. 9, p. xiv. et seq.) That statute was repealed by s. 45 of the Coroners Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 71), a consolidating Act. Sect. 3 of the latter statute provides that "where a coroner is informed that the dead body of a person is lying within his jurisdiction, and there is reasonable cause to suspect that such person has died either a violent or an unnatural death, or has died a sudden death of which the cause is unknown (see re Hull, 9 Q. B. D. 689), or that such person has died in prison (R. v. Robinson, 19 Q. B. D. 322), or in such place or under such circumstances as to require an inquest in pursuance of any Act, the coroner, whether the cause of death arose within his jurisdiction or not, shall, as soon as practicable, issue his warrant for summoning not less than twelve nor more than twenty-three good and lawful men to appear before him at a specified time and place, there to inquire as jurors, touching the death of such person as aforesaid (sub-s. 1).

Upon the statute 4 Edw. 1 (De Officio Coronatoris), it was held that a coroner was bound to take his inquest upon view of the dead body, and that an inquest otherwise taken is void; R. v. Ferrand, 3 B. & Ald., 260; 22 R. R. 373; and it is still the law that the coroner and jury shall, at the first sitting of the inquest, view the body. 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 4, sub-s. 1 (post, p. 155). It was also held under the old statute that a coroner might inquire as well respecting accessories before the fact to a murder or manslaughter, or respecting a principal in the second degree, aiding and abetting a murder or manslaughter, as concerning the actual murderer or slayer; but that he had no power to inquire concerning accessories after the fact; and the same rule appears to continue under 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 4, sub-s. 3 of which enacts that the inquisition shall in cases of murder or manslaughter set forth "the persons, if any, whom the jury find to have been guilty of such murder or manslaughter, or of being accessories before the fact to such murder." It was held before the passing of the Coroners Act, 1887, that if the dead body, whereon an inquest ought to be held, be interred, or suffered to putrefy before the coroner viewed it, the township, or, if the death occurred in a prison, the gaoler should be amerced; and that it was a misdemeanor to burn or otherwise dispose of a dead body, upon which an inquest ought to be held, with intent to prevent the coroner from holding the inquest. R. v. Price, 12 Q. B. D. 247; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 51: R. v. Stephenson, 13 Q. B. D. 331; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 176; Cremation Act, 1902 (2 Edw. 7 c. 8), s. 10; or in any other way to obstruct the coroner or his jury in the view or inquiry—Jervis on Coroners (6th ed.), 6, 86—and the ratio decidendi of these cases will apply to similar cases arising since the passing of the Act. The coroner himself may be indicted for misdemeanor if guilty of corruption or wilful neglect of duty or of misbehaviour in abstaining from holding an inquest where it is his duty to do so. See 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 8, sub-s. 2. On the other hand, the holding of inquests unnecessarily was most strongly censured by Lord Ellenborough, C.J., in R. v. Justices of Kent, 11 East, 229: 10 R. R. 484. The coroner has not an absolute right to hold inquests in every case in which he chooses to do so. It would be intolerable if he had power to intrude without adequate cause upon the privacy of a family in distress, and to interfere with their arrangements for a funeral. Nothing can justify such interference except a reasonable suspicion that there may have been something peculiar in the death,—that it may have been due to other causes than common illness. In such cases the coroner not only may, but ought to hold an inquest. R. v. Price, 12 Q. B. D. 247, 248, Stephen, J. And a coroner is justified in holding an inquest if he honestly believes information which has been given to him to be true, which, if true, would make it his duty to hold such inquest. R. v. Stephenson, 13 Q. B. D. 331. A coroner, also, it has been resolved, may lawfully, within a reasonable time after the death, order a dead body to be disinterred in order to view it, not only for the purpose of taking an inquest where none has been held before, but of taking a good inquest where an insufficient one has been taken before. Jervis on Coroners

(6th ed.), 27. For, where the first inquest was not held supra visum corporis, or is afterwards quashed by the High Court (K. B. D.), the coroner may hold another. 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 23; 2 Hale, 58; Anon. 1 Str. 533. But where an inquest has been held supra visum corporis, and a verdict recorded, the coroner cannot, mero motu, hold a second inquest. 2 Hale, 59; R. v. White, 3 E. & E. 137; 29 L. J. (Q. B.) 257. Where a coroner rejected evidence which he ought to have admitted and the jury returned an open verdict, the inquisition was quashed by the Q. B. D., and a melius inquirendum awarded before the same coroner and another jury. R. v. Carter, 13 Cox, 220. And now s. 6 of the Coroners Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 71), "where his Majesty's High Court of Justice, upon application made by or under the authority of the attorney-general, is satisfied either (a) that a coroner refuses or neglects to hold an inquest which ought to be held; or (b) where an inquest has been held by a coroner that by reason of fraud, rejection of evidence, irregularity of proceedings, insufficiency of inquiry, or otherwise, it is necessary or desirable, in the interests of justice, that another inquest should be held, the court may order an inquest to be held touching the said death . . . and where an inquest has been already held may quash the inquisition on that inquest." That section also makes provisions as to the costs of the application, the coroner before whom the inquest provided for by it is to be held, and the proceedings at such inquest. See Jervis on Coroners (6th ed.), 54. Having regard to the terms of this section, it seems doubtful whether if a coroner neglects to take an inquisition, it can now be taken by the justices of goal delivery, of oyer and terminer, or of the peace, as stated in Bac. Abr. Coroner; 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 23 (5) et seq.

In view of the powers given to the secretary of state to license exhumation (20 & 21 Vict. c. 81, s. 25), and the terms of s. 6 of the Coroners Act, 1887, it has been doubted whether a coroner has now the power, proprio motu, to order exhumation. See Baker on Burials (8th ed.), 43. The form of order in Jervis on Coroners (6th ed.), 247, is not a statutory form.

Proceedings at the inquest.]—"When not less than twelve jurors are assembled they shall be sworn by or before the coroner diligently to inquire touching the death of the person on whose body the inquest is about to be held, and a true verdict to give according to the evidence." 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 3, sub-s. 3. Though the jury cannot consist of less than twelve persons, it may consist of any greater number not exceeding twenty-three. 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 3, sub-s. 1 (ante, p. 154). "The coroner and jury shall, at the first sitting of the inquest, view the body, and the coroner shall examine on oath touching the death all persons who tender their evidence respecting the facts, and all persons having knowledge of the facts whom he thinks it expedient to examine." 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 4, sub-s. 1. Without view the inquisition is void. R. v. Ferrand (ante, p. 154). The coroner has power to require and compel the attendance of such witnesses as he deems necessary for the investigation of the truth of each case, and may fine them for non-attendance or for refusing to answer questions. 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 19, sub-s. 2. The Act of 1887, s. 4, sub-s. 1 (ubi supra) requires that the evidence at the inquest shall be given upon oath. This leaves the law as it stood before 1887. Wakley v. Cooke, 4 Ex. 511; 19 L. J. (Ex.) 91: Jervis on Coroners (6th ed.). But the fact that evidence not upon oath was received by the coroner is no ground for a certiorari to bring up the inquisition. R. v. Ingham, 5 B. & S. 257: 9 Cox, 508. It might, however, furnish ground for an application to the High Court of Justice for an order for another inquest under 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 6, supra. "Where it appears to the coroner that the deceased was attended at his death or during his last illness by any legally qualified medical practitioner, the coroner may summon such practitioner as a witness; but if it appears to the coroner that the deceased person was not attended at his death or during his last illness by any legally qualified medical practitioner, the coroner may summon any legally qualified medical practitioner who is at the time in actual practice in or near the place where the death happened, and any such medical witness as is summoned in pursuance of this section, may be asked to give evidence as to how, in his opinion, the deceased came to his death." 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 21, sub-s. 1. "The coroner may, either in his summons for the attendance of such medical witness or at any time between the issuing of that summons and the end of the inquest, direct such medical witness to make a post-mortem examination of the body of the deceased, with or without an analysis of the contents of the stomach or intestines. Provided that where a person states upon oath before the coroner, that in his belief the death of the deceased was caused partly or entirely by the improper or negligent treatment of a medical practitioner or other person, such medical practitioner or other person shall not be allowed to perform or assist at the post-mortem examination of the deceased." Id. sub-s. 2. "If a majority of the jury sitting at an inquest are of opinion that the cause of death has not been satisfactorily explained by the evidence of the medical practitioner or other witnesses brought before them, they may require the coroner in writing to summon as a witness some other legally qualified medical practitioner named by them, and further to direct a post-mortem examination of the deceased, with or without an analysis of the contents of the stomach or intestines, to be made by such last mentioned practitioner, and that whether such examination has been previously made or not, and the coroner shall comply with such requisition, and in default shall be guilty of a misdemeanor." Id. sub-s. 3.

"It shall be the duty of the coroner in a case of murder or manslaughter to put into writing the statement on oath of those who know the facts and circumstances of the case, or so much of such statement as is material, and any such deposition shall be signed by the witness and also by the coroner." 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 4, sub-s. 2. [As to the admissibility in evidence of depositions taken before coroners, see post, Part II.]

As to summing up by the coroner, see Jervis on Coroners (6th ed.), 40.

"After viewing the body and hearing the evidence the jury shall give their verdict, and certify it by an inquisition in writing, setting forth, so far as such particulars have been proved to them, who the deceased was, and how, when, and where the deceased came by his death, and, if he came by his death by murder or manslaughter, the persons, if any, whom the jury find to have been guilty of such murder or manslaughter, or of being accessories before the fact to such murder." 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 4, sub-s. 3. If twelve at least of the jury do not agree on a verdict, the coroner may adjourn the inquest to the next assizes for the county or place for which the inquest is held, and if after hearing the charge of the judge or commissioner of assize twelve of the jury fail to agree on a verdict they may be discharged without a verdict. 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 4, sub-s. 5: Jervis on Coroners (6th ed.), 44.

Requisites and form of inquisition in cases of murder and manslaughter.] —The form of an inquisition is contained in the second schedule of 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, and by sect. 37 of that Act:—"the schedules to this Act shall be construed and have effect as part of this Act, and the forms given in any of those schedules, or such other forms as the Lord Chancellor from time to time directs may be used in all matters to which they apply, and when so used shall be sufficient in law." "The inquisition shall be under the hands, and in the case of murder or manslaughter also under the seals, of the jurors who concur in the verdict, and of the coroner." 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 18, sub-s. 1. "An inquisition need not, except in the case of murder or manslaughter, be on parchment, and may be written or printed, or partly written and partly printed, and may be in the form contained in the second schedule to this Act, or to the like effect or in such other form as the Lord Chancellor from time to time prescribes, or to the like effect, and the statements therein may be made in concise and ordinary language." Id. sub-s. 2. An inquisition consists of three parts, the caption or incipitur, the verdict of the jury, and the attestation. It may be stated generally, that the same degree of certainty that is requisite in an indictment is requisite in a coroner's inquisition, and all the rules relating to the description of the offence in the case of the former so far as the same are applicable, govern inquisitions. [See ante, p. 35, et seq.]

Venue.]—The venue must be inserted in the margin, or in the body of the caption; 2 Hale, 163, 166; but it is usually inserted in both. The venue should be in the county or jurisdiction within which the inquisition is holden. Where the inquisition is taken by the coroner of the Admiralty (see Jervis on Coroners (6th ed.), 102), no county is inserted in the margin as venue, but instead of it, the words, "Admiralty of England." To avoid difficulty in cases where the cause of death arose within one county or jurisdiction, and the body was lying dead within another county or jurisdiction, the Act of 1887 provides that "the coroner only within whose jurisdiction the body of a person upon whose death an inquest ought to be holden is lying shall hold the inquest, and where a body is found dead in the sea, or any creek, river, or navigable canal within the flowing of the sea where there is no deputy coroner for the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England, the inquest shall be held only by the coroner having jurisdiction in the place where the body is first brought to land;" s. 7, sub-s. 1; and "for the purpose of holding coroners' inquests, every detached part of a county shall be deemed to be within the county by which it is wholly surrounded, or, where it is partly surrounded by two or more counties within the county with which it has the longest common boundary." Sect. 40, sub-s. 1. No inquisition is rendered insufficient by want of a proper or perfect venue. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, ss. 24, 30 (ante, pp. 54, 55). It must appear on the face of the inquisition at what place the inquest was held; but it is not necessary that the inquest should be held at the place where the body lies; and it has been decided that an inquest may be well held at D. upon view of a body lying dead at L. 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 25. The inquisition ought to specify the day upon which the inquest was held; if held upon a Sunday, it is said that it would be void. 2 Saund. 291: Jervis on Coroners (6th ed.), 10.

Verdict.]—By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, ss. 24, 30 (ante, pp. 54, 55), no inquisition can be held insufficient for omitting to state the time at which the offence was committed (where time is not of the essence of the offence), or for stating the time imperfectly, or for stating the offence to have been committed subsequently to the finding of the inquisition, or on an impossible day, or on a day that never happened. The inquisition must show of what place the party who took it was coroner, and that he had competent jurisdiction. 2 Ld. Raym. 1305. It is essential that the inquest shall be taken upon view of the body (2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 23), for the coroner can take an inquisition super visum corporis only (excepting where the inquest is ordered by the High Court of Justice, v. ante, p. 155); the view being absolutely necessary to give jurisdiction to him. If the body of the deceased be identified, and his christian name and surname be known, or the name by which he was usually known be ascertained, they ought to be correctly stated; but if the name of the deceased be unknown, he may be described as a certain person whose name is to the jurors unknown. It is essential to every inquisition that it be found by twelve jurors at the least; 2 Hale, 161, n.; 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 4, sub-s. 5; that the inquisition is presented upon their oaths; but if any juror has made an affirmation instead of an oath, it is not necessary to state the fact. It must also appear that the jury are lawful persons from the county or jurisdiction within which the inquest is held. 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 22.

Attestation.]—Their names ought to be inserted in the body of the inquisition, and the inquisition ought to be subscribed by them with their names. R. v. Evett, 6 B. & C. 247: 30 R. R. 319. It was held in the last-mentioned case that the jurors ought to subscribe their names in full. 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 18, sub-s. 1 (ante, p. 157), merely directs that the inquisition shall be under their hands, and in the case of murder or manslaughter also under their seals. See 2 Co. Inst. 388.

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 6, it is enacted that, "in any indictment" [which word comprehends inquisitions taken before coroners, R. v. Ingham, 5 B. & S. 257; 33 L. J. (Q. B.) 183] "for murder or manslaughter, or for being an accessory to any murder or manslaughter, it shall not be necessary to set forth the manner in which, or the means by which, the death of the deceased was caused, but that it shall be sufficient in any indictment for murder to charge that the defendant did feloniously, wilfully, and of his malice aforethought, kill and murder the deceased; and it shall be sufficient in any indictment for manslaughter to charge that the defendant did feloniously kill and slay the deceased; and it shall be sufficient in any indictment against any accessory to any murder or manslaughter to charge the principal with the murder or manslaughter (as the case may be) in the manner hereinbefore specified, and then to charge the defendant as an accessory in the manner heretofore used and accustomed." This gets rid of the strictness of the old rules as to pleading murder or manslaughter: but the form of inquisition for murder or manslaughter given in the schedule to 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, does set out the circumstances of the death. If particulars are set out professing to show the facts justifying the verdict, the inquisition can be quashed if they are insufficient in law to constitute the offence found. R. v. Clerk of Assize of Oxford Circuit [1897] 1 Q. B. 370: 18 Cox, 518. On the trial of an inquisition, the court has the same powers of amendment as in the case of the trial of an indictment. See 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, ss. 1, 24, and 30 (ante, pp. 52, 54, 55). And by s. 20 of 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71,—"If in the opinion of the court having cognizance of the case an inquisition finds sufficiently the matters required to be found thereby, and where it charges a person with murder or manslaughter sufficiently designates that person and the offence charged, the inquisition shall not be quashed for any defects, and the court may order the proper officer of the court to amend any defect in the inquisition, and any variance occurring between the inquisition and the evidence offered in proof thereof, if the court are of opinion that such defect or variance is not material to the merits of the case, and that the defendant or person traversing the inquisition cannot be prejudiced by the amendment in his defence or traverse on the merits, and the court may order the amendment on such terms as to postponing the trial to be had before the same or another jury as to the court may seem reasonable, and after the amendment the trial shall proceed in like manner, and the inquisition, verdict, and judgment, shall be of the same effect, and the record shall be drawn up in the same form, in all respects, as if the inquisition had originally been in the form in which it stands when so amended." The jurisdiction to amend belongs only to the court of trial, R. v. Directors of G. W. R., 20 Q. B. D. 410; 16 Cox, 410. If the inquisition is defective it may be brought up with the depositions by certiorari to the King's Bench Division of the High Court and quashed; R. v. Clerk of Assize of Oxford Circuit [1897] Q. B. 370: 18 Cox, 518: and cf. Six-mile Bridge Case, 6 Cox, 122 (Ir.). Where the defects are on the face of the inquisition the application is usually made to the court to which it is returned, and before plea pleaded. See Jervis on Coroners (6th ed.), 54, 55.

The inquisition in the case of murder or manslaughter must be not only under the hands, but also under the seals, of the jurors and of the coroner; 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 18, sub-s. 1 (ante, p. 157); and on parchment; Id. sub-s. 2 (ante, p. 157). On a similar provision contained in 6 & 7 Vict. c. 83 (rep.), it was held that an inquisition for murder or manslaughter or felo de se which was on paper instead of parchment should be quashed. R. v. Whalley, 7 Dowl. & L. 317; 19 L. J. (Q. B.) 14. Where the inquisition is taken before a deputy coroner, the proper mode of signing the attestation is "R. D. (L.S.), coroner, by E. M. his deputy duly appointed," etc. R. v. Perkins, 7 Q. B. 165; 14 L. J. (M. C.) 87. As to the jurisdiction of deputy coroners, and the mode of proving it, see 55 & 56 Vict. c. 56, s. 1. When the inquest takes place in a county other than that in which the offence is charged by the inquisition, the inquisition should be returned to the court of assize for the county in which the offence is charged. R. v. Wight, 59 J. P. 746.

Process upon a coroner's inquisition.]—"Where a coroner's inquisition charges a person with the offence of murder or manslaughter, or of being accessory before the fact to a murder (which latter offence is in this Act included in the expression 'murder'), the coroner shall issue his warrant for arresting or detaining such person (if such warrant has not previously been issued) and shall bind by recognizance all such persons examined before him as know or declare anything material touching the said offence, to appear at the next court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery at which the trial is to be, then and there to prosecute or give evidence against the person so charged." 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 5, sub-s. 1. For form of recognizances to prosecute and give evidence, Id. Sched. 2. "The coroner shall deliver the inquisition, depositions, and recognizances, with a certificate under his hand that the same have been taken before him, to the proper officer of the court in which the trial is to be, before or at the opening of the court." Id. s. 5, sub-s. 3. By Home Office circular of May, 1891, coroners are requested to see that the depositions are legibly written and accompanied by all exhibits. If the coroner does not take them properly, and return them to the proper court or person, he is liable to fine under 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 9. When an inquisition is returned to the justices of oyer and terminer, or of gaol delivery, if the person against whom the coroner's jury have found their verdict of guilty has been taken, he is tried before them; but if he cannot be taken, the inquisition is to be certified by them into the King's Bench Division, and process may then be awarded as upon an indictment. See ante, p. 103; 2 Hale, 64; 1 Chitty, Cr. L. 163; and for all the forms of proceeding upon inquests, see Jervis on Coroners (6th ed.), and Sched. 2 of 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71.

Person charged with murder or manslaughter entitled to copy of inquisition and of depositions.]—"A person charged by an inquisition with murder or manslaughter shall be entitled to have from the person having for the time being the custody of the inquisition or of the depositions of the witnesses at the inquest, copies thereof on payment of a reasonable sum for the same, not exceeding the rate of three half-pence for every folio of ninety words." 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 18, sub-s. 5.

Where a prosecution for murder or manslaughter is undertaken by the Director of Public Prosecutions, the coroner must send the inquisition and depositions to that officer. 42 & 43 Vict. c. 21, s. 5. By the Regulations of Jan. 25, 1886, under the Prosecution of Offences Acts, 1879 & 1884 (see Douglas, Summ. Jur. Proc. (8th ed.) 485: Stat. Rules & Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 4, tit. "Criminal Procedure, England," p. 7), it is the duty of the Director of Public Prosecutions to take up charges of murder, and it has been the practice, since the issue of a Home Office circular of September, 1884, for the coroner to send to that officer copies of depositions taken on inquisitions of murder or manslaughter. See Jervis on Coroners (6th ed.), 52.

Bail where the coroner has committed a party to prison.]—The provisions as to bail contained in the Indictable Offences Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 42), the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 43), and the Bail Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 7), ante, p. 112, et seq., do not apply to cases of commitment upon an inquisition by the warrant of a coroner; but by 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 5, sub-s. 2, "Where the offence is manslaughter, the coroner may, if he thinks fit, accept bail by recognizance with sufficient sureties for the appearance of the person charged at the next court of oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery at which the trial is to be, and thereupon such person if in the custody of an officer of the coroner's court or under a warrant of commitment issued by such coroner, shall be discharged therefrom." As to the form of such recognizances, and the notices to be given to the persons bound thereby, see Id. s. 18, sub-s. 4, and Sched. 2. Where the jury find a verdict of murder, or where the coroner refuses bail, the High Court (K. B. D.) can grant bail. The procedure is the same as in other cases of bail. It is now usual to proceed by summons for bail, and not by writ of habeas corpus and certiorari. See ante, p. 116.

SECT. 1.

ORDER AND TIME OF PLEADING.

CRIMINAL proceedings have been specially excepted from statutes changing the system of pleading (e.g., 4 & 5 Anne, c. 8; 4 Anne, c. 16, Ruffhead), and are still to a great extent subject to the common law rules of pleading: 1 Chit. Cr. L. 434. At common law no more than one plea can be pleaded to any indictment or criminal information for misdemeanor. R. v. Charlesworth, 1 B. & S. 460; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 26: R. v. Strahan, 7 Cox, 85. In felonies if the defendant plead in abatement, he must afterwards, if the plea be adjudged against him, plead over to the felony; if he plead specially in bar, he may (R. v. Charlesworth, ubi supra), and should in strictness, at the same time, plead over to the felony. See post, p. 174; and R. v. Drury, 3 C. & K. 196, 200; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 189.

When brought to the bar and arraigned (see post, p. 181), the prisoner either confesses the charge, stands mute (see post, p. 183), or does not answer directly to the charge, (see 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 2); or pleads to the jurisdiction, or in abatement—or demurs—or pleads specially in bar—or pleads the general issue, i.e., that he is "not guilty." Except under the express provisions of a statute, it is not permissible to plead double or to join any other plea with the general issue. R. v. Strahan, 7 Cox, 85. When the defendant has any special matter to plead in abatement or in bar, or if the indictment be demurrable, he should plead, or demur at the time of arraignment, before the plea of not guilty. See R. v. Binkes, 2 Smith (K. B.) 620.

Where a defendant prosecuted in the King's Bench Division of the High Court in England or Ireland, by information or indictment, for any misdemeanor there found or removed into that court, appears in court in term time in person to answer the indictment or information, he cannot "imparle" to a following term, but must plead or demur thereto within four days from the time of his appearance; and in default of his pleading or demurring within four days, judgment may be entered against him for want of a plea. If he appear to the indictment by attorney, he cannot imparle to the following term, but may forthwith be ruled to plead; and a plea or demurrer may be enforced, or judgment by default entered thereupon, in the same manner as before the passing of the Act might have been done, had the defendant appeared by his attorney in the preceding term. 60 G. 3 & 1 G. 4, c. 4, s. 1. But the court or a judge may, on sufficient cause, allow further time to plead or demur. 60 G. 3 & 1 G. 4, c. 4, s. 2. These provisions do not apply to prosecutions for non-repair of a bridge or highway. 60 G. 3 & 1 G. 4. c. 4, s. 10.

Sect. 2.

Plea to the Jurisdiction.

When available.]—Where an indictment is taken before a court which has no cognizance of the offence, the defendant may plead to the jurisdiction, without answering at all to the crime alleged; 2 Hale, 268; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 437; as if a man were indicted for treason at the quarter sessions, or for a rape at the sheriff's tourn, or the like; Id.; or if another court have exclusive jurisdiction of the offence. 4 Bl. Com. 333.

But it is seldom necessary to have recourse to this plea. For it is bad unless it shows a court or jurisdiction in which the defendant could lawfully be tried. If the offence were committed out of the jurisdiction of the English courts, the defendant may take advantage of this matter under the general issue; R. v. Johnson, 6 East, 583; 8 R. R. 550; or if the defect of jurisdiction appears upon the face of the record, he may demur, or (it would seem) move in arrest of judgment, or bring a writ of error. See R. v. Hewitt, R. & R. 158. If, on the other hand, the offence were committed within the local jurisdiction of the court, but the court has not cognizance of it (which can occur only in the case of indictments in inferior courts, such as a court of quarter sessions), the defendant may have advantage of it upon general demurrer; R. v. Fearnley, 1 T. R. 316; 1 Leach, 425; or the High Court, upon the indictment being removed by certiorari, will quash it. R. v. Bainton, 2 Str. 1088. And the court before which the indictment is preferred will, in general, give the defendant advantage of the objection at the trial, under the general issue. In R. v. Balfour, Q. B. D., Oct. 15*th*, 1895, Bruce, J., it was proposed to put in a plea to the jurisdiction on the ground that the indictment contained counts for offences in respect of which the defendant had not been extradited from the Argentine Republic; but the doubtful counts were withdrawn, and the plea was not in fact pleaded. In R. v. Jameson [1896] 2 Q. B. 425; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 218; objections on the ground of want of jurisdiction were taken (1) on motion to quash the indictment; and (2) when this failed, under the plea of not guilty.

Form.]—The form of a plea to the jurisdiction is as follows:—

"And the said J. S. in his own proper person cometh into court here, and having heard the said indictment read, saith, that the court of our lord the King here ought not to take cognizance of the [trespass and assault] in the said indictment above specified; because protesting that he is not guilty of the same, nevertheless the said J. S. saith, that," [etc., so proceeding to state the matter of the plea. See the precedents, 1 Went. 10, 18; 4 Went. 63. Conclude thus]: "And this he the said J. S. is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment if the said court of our lord the King now here will or ought to take cognizance of the indictment aforesaid; and that by the court here he may be dismissed and discharged," etc. Then add profert of any letters patent which may have been set forth in the plea. The form is the same in the King's Bench Division, excepting that the court is described as "The King's Bench Division of His Majesty's High Court of Justice before the King himself here," and in the case of informations, the words, "having heard the said indictment read," are omitted. The plea must be verified by affidavit.

The form of the replication to this plea is:—And hereupon J. K. A. [the clerk of the court], who prosecutes for our said lord the King in this behalf, says, that notwithstanding anything by the said J. S. above in pleading alleged, this court ought not to be precluded from taking cognizance of the indictment aforesaid; because he says that," [etc., stating the matter of the replication]. "And this the said J. N. prays may be inquired of by the country," etc. Or, if it concludes with a verification, then thus:—"And this he the said H. K. A. is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment, and that the said J. S. may answer to the said indictment." Where the plea is pleaded in the King's Bench Division, the replication is in the name of the master of the crown office, in the case of an indictment or of an information filed by him; or in the name of the attorney-general, in the case of informations ex officio. See post, p. 168.

If a plea to the jurisdiction is quashed on demurrer or otherwise fails the defendant may be ordered to plead over instanter. R. v. Johnson, ubi supra.

Sect. 3.

Plea in Abatement.

A plea in abatement must be pleaded before pleading the general issue. Without confessing or denying the fact charged, it sets up some fact which if proved defeats the indictment. It is, therefore, purely dilatory, must be pleaded exactly (O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1, 787), and cannot be amended. R. v. Cooke, 2 B. & C. 871.

It had by 1826 fallen into disuse in England except as to misnomer or want of proper addition (1 H. 5, c. 5) (see ante, p. 56). The Criminal Law Act, 1826 (7 G. 4, c. 64), s. 19, has rendered pleas in abatement useless by enacting that "no indictment or information shall be abated by reason of any dilatory plea of misnomer or of want of addition, or of wrong addition of the party offering such plea, if the court shall be satisfied, by affidavit or otherwise, of the truth of such plea; but in such case the court shall forthwith cause the indictment or information to be amended according to the truth, and call upon the party to plead thereto, and proceed as if no such dilatory plea had been pleaded." And they are virtually abolished by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24, which enacts that no indictment shall be held insufficient "for want of or imperfection in the addition of any defendant." See ante, p. 54. For form of plea in abatement see R. v. Shakespeare, 10 East, 83: R. v. Sheares, 27 St. Tr. 267; R. v. Duffy, 7 St. Tr., N. S. 795, 806.

In R. v. Swan, Fost. 105, a plea in abatement and demurrer thereto were allowed to be pleaded ore tenus.

In Ireland it has been used as a mode of objecting to the qualification of grand jurors. R. v. Sheares, 27 St. Tr. 255, 267: R. v. Sheridan, 31 St. Tr. 543, 576; R. v. Duffy, 7 St. Tr., N. S. 795, 805. See post, p. 201.

It is not settled whether the statutes cited ante, p. 163, affect the right of a peer, when indicted as a commoner, to plead in abatement of an indictment for treason, misprision of treason, or felony. His title is not only part of his name, but gives him a different mode of trial, viz., by his peers, which apparently cannot be waived. See Lord Graves' case, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 609, n.: 310 Hansard, 246, and post, p. 182.

The judgment against the King on a plea in abatement at common law was that the indictment be quashed, and was no bar to a fresh indictment properly framed. Under 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 19, the indictment may be amended, and the defendant called to plead thereto, as if no such dilatory plea had been pleaded. The judgment for the King upon a plea of abatement, in misdemeanors, is final; in treason and felony, that the defendant do answer over. R. v. Gibson, 8 East, 107.

Sect. 4.

Demurrer.

By a demurrer to an indictment or information the defendant refers it to the court to pronounce whether, admitting the matters of fact alleged against him to be true, they do, in point of law, constitute him guilty of an offence sufficiently charged against him. 1 Starkie, Cr. Pl. 315 (2nd ed.). Demurrers are of two kinds: 1. Special, usually called demurrers in abatement, based on some formal defect in the indictment. 2. General, founded on some substantial defect in the indictment or last preceding pleading. And if the party plead to the indictment, or reply to a plea in bar, it will then be too late to demur unless the court consents to withdrawal of the plea or replication.

Special demurrers.]—Special demurrers seem altogether obsolete. Many omissions in an indictment, which formerly rendered it the subject of special demurrer, have become altogether immaterial since the passing of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24, which enacts that "no indictment," "information," "inquisition," "presentment," "plea," "replication," or other pleading, or any nisi prius record (14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 30), "for any offence shall be held insufficient for want of the averment of any matter unnecessary to be proved, nor for the omission of the words 'as appears by the record,' or of the words 'with force and arms,' or of the words 'against the peace,' nor for the insertion of the words 'against the form of the statute,' instead of 'against the forms of the statutes,' or vice versâ, nor for that any person mentioned in the indictment is designated by a name of office, or other descriptive appellation, instead of his proper name, nor for omitting to state the time at which the offence was committed in any case where time is not of the essence of the offence, nor for stating the time imperfectly, nor for stating the offence to have been committed on a day subsequent to the finding of the indictment, or on an impossible day, or on a day that never happened, nor for want of a proper or perfect venue, nor for want of a proper or formal conclusion, nor for want of or imperfection in the addition of any defendant, nor for want of the statement of the value or price of any matter or thing, or the amount of damage, injury, or spoil in any case where the value or price, or the amount of damage, injury, or spoil, is not of the essence of the offence."

It is therefore useless to demur in respect of the defects specified in that section, and in respect of other formal defects in an indictment, the utility of a special demurrer as a weapon of defence appears to be entirely taken away by s. 25 of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, which enacts that "every objection to any indictment for any formal defect apparent on the face thereof shall be taken, by demurrer or motion to quash such indictment, before the jury shall be sworn, and not afterwards; and every court before which any such objection shall be taken for any formal defect, may, if it be thought necessary, cause the indictment to be forthwith amended in such particular by some officer of the court or other person, and thereupon the trial shall proceed as if no such defect had appeared." See R. v. O'Callaghan, 14 Cox, 499: R. v. Titley, Id. 502.

General demurrers.]—Where, however, there is a defect in substance apparent on the face of the indictment, the defendant may still take advantage of it by general demurrer, and if he pleads over, instead of demurring or moving to quash the indictment (as to which see ante, p. 120) the defect will in numerous cases be cured by verdict. Thus, by 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21, "where the offence charged has been created by any statute or subjected to a greater degree of punishment, or excluded from the benefit of clergy by any statute, the indictment or information shall, after verdict, be held sufficient to warrant the punishment prescribed by the statute, if it describe the offence in the words of the statute." And, independently of that enactment, it is a general rule of pleading at common law—in criminal as in civil cases—that, where an averment which is necessary for the support of the pleading is imperfectly stated, and the verdict on an issue involving that averment is found, if it appears to the court after verdict that the verdict could not have been found on this issue without proof of this averment, then, after verdict, the defective averment, which might have been bad on demurrer, is cured by the verdict. Heymann v. R., L. R., 8 Q. B. 102, 105: R. v. Goldsmith, L. R., 2 C. C. R. 74; 42 L. J. (M. C.) 94: Taylor v. R. [1895] 1 Q. B. 25; 64 L. J. (M. C.) 11 ante, p. 85. In the cases of defects in substance apparent on the face of the indictment which do not fall within one of the classes mentioned either in 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21, or in Heymann v. R. (ubi supra), and are therefore not cured by verdict, the defendant may, instead of demurring, plead "not guilty;" and then if convicted, move in arrest of judgment, thus giving himself the same advantage which he could have had upon demurrer, after having had a chance of an acquittal on his plea of not guilty. The frequent adoption of this course in practice appears to be one of the main causes of the infrequency of demurrers in criminal practice. Archb. Cr. Pl. 126 (17th ed.); 1 Starkie Cr. Pl. 315 (2nd ed.). An additional reason for its adoption lies in the fact that the point of law raised on his motion can be reserved for the Court for Crown Cases Reserved. R. v. Martin, 1 Den. 398; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 137; and probably since the cases of Heymann v. R. (ubi supra) and R. v. Goldsmith (ubi supra) have called attention to the state of the law on this subject, demurrers and motions to quash indictments (as to which see ante, p. 120) may become somewhat more usual than they had hitherto been. But, inasmuch as the practice last stated is of value only in the case of defects not cured by verdict, there remain a few cases in which it may be expedient to resort to a general demurrer. The objections to the latter course are: (1) that points of law raised on demurrer cannot be reserved for the consideration of the Court for Crown Cases Reserved, R. v. Fadermann, 1 Den. 565; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 147, and that the judgment on demurrer can be reviewed only by writ of error (Id.); (2) that a judgment for the Crown on a general demurrer to an indictment for felony is final: R. v. Fadermann, 1 Den. 569; 3 C. & K. 353: Mulcahy v. R., L. B., 3 H. L. 303, 326, n.; and final also in misdemeanor unless leave is given to plead over. R. v. Birmingham & Gloucester Rail. Co., 3 Q. B. 224; 10 L. J. (M. C.) 136.

Time.]—The proper time for the defendant to demur is when arraigned and called upon to plead. But the court has a discretion to allow a plea to be withdrawn in order that the defendant may demur. Thus, in R. v. Purchase, C. & Mar. 617, where a man indicted for felony had in the absence of his counsel pleaded to a demurrable indictment, the judge, on the counsel's application, allowed him to demur, before the evidence was gone into. But this would not be permitted in order to take advantage of a merely verbal objection. R. v. Odgers, 2 M. & Rob. 479, and see R. v. Brown, 1 Den. 291, 293, n. It was in some cases held that a defendant might demur and plead to the indictment at the same time. R. v. Phelps, C. & Mar. 180: R. v. Adams, Id. 299. But this was denied to be law by Cresswell, J., in R. v. Odgers (ubi supra), and see R. v. Duffy, 7 St. Tr., N. S. 795, 853; 2 Cox, 45: Bullen & Leake Pleading (3rd ed.), 692.

Form.]—A demurrer in the High Court must be written or printed on paper and filed at the Crown Office, and a copy delivered to the opposite party, and, if settled by counsel, must be signed by him. Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, rr. 128, 130. A demurrer in other courts must also be in writing. As to demurring ore tenus, see R. v. Swan, Fost. 105; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 440. In the Central Criminal Court, and apparently in other criminal courts, the demurrer must be written on parchment and filed. The following are forms of demurrers and joinders:—

Demurrer to an Indictment.

"And the said J. S. in his own proper person cometh into court here, and, having heard the said indictment read, saith, that the said indictment and the matters therein contained, in manner and form as the same are above stated and set forth, are not sufficient in law, and that he the said J. S. is not bound by the law of the land to answer the same; and this he is ready to verify: wherefore, for want of a sufficient indictment in this behalf, the said J. S. prays judgment, and that by the court he may be dismissed and discharged from the said premises in the said indictment specified."

Joinder.

"And H. K. A., who prosecutes for our said lord the King in this behalf, saith, that the said indictment and the matters therein contained, in manner and form as the same are above stated and set forth, are sufficient in law to compel the said J. S. to answer the same; and the said H. K. A., who prosecutes as aforesaid, is ready to verify and prove the same, as the court here shall direct and award: wherefore, inasmuch as the said J. S. hath not answered to the said indictment, nor hitherto in any manner denied the same, the said H. K. A., for our said lord the King, prays judgment, and that the said J. S. may be convicted of the premises in the said indictment specified."

Demurrer to a Plea in Bar.

"And H. K. A., who prosecutes for our said lord the King in this behalf, as to the said plea of the said J. S. by him above pleaded, saith, that the same, and the matters therein contained, in manner and form as the same are above pleaded and set forth, are not sufficient in law to bar or preclude our said lord the King from prosecuting the said indictment against him the said J. S.; and that our said lord the King is not bound by the law of the land to answer the same; and this he the said H. K. A., who prosecutes as aforesaid, is ready to verify: wherefore, for want of a sufficient plea in this behalf, he the said H. K. A., for our said lord the King, prays judgment, and that the said J. S. may be convicted of the premises in the said indictment specified." A demurrer to a plea in abatement is in the same form, except that it concludes with praying "judgment, and that the said indictment may be adjudged good, and that the said J. S. may further answer thereto," etc.

Joinder.

"And the said J. S. saith, that his said plea by him above pleaded and the matters therein contained, in manner and form as the same are above pleaded and set forth, are sufficient in law to bar and preclude our said lord the King from prosecuting the said indictment against him the said J. S.; and the said J. S. is ready to verify and prove the same, as the said court here shall direct and award: wherefore, inasmuch as the said H. K. A., for our said lord the King, hath not answered the said plea, nor hitherto in any manner denied the same, the said J. S. prays judgment, and that by the court here he may be dismissed and discharged from the said premises in the said indictment specified." The joinder is the same, if the demurrer be to a plea in abatement, except that it concludes with praying "judgment, and that the said indictment may be quashed," etc.

For forms of demurrers and joinders in demurrer in the case of informations and of indictments in the King's Bench Division, see App. to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Forms 80, 84, 85 and 86.

Effect.]—A demurrer, on the part either of the crown or of the defendant, has the effect of laying open to the court not only the pleading demurred to, but the entire record, for their judgment upon it as to the matter of law; Hob. 56; 1 Saund. 284, n. 5; and if two or more of the pleadings be bad in substance the court will give judgment against the party who committed the first fault. Thus, for instance, if the indictment be bad, there shall be judgment for the defendant, although the bar be also insufficient; Piggot's case, 5 Co. Rep. 29 a; or even if it appear upon the face of the record that the court have no jurisdiction of the offence charged in the indictment, the defendant may take advantage of this matter upon the demurrer. R. v. Fearnley, 1 T. R. 316; 1 Leach, 425.

Judgment.]—The judgment for the defendant upon demurrer is, that he be dismissed and discharged from the premises. The judgment against the defendant in misdemeanors is the same as on demurrer in civil cases; R. v. Taylor, 3 B. & C. 502; 5 D. & R. 422; and the court has the same power of permitting the defendant afterwards to plead over. R. v. Birmingham and Gloucester Railway Co., 3 Q. B. 224; 10 L. J. (M. C.) 136; R. v. Mitchel, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 545: R. v. Taylor, 3 B. & C. 502, Abbott, C.J. But demurrers in felonies have hitherto been of such rare occurrence, that it has been doubted what judgment ought to be pronounced against the defendant. The older authorities went to show it to be final: 2 Hawk. c. 31, s. 5; but by some this was questioned, and it was said that, in favorem vitæ, the defendant should plead over to the felony. Id. s. 6; 2 Hale, 255, 257; 4 Bl. Com. 334: R. v. Taylor, 5 D. & R. 422; 3 B. & C. 502: R. v. Gibson, 8 East, 107: see R. v. Purchase, C. & Mar. 617: R. v. Bowen, 1 C. & K., 501, 504. In R. v. Duffy, 7 St. Tr., N. S. 795; 4 Cox, 24, which was an indictment for a felony not capital, the judges sitting on the commission of oyer and terminer in Dublin, agreed that the defendant was entitled to plead over to the felony, after judgment against him on demurrer to the indictment.

Respondeas ouster is a judgment in respect of dilatory pleas such as pleas in abatement, and not in respect of pleas in bar. R. v. Taylor, 3 B. & C. 502, 512.

The judgment for the crown on a demurrer to a plea in bar is generally against the defendant. But in R. v. Fadermann, 1 Den. 569; 3 C. & K. 353, the English law has been settled to be, that on general demurrer to an indictment for felony, the judgment for the Crown is final; though in the case of a special demurrer (usually called a demurrer in abatement), it might be otherwise; and see Mulcahy v. R., L. R. 3 H. L. 306, 323, n.

Amendment.]—An information may be amended after demurrer: R. v. Holland, 4 T. R. 457; 2 R. R. 439; R. v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2527, 2568.

Until 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1, ante, p. 52) an indictment, which is a finding upon the oaths of the grand jury, could only be amended with their consent before they were discharged. 2 Hawk. c. 25, ss. 97, 98, and ante, p. 93.

Appeal.]—The judgment given against a prisoner on demurrer to an indictment cannot be reviewed by the court for the consideration of Crown Cases Reserved (post, c. viii. sect. 1); R. v. Fadermann, 1 Den. 565; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 147, but only by writ of error, q. v., post, ch. viii. sect. 2, p. 278.

Sect. 5.

SPECIAL PLEAS IN BAR.

When used.]—As all matters of excuse and justification may be given in evidence under the general issue, a special plea in bar seldom occurs in practice. In fact, the only instance (with the exception of the pleas of autrefois acquit, etc., post, p. 169 et seq.) in which a special plea in bar seems requisite in criminal cases is, where a parish or county is indicted for not repairing a road or bridge, etc., and wishes to throw the onus of repairing upon some person or persons not bound of common right to repair it; in which case they must plead specially the liability of the party to repair, and the reason of his liability, so as to take the case out of the common law rule, that every highway shall be repaired by the parish, and every bridge by the county in which it is situate. See precedents of such pleas, post, Book II., Part II., Chap. VI., Sect. 2, nuisance.

Form.]—The following are the forms of special pleas in bar, replications, and rejoinders:—

Special Plea.

"And the said J. S., in his own proper person, cometh into court here, and, having heard the said indictment read, saith, that our said lord the King ought not further to prosecute the said indictment against him the said J. S.; because he saith, that" [etc., so proceed to state the matter of the plea; and concluding thus]: "And this he the said J. S. is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment, and that by the court here he may be dismissed and discharged from the said premises in the said indictment above specified."

Replication.

"And hereupon H. K. A. [the clerk of the court], who prosecutes for our said Lord the King in this behalf, says, that, by reason of anything in the said plea of the said J. S. above pleaded in bar alleged, our said lord the King ought not to be precluded from prosecuting the said indictment against the said J. S.; because he says, that [etc., so proceeding to state the matter of the replication, and concluding thus]: "And this the said H. K. A. prays may be inquired of by the country." [Or, if it conclude with a verification, then thus]; "And this he the said H. K. A. is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment, and that the said J. S. may be convicted of the premises in the said indictment above specified."

When the plea is to an indictment in the King's Bench Division, the replication commences thus: "And hereupon James Robert Mellor, esquire, coroner and attorney of our said lord the King, in the King's Bench Division of His Majesty's High Court of Justice, before the King himself, who for our said lord the King in this behalf prosecutes, says, that, by reason of," etc.: and the conclusion thus: "And this he the said James Robert Mellor prays," etc., as above. Where the plea is pleaded to an information, the replication is thus: "And the said attorney-general [or coroner and attorney] of our said lord the King, who prosecutes as aforesaid, says, that by reason of," etc. "And this the said attorney-general [or coroner and attorney] of our said lord the King, prays," etc., as above.

If the replication conclude to the country, in making up the record add what is known as the similiter: "And the said J. S. doth the like. Therefore, let a jury come." See Stephen, Pleading (5th ed.), 271. No judgment after verdict upon any indictment can be stayed or reversed for want of a similiter. 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21.

But if the replication conclude with a verification, the defendant must then rejoin.

Rejoinder.

"And the said J. S., as to the said replication of the said H. K. A. to the said plea by him the said J. S., saith, that our lord the King, by reason of anything by the said H. K. A. in that replication alleged, ought not further to prosecute the said indictment against him the said J. S.; because he saith, that," [etc., so proceeding to state the matter of the rejoinder, and concluding thus]: "And of this he the said J. S. puts himself upon the country." Or, if it be necessary to conclude with a verification, the conclusion may be in the same form as in a plea.

Having thus given the forms of special pleas, etc., generally, we shall now proceed to treat of those which usually occur in practice, in this order:—

1. Autrefois acquit, p. 169.
2. Autrefois convict, p. 174.
3. Autrefois attaint, p. 177.
4. Pardon, p. 178.

1. Autrefois acquit.

"It is an established rule of the common law that a man may not be put twice in peril for the same offence." 2 Hawk. c. 35.

The principle on which the right to plead autrefois acquit or autrefois convict depends, is that a man should not be put twice in jeopardy for the same matter, and not on any doctrine of estoppel. But it seems always to have been held that a previous acquittal can only be pleaded in bar to a subsequent indictment (1) where the acquittal is for the exact offence charged in the subsequent indictment; or (2) where the subsequent indictment is based on the same acts and omissions in respect whereof the previous acquittal was made, and some statute directs that the defendant shall not be tried or punished twice in respect of the same acts or omissions. The statutory provisions on the subject are as follows: The Piracy Act, 1744 (18 G. 2, c. 30), directs that persons tried and acquitted or convicted for piracy, felony, and robbery under the Act shall not be liable to be tried again "for the same fact" as high treason. The Incitement to Mutiny Act, 1797 (37 G. 3, c. 70), contains a similar provision (s. 2), as do the Unlawful Oaths Acts, 1797 (37 G. 3, c. 123, s. 7), and 1812 (52 G. 3, c. 104, s. 8), and the Treason Felony Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, s. 7). The Criminal Law Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 100), provides (s. 12) that a person tried for misdemeanor shall not be entitled to acquittal because the evidence proves a felony, and shall not be tried again on the same facts for felony unless the court so directs. Similar provisions are made as to trials for false pretences where the evidence proves larceny, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88: and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9, while permitting conviction of an attempt on a charge for the full offence, forbids a second trial for the attempt: and by s. 33 of the Interpretation Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 63), it is provided that "where an act or omission constitutes an offence under two or more Acts or under an Act and at common law (whether any such Act was passed before or after the commencement of this Act (January 1, 1890) the offender shall, unless the contrary intention appears, be liable to be prosecuted and punished under either or any of those Acts or at common law, but shall not be liable to be punished twice for the same offence."

Perhaps this enactment would have been clearer if for the word "offence" at the end had been substituted the words "act or omission." But it does no more than extend to statutory offences the common-law rule as laid down in R. v. Miles, 24 Q. B. D. 423.

One result of the rule is that when a man is tried for an offence and acquitted, he cannot afterwards be indicted for the same offence, if the first were such that he could have been lawfully convicted; and if he be prosecuted a second time, he may plead autrefois acquit, and it will be a good bar to the indictment. It is immaterial whether the first acquittal were in a summary proceeding or on indictment: Wemyss v. Hopkins, L. R. 10 Q. B. 378; 44 L. J. (M. C.) 101. The true test by which the question, whether such a plea is a sufficient bar in any particular case, may be tried is, whether the evidence necessary to support the second indictment would have been sufficient to procure a legal conviction upon the first. R. v. Clark, 1 B. & B. 473. If the crimes were so distinct that the evidence of one will not support the other, it is inconsistent with reason to say that they were so far the same that an acquittal of one shall be a bar to a prosecution for the other. Neither do the legal authorities support such a proposition. R. v. Vandercomb, 2 East, P. C. 519, 520; 2 Leach, 708. See also R. v. Bird, 2 Den. 94; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 70 (C. C. R.): R. v. Emden, 9 East, 437; R. v. Sheen, 2 C. & P. 634: R. v. Drury, 3 C. & K. 193; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 189; R. v. Miles, 24 Q. B. D. 423; 59 L. J. (M. C.) 56: and 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 49, n.

Thus, an acquittal upon an indictment for burglary and larceny may be pleaded to an indictment for larceny of the same goods: because, upon the former indictment the defendant might have been convicted of the larceny. But if the first indictment were for a burglary, with intent to commit a larceny, and did not charge an actual larceny, an acquittal on it would not be a bar to a subsequent indictment for the larceny; 2 Hale, 246: R. v. Vandercomb, ubi supra; because the defendant could not have been convicted of the larceny on the first indictment. But in R. v. O'Brien, 15 Cox, 29 (C. C. R.), an acquittal for larceny at common law and feloniously receiving the goods so stolen was held no bar to a subsequent indictment for stealing a fixture, framed on 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 31. An acquittal upon an indictment for murder may be pleaded in bar of another indictment for manslaughter; 2 Hale, 246; because the defendant might have been convicted of the manslaughter on the first indictment. So, an acquittal upon an indictment for manslaughter is, it seems, a bar to an indictment for murder. Holtcroft's case, 2 Hale, 246; 3 Co. Rep. 46 b, cit.: R. v. Tancock, 13 Cox, 217. A series of charges may not be preferred, and whether a person accused of a minor offence is acquitted or convicted he may not be charged again on the same facts in a more aggravated form. R. v. Elrington, 1 B. & S. 688; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 14, Cockburn, C.J.: R. v. Miles, 24 Q. B. D. 423. But this rule does not apply when the subsequent charge is of murder or manslaughter. R. v. Morris, 10 Cox, 480: R. v. Salvi, Ib. 481, n. A person cannot, after being acquitted on an indictment for felony, be indicted for an attempt to commit it, for he might have been convicted for the attempt on the previous indictment for the felony. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9. So, also, a person indicted and acquitted on an indictment for robbery, cannot afterwards be indicted for an assault with intent to commit it; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 41; a person indicted and acquitted for a misdemeanor, which upon the trial appears to be a felony, cannot afterwards be indicted for the felony: 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12; a person indicted and acquitted for embezzlement cannot afterwards be indicted as for larceny; or if tried and acquitted for larceny, cannot afterwards be indicted as for embezzlement, upon the same facts; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 72: R. v. Gorbutt, Dears. & B. 166; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 47; and if a man be indicted in any manner for receiving stolen goods, he cannot afterwards be prosecuted again for the same offence. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 91: see ss. 92, 93, 94. This rule is equally applicable, though the first indictment be against the defendant jointly with others, and the second against him alone; for upon the second indictment he may be convicted of an offence committed by him separately or jointly with others; and the plea avers the identity of the offence charged in both the indictments. R. v. Dann, 1 Mood. C. C. 424. An acquittal by a competent jurisdiction abroad is a bar to an indictment for the same offence before any other tribunal. R. v. Roche, 1 Leach, 134: R. v. Hutchinson, 3 Keb. 785; 1 Leach, 135, cit.; Bull. (N. P.) 245. But in this case the defendant should produce an exemplification of the record of his acquittal under the public seal of that state or kingdom where he has been tried and acquitted. See Beak v. Thyrwhit, 3 Mod. 194; S. C. sub nom. Beake v. Tyrrell, 1 Show. 6; Bull. (N. P.) 245: R. v. Roche, 1 Leach, 134. Even an erroneous acquittal, standing unreversed, is a sufficient foundation for this plea: Y. B. 9 H. 5, fo. 2, pl. 7; 2 Co. Inst. 318, 319; 2 Hale, 247: R. v. Drury, 18 L. J. (M. C.) 189; 3 C. & K. 193. An acquittal on an indictment for non-repair of a highway binds no right. R. v. Burbon [1816] 1 Man. & G. 392: R. v. Hutchings, 6 Q. B. D. 300, 306; and see R. v. Ollis [1900] 2 Q. B. 758 (C. C. R.).

But an acquittal upon an indictment in a wrong county cannot be pleaded to a subsequent indictment for the offence in another county. Com. Dig., Indictment (L.); 2 Hale, 245: R. v. Welsh, 1 Mood. C. C. 175. An acquittal on an indictment for murder is no bar to an indictment for arson arising on the same facts. R. v. Serné, 107 Cent. Crim. Ct. Sess. Pap. 418, Charles, J. It was held in R. v. Henderson, C. & Mar. 328; 2 Mood. C. C. 192, that an acquittal on an indictment for larceny is no bar to an indictment for the same offence charged as "obtaining by false pretences," notwithstanding the proviso in 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 53 (rep.), which is now included in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88. But in R. v. King [1897]

1 Q. B. 214; 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 81 (C. C. R.), it was held that a conviction for obtaining credit under false pretences and by fraud was a bar to a subsequent indictment based on the same facts for stealing the same goods. An acquittal on an indictment under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 35, for the felony of unlawfully and maliciously putting across any railway anything with intent to obstruct any engine using such railway, is no bar to a subsequent indictment upon the same facts, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 36, for the misdemeanor of unlawfully obstructing an engine using a railway. R. v. Gilmore, 15 Cox, 85, Huddleston, B.

The acquittal of a man as principal is no bar to a subsequent prosecution against him (a) as accessory after the fact; 2 Hawk. c. 35, s. 11; nor (b) according to the ancient law, as accessory before the fact. Sir M. Hale lays down that such an acquittal is a bar to a subsequent prosecution against him as an accessory before the fact. 1 Hale, 625; 2 Hale, 244: Kel. (J.) 35. This, however, is not the view of either Foster or Hawkins: Fost. 361; 2 Hawk. c. 35, s. 11; and in R. v. Birchenough, 1 Mood. C. C. 477; 7 C. & P. 575, where, to an indictment charging the defendant as an accessory before the fact to child murder, he pleaded autrefois acquit upon an indictment charging him with having been present, aiding and abetting in the said murder, the judges held that the plea was no bar, and had been properly overruled at the trial.

But by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 1, an accessory before the fact may be indicted as a principal felon (ante, p. 18). So an acquittal (or judgment for the defendant on demurrer, R. v. Richmond, 1 C. & K. 240) upon insufficient indictment, is no bar to another indictment for the same offence. Vaux's case, 4 Co. Rep. 44*b*, 45*a*; and see R. v. Coogan, 1 Leach, 448: R. v. Taylor, 3 B. & C. 502. An insolvent debtor, who had been indicted for omitting goods from his schedule and acquitted, afterwards pleaded autrefois acquit to another indictment for omitting other goods from the same schedule; and Patteson, J., held that the plea was no bar to the second indictment, but said that such a course ought not to be adopted except under very peculiar circumstances. R. v. Champneys, 2 M. & Rob. 26. And generally it may be laid down, that whenever, by reason of some defect in the record, either in the indictment, the place of trial, the process, or the like, the defendant was not lawfully liable to suffer judgment for the offences charged against him in the first indictment as it stood at the time of its finding, he has not been in jeopardy, in the sense which entitles him to plead the former acquittal (or conviction) in bar of a subsequent indictment. R. v. Drury, 3 C. & K. 193; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 189: R. v. Green, Dears. & B. 113; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 17; 7 Cox, 186.

Form.]—"In any plea of autrefois convict or autrefois acquit, it shall be sufficient for any defendant to state that he has been lawfully convicted or acquitted, as the case may be, of the offence charged in the indictment. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 28.

The following is the form of the plea of autrefois acquit:—

"And the said J. S., in his own proper person cometh into court here, and having heard the said indictment read, saith that our said lord the King ought not further to prosecute the said indictment against the said J. S.; because he saith, that heretofore, to wit, at the general quarter sessions of the peace holden at ——, in and for the county of ——, he the said J. S., was lawfully acquitted of the said offence charged in the said indictment. And this he the said J. S., is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment, and that by the court here he may be dismissed and discharged from the said premises in the present indictment specified." See also post, p. 176, and R.

v. Connell, 6 Cox, 178. The plea may be made ore tenus; 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 49, n.; but should be on parchment, and be signed by counsel. The court, however, will not reject the plea because it is informal, but will assign counsel to prepare it in a proper form for the defendant. R. v. Chamberlain, 6 C. & P. 93.

If the indictment be for treason or felony, the defendant, besides this plea of autrefois acquit, should also plead over to the treason or felony. R. v. Vandercomb, 2 Leach, 708, 712: R. v. Drury, ante, p. 172. In such a case, therefore, continue the plea thus: "And as to the felony and larceny of which the said J. S. now stands indicted, he the said J. S. saith, that he is not guilty thereof; and of this he the said J. S. puts himself upon the country." If, however, the defendant pleads auterfois acquit, without pleading over to the felony, after his special plea is found against him, he may still plead over to the felony. 2 Hawk. c. 23, s. 128: R. v. Sheen, 2 C. & P. 634: R. v. Welsh, MS. (1828); Carr. Supp. 56.

In the case of a plea of autrefois acquit, a jury are sworn instanter to try the issue: R. v. Scott, 1 Leach, 401; and therefore there is no replication actually pleaded on the part of the crown. But see R. v. Sheen, ubi supra: 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 50, n. But a replication and similiter must be entered upon the record, when it is made up. The form may be as follows:—

"And hereupon H. K. A. [the clerk of the court], who prosecutes for our said lord the King in this behalf, says that, by reason of anything in the said plea of the said J. S. above pleaded in bar alleged, our said lord the King ought not to be precluded from prosecuting the said indictment against the said J. S.; because he says that the said J. S. was not lawfully acquitted of the said offence charged in the said indictment, in manner and form as the said J. S. hath above in his said plea alleged; and this he the said H. K. A. prays may be inquired of by the country. And the said J. S. doth the like. Therefore let a jury come."

The proof of the issue lies on the defendant. To prove it, it used to be necessary to make up the record of the former acquittal, and to give in evidence the record itself, or an examined copy of it; R. v. Bowman, 6 C. & P. 101, 337; except where the second indictment was preferred at the same assizes, in which case the original indictment and minutes of the verdict were and are receivable in evidence in support of the plea, without a record being drawn up. R. v. Parry, 7 C. & P. 836. But by the Evidence Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 99), s. 13, "whenever in any proceeding whatever" [whether civil or criminal, Richardson v. Willis, L. R., 8 Ex. 69; 42 L. J. (Ex.) 15], "it may be necessary to prove the trial and conviction or acquittal of any person charged with any indictable offence, it shall not be necessary to produce the record of the conviction or acquittal of such person, or a copy thereof; but it shall be sufficient that it be certified, or purport to be certified under the hand of the clerk of the court, or other officer having the custody of the records of the court where such conviction or acquittal took place, or by the deputy of such clerk or other officer, that the paper produced is a copy of the record of the indictment, trial, conviction, and judgment or acquittal, as the case may be, omitting the formal parts thereof." And by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 18 (post, Book II. Part V.), provision is made for proving previous convictions by certificate.

If there be a variance between the former record and the present indictment, in the description of the offence, it may be made good by evidence showing in substance that the evidence necessary to support the present indictment would have been sufficient to convict the prisoner upon the former.

If the former trial was at quarter sessions, the King's Bench Division can, if necessary, grant a mandamus to the justices to make up the record. R. v. Justices of Middlesex, 5 B. & Ad. 1113; 3 L. J. (M. C.) 32.

The judgment against the defendant on this plea, in felonies, is respondeas ouster (see ante, p. 168); or rather, as the defendant generally pleads over to the felony at the same time with the issue in the plea of autrefois acquit, the jury are charged again to inquire of the second issue, and the trial proceeds as if no special plea in bar had been pleaded. R. v. Vandercomb, 2 Leach, 708; R. v. Coogan, 1 Leach, 448: R. v. Sheen, 2 C. & P. 634. In misdemeanors the judgment is final. R. v. Goddard, 2 Ld. Raym. 920; 3 Salk. 171. When the plea is allowed, the judgment is "that the defendant shall go without day," and he is altogether discharged from the prosecution. 2 Hale, 391, and see 1 Deacon, Cr. Law, 90. The verdict for the defendant, upon the issue on the plea of autrefois acquit, cannot, it seems, be set aside, and a new trial had, although it be given without evidence and against the opinion of the judge. R. v. Lea, 2 Mood. C. C. 9.

As to the effect of dismissal of a charge tried summarily on a subsequent prosecution on indictment, see post, p. 175.

2. Autrefois convict.

By 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63 (Interpretation Act, 1889), s. 33, "where an act or omission constitutes an offence under two or more Acts, or both under an Act and at common law, whether such Act was passed before or after the commencement of this Act, the offender shall, unless the contrary intention appears, be liable to be prosecuted and punished under either or any of those Acts and at common law, but shall not be liable to be punished twice for the same offence. This enactment is substantially the same as the common law rule, that a man must not be put twice in peril for the same offence. 2 Hawk. c. 35.

The defence autrefois convict, applies whether the previous conviction was on indictment or summary provided that it was before a court of competent jurisdiction after a hearing on the merits. Wemyss v. Hopkins, L. R. 10 Q. B. 378: 44 L. J. (M. C.) 101.

The only cases in which a previous conviction can be effectually pleaded in bar to a subsequent indictment are:

(1) Where the conviction was for the exact offence charged in the subsequent indictment, and was sufficient in law: 1 Chit. Cr. L. 461: 4 Bl. Com. 336: 2 Hale 251: 2 Hawk. c. 36, s. 10: Vaux' case, 4 Co. Rep. 44*b*, 45*a*. A plea of autrefois convict, which shows that the judgment on the former indictment has been reversed for error in the judgment is not a good bar to another indictment for the same offence. R. v. Drury, 3 C. & K. 193; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 189; 2 Cox, 144.

(2) Where the subsequent indictment is based on the same acts or omissions as those in respect whereof the previous conviction was made, and some statute directs that a person shall not be punished twice in respect of the same acts or omissions. Interpretation Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 63) s. 33 (supra); 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12. A conviction for obtaining credit or goods under false pretences is a bar to a subsequent indictment for larceny on the same facts. R. v. King [1897] 1 Q. B. 214, 218: 18 Cox, 447, Hawkins, J.

A person who has been convicted by a court of summary jurisdiction under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 42, of a common assault, but has been discharged under s. 16, sub-s. 2 of 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, without any sentence of fine or imprisonment, on giving security to be of good behaviour, cannot, at common law and independently of the defence given by 24 & 25 Vict. c.

100, s. 45 (infra), afterwards be convicted on indictment for the same assault, although the indictment charges him with unlawful wounding or other circumstances of aggravation. R. v. Miles, 24 Q. B. D. 423; 59 L. J. (M. C.) 56.

The Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49), which empowers a petty sessional court under certain circumstances to try summarily persons charged with certain indictable offences, enacts in s. 27, sub-s. 3, that "the conviction for any such offence shall be of the same effect as a conviction for the offence on indictment," and in sub-s. 4, that "where the court have assumed the power to deal with the case summarily, and dismiss the information, they shall, if required, deliver to the person charged a copy certified under their hands of the order of such dismissal, and such dismissal shall be of the same effect as an acquittal on a trial on indictment for the offence."

The same rules apply generally to this plea as to the plea of autrefois acquit.

Where on an indictment containing counts for inflicting grievous bodily harm, unlawful wounding, assault occasioning actual bodily harm, and common assault, the jury convicted of common assault, but disagreed on the other counts, it was held, on a retrial on the other counts, that the conviction for common assault would support a plea of autrefois convict. R. v. Grimwood, 60 J. P. 809, Pollock, B., and see R. v. Elrington, 1 B. & S. 688: 31 L. J. (M. C.) 14.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 44, enacts, that if the justices on the hearing of any such case of assault or battery upon the merits, where the complaint was preferred by or on behalf of the party aggrieved, under either of the last two preceding sections (ss. 42, 43), shall deem the offence not to be proved, or shall find the assault or battery to have been justified, or so trifling as not to merit any punishment, and shall accordingly dismiss the complaint, they shall forthwith make out a certificate under their hands, stating the fact of such dismissal, and shall deliver the certificate to the party against whom the complaint was preferred." "Forthwith" means so soon as it is applied for by the defendant, who has a right to it ex debito justitiæ; Hancock v. Somes, 1 E. & E. 795; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 196; Costar v. Hetherington, 1 E. & E. 802; 28 L. J. (M. C.) 198; overruling R. v. Robinson, 12 A. & E. 672; 10 L. J. (M. C.) 9, where it was held that the certificate must be given before the justices separated. Such certificate of dismissal can only be granted when there has been a full hearing "upon the merits." If the certificate be granted on the withdrawal of the charge, before hearing, it will be no bar to subsequent proceedings in respect of the same assault. Reed v. Nutt, 24 Q. B. D. 669. By s. 45, "if any person against whom any such complaint, as in either of the last three preceding sections mentioned, shall have been preferred by or on behalf of the party aggrieved, shall have obtained such certificate, or, having been convicted, shall have paid the whole amount adjudged to be paid, or shall have suffered the imprisonment, or imprisonment with hard labour awarded, in every such case he shall be released from all further or other proceedings, civil or criminal, for the same cause." But by s. 46, the justices are prohibited from adjudicating on any assault or battery which they shall find to have been "accompanied by any attempt to commit felony," or which they shall think, "from any other circumstance, a fit subject for prosecution by indictment," or "in which any question shall arise as to the title to any lands, tenements or hereditaments or any interest therein or accruing therefrom, or as to any bankruptcy or insolvency, or any execution under the process of any court of justice."

The form of the plea of autrefois convict in such cases may be as follows:—

"And the said J. S. in his own proper person cometh into court here, and having heard the said indictment read, saith, that our said lord the King ought not to further prosecute the said indictment against him the said J. S. in respect of the offence in the said indictment mentioned, because he saith that heretofore, to wit, on the —— day of ——, in the year of our Lord ——, at the parish of —— in the county of ——, he the said J. S. was, upon the complaint of the said J. N., etc. [reciting the information before the magistrates in the past tense], convicted before the said A. B., clerk, and the said C. D. esquire, two of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, for that he the said J. S. did, on, etc., at, etc., unlawfully assault and beat the said J. N., in the peace of our said lord the King then and there being contrary to the statute in that case made and provided; and the said justices did then and there adjudge the said J. S. for his said offence to forfeit and pay the sum of 5*l. of lawful money of Great Britain; and, in default of immediate payment of the said sum of* 5*l. by the said* J. S. as aforesaid, they the said justices did adjudge the said J. S. to be imprisoned in the house of correction for the said county for the space of two calendar months, unless the said sum of 5*l. should be sooner paid; and the said justices did direct that the said sum of* 5*l. should be paid to* E. F., one of the overseers of the poor of the parish of —— aforesaid, in which parish the said offence was committed, to be by him applied according to the directions of the statute in that case made and provided; as by the record of the said conviction more fully and at large appears; which said judgment and conviction still remains in full force and effect, and not in the least reversed or made void. And the said J. S. further saith, that the assault and battery of the said J. N., of which he the said J. S. was so convicted as aforesaid, and the wounding of the said J. N. in the said indictment mentioned, are one and the same assault and battery, and not other and different. And he the said J. S. further saith, that he the said J. S. hath duly paid the whole amount of the said sum of 5*l. so adjudged by the said justices to be paid under the said conviction as aforesaid to the said* E. F., etc., being such overseer of the said parish of —— as aforesaid. And this he the said J. S. is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment if our said lord the King ought further to prosecute the said indictment against him the said J. S. in respect of the said offence in the said indictment mentioned, and that he the said J. S. may be dismissed and discharged from the same. And as to the felony aforesaid in the said indictment mentioned, the said J. S. saith that he is not guilty thereof, and thereof he puts himself upon the country," etc. [If the complaint was dismissed by the justices, a plea of autrefois acquit can be framed accordingly.]

Where to an action for an assault the defendant pleaded that he had been summoned by the plaintiff before a metropolitan police magistrate, who convicted him in the costs of the complaint and hearing, which the defendant had paid; and at the trial the magistrate's clerk produced his note-book by which it appeared that the magistrate had merely ordered the defendant to enter into his recognizances, and pay the expense thereof, and the clerk also said that in such cases no conviction was ever drawn up: it was held that the plea was bad, and disclosed no defence under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 45; that it was not proved, and that, even if there were a conviction, the proper proof was not adduced. Hartley v. Hindmarsh, L. R. 1 C. P. 553; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 255. The judgment of the court in that case proceeded upon the grounds that there was no record of any conviction, and further that the magistrate did not adjudicate upon the case, but, as a conservator of the peace, ordered the defendant to enter into recognizances. Per Pollock, B., in R. v. Miles, 24 Q. B. D. 423; 59 L. J. (M. C.) 56, ante, p. 175.

The replication may be as follows:—"And hereupon H. K. A. [the clerk of the court] who prosecutes for our said lord the King in this behalf, says, that by reason of anything in the said plea of the said J. S. above pleaded in bar alleged, our said lord the King ought not to be precluded from prosecuting the said indictment against the said J. S.; because he says that there is not any record of the said supposed conviction, in manner and form as the said J. S. hath above in his said plea alleged; and this he the said H. K. A. prays may be inquired of by the country," etc. In the case of a dismissal of the complaint by the justices, the replication should traverse the fact of the granting of the certificate. See R. v. Robinson, 12 A. & E. 672; 4 Per. & D. 391: 10 L. J. (M. C.) 9.

The plea and any demurrer to it should be put on parchment. R. v. Walker, 8 C. & P. 446, Parke, B. A plea of a conviction or acquittal under 9 G. 4, c. 31, ss. 27, 28 (rep.), of which 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 44, 45, are in substance a re-enactment, is a bar to an indictment for a felonious stabbing, etc., in the same transaction; R. v. Walker, ubi supra; for the justices are to determine whether the assault was accompanied by any felonious transaction, and their decision on that point is final. R. v. Stanton, 5 Cox, 324, Erle, J. And a plea of a dismissal of the complaint by the justices under 2 G. 4, c. 31, ss. 27, 28 (rep.), was held to be a bar to an indictment for unlawfully wounding, and for an assault occasioning actual bodily harm, arising out of the same circumstances; R. v. Elrington, 1 B. & S. 688; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 14; 9 Cox, 86, where the two cases last cited were approved; but a summary conviction for assault under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 42, is not a bar to a subsequent indictment for manslaughter upon the death of the man assaulted, consequent upon the same assault. R. v. Morris, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 90; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 84: R. v. Friel, 17 Cox, 325: Stephen Dig. Cr. Proc. 325. This rule is not affected by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49 (The Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879), s. 27 (3); R. v. Friel, ubi supra. The production of the certificate is of itself sufficient evidence of the dismissal by the justices, without proof of their signature or official character; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 1: and if the defendant appeared before the justices, the recital in the certificate of the fact of a complaint having been made, and of a summons having been issued, is sufficient evidence of those facts, without producing the complaint or summons. R. v. Westley, 11 Cox, 139. Where the first count of an indictment charged the defendant with assaulting the prosecutor and inflicting upon him grievous bodily harm, and the second charged him with an assault upon the prosecutor occasioning actual bodily harm, and the defendant pleaded one plea only (instead of a plea to each count), setting up a dismissal of the charge by the justice, and it appeared upon the trial that there had only been in fact one assault on the day named in the indictment, and that that assault and the one named in the plea took place on the same day, it was held that the plea was a good answer to the whole indictment. R. v. Westley, ubi supra.

3. Autrefois attaint. (a)

At common law if a man were attainted of treason or felony, whilst the attainder remained in force he could not, with certain exceptions, be indicted for another felony, whether such other felony were committed before or after his attainder; because, being already attainted, and therefore dead in contemplation of law, and his property forfeited, a prosecution for any other offence was considered useless. 2 Hale, 251; 2 Hawk. c. 36, s. 10; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 724. But in 1827 it was enacted by 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 4, that an attainder is no bar, unless it be for the same offence as that charged in the indictment, and this enactment practically abrogated the plea. 4 Bl. Com. 337, n. Attainder for treason and felony was abolished in 1870, except in cases of outlawry (33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 1), and in effect the plea of autrefois attaint is obsolete.

(a) In R. v. Jemmy Governor [1900] 21 N. S. W. Rep. (Law) 279, on an indictment for murder an attempt was made to plead autrefois attaint on a colonial outlawry, but failed on the ground that the common law of England as to outlawry did not apply to New South Wales, and that outlawry under the colonial statutes was not equivalent to a conviction.

The same rules apply to this plea as to the plea of autrefois acquit, with respect to the pleading and production of the record, the averments of identity, and the proceedings on the plea at the trial.

4. Pardon.

A pardon may be pleaded in bar to the indictment; or, after verdict, in arrest of judgment; or, after judgment, in bar of execution. 2 Hawk. c. 37. A pardon under statute need not be pleaded, Staundf. 103*a*: 3 Co. Inst. 234: Plowd. 83, 84: 2 Hawk. c. 37, s. 59: unless there be exceptions out of it; Id.: Fost. 43: 2 Hale, 252: 3 Co. Inst. 334; nor can the defendant lose the benefit of it by his own laches or negligence.

The King's pardon should be pleaded at the first opportunity which the defendant may have of so doing; if, for instance, he have obtained a pardon before arraignment, and, instead of pleading it in bar, he plead the general issue, he is deemed to have waived the benefit of it, and cannot afterwards avail himself of it in arrest of judgment. 2 Hawk. c. 37, s. 59.

Form of plea.]—In pleading a pardon under the great seal the letters patent were set out with profert, and the plea concluded thus—"By reason of which said letters patent, the said J. S. prays that by the court here he may be dismissed and discharged from the said premises in the said indictment specified."

Formerly only a pardon under the great seal could be pleaded. Lord Warwick's case, 13 St. Tr. 939, 1015: R. v. Gully, 1 Leach, 98: Bull v. Tilt, 1 B. & P. 199: R. v. Miller, 2 W. Bl. 799.

But 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 13, provides for the grant of free or conditional pardon for felony under the King's sign manual countersigned by a secretary of state and that the discharge of the offender from custody in the former case, or the performance of the condition in the latter, has the effect of a pardon under the great seal as to the felony for which the pardon is granted, but will not prevent or mitigate the punishment in any subsequent conviction for any felony committed after the grant of any such pardon. See R. v. Harrod, 2 C. & K. 294: 2 Cox, 242.

This enactment seems to have given statutory effect to the practice of circuit pardons referred to in R. v. Beaton, 1 W. Bl. 479: R. v. Beacall, 1 C. & P. 454, 456: Bullock v. Dodds 2 B. & Ald. 258; 20 R. R. 420. In pleading under this enactment the stricter course would be to set out the pardon under the sign manual and to aver compliance with the conditions, if any; but in R. v. Harrod, ubi supra, the Court seem not to have required a plea, but to have taken a certificate of discharge by the governor of a prison as evidence of the grant of a free pardon.

Any variance in the description of the offence or party between the pardon and the indictment, could be made good in the plea, by averments of identity, in the same manner as in the plea given ante, p. 176.

A free pardon places the person in the same position as to status as he was in before his conviction. Hay v. Tower Division Justices, 24 Q. B. D. 561; 59 L. J. (M. C.) 79. The endurance of the punishment awarded by the court for a non-capital felony, or of that substituted by the crown, has the effect of a pardon under the great seal. 9 G. 4, c. 32, s. 3. See post, p. 245.

Sect. 6.

GENERAL ISSUE.

The general issue is pleaded by the prisoner ore tenus at the bar, in these words "not guilty;" by which plea, without further form, every person not having privilege of peerage, upon being arraigned upon any indictment for treason, felony, or piracy, is "deemed to have put himself upon the country for trial." 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 1. And "if any person being arraigned upon, or charged with any indictment or information for treason, felony, piracy, or misdemeanor, shall stand mute of malice, or will not answer directly to the indictment or information," the court may "order the proper officer to enter a plea of 'not guilty' on behalf of such person; and the plea so entered shall have the same force and effect as if such person had actually pleaded the same." 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 2. If the defendant says that he declines to plead, a plea of not guilty is entered. R. v. Bernard, 8 St. Tr., N. S. 887, 899. This course of refusing to plead is adopted after a demurrer or motion to quash, or where it is contended that the court has no jurisdiction, in the belief that it preserves the right to challenge by writ of error defects which otherwise might be cured by verdict. Where a prisoner who had been previously tried and convicted, but whose trial was deemed a nullity on account of some informality in swearing the witnesses, was again arraigned upon an indictment for the same offence, and refused to plead, alleging that he had been already tried; Littledale, J., and Vaughan, B., ordered a plea of not guilty to be entered for him under this section. R. v. Bitton, 6 C. & P. 92. As to the mode of determining whether a defendant is mute of malice, see post, p. 183. As to withdrawal of pleas during the trial, see post, p. 186.

When the record is made up, the general issue appears upon it thus:—"And he the said J. S., forthwith being demanded concerning the premises in the said indictment above specified and charged upon him, how he will acquit himself thereof, saith, that he is not guilty thereof, and thereupon the said J. S. puts himself upon the country." And the similiter is then added thus: "And H. K. A. [the clerk of the court] who prosecutes for our said lord the King in this behalf, doth the like. Therefore let a jury come."

In informations, and in indictments for not repairing roads and bridges, etc., where the defendant is allowed to appear by attorney, the general issue is regularly engrossed, and filed with the proper officer. It is in form thus:—"And the said J. S., by A. B. his solicitor, cometh into court here, and, having heard the same indictment [or information] read, saith, that he is not guilty of the said premises in the said indictment [or information] above specified and charged upon him; and of this the said J. S. puts himself upon the country." Afterwards, in making up the record, the similiter (ante, p. 169) is added thus: "And J. N., who prosecutes for our said lord the King in this behalf, doth the like," if it be pleaded to an indictment at the assizes, or sessions; but if to an indictment in the King's Bench

Division, then thus: "And James Robert Mellor, esquire, coroner and attorney of our said lord the King, in the King's Bench Division of His Majesty's High Court of Justice, before the King himself, who prosecutes for our said lord the King in this behalf doth the like;" or if to an information, then thus: "And the said attorney-general [or coroner and attorney] of our said lord the King who prosecutes as aforesaid for our said lord the King, doth the like."

Where the general issue is pleaded it is incumbent upon the prosecutor to prove every fact and circumstance constituting the offence as stated in the indictment or information. And under this plea the defendant may give in evidence, not only everything which negatives the allegations in the indictment, but also all matters of excuse and justification. See post, Part II., Evidence. See 1 Chit. Cr. L. 470.

SECT. 1.

ARRAIGNMENT.

THE arraignment of prisoners, against whom true bills for indictable offences have been found by the grand jury, consists of three parts, first, calling the prisoner to the bar by name; secondly, reading the indictment to him; thirdly, asking him whether he be guilty or not of the offence charged. It was formerly the practice to require the prisoner to hold up his hand, the more completely to identify him as the person named in the indictment, but the ceremony, which was never essentially necessary (R. v. Radcliffe, 1 W. Bl. 3), is now in most courts disused; and the ancient form of asking him how he will be tried is also obsolete. As to the necessity of the presence of the accused, see post, p. 186. The prisoner is to be brought to the bar without irons, shackles, or other restraint, unless there be danger of escape; and "ought to be used with all the humanity and gentleness which is consistent with the nature of the thing, and under no other terror or uneasiness than what proceeds from a sense of his guilt and the misfortune of his present circumstances." 2 Hawk. c. 28, s. 1; Kel. (J.) 10. In R. v. Layer, 16 St. Tr. 93, 96, a distinction was taken between the time of arraignment and the time of trial, and the prisoner was obliged to stand at the bar in irons during the arraignment; but the ruling in that case is at variance with the authority of all the expositors of the common law. Britton, c. 5, fo. 14, says, "If felons come in judgment to answer, etc., they shall be out of irons and all manner of bonds, so that their pain shall not take away any manner of reason, nor constrain them to answer but at their free will." The Mirror, bk. 5, Ch. 1, 54 (Seld. Soc. Publ., vol. vii. p. 160) says, "It is an abuse that a prisoner should be loaded with irons or put in pain before he is attainted for felony." But it is possible that this passage relates to peine forte et dure. See also 3 Co. Inst. 34, where Coke cites Bracton, l. 3, f. 137; Staundf. 78; and a decision of the judges, 8 Edw. 2; also Hale's Sum. 212. But where there is reason to believe that the prisoner will make an attempt to escape, or will be guilty of violence, the gaoler may, by order of the judge, bring up the prisoner for arraignment in irons, and he may be kept ironed during the trial, and even when giving evidence on his own behalf. R. v. Brazier, Hants Summer Assizes [1899] Wright, J. The prisoner is entitled to a copy of his indictment in the case of treason (see 1 St. Tr., N. S. 673, and post, tit. "Treason"), but not in treason felony, R. v. Mitchel, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 599, 616, nor in any other felony. 1 Chit. Cr. L. 414: R. v. Holland, 4 T. R. 691, 693: R. v. Dowling, 7 St. Tr., N. S. 381; 3 Cox, 509. In R. v. Martin, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 925, 958, a copy of an indictment for treason felony was granted ex gratiâ. The prisoner is in strictness entitled to have the indictment read over slowly once before arraignment, and it is the practice after arraignment to let his counsel see the indictment and the names of the witnesses indorsed on it, or to have a copy. 1 Chit. Cr. L. 414. The same practice applies to misdemeanors (R. v. Mitchel, 1 St. Tr., N. S. at 616: R. v. Newton, 1 C. & K. 469), except (1) cases within 60 G. 3 & 1 G. 4, c. 4, ss. 8, 10, and the Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 138. See O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1, 24, 28, and (2) prosecutions for offences against the excise, 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 53, s. 42, in which cases the defendant is entitled to a copy of his indictment. If the prisoner be charged upon an indictment and also upon an inquisition for the same offence, he may be arraigned at the same time upon both; 1 East, P. C. 371; and where several defendants are charged in the same indictment, they ought all to be arraigned at the same time although their trials may be several. Kel. (J.) 9. As soon as the indictment has been read to the prisoner, or its substance stated to him (which is now the usual practice), the officer of the court demands of him—How say you, are you guilty or not guilty? The course of proceeding where the prisoner pleads to the jurisdiction, demurs, or raises the pleas in abatement, and the pleas of autrefois convict, or acquit, and attaint and of pardon have already been dealt with (ante, pp. 169–178). On the prisoner pleading not guilty under the old practice, he was asked how he would be tried, and made the answer "By God and my country." This form is now rarely, if ever, used. If the prisoner pleads guilty, and it appears to the satisfaction of the judge that he rightly comprehends the effect of his plea, his confession is recorded, and sentence is forthwith passed, or he is removed from the bar to be again brought up for judgment. 1 Chit. Cr. L. 415.

Arraignment of peers.]—A person entitled to the privilege of peerage if indicted for misdemeanor is tried in the same manner as a commoner. 3 Co. Inst. 30; 2 Hawk. c. 44, s. 13. But persons entitled to such privilege cannot be tried in pairs for treason, felony, or misprision of either offence, and it would seem that there is no power to waive the privilege. Lord Graves' case, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 609, n.; 310 Hansard, 246. When on arraignment the privilege is claimed or its existence is established, the indictment is removed by certiorari to the House of Lords, and if parliament be sitting is tried before that House as the court of the King in parliament; R. v. Earl of Cardigan, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 601; and if parliament be not sitting is tried in the court of the Lord High Steward, which is constituted by special commission. R. v. Earl Russell [1902] App. Cas. 446; and see 4 St. Tr., N. S. 666. At such trial the pleading and punishment are the same as in the case of any other accused person. 4 & 5 Vict. c. 22. The trial of peers for offences committed in Scotland is regulated by 6 G. 4, c. 66.

The privilege of peerage belongs to every peer except an Irish peer who is a member of the House of Commons, and to peeresses in their own right, to the wives of peers, and to the widows of peers who are not married to commoners; 20 Hen. 6, c. 9; 7 & 8 W. 3, c. 3, s. 10; but does not belong to archbishops or other bishops, who are lords of parliament but not peers. Standing orders, H. L.

Prisoner standing mute.]—If the prisoner, when called upon, stands mute of malice, or will not answer directly, the court may order the proper officer to enter a plea of not guilty; 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 2: see ante, p. 179. At common law the consequences of standing obstinately mute in cases of felony, were forfeiture of goods, and peine forte et dure; Hale's Sum. 227; and by 12 G. 3, c. 20, judgment as on a plea of guilty. See R. v. Steel, 1 Leach, 451. Where the defendant stands mute it would seem that the court cannot determine whether in fact he is mute of malice or by the visitation of God, R. v. Israel, 2 Cox, 263: R. v. Schleter, 10 Cox, 403; but must direct a jury to be forthwith impanelled and sworn, to try whether the prisoner be mute of malice or ex visitatione Dei, and such jury may consist of any twelve men who may happen to be present. Counsel may call witnesses for the defendant on the trial of the issue and may address the jury. R. v. Roberts, Carr. C. L. 57. The form of the oath to the jury in such a case may be as follows:—"You shall well and truly try whether A. B., the prisoner at the bar, who stands charged with felony, is mute of malice or by the visitation of God, and a true verdict give according to the evidence; so help you God." See Cro. Circ. Comp. 542 (9th ed.).

A person is mute by the visitation of God who is deaf and dumb; R. v. Jones, 1 Leach, 102: R. v. Pritchard, 7 C. & P. 303; or so deaf that he cannot hear the indictment when read. R. v. Halton, Ry. & M. 78: and see 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.), 119. The fact of being mute of visitation of God is no bar to an arraignment or trial if the mute is sane and intelligence can be conveyed to him by signs or symbols. But before proceeding with the trial it is necessary to ascertain whether he can plead to the indictment or understand the proceedings. R. v. Jones, ubi supra.

Prisoner unfit to plead or take his trial.]—The Criminal Lunatics Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 64), empowers a secretary of state to remove to a lunatic asylum all prisoners committed for trial who are certified in manner provided by the Act to be insane, and to order their detention as criminal lunatics until their remittal to prison or discharge. This power gets rid of the difficulty found in R. v. Dwerryhouse, 2 Cox, 446, where a prisoner was obviously unfit to be arraigned. If the secretary of state acts under the statute the hand of the court is stayed: ex parte Collins [1899] 34 L. J. Newsp. 132. The Criminal Lunatics Act, 1800 (39 & 40 G. 3, c. 94, passed in consequence of Hadfield's Case, 27 St. Tr. 1281, provides (s. 2) that "if any person indicted for any offence (R. v. Little, R. & R. 430), shall be insane, and shall upon arraignment be found so to be by a jury lawfully impanelled for that purpose," that is, by a jury returned by the sheriff instanter in the nature of an inquest of office "so that such person cannot be tried upon such indictment, it shall be lawful for the court before whom any such person shall be brought to be arraigned as aforesaid, to direct such finding to be recorded, and thereupon to order such person to be kept in strict custody until his Majesty's pleasure shall be known." Similar provisions are made by the same section as to persons brought up to be discharged for want of prosecution who appear to be insane. The enactment does not apply to grand juries. R. v. Hodges, 8 C. & P., 195. Persons detained after verdict under the section are dealt with as criminal lunatics. The form of oath to be administered to the jury impanelled to try whether a prisoner be non compos or not, is as follows:—"You shall diligently inquire and true presentment make, for and on behalf of our sovereign lord the King, whether A. B., the defendant who stands indicted for a misdemeanor, be insane or not, and a true verdict give accordingly to the best of your understanding;

so help you God." The proper time to raise the question of the prisoner's fitness to be tried is before he pleads. R. v. Southey, 4 F. & F. 864. The issue to be tried is the state of the prisoner's mind at the date of arraignment, not at any prior time. R. v. Keary, 14 Cox, 143: 4 Bl. Com. 24. As to the onus of proof on the trial of the issue, see R. v. Davies, 6 Cox, 326: 3 C. & K. 328; R. v. Turton, 6 Cox, 385. In R. v. Goode, 7 A. & E. 536, where the prisoner was tried at bar in the Queen's Bench for using seditious language against Queen Victoria in her presence, it was held that the jury might form their own opinion as to the state of the prisoner's mind when arraigned, from his demeanor during the inquest, without any evidence being given on the subject: but under ordinary circumstances it is usual for the judges to require some evidence as to the prisoner's state of mind. And in R. v. Pritchard, 7 C. & P. 303, where a prisoner arraigned on an indictment for felony, appeared to be deaf, dumb, and also of non-sane mind, Alderson, B., put three distinct issues to the jury, directing the jury to be sworn separately on each: 1. Whether the prisoner was mute of malice or by the visitation of God; 2. Whether he was able to plead; 3. Whether he was sane or not: and on the last issue they were directed to inquire whether the prisoner was of sufficient intellect to comprehend the course of the proceedings of the trial, so as to make a proper defence, to challenge a juror he might wish to object to, and to understand the details of the evidence (supra, p. 183). See also R. v. Whitfield, 3 C. & K. 121. The directions in R. v. Pritchard were approved in R. v. Berry, 1 Q. B. D. 447; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 123; 13 Cox, 189. In that case a deaf mute being arraigned for felony, the jury who had been impanelled to try the case were sworn to try whether the prisoner stood mute of malice or by the visitation of God. The jury found that he was mute by the visitation of God. The judge then ordered that a plea of not guilty should be entered, and the trial proceeded. The better course in such cases would seem to be to proceed as in R. v. Pritchard, ubi supra, and not to enter a verdict of not guilty at once. The jury found the prisoner guilty of the felony charged against him, but also found that he was incapable of understanding, and did not understand, the proceedings at the trial. Upon this finding it was held that the prisoner could not be convicted, but must be detained as a non-sane person during the Queen's pleasure. In R. v. Wheeler, Central Criminal Court, May 12, 1852, where the prisoner was indicted for the murder of his mother, and on his arraignment said he was "not guilty," Platt, B., on the motion of the prisoner's counsel, directed the jury to be sworn to inquire whether the prisoner was in a fit state of mind to plead to the indictment, and it appearing from the evidence that the prisoner seemed to understand the nature of the crime for which he was indicted, but that he seemed unable to understand the distinction between a plea of "guilty" and of "not guilty," the jury, at the suggestion of the learned judge, returned a verdict that the prisoner was of unsound mind and incompetent to plead. In R. v. Harris, 61 J. P. 792, the prisoner was unable to read or write, and owing to an unhealed wound in his throat could not speak. A jury was impanelled to try whether he was sane and able to plead, who found that he was both, but that at present he was unable to give instructions for his defence, and that his condition was due to his own act, attempted suicide. He was then called on to plead; pleaded not guilty, and his trial was adjourned. Cf. R. v. Whitfield, 3 C. & K. 121. As to feigned madness, see R. v. Davies, 6 Cox, 326, Williams, J.; R. v. Berry [1897] 104 L. T. Jan. 110, Wills, J. Where the jury are sworn in the nature of an inquest of office, to inquire whether or not a prisoner is sufficiently sane to plead to the indictment, the court directs the finding to be recorded; and the following is the form of the record of the finding:—

MIDDLESEX:—The King against J. G.—The defendant being brought here into court, in the custody of the keeper of his Majesty's prison of ——, by virtue of a writ of habeas corpus, it is ordered that the said writ and the return made thereto be filed; and the said defendant is now here in court arraigned upon the indictment found against him in this court for certain misdemeanors, in speaking and publishing certain scandalous and seditious words of and concerning our sovereign lord the King, and is asked by the court here whether he be guilty of the premises charged upon him by the said indictment or not. Whereupon the said defendant doth refuse to answer to the said indictment; and it appearing to this court that the said defendant may be insane, so that he cannot be tried upon the said indictment: therefore, on the prayer of Sir Robert Finlay, knight, his Majesty's attorney-general, it is ordered that a jury in this behalf do immediately come here into court, to try and inquire for and on behalf of our sovereign lord the King, whether the said defendant be insane or not. And immediately thereupon, a jury being impanelled and returned for that purpose by the sheriff of the said county of Middlesex, come here into court, and being elected, tried, and sworn to speak the truth touching and concerning the premises aforesaid, say upon their oath that the said defendant is insane. And the said attorney-general, for and on behalf of our said sovereign lord the King, prays the said court here that the finding of the said jury may be recorded. It is thereupon ordered by the said court here, that the said finding of the said jury be recorded, and that the said defendant be kept in strict custody in the said gaol until his Majesty's pleasure in the premises shall be known. And the said defendant is now here in court re-committed to the custody of the keeper of the said gaol, to be by him kept in strict custody until his Majesty's pleasure shall be known. On the motion of the attorney-general: By the court.

As to the proceedings on the trial of a person alleged to have been insane when the offence charged was committed, see post, p. 221.

Arraignment for subsequent offence.]—The mode of arraigning prisoners, on an indictment containing a charge, under 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 11, of a previous conviction for felony, was first to arraign the prisoner on the whole indictment, and afterwards to give him in charge to the jury on the subsequent felony only. R. v. Key, 2 Den. 347; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 35; R. v. Shuttleworth, 2 Den. 351; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 36. This procedure was not altered by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 9 (rep.). S. 116 of the Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96), provides that the mode of arraigning a defendant on an indictment for an offence punishable under that Act committed after a previous conviction is, in the first instance, to arraign him upon so much only of the indictment as charges the subsequent offence, and, if he pleads not guilty or the court orders a plea of not guilty to be entered, to charge the jury in the first instance to inquire only concerning the subsequent offence. A similar course is to be pursued where the prisoner is indicted for an offence against the Coinage Offences Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 99), after a previous conviction (s. 37). [See post, Bk. II., Part V.] And s. 9 of the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 112), alters the practice adopted under 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 11, and provides that the rules contained in s. 116 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, in relation to the form of and the proceedings upon an indictment for any offence punishable under that act committed after previous conviction, shall, with the necessary variations, apply to any indictment for committing a "crime" as defined by s. 20 of 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112 (viz., any felony, or the offence of uttering false or counterfeit coin, or of possessing counterfeit gold or silver coin, or the offence of obtaining goods or money by false pretences, or the offence of conspiracy to defraud, or any misdemeanor under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 58), after previous conviction for a crime, whether the crime charged in such indictment or the crime to which such previous conviction relates be or be not punishable under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96.

The arraignment is not complete till the prisoner has pleaded. R. v. Duffy, 7 St. Tr., N. S. 795, 799. If the defendant pleads "not guilty," his plea is recorded by the officer of the court; either by writing on the indictment the words "po. se," an abbreviation of the words ponit se super patriam, or, as at the Central Criminal Court, the word "puts," and by an entry in the minute book of the court. See R. v. Newman, 2 Den. 390; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 74, 76. A plea of not guilty may by leave of the judge be withdrawn during the trial, and a plea of guilty substituted. R. v. Brown, 17 L. J. (M. C.) 145. There is a case to the contrary as to a trial on a nisi prius record. R. v. Barrett, 2 Lewin, 264; but it is inconsistent with old precedent and modern practice. R. v. Turner, 24 L. J. Newsp. 469. A plea of "guilty" may be withdrawn before sentence: R. v. Plummer [1902] 2 K. B. 339: but not after sentence. R. v. Sell, 9 C. & P. 346: R. v. Clouter, 8 Cox, 237. It is no bar to the right of the court to reserve a special case. See post, ch. viii. s. 1. Persons indicted and arraigned together may in the discretion of the court be separately tried, even in cases of conspiracy; see R. v. Ahearne, 2 Ir. Com. Law Rep. 381; 6 Cox, 7 (C. C. R., Ir.); or treason, Kel. (J.), 8, 9.

No trial for felony can be had except in the presence of the defendant, and he must, it is said, stand in the dock to be tried. R. v. St. George, 9 C. & P. 483; R. v. Douglas, C. & Mar. 193; R. v. Zulueta, 1 C. & K. 215; 1 Cox, 20. The reason of this may be that the defendant is given in charge to the jury. If he creates a disturbance it is said that the trial may go on without his presence. Steph. Dig. Cr. Proc. art. 302: R. v. Berry [1897] 104 L. T. Journ. 110, Wills, J. The prisoner may be punished for contempt of court for the disturbance created. R. v. Giles [1895] Wilts Assizes, Wills, J. A charge of misdemeanor may be tried, although the accused be not present, if he has previously pleaded; 8 Rep. Crim. L. 143; and it is not necessary for the defendant to be in the dock; R. v. Lovett, 9 C. & P. 462; 3 St. Tr., N. S. 1177; or even in the court. Where a defendant, tried at bar for perjury, was taken ill in the course of the trial, he was allowed to absent himself from the court until his recovery, and the trial proceeded in his absence. R. v. Orton, alias Castro, Queen's Bench, July, 1873, MS.

The absence of one of several persons accused together does not affect the validity of the conviction of those who appear. See ex parte O'Brien Dalton, 28 L. R. Ir. 36.

The Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 69), which regulates the arrest in one part of the British Empire of fugitives from the justice of another part of the empire and their reconveyance for trial contains no provisions precluding an offender returned under that Act from being tried for offences other than those for which he was returned. It superseded the Colonial Arrest Act (6 & 7 Vict. c. 34), under which the same rule applied: see R. v. Philips, 1 F. & F. 105. The Act of 1881 has been extended to certain places subject to the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 37), by Orders in Council printed in the Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904) vol. 5, tit. "Foreign Jurisdiction."

Under the Extradition Acts, 1870 to 1895, a fugitive criminal surrendered by a foreign state for an extradition crime in pursuance of a treaty can be tried only for offences "proved by the facts on which the surrender is granted" (33 & 34 Vict. c. 52, s. 19); i.e., by the extradition documents submitted to the authorities of the foreign state for the purpose of securing the surrender. As to the mode of raising the question, see ante, p. 162. The burden of proof that he was surrendered under the treaty and that the offences charged were not included in the order for surrender seems to rest upon him and not on the crown. R. v. Butler, 18 New South Wales Rep. (Law) 146. Where he has been arrested or surrendered irrespective of treaty he can be tried for any offence. Ex parte Scott, 9 B. & C. 446; 32 R. R. 237; Lord Advocate v. Sinclair, 17 Rettie, Justiciary Cases, 38.

Defence by counsel.]—In trials for treason and misprision of treason the prisoner is entitled to defence by counsel by 7 & 8 W. 3, c. 3, s. 1. And the court on his request will assign him not more than two counsel. R. v. Lynch, K. B. D., Dec. 19, 1902: R. v. Frost, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 85, 106; 9 C. & P. 129, 135, and n. Since 1836 (6 & 7 W. 4, c. 114, s. 1) all persons tried for felony are entitled, "after the close of the prosecution, to make full answer and defence by counsel learned in the law, or by solicitor in courts where solicitors practise as counsel," e.g. at courts of quarter sessions where less than four counsel attend. Archbold, Q. S. (5th ed.) 126. In trials for misdemeanors the accused has always been entitled to be defended by counsel. King's counsel cannot appear for the defence except by licence from the crown, now granted through the Home Office without fee. See R. v. Bartlett, 2 C. & K. 321: R. v. Jones, 9 C. & P. 401.

Defence at request of judge.]—Quite apart from statute and the practice of the superior courts, where the prisoner is not defended by counsel, the court may properly request some member of the bar present to give his honorary services to the prisoner, if the prisoner is willing to accept them. R. v. Fogarty, 5 Cox, 161 (Ir.): R. v. Yscuado, 6 Cox, 386. This course has hitherto been adopted only in the case of murder or other grave crime, or where the circumstances of the case are special.

Provision of legal aid for poor prisoners.]—Statutory provision has since Jan. 1, 1904, been made for payment in certain events out of public funds in England and Wales of the costs of the defence of poor prisoners tried on indictment for any offence. The Poor Prisoners Defence Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 38) enacts as follows:—

Sect. 1.—"(1) Where it appears, having regard to the nature of the defence set up by any poor prisoner, as disclosed in the evidence given or statement made by him before the committing justices, that it is desirable in the interests of justice that he should have legal aid in the preparation and conduct of his defence, and that his means are insufficient to enable him to obtain such aid—

"(a) the committing justices, upon the committal of the prisoner for trial; or

"(b) the judge of a court of assize or chairman of a court of quarter sessions, at any time after reading the depositions, may certify that the prisoner ought to have such legal aid, and thereupon the prisoner shall be entitled to have solicitor and counsel assigned to him, subject to the provisions of this Act."

The best guide at present available in the application of this sub-section is contained in the following Home Office circular to justices' clerks:—

"Home Office, Whitehall, Aug. 31, 1904.

"SIR,—I am directed by the Secretary of State to inform you that he has received a number of communications respecting the Poor Prisoners Defence

Act, 1903, from which it would appear that magistrates have in many instances found some difficulty in determining what action they should take to give effect to the intention of the Act. He thinks, therefore, that the remarks made by the Lord Chief Justice when charging the grand jury at the recent Warwick Summer Assizes may afford magistrates valuable assistance in the proper administration of the Act, and he will be glad if you will bring them to the notice of the magistrates of your bench. The following is the report which appeared in The Times of July 26, 1904, corrected by the Lord Chief Justice himself:—

"'At Warwick, on Saturday, Lord Alverstone, in charging the grand jury, referred to the working of the Poor Prisoners Defence Act. He said that during the six months since the Act had come into force there had been some difference of practice among magistrates as to its scope and the principle upon which it should be applied, and the Home Office had received many communications on the subject. This made it desirable that he should explain the guiding principles of the Act. The Act was not intended to give a prisoner legal assistance in order to find out if he had got a defence. He was not to have solicitor or counsel assigned to him for such a purpose. The governing principle of the Act was that people who had a defence should have every inducement to tell the truth about it at the earliest opportunity. Assistance under the Act could only be given where both (1) the nature of the defence as disclosed was such that in the interests of justice the prisoner should have legal aid to make his defence clear; and (2) where also his means were insufficient for that end. Magistrates would have little difficulty in deciding the second point, upon which they could inform themselves by the ordinary means of information. As regards the first point, they should bear in mind that by a defence disclosed was meant not only a defence stated by the prisoner at the end of the hearing, but a defence disclosed on cross-examination, or by questions the prisoner might ask, or by remarks he interposed, or even in some cases such as might appear on the face of the evidence called for the prosecution. All they had to be sure of was that a defence requiring legal consideration was disclosed at the time by a prisoner devoid of pecuniary means. The Act was passed in the interest of innocent persons; and such would be advised in future not to 'reserve their defence,' but to disclose it at once, so that it could be investigated. The prisoner would thus prevent the suggestion that he had kept back his defence so as to give the prosecution no opportunity of investigating it.'

"I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
"M. D. CHALMERS"

"(2) The expenses of the defence, including the cost of a copy of the depositions, the fees of solicitor and counsel, and the expenses of any witnesses shall be allowed and paid in the same manner as the expenses of a prosecution in cases of indictment for felony, subject, nevertheless, to any rules under this Act and to any regulations as to rates or scales of payment which may be made by one of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State." (See post, p. 255).

Sect. 2. Rules.]—"Rules for carrying this Act into effect may be made in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as rules under the Prosecution of Offences Act, 1879" (42 & 43 Vict. c. 22). (See post, p. 189).

Sect. 3. Definitions.]—"In this Act—

"'Prisoner' includes a person committed for trial on bail.

"'Committing justices' includes a magistrate of the police courts of the metropolis and a stipendiary magistrate.

"'Chairman' includes recorder or deputy-recorder or deputy-chairman."

The Act does not extend to Scotland or Ireland (s. 4), and appears not to apply to trials in the King's Bench Division (see post, p. 190). But the term "court of assize" includes the Central Criminal Court (52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 13 (4)).

The following rules were made by the Attorney-General, dated May 13, 1904, with the approval of the Lord Chancellor and the Secretary of State for the Home Department, in pursuance of s. 2 of the Poor Prisoners' Defence Act, 1903 (Stat. Rules & Orders, 1904, No. 1056, Legal Series, No. 8):—

1. "Every clerk of assize and clerk of the peace shall keep a list of solicitors who are willing to undertake the defence of poor prisoners, and shall insert in such list the names of all solicitors who are willing so to act. The name of any solicitor shall be removed from the list, either on the application of the solicitor himself or by direction of any judge of assize or chairman of quarter sessions. A copy of such list shall be sent to every clerk to justices in the county of quarter sessions district."

2. "Every clerk of assize and clerk of the peace shall keep a list of the members of the bar attending the circuit or sessions who are willing to act as counsel for poor prisoners, and shall insert in such list the names of all such members of the bar who are willing so to act."

3. "Any certificate given by the justices in pursuance of s. 1 of the Poor Prisoners' Defence Act, 1903, shall be in Form A in the Schedule hereto. It shall as soon as it has been given be sent by the clerk to the justices to the clerk of assize or clerk of the peace, together with the name of the solicitor assigned.

"The certificate given by a judge of assize or chairman of quarter sessions shall be in Form B in the schedule hereto."

4. "Any justices, judge of assize, or chairman of quarter sessions, who give such a certificate shall at the same time assign to the prisoner from the list kept under Rule 1 a solicitor to whose services the prisoner shall be entitled.

"A copy of the depositions shall be furnished to the solicitor so assigned by the justices' clerk, clerk of assize, or clerk of the peace, as the case may be."

5. "Any member of the bar whose name appears upon the list kept under Rule 2 may be instructed on behalf of the prisoner by the solicitor so assigned."

I, A.B. ——, having regard to the nature of the defence set up by ——, as disclosed in the evidence given [or in the statement made by him] [or in the evidence given and statement made by him] before the Committing Justices, am satisfied that it is desirable in the interests of justice that he should have legal aid in the conduct of his defence, and that his means are insufficient to enable him to obtain such aid, and I therefore certify that the said —— ought to have such legal aid.

Defence in formâ pauperis in superior courts.]—11 H. 7 c. 12, provided that every poor person having cause of action or suit, should have a writ original or subpœnâ, without paying for sealing or writing the same, and that the chancellor should assign clerks to write, and counsel the attorney for the same, without taking reward; and that so should the justices of the King's Bench and Common Bench, the barons of the exchequer, and all other justices in courts of record where such suit should be. This enactment applied only to civil cases, R. v. Wright, 2 Str. 1041; but even at the date of that decision the course of the court allowed defence in formâ pauperis in criminal cases. Id. Where, therefore, it appeared that a poor person is not worth five pounds after all his debts are paid, except the necessary implements of his trade, bed and bedding, and necessary wearing apparel, he is allowed to appear and defend himself in the King's Bench Division against an indictment in formâ pauperis, without paying the usual fees to the officers of the court. Id. So a woman indicted by her husband for a misdemeanor has been admitted to defend in formâ pauperis; Com. Dig. Formâ Pauperis; and a person convicted of perjury and outlawed for forgery has been admitted to plead the King's pardon as a pauper. R. v. Morgan, 2 Str. 1214. A prisoner against whom a bill of indictment was found for perjury, which was removed into the King's Bench by certiorari, was allowed to appear and defend there in formâ pauperis; R. v. Page, 1 Dowl. 507: and see R. v. Sims, Tidd (N. P.) 64, cit.; and this course has been allowed even where the indictment had been removed by certiorari at the instance of the defendant himself. R. v. Nicholson, 8 Dowl. 489. In the case of R. v. Stokes, 3 C. & K. 185, 189, where the prisoner was convicted at the assizes, an application was made, on petition and affidavit, to Parke, B., at chambers, for leave to sue out a writ of error in formâ pauperis; that learned judge intimated that he had never known a writ of error under such circumstances, though he was by no means prepared to say that it could not be granted; ultimately the case was argued as a crown case reserved. It seems, however, that the court may admit persons to sue or defend in formâ pauperis at any time. Com. Dig. Formâ Pauperis. A prosecutor may be allowed to sue in formâ pauperis on making an affidavit as above, and obtaining a certificate of counsel that he has good cause to prosecute. R. v. Wilkins, 1 Dowl. 536. The petition to be admitted to defend an indictment as a pauper may be in the following form:—

"To the Right Hon. Richard Everard, Baron Alverstone, Lord Chief Justice of England, and the rest of the Honourable Justices of the King's Bench Division of His Majesty's High Court of Justice: The humble petition of A. B., etc., showeth, That at a session of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, holden for the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court, in the month of December, 19—, an indictment for perjury was preferred against your petitioner, which indictment was by the grand jury then and there found to be a true bill; and that in Hilary term last the said indictment was removed by writ of certiorari into the said King's Bench Division; but your petitioner being very poor, is utterly unable to defend himself against the said indictment, without an order from this honourable court to enable him to defend the same in formâ pauperis, your petitioner not being worth five pounds in the world besides the necessary implements of his trade, bed and bedding, and necessary wearing apparel, and all his just debts being paid. Your petitioner therefore humbly prays your lordships will be pleased to admit him a pauper, to defend the said indictment: And your petitioner will ever pray," etc.

The affidavit to verify the foregoing petition may be as follows:—

"In the High Court of Justice, King's Bench Division.—The King on the prosecutoin of A. B. against C. D.—I, C. D:, the above-named defendant, make oath and say, that I am not worth five pounds in the world, save and except the necessary implements of my trade, bed and bedding, and necessary wearing apparel. Sworn, etc. C. D."

This petition is usually presented to a judge at chambers, but it may be presented in court; and on the prayer of the petition being granted, an order is drawn up at the Crown Office without any fee, which must be produced when the pauper requires anything to be done without payment of fees. R. v. Dugdale, Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 250.

The court would in some cases allow poor persons to prosecute in formâ pauperis, but they would not do so on the common affidavit of poverty; such an application could only be granted on special grounds, upon the certificate of counsel, in addition to the foregoing petition and affidavit. Com. Dig. Formâ Pauperis: R. v. Wilkins, 1 Dowl. 536.

The repeal of 11 H. 7, c. 12, by 46 & 47 Vict. c. 49, s. 3, appears not to have affected the privilege of suing and defending in formâ pauperis, in criminal cases. Neither the Rules of the Supreme Court nor the Crown Office Rules deal with proceedings in formâ pauperis in criminal cases. See 38 & 39 Vict. c. 77, s. 19; 46 & 47 Vict. c. 49, s. 5 (b).

Sect. 2.

Summons, Impanelling, Challenge and Swearing of the Petty Jury.

Calling.]—The prisoner having put himself upon the country, the next proceeding is to call the petty jurors, which an officer of the court does in the following or like terms:—

"You good men, who are returned and impanelled to try the issue joined between our sovereign lord the King and the prisoner at the bar, answer to your names and save your fines," [then calling the jurors by name]. It is not necessary in point of law that the names should be called over in the order in which they stand on the panel, although it is generally proper to do so: it is not, therefore, ground of error that the names are not so called over. Mansell v. R., 8 St. Tr., N. S. 831; 8 E. & B. 54; Dears. & B. 375.

Qualification.]—By s. 1 of the Juries Act, 1825 (6 G. 4, c. 50), "every man, except as hereinafter excepted [see infra], between the ages of twenty-one years and sixty years, residing in any county in England, who shall have in his own name or in trust for him, within the same county, 10*l.* by the year above reprizes, in lands or tenements, whether of freehold, copyhold, or customary tenure, or of ancient demesne, or in rents issuing out of any such lands or tenements, or in such lands, tenements, and rents taken together, in fee simple, fee tail, or for the life of himself or some other person; or who shall have within the same county 20*l.* by the year above reprizes, in lands or tenements held by lease or leases for the absolute term of twenty-one years, or some longer term, or for any term of years determinable on any life or lives: or who, being a householder, shall be rated or assessed to the poor rate or to the inhabited house duty in the county of Middlesex, on a value of not less than 30*l.*, or in any other county on a value of not less than 20*l.*; or who shall occupy a house containing not less than fifteen windows, shall be qualified and shall be liable to serve on juries for the trial of all issues joined in any of the king's courts of record at Westminster, and in the superior courts, both civil and criminal, of the three counties palatine, and in all courts of assize, nisi prius, oyer and terminer, and gaol delivery, such issues being respectively triable in the county in which every man so qualified respectively shall reside, and shall also be qualified and liable to serve on grand juries in courts of sessions of the peace, and on petty juries, for the trial of all issues joined in such courts of sessions of the peace, and triable in the county, riding, or division, in which every man so qualified respectively shall reside," including the new county of London, 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 89. The qualifications, it will be seen, do not apply to grand jurors except for general or quarter sessions (as to the qualifications of grand jurors see ante, p. 101), nor to common jurors in the city of London; see 6 G. 4, c. 50, s. 50, and 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 88 (2). The qualifications for jurors summoned for a coroner's inquest are not regulated by the Act of 1825 (see s. 52), but by s. 8 of the Coroners Act, 1887: see in re Dutton [1892] 1 Q. B. 486; R. v. Waldo, 67 J. P. Rep. 103, and ante, p. 154. The Juries Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 77, s. 7), enacts, that "the qualification of persons as jurors in Wales shall be the same as the qualification of persons as jurors in England," and repeals the prior provision to the contrary.

Under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 186, sub-s. 1), "every burgess of a borough having a separate court of quarter sessions or a borough civil court shall, unless by law exempt, or disqualified, be qualified and liable to serve on grand juries in the borough, and on juries for the trial of issues joined in either of those courts." By 23 H. 8, c. 13, burgesses worth £40 in personalty are qualified as jurors to try felonies.

By s. 8 of the Juries Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 77), "aliens having been domiciled in England or Wales for ten years or upwards, if in other respects duly qualified, shall be qualified and shall be liable to serve on juries or inquests in England and Wales as if they had been natural-born subjects of the King; but, save as aforesaid, no man not being a natural-born subject of the King shall be qualified to serve on juries or inquests in any court or on any occasion whatsoever."

Disqualifications.]—By s. 10 of the same Act "no man who has been or shall be attainted (see ante, p. 177) of any treason or felony, or convicted of any crime that is infamous, unless he shall have obtained a free pardon, nor any man who is under outlawry, is or shall be qualified to serve on juries or inquests in any court or on any occasion whatsoever." Persons over sixty are exempt but not disqualified. Mulcahy v. R., L. R. 3 H. L. 306.

Exemptions.]—The privilege of exemption from serving on juries depends mainly upon s. 9 of the Juries Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 77), which enacts that "The persons described in the schedule hereto shall be severally exempt (as therein specified) from being returned to serve, and from serving upon any juries or inquests whatsoever, and their names shall not be inserted in the lists of the persons qualified and liable to serve on the same, but, save as aforesaid, no man otherwise qualified to serve on such juries or inquests shall be exempt from serving thereon, any enactment, prescription, charter, grant, or writ to the contrary notwithstanding." The exemptions extend to coroners' juries: In re Dutton [1892] 1 Q. B. 486. A particular exemption given by the section to jurors of the city of Westminster was abolished by 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 89 (2), and such jurors are now liable to serve on any jury in the new counties of London and Middlesex, except at quarter sessions for Middlesex. Below is given the schedule with the addition in italics of other exemptions added by the other statutes specified:—"Persons exempt from serving on juries. Peers; members of parliament; judges; clergymen; Roman Catholic priests; ministers of any congregation of Protestant Dissenters, and of Jews, whose place of meeting is duly registered, provided they follow no secular occupation except that of a schoolmaster; . . . barristers-at-law, certificated conveyancers and special pleaders, if actually practising; members of the society of doctors at law, and advocates of the civil law, if actually practising; . . . solicitors, . . . if actually practising and having taken out their annual certificates and their managing clerks, and notaries public in actual practice; officers of the courts of law and equity, and of the Admiralty and Ecclesiastical courts, including therein the courts of Probate and Divorce, and the clerks of the peace or their deputies, if actually exercising the duties of their respective offices; coroners; gaolers and keepers of houses of correction, and all subordinate officers of the same; keepers in public lunatic asylums; members and licentiates of the Royal College of Physicians in London, if actually practising as physicians; members of the Royal Colleges of Surgeons in London, Edinburgh and Dublin, if actually practising as surgeons; apothecaries certificated by the Court of Examiners of the Apothecaries Company, and all registered medical practitioners (a) and registered pharmaceutical chemists if actually practising as apothecaries, medical practitioners, or pharmaceutical chemists respectively (see also 21 & 22 Vict. c. 90, s. 35); and registered dentists if they so desire (41 & 42 Vict. c. 33, s. 30); officers of the navy, army, militia, and yeomanry, while on full pay; all soldiers in his majesty's regular forces (44 & 45 Vict. c. 58, s. 147); the members of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board; the master, wardens, and brethren of the Corporation of Trinity House of Deptford Strond; pilots licensed by the Trinity House of Deptford Strond, Kingston-upon-Hull, or Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and all masters of vessels in the buoy and light service employed by either of those corporations, and all pilots licensed under any Act of Parliament or charter for the regulation of pilots (see 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, part x.); the household servants of his majesty, his heirs and successors; officers of the Post Office, commissioners of customs, and officers, clerks, or other persons acting in the management, service [39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 9], or collection of the customs commissioners and collectors of inland revenue, and officers or persons appointed by the commissioners of inland revenue or employed by them or under their authority or direction in any way relating to the duties of inland revenue (53 & 54 Vict. c. 21, s. 8); general or additional commissioners of income tax, as to the counties in which they dwell so long as they hold a certificate under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 35 (43 & 44 Vict. c. 19, s. 40); sheriffs' officers; officers of the rural and metropolitan police [see also 2 & 3 Vict. c. 93, s. 10], magistrates of the metropolitan police courts, their clerks, ushers, doorkeepers, and messengers; members of the London County Council as to juries within the administrative county of London [53 & 54 Vict. c. cxlii. s. 26] members of the council of a county of a city or town corporate so far as relates to service on the trial of indictments removed into the adjoining county at large (38 G. 3, c. 52, s. 11); members of the council of the municipal corporation of any borough, and every justice of the peace assigned to keep the peace therein, and the town clerk and treasurer for the time being of every such borough, so far as relates to any jury summoned to serve in the county where such borough is situate; burgesses of every borough in and for which a separate court of quarter sessions shall be holden so far as relates to any jury summoned for the trial of issues joined in any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace in the county wherein such borough is situate; justices of the peace so far as relates to any jury summoned to serve at any sessions of the peace for the jurisdiction of which he is a justice; officers of the Houses of Lords and Commons," and registrars of births, deaths, and marriages; 7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 22, s. 18. "No person whose name shall be in the jury book as a juror shall be entitled to be excused from attendance on the ground of any disqualification or exemption other than illness not claimed by him at or before the revision of the list by the justices of the peace, and a notice to that effect shall be printed at the bottom of every jury list." 33 & 34 Vict. c. 77, s. 12. That section does not apply to customs officials exempted by 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 9, supra.

Jury lists.]—The mode of preparing jury lists, returning the names of persons qualified as jurors, making up the jury book, and summoning the juries in counties, is prescribed by the Juries Act, 1825 (6 G. 4, c. 50), ss. 8–10, 12, 14, 20, 22, 25; the Juries Act, 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 107), ss. 4–6, 8–14, and the Juries Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 77), ss. 11, 13, 14, 15, 19, 20, as modified by the Local Government Act, 1888, and the London Government Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 14).

Summoning jurors.]—The clerk of the county council in every administrative county in England and Wales is required on or before the 20th July in every year to issue his precept, according to the form given in the schedule to 25 & 26 Vict. c. 107, to the [churchwardens and] overseers of the poor of the several parishes and townships within the administrative county for which he acts, requiring them to make out, before the 1st September then next ensuing, a true list of all men residing within their respective parishes and townships qualified and liable to serve on juries according to 6 G. 4, c. 50, and also to perform and comply with all other the requisitions in the said precepts contained (25 & 26 Vict. c. 107, s. 4, as modified by 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 83 (6)). The [churchwardens and] overseers then make out their lists, and fix a copy on the principal door of every public place of religious worship within their parish or township on the three first Sundays in September; 6 G. 4, c. 50, ss. 8, 9; 25 & 26 Vict. c. 107, s. 6; and at a special petty sessions, held in the last week in September (or at such adjournment thereof as is mentioned in 25 & 26 Vict. c. 107, s. 8), these lists are produced, and the justices then strike out the names of any persons not qualified, or not able to serve by reason of any infirmity, and insert the names of any qualified persons omitted; 6 G. 4, c. 50, s. 10. The lists duly corrected and allowed by the justices present at such petty sessions are transmitted by their clerk to the clerk of the county council. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 107, s. 9; 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 83 (6). The lists are then copied into The Jurors' Book by the clerk of the county council, which book is delivered by him to the sheriff, to be used from the 1st of January, for one year. 6 G. 4, c. 50, s. 12; 25 & 26 Vict. c. 107, s. 10; 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 83 (6).

In the county of London the duty of making out the lists now devolves on the town clerk of each metropolitan borough in substitution for the overseers, etc., of the parishes comprised therein. 62 & 63 Vict. c. 14, ss. 11 (1), 25. In rural parishes the churchwardens are no longer concerned with jury lists. 54 & 55 Vict. c. 73, s. 5 (2).

6 G. 4, c. 50, provides (s. 20) that "the court of King's Bench, and all courts of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery [and] the courts of sessions of the peace in England . . . and Wales, shall respectively have and exercise the same power and authority as they have heretofore had and exercised, in issuing any writ or precept, or in making any award or order, orally or otherwise, for the return of a jury for the trial of any issue before any of such courts respectively, or for the amending or enlarging the panel of jurors returned for the trial of any such issue; and the return to every such writ, precept, award or order, shall be made in the manner heretofore used and accustomed in such courts respectively, save and except that the jurors shall be returned from the body of the county, and not from any hundred, or any particular venue within the county, and shall be qualified according to this Act." (a)

High Court.]—The summoning of jurors for trial at the Royal Courts of Justice is now regulated by the following rule of January 15, 1903, made under s. 89 (3) of the Local Government Act, 1888:—

"The sheriffs of the county of London and of the county of Middlesex respectively shall execute and obey all precepts and process which the judges or proper officers of the High Court of Justice shall award, issue, and direct unto them respectively, and shall whenever required and commanded summon and return from the said county of London and the said county of Middlesex a competent number of persons qualified according to law to inquire of present and try all offences, issues and other matters cognizable by the justices of the High Court of Justice within the boundaries of the county of the county of London and the county of Middlesex, and the persons returned from the said county of London and the said county of Middlesex whether taken wholly from the said county of London or from the said county of Middlesex or taken indiscriminately from the said county of London and the said county of Middlesex shall have authority to inquire of, present, hear, try and determine all such offences and other matters and all issues and all matters of fact arising out of such trials or relating thereto as if the said county of London and the said county of Middlesex were one county."

Assizes.]—Before the justices of assize go their circuits, (b) they issue

(a) The court appears to have inherent authority to summon one or more grand juries. See Chit. Cr. L., 309, 310; R. v. McGuire [1898] 34 New Bruns., 430.

(b) The circuits are now regulated by a series of Orders in Council printed in Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 12, tit. "Supreme Court E.," and the commission their precept, signed and sealed to the sheriff, to cause all persons bound to attend at the assizes to appear before them on an appointed day, and requiring him (among other things) to return a competent number of good and lawful men of the body of the county, qualified as jurors according to law: and the judges are empowered by the Jurors Act, 1825 (6 G. 4, c. 50), s. 22, if they think fit, to direct the sheriff to "summon and impanel such number of jurors, not exceeding one hundred and forty-four, as such judges shall think fit to direct, to serve indiscriminately on the criminal and civil side," dividing them into two sets, the first to serve at the beginning of the assizes, for such time as the judge may direct, and the second to serve for the residue of such assizes. (For forms of judges' precepts to the sheriff, see 4 Chit. Cr. L. 171, 174.) "The precept issued by the justices of assize to the sheriff to summon jurors for the assizes shall direct that the jurors be summoned for the trial of all issues, whether civil or criminal, which may come on for trial at the assizes." 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 105. It is the duty of the sheriff, upon the receipt of the precept for the return of jurors, to return the names of men contained in the jurors' book for the current year and no others. 6 G. 4, c. 50, s. 14. "No juror shall be liable to any penalty for non-attendance on any jury, unless the summons requiring him to attend be duly served six days at least before the day on which he is required to attend; but no longer period than such six days shall in any case be required between the service and such last mentioned day." 33 & 34 Vict. c. 77, s. 20. Jurors may be summoned by post, provided that when any summons shall be served by post, two additional days shall be allowed for the transmission of such summons by post, over and above the number of days required by law for the service of a summons, before the day on which the juror is required to attend. 25 & 26 Vict. c. 107, s. 11. The writs of venire facias juratores, and distringas juratores, which constituted what was formerly known as the jury process, were abolished in 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 104, rep.). And under the present practice "writs of venire facias, or other writs for the summoning of juries, shall no longer be used, but the jury, whether special or common, shall be taken from the list of persons summoned for the sittings or assizes, and a panel shall be annexed to the record as in civil cases." (Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 158).

The sheriff must for 1*s.* deliver a copy of the jury panel to any party requiring the same. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 106.

The juries summoned under the substituted procedure are made as effectual for all purposes as those summoned under the old writs. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 115.

Special jury.]—A special jury cannot be given in felony. R. v. Mayne, 32 W. R. 95. In important cases of misdemeanor, when the record is in the King's Bench Division, a special jury may be obtained on the motion of either prosecutor or defendant. By s. 30 of the Juries Act, 1825 (6 G. 4, c. 50), the High Court (K. B. D.) may, upon the motion of any prosecutor, relator, plaintiff, or demandant, or of any defendant in any case whatsoever, whether civil or criminal, or on any penal statute, excepting only indictments for treason or felony, depending in the said court, order and appoint a special jury to be struck before the proper officer of each respective court, for the trial of any issue joined in any of days by orders in Council issued before each circuit and printed in the Statutory Rules and Orders of the year of issue. Certain of these orders contain directions as to the precepts for summoning jurors. They are made under 8 & 4 W. 4, c. 71, 38 & 39 Vict. c. 77, s. 23; and as to spring and winter assizes under 39 & 40 Vict. c. 57, 40 & 41 Vict. c. 46, and 42 & 43 Vict. c. 1.

the said cases, and triable by a jury, in such manner as the said courts respectively have usually ordered the same, and every jury so struck shall be the jury returned for the trial of such issue. As to the usual mode of striking a special jury, see Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 213. As to the old practice, see 1 Chit. Cr. L. 522. As to the cost of such jury, see 6 G. 4, c. 50, s. 34: R. v. Moate, 3 B. & Ad. 237: 1 L. J. N. S., K. B. 78: 37 R. R. 421. By the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852 (15 & 16 Vict. c. 76), s. 108, as modified by 61 & 62 Vict. c. 6, s. 1 (1), the precept issued by the judges of assize for the sheriff to summon jurors for the assizes directs the sheriff to summon a sufficient number of special jurymen, to be mentioned therein, to try the special jury causes at the assizes; and the persons summoned in pursuance of such precept shall be the jury for trying the special jury causes at the assizes, subject to such right of challenge as the parties are now by law entitled to; and a printed panel of the special jurors so summoned shall be made, kept, delivered and annexed to the nisi prius record, in like time and manner, and upon the same terms as hereinbefore provided with reference to the panel of common jurors; and upon the trial the special jury shall be balloted for, and called in the order in which they shall be drawn from the box, in the same manner as common jurors: Provided that the court or a judge, in such case as they or he may think fit, may order that a special jury be struck according to the present practice, and such order shall be a sufficient warrant for striking such special jury, and making a panel thereof for the trial of the particular cause. And see ss. 112, 113, as to the course to be pursued in cases where a special jury is desired.

As to special juries in London and Middlesex, see 33 & 34 Vict. c. 77, ss. 15–18; 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 89. The nomination and reduction of the jurors in London and Middlesex is regulated by 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 110, and 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 89. The rule committee of the Supreme Court has, under the Special Juries Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 6, s. 1), power to make rules as to special juries, and thereby to repeal or alter rules made under any previous Act as to special juries. This enactment is aimed at what remains of the Regulae Generales of Hilary Term, 1853 (see Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 12, tit. "Supreme Court E.")

In the King's Bench Division, "Either the prosecutor or the defendant may, except in case of felony, obtain a special jury upon giving the like notice as is required in civil cases, and the court or a judge may, at the instance of either party, order that a special jury be struck as provided for by the Juries Act, 1870 (see s. 17). And when the jury has been reduced either party may draw up an order at the Crown Office directing the sheriff to summon that particular jury at such time and place as may be required." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 158. The jury thus reduced may be challenged for cause. Barrett v. Long, 8 St. Tr., N. S. 1076; 3 H. L. C. 395. As to the Irish practice, see R. v. Parnell, 14 Cox, 505; and Hubard, Grand Jury, etc., in Ireland. As to the qualification of special jurors, see 33 & 34 Vict. c. 77, s. 6. "The person or party who shall apply for a special jury shall pay the fees for striking such jury, and all the expenses occasioned by the trial of the cause by the same, and shall not have any further or other allowance for the same upon taxation of costs, than such person or party would be entitled to in case the cause had been tried by a common jury, unless the judge before whom the case is tried shall immediately after the verdict certify under his hand, upon the back of the record, that the same was a cause proper to be tried by a special jury." 6 G. 4, c. 50, s. 34. This enactment applies to criminal cases: R. v. Pembridge, 3 Q. B. 901; 12 L. J. (Q. B.) 47; and R. v. Rowlands, 2 Den. 364, 371 (n).

If sufficient special jurors are not in attendance, a tales for deficiency or default of jurors may be awarded, by warrant of the attorney-general, for a tales de circumstantibus. See Att.-Gen. v. Parsons, 2 M. & W. 23: R. v. Dolby, 2 B. & C. 104; 24 R. R. 647: 2 St. Tr., N. S. 939: 1 C. & K. 238; R. v. Edmonds, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 785, post, p. 206. [For the form of this warrant and the mode of obtaining, see Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 217.] If a rule is made for a special jury, and the parties proceed to trial before a common jury, it would seem that the verdict cannot be afterwards impeached. R. v. Perry, 5 T. R. 453.

Jury de medietate linguæ.]—S. 5 of the Naturalization Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 14) took away the right which aliens previously had to be tried by a jury de medietate linguæ, when indicted of any felony or misdemeanor, but not when indicted of high treason. See Arch. Cr. Pl. 143 (16th ed.): R. v. Manning, 1 Den. 467: Levinger v. R., L. R., 3 P. C. 282. Under that Act (s. 5) an alien is now "triable in the same manner as if he were a natural-born subject."

Panel.]—On a trial for high treason the accused has a right to a copy of the jury panel. 7 & 8 W. 3, c. 3, s. 7: 7 Anne, c. 21, s. 14. But he has no such right in cases of felony or misdemeanor. R. v. Dowling, 7 St. Tr., N. S. 381; 3 Cox, 509: R. v. Nicholson, 8 Dowl. 422: R. v. Mitchel, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 599; 3 Cox, 1.

Challenge of jurors.]—When a sufficient number of persons charged with felony have pleaded, and put themselves upon the country, the clerk of the court addresses the prisoners thus: "Prisoners, these good men that you shall now hear called are the jurors who are to pass between our sovereign lord the King and you upon your respective trials [or who are to try you]; [or in a capital case, upon your life and death;] if therefore you or any of you will challenge [or object to] them or any of them, you must challenge them as they come to the book to be sworn, and before they are sworn, and you shall be heard." The officer then proceeds to call twelve jurors from the panel, calling each juror by name and address. When a full jury has appeared (R. v. Edmonds, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 785, 916; 4 B. & Ald. 471), and before any juror is sworn (R. v. Frost, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 85, 122; 9 C. & P. 129, 137: R. v. Key, 2 Den. 347: 3 C. & K. 371: 21 L. J. (M. C.) 35: R. v. Giorgetti, 4 F. & F. 546), the proper time comes for the exercise of the right of challenge, or exception to the jurors returned to pass upon the trial (a). The party intending to challenge the array may pray a tales to complete the number, and then object to the panel. Bull. (N. P.) 307. If the defendant is not allowed his full right of challenge the proceedings may be quashed on writ of error, and a venire de novo awarded. Gray v. R., 6 St. Tr., N. S. 117: 11 Cl. & F. 427 (Eng. Rep.). See post, chap. viii., sect. 2.

Challenges are of two kinds: 1. To the array, when exception is taken to the whole number impanelled, and 2. To the polls, when individual jurymen are excepted against. They are also divided into challenges peremptory, made to the polls without reason assigned, and challenges for cause, which may be to the array or the polls for some definite reason assigned and proved. Both are comparatively rare in England, and the leading modern cases on the subject have occurred in Ireland. See Hubard, Grand Jury in Ireland, 611.

(a) It has been held in two Colonial cases that a challenge for cause is not too late if made before the juror has done any act showing assent to take the oath, even if he is touching the book. R. v. Freeman, 5, id. 281, Griffith, C.J.: R. v. Longland, 6 Queensland L. J. 56. In R. v. Longland the juror with the book in his hand said that he was opposed to capital punishment, and a challenge for cause was allowed to be made.

Peremptory challenge.]—Jurors empanelled to try collateral issues may not be challenged peremptorily. R. v. Radcliffe, 1 W. Bl. 3. At common law, the crown might, it seems, have challenged peremptorily any number of jurors, without alleging any other reason than "quod non boni sunt pro rege." 2 Hawk. c. 43, ss. 2, 3; 2 Rolle Abr. 645; Co. Litt. 156 b; Bac. Abr., Juries (E.) 10. But this power was taken away by 33 Edw. 1, c. 4, and the present law is that in all inquests to be taken before the High Court (K. B. D.), and all courts of oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery, and courts of sessions of the peace in England and Wales (see 6 G. 4, c. 50, s. 20), "wherein the King is a party, howsoever it be, notwithstanding it be alleged by them that sue for the King, that the jurors of those inquests, or some of them, be not indifferent for the King, yet such inquests shall not remain untaken for that cause; but if they that sue for the King will challenge any of those jurors, they shall assign of their challenge a cause certain, and the truth of the same challenge shall be inquired of according to the custom of the court; and it shall be proceeded to the taking of the same inquisitions as it shall be found, if the challenges be true or not, after the discretion of the court." 6 G. 4, c. 50, s. 29. The crown, however, is entitled to ask that a juror should "stand by," i.e., to postpone consideration of the cause of challenge until the panel has been "gone through" and it appears that there will not be jurors enough to try the defendant, if the peremptory challenges are allowed to prevail. R. v. Parry, 7 C. & P. 836; R. v. Geach, 9 C. & P. 499; and see 2 Hale, 271; 2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 3; Staundf. 162. By "going through" or "perusing" the panel is meant ascertaining according to the usual practice of the court, and what may reasonably be expected, that there are no more jurors in the panel whose attendance can be procured, and that unless the crown be put to show its cause of challenge, "the inquest would remain untaken." Mansell v. R., 8 St. Tr., N. S. 831; 8 E. & B. 54; Dears. & B. 375; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 4. In that case the panel contained fifty-four names: eighteen, when called, were peremptorily challenged by the prisoner; fifteen were, on the prayer of the counsel for the crown, the prisoner's counsel objecting, and praying that cause of challenge should be shown, ordered to "stand by;" and nine were elected and tried to be sworn. This left twelve other persons only on the panel, and those twelve were at that time absent, deliberating upon their verdict in another case. The name of W. J. (the first person who upon the prayer of the counsel for the crown had been ordered to stand by) was then again called, and the counsel for the crown again prayed that he might be ordered to stand by, upon which the counsel for the prisoner prayed that cause of challenge should be shown forthwith. At that moment, and before any judgment was given, the twelve persons who sat as a jury in the other case came into court and gave their verdict; and the counsel for the crown then prayed that W. J. should be ordered to stand by until those twelve persons had been called; but the counsel for the prisoner demanded that W. J. should be sworn, unless cause of challenge to him were shown. The court ordered that W. J. should stand by; and three persons, the number required to complete the jury, were taken from the said twelve jurors, and elected and tried to be sworn (sic), although the prisoner's counsel objected that such persons ought to be called in their proper order with other persons in the panel, and that J. J., the person whose name stood in the panel immediately after that of W. J., ought to be next called. Upon a writ of error, the record stating all these facts, it was held that, under the circumstances, the panel was not gone through, so as to put the crown to assign cause of challenge, until the twelve persons who came into court before the complete formation of the jury had been called; that W. J. was properly ordered to stand by the second time; and that the three persons required to complete the jury were properly called and taken from the said twelve, without again calling the whole panel through in its order. Id.

The defendant is bound to show all his causes of objection before the prosecutor can be called upon to show the grounds of his challenges. 2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 3; Bac. Abr. Juries (E.) 10; 4 Bl. Com. 353; and see hereon R. v. Bourke [1900], 19 N. Z. L. R. 335: R. v. Wardell, 9 Queensland L. J. 49.

Peremptory challenges are allowed to the defence in cases of treason and felony, but not in cases of misdemeanor. Co. Litt. 56; 4 Bl. Com. 352; 3 Co. Inst. 27; Com. Dig. Challenge (C.): Gray v. R., 6 St. Tr., N. S. 117, 134; 11 Cl. & F. 427; and see Levinger v. R., L. R. 3 P. C. 282. The number of peremptory challenges allowed in cases of high treason is thirty-five (7 & 8 W. 3, c. 3, s. 2) except where the treason charged is the compassing of the King's death, and an overt act alleged in the indictment is the assassination of the King, or any direct attempt against his life, or against his person, whereby his life may be endangered, or his person may suffer bodily harm (39 & 40 G. 3, c. 93); or attempts against the person of the King; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, ss. 1, 2. In the last-mentioned cases of high treason, and in murder and all other felonies, the number is twenty. 6 G. 4, c. 50, s, 29: and see 2 Hawk. c. 43, ss. 7, 8; 2 Hale, 268; Bac. Abr., Challenge, 70, 74, 75, 217; Fost. 106; Co. Litt. 156; Bac. Abr., Juries (E.) 9, 10. "If any person indicted for any treason, felony, or piracy, shall challenge peremptorily a greater number of the men returned to be of the jury than such person is entitled by law so to challenge in any of the said cases, every peremptory challenge beyond the number allowed by law in any of the said cases shall be entirely void, and the trial of such person shall proceed as if no such challenge had been made." 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 3. And when he has exhausted his challenges he cannot withdraw one objection in order to challenge a fresh juror. R. v. Parry, 7 C. & P. 836. In Ireland only twenty peremptory challenges are allowed even in high treason. 9 G. 4, c. 54, s. 9; Smith O'Brien v. R., 2 H. L. C. 465 (Eng. Rep.); 7 St. Tr., N. S. 1, 43, 359. In misprision of treason, it seems to be doubtful whether peremptory challenge is allowed. See 2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 5; 3 Co. Inst. 27 a. In cases of misdemeanor, though no right of peremptory challenge exists at all, it is usual for the officer, on application to him, to abstain from calling any reasonable number of names objected to either by the prosecutor or by the defendant, taking care that enough are left to form a jury; and this practice has often been sanctioned by the court. See Dick. Q. S. 485, 486 (6th ed.): R. v. McGowan, 11 Ir. C. L. Rep. 207, cit.; 3 Ir. Jur. (N. S.) 403: R. v. Blakeman, 3 C. & K. 97.

Where, on a trial for felony, the jury panel contained the names of J. T. and W. T., and when the name of J. T. was called, a person supposed to be J. T. went into the box and was sworn without objection; and the prisoner having been convicted, it was discovered the next day that W. T. had, by mistake, answered to the name of J. T., and was really the person who had served on the jury; it was held by a majority of the judges that this was not a mis-trial, but only ground of challenge. R. v. Mellor, Dears. & B. 468; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 121: see R. v. Metcalf, 3 Cox, 220; Case of a Juryman, 12 East, 231, n.; and post, pp. 224, 276.

Where several defendants are tried by the same inquest for treason or felony, each has a right to the full number of his challenges; and if they refuse to join in their challenges, the crown has the right of trying each, or any number of them less than the whole, separately from the others, so as to prevent the delay which might arise from the whole panel being exhausted by the challenges. Fost. 106; Co. Litt. 156; 2 Hale, 268. But in R. v. Fisher, 3 Cox, 68, Platt, B., refused an application that principal and accessory be allowed to sever their challenges.

Challenge for cause.]—Challenges for cause may be made either by the prosecutor or by the defendant (2 Hale, 271; 2 Co. Inst. 431), whether the indictment is for treason, felony, or misdemeanor. See R. v. Lovett, 3 St. Tr., N. S. 1177, 1179. They are either to the array or to the polls, i.e., to individual jurymen.

1. To the array. The challenge to the array is either a principal challenge, or for favour. "The only ground upon which the challenge to the array is allowed by the English law is the unindifferency or default of the sheriff." O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1, 799. The causes of a principal challenge to the array are—where the sheriff is the actual prosecutor or party aggrieved; R. v. Sheppard, 1 Leach, 101: R. v. Edmonds, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 785; 4 B. & Ald. 471; or where, at the time of the return, he was of actual affinity to either party, or if he return any jurors at the request of the prosecutor or defendant, or any person whom he believes to be more favourable to the one side than to the other; or if the defendant have an action depending against the sheriff; Co. Litt. 156 a; or if the sheriff, or the bailiff who made the return, be under the distress of the prosecutor or the defendant; or if he have any pecuniary interest in the event; or if he be counsel, attorney, servant, or arbitrator, in the same cause; Id.; Bac. Abr., Juries (E.): or a subscriber to a society which is the prosecutor. R. v. Dolby, 2 St. Tr., N. S. 939; 2 B. & C. 104; 1 C. & K. 238. It is no ground of challenge for unindifferency on the part of the sheriff, that the officer had omitted to summon one of the twenty-four special jurymen returned on the panel. R. v. Edmonds, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 785, 916; 4 B. & Ald. 471. It is a legal ground of challenge to the array that the sheriff has selected the jurors on the ground of religion; R. v. O'Doherty, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 831; but not that he has returned a large proportion of the panel of a different religion from the defendant. Smith O'Brien v. R. [1849] 7 St. Tr., N. S. 31. The religion of the jurors must be strictly proved, and the mere fact of a disproportion is not sufficient to prove unindifferency. R. v. Mitchee, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 599: R. v. O'Doherty, ubi supra: R. v. Duffy, 7 St. Tr., N. S. 795, 871; Smith O'Brien v. R., 7 St. Tr., N. S. 1, 20, 24, 31. There can be no challenge to the array on the ground of unindifferency in the master of the crown office, he being the officer of the court expressly appointed to nominate the jury; in such case the only remedy is to apply to the court to appoint some other officer to nominate the jury. R. v. Edmonds, supra. It is no ground of challenge to the array that the justices have omitted the duties prescribed by the Jury Acts in making out the list of names for the special or common jury book, and that the sheriff has summoned the jury from a jury book so improperly made. O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 69, 78: R. v. Burke, 10 Cox, 519. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 91 (Irish Jury Act), s. 9 (rep.), which in this respect corresponded with s. 12 of the English Juries Act, 1825 (6 G. 4, c. 50), directed a jurors' book to be made up in each year for use in the year following, and declared that such book should be in use from the 1st of January for and during one year. In November, 1865, at a sitting of a special commission, a panel was returned from the then existing jury book; the jurors were not then called, but the sitting was duly adjourned to 19th January, 1866, at which time the trial took place, when the jurors named in the return of 1865 were called. It was held, that this was not a ground of challenge to the array; Mulcahy v. R., L. R., 3 H. L. 306; and also that the fact of one of the jurors who had been duly returned in November, 1865, not being on the list for 1866, was no ground of challenge to him. Id.

The default of the sheriff may also be a ground of principal challenge to the array; as where, the array being returned by the bailiff of a liberty, the sheriff returns it as from himself; if, however, the sheriff returns a panel from the liberty, it will be good, though he may be liable to the lord of the franchise in an action. Co. Litt. 156 a; Bac. Abr., Juries (E.) 1. Since 1825 (6 G. 4, c. 50, s. 13), the jury has been taken from the body of the county: and this has put an end to the ancient right of challenging the array "for want of hundredors" i.e., if four persons were not returned from the hundred in which the offence was alleged to have been committed; 2 Hale, 272.

There may also be a challenge to the array for favour, in cases where the ground of partiality is less apparent and direct: as where one of the parties is tenant to the sheriff; or the sheriff and one of the parties are united in the same office; or where a relationship exists between the children of one of the parties and of the sheriff or officer; or where the sheriff has an action of debt depending against one of the parties. Co. Litt. 156 a; Bac. Abr., Juries (E.) 1; 3 Dyer, 367 a, pl. 40.

A principal challenge to the array being founded upon some manifest partiality or error, if the cause be truly alleged, the court, it is said, will at once quash the array, and direct a new venire to issue. Where cause exists for a challenge to the array, on the ground of relationship or otherwise, the party liable to the objection may himself suggest it to the court, in order to prevent the delay which the challenge would occasion, and pray that the venire may be awarded to the coroners or elisors, as the case may be. See 1 St. Tr., N. S. 913. If the other party admits the fact, and agrees to the prayer, the venire will at once be so awarded; if he refuses, denying the existence of the cause of challenge, he cannot afterwards avail himself of it. Co. Litt. 157 b; 3 Dyer, 367 a, pl. 40; Baynham's Case, 5 Co. Rep. 36 b.

A challenge to the array ought to be in writing, so that it may be put upon the record, and the other party may demur or counterplead to it. See R. v. Edmonds, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 785; 4 B. & Ald. 471: Mayor, etc., of Carmarthen v. Evans, 10 M. & W. 274. The form of it is as follows:—

"And now at this day come as well the said J. N., who for our said lord the King prosecutes in this behalf, as the said J. S., in his own proper person, and the jury thereupon empanelled likewise come; and thereupon the said J. S. challenges the array of the said panel, because he says that the said panel was arrayed and returned by A. B., esquire, now and at the time of the making of the array aforesaid sheriff of the said county of ——, which said sheriff is a kinsman of the said J. N., to wit [setting out the mode of relationship]; and this he is ready to verify, whereupon he prays judgment, and that the said panel may be quashed."

The ground of objection must be specifically stated in the challenge: for a challenge merely stating that the sheriff "has not chosen the panel indifferently and impartially, as he ought to have done, and that the panel is not an indifferent panel," is demurrable as being too general. R. v. Hughes, 1 C. & K. 235. The opposite party may either plead to the challenge, traversing the cause of challenge alleged, or demur to it for insufficiency. In the latter case, the party challenging joins in the demurrer, and the matter is determined by the court. The demurrer and joinder may be in the following form:—

"And the said J. N. says, that the said challenge of the said J. S. to the array of the panel aforesaid is not sufficient in law to quash the array of the panel aforesaid, and that there is no necessity for him the said J. N., nor is he obliged by the law of the land to answer to the said challenge in manner and form as it is above alleged; wherefore he prays judgment, and that the array of the said panel may be affirmed," etc.

"And the said J. S. says, that he hath above alleged sufficient matter in law, in the said challenge by him above made to the array of the panel aforesaid, to quash the array of the said panel, which he the said J. S. is ready to verify; which said matter the said J. N. does not deny, nor in any manner answer thereto: wherefore the said J. S., as before, prays judgment, and that the array of the said panel may be quashed," etc.

In case the challenge is overruled, the judgment should be entered on the original record, or at nisi prius on the postea. R. v. Edmonds, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 785; 4 B. & Ald. 471. If the objection be overruled without demurrer, the ruling, it has been said, may be made the subject of a bill of exceptions; 8 Rep. Cr. L. 146; Bac. Abr., tit. Juries (E.) 21; Skin. 101; but see post, chap. viii., sect. 3, "Bill of Exceptions." The challenge may be removed as part of the record, where it was a principal cause of challenge. 3 Woodeson, s. 347: see O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1.

If the party pleads to the challenge, two triers are (in the case, at least, of a challenge for favour, and also, it would seem, in the case of a principal challenge, unless the fact be admitted or apparent) appointed by the court, who are sworn, and charged to try whether the array be an impartial or a favourable one. See Smith O'Brien v. R., 7 St. Tr., N. S. 1; 2 H. L. C. 469. These triers are generally two of the jurymen returned. The court may, however, in its discretion, refer the trial to two coroners, or to two solicitors, or to any other two indifferent persons. 2 Hale, 275; 4 Bl. Com. 353; 2 Rolle Rep. 363. If the triers find against the challenge, the trial proceeds as if no such challenge had been made. The improper disallowance of a challenge is ground, not for a new trial, but for a venire de novo. R. v. Edmonds, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 785; 4 B. & Ald. 471; 23 R. R. 350. If the triers find in favour of the challenge, a new venire is awarded to the coroners, or, if they be interested, to elisors. See 1 Co. Inst. 158. In R. v. Dolby, 2 B. & C. 104, 2 St. Tr., N. S. 939, the defendant, being indicted for a seditious libel, challenged the array on the ground that the prosecution was instituted by an association called the Constitutional Association, and that one of the sheriffs who returned the jury was one of the association. The counsel for the prosecution thereupon took issue; the chief justice then appointed two triers to try the issue, who were accordingly sworn; the counsel for the defendant first addressed these triers, and called a witness, who proved that the sheriff named was one of the subcribers to the association. The counsel for the prosecution then addressed the triers, and called a witness to prove that the sheriff had ceased to be a subscriber to or member of the association before the return of the jury process, but failed in proving it for want of the letter by which the sheriff had withdrawn himself from it. The triers were then addressed by the counsel for the defendant in reply. The chief justice summed up. The triers found in favour of the challenge, and the cause was adjourned.

2. To the Polls.]—Even where a challenge to the array is determined against the party making it, he may afterwards still have his challenges to the polls, i.e., he may object separately to each juryman as he is about to be sworn. The challenge must be made before the book is given into the hands of the juror and the officer has recited the oath; and it comes too late afterwards, although made before the juror has kissed the book. R. v. Giorgetti, 4 F. & F. 546; and see ante, p. 198. These challenges are generally made by parol, although, in strictness, if any question is raised upon the validity of such a challenge, it must be entered in due form on the record. The defendant, in treason or felony, may for cause shown object to all or any of the jurors called, after exhausting his peremptory challenges of thirty-five or twenty. Challenges to the polls for cause are, like those to the array, either principal or to the favour. The principal causes of challenge are:—1. Propter honoris respectum; where a peer or lord of parliament is sworn on a jury for the trial of a commoner. Co. Litt. 156 b; 2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 11; Bac. Abr., Juries (E.) 6; 3 Bl. Com. 361. 2. Propter defectum, i.e., on account of some personal objection, as alienage (R. v. Sutton, 8 B. & C. 417; 6 L. J. O. S. (M. C.) 162), infancy, (R. v. Tremearne, 5 B. & C. 254), or a deficiency in the requisite qualification (as to which see Statutes, ante, p. 192). Where the disqualified juror is on the panel, and no challenge is made, the presence of the juror does not invalidate the trial. R. v. Sutton, ubi supra. A juror may challenge himself, by stating that he is not qualified, and he may be examined upon oath. R. v. Cook, 13 St. Tr., 311, 316, 317. In Ireland the fact of a juror being over sixty years of age is not a ground for challenge, but only operates in the juror's favour as an exemption. Mulcahy v. R., L. R., 3 H. L. 306. This point was decided mainly on the words of 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 91 (Irish Jury Act), ss. 1 and 20. The analogous sections in 6 G. 4, c. 50 (English Jury Act), are ss. 1 and 27, but although analogous they are not identical, and it may be doubtful whether in England the fact of a juror being above sixty years old is not a disqualification. 3. Propter affectum, i.e., on the ground of some presumed or actual partiality in the juror: as if he be of affinity to either party, or in his employment, or is interested in the event, etc.; in short, any such presumed partiality as would be a good ground for a principal challenge to the array in the case of the sheriff will be also a cause of principal challenge to an individual juryman. See R. v. Martin, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 925: R. v. Swain, 2 M. & Rob. 112; 2 Lewin, 116. So where an actual partiality is shown to exist, or if the juror has expressed a desire as to the result of the trial, or an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendants, or personal ill will. In R. v. O'Coigly, 26 St. Tr. 1191, 1231 (a trial for treason), a juryman was set aside on the trial because, on looking on the prisoners, he had uttered the words "damned rascals." A person who has acted as a grand juror on the finding of a bill of indictment may also be challenged for cause if returned to serve on the petty jury, either on the trial of that indictment or of any other indictment for the same offence. 25 Ed. 3, stat. 5, c. 3; Y. B. 14 & 15 (ed. 3, Pike), p. xxvi.: R. v. Cook, 13 St. Tr. 311, 334: R. v. Sullivan, 8 A. & E. 831; 8 L. J. (M. C.) 3. But a person who has sat upon a former petty jury, which convicted other defendants on the same indictment, is not therefore subject to challenge. See Co. Litt. 157 a; Bac. Abr. Juries (E.) 5; 3 Bl. Com. 363. And in R. v. Sawdon, 2 Lewin, 117, it was held not to be a good ground of challenge that the juror who had sat on previous trials during the same assize had in no case returned a verdict for the crown. 4. Propter delictum, i.e., on the ground of infamy, which meant at common law conviction or attainder of treason, felony, perjury, conspiracy, or any other infamous offence, which is to be proved by the record of the conviction. And even a pardon would not remove this objection. 2 Hale, 278; Bac. Abr., Juries (E.) 2; Brown v. Crashaw, 2 Bulstr. 154. Under 33 & 34 Vict. c. 77, s. 10 (ante, p. 192), the disqualification attaches to jurors who are under outlawry, or attainted of treason or felony, or convicted of any infamous crime, unless a free pardon has been obtained.

Challenges to the polls for favour are where, although the juror is not so manifestly partial as to render him liable to a principal challenge, there are, nevertheless, reasonable grounds for suspicion that he will act under some prejudice or undue influence; as where he has been entertained in the house of the party, or has been arbitrator in the same matter; or where the juror and the party are fellow-servants, or any other cause exists, such as would constitute in the case of the sheriff a ground of challenge to favour to the whole panel. Co. Litt. 157 b; Bac. Abr., Juries (E.) 5.

In the case of a principal challenge to the polls, if the partiality be made apparent to the satisfaction of the court, the challenge is at once allowed, and the juror set aside. But in the case of a challenge to the favour, it is left to the discretion of two triers who are sworn and charged to try whether the juror challenged stands indifferent between the parties. The form of oath to a trier, to try whether a juror stands indifferent or not, is as follows:—

"You shall well and truly try whether A. B., one of the jurors, stands indifferently to try the prisoner at the bar, and a true verdict give according to the evidence. So help you God."

No challenge of triers is admissible. The form of oath to be administered to a witness sworn to give evidence before the trial is as follows:—

"The evidence which you shall give to the court and triers upon this inquest shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.—So help you God."

If the challenge is to the first juror called, the court may select any two indifferent persons as triers; if they find against the challenge, the juror will be sworn, and be joined with the triers in determining the next challenge; but as soon as two jurors have been found indifferent, and have been sworn, every subsequent challenge will be referred to their decision. R. v. Edmonds, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 792, n., 922; 2 Hale, 275; Co. Litt. 158 a; Bac. Abr., Juries (E.) 12. The burden of proof of a challenge for cause is on the person who makes it. R. v. Savage, 1 Mood. C. C. 51, and he is not entitled to question a juror before challenging him. R. v. Dowling, 7 St. Tr., N. S. 381; R. v. Stewart, 1 Cox, 174. When the challenge has been made, the trial proceeds by witnesses called to support or defeat the challenge; the juror objected to may also be examined on the voir dire, at to his qualification, or the leaning of his affection. R. v. Dowling, ubi supra. But he cannot be interrogated as to matters which tend to his own discredit, as whether he has been convicted of felony, etc., nor, as it seems, whether he has expressed a hostile opinion as to the guilt of the defendant. R. v. Cook, 13 St. Tr., 311, 334: R. v. Edmonds, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 785: 4 B. & Ald. 471: R. v. Martin, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 925: and see 2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 28. In R. v. Cuffey, 7 St. Tr., N. S. 467, a trial at the Central Criminal Court, in 1848, for treason-felony, the latter question was asked of some of the jurors who had been challenged for favour, the attorney-general not objecting on the part of the crown.

The form of oath on the voir dire is as follows :—

" You shall true answer make to all such questions as the court shall demand of you.—So help you God."

If the panel be so far exhausted by challenges that a full jury is not left, a fresh panel will be returned; and thereupon the defendant may challenge peremptorily any of those who were sworn before, if they are now returned; but he cannot challenge them for cause, except for some matter which has arisen since the original hearing. 2 Hale, 274.

Whether or not a criminal court has the power to award a tales, in case of deficiency or default of jurors, without a warrant from the attorney-general, is not a settled point. Hawkins (bk. 2 c. 43, s. 18) says : " But it seems that such a tales cannot be prayed for by the King upon an indictment or criminal information, without a warrant from the attorney-general, or an express assignment from the court before which the inquest is taken ; " see 1 Lev. 223; but Blackstone says (4 Cor. 355), " If by reason of challenges, or default of jurors, a sufficient number cannot be had of the original panel, a tales may be awarded as in civil causes, till the number of twelve is sworn." In R. v. Edmonds, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 785, which was tried at Warwick, tales men were allowed (without any warrant from the attorney-general) to supply deficiences in the panel of a special jury struck in the crown office. His opinion is supported as to high treason by R. v. Stapleton [1680], Sir T. Raym. 367; 4 Co. Inst. 161 : R. v. Dolby, 2 B. & C. 104; 2 St. Tr., N. S. 939; 24 R. R. 645.

The judge, however, may, where the panel is exhausted and no tales has been prayed, order the sheriff to return a panel instanter without further precept : and the justice of the peace in sessions may issue a special precept commanding the sheriff to return a sufficient number of jurors immediately, and thereupon may proceed with the trial at the then sessions. 2 Hale, 28, 261, 265; see 6 G. 4, c. 50, s. 20 : R. v. Cropper, 2 Mood. C. C. 18.

The usual, and in general the proper course, where the panel is exhausted by challenges of the prisoner and the crown, or of either, before a full jury remains, is to call over the whole panel again in the same order as before, but omitting those peremptorily challenged by the prisoner; and then, as each juror again appears, whichever party challenges must show cause. If no sufficient cause of challenge be shown, the jurors are then sworn. R. v. Geach, 9 C. & P. 499. See ante, p. 199. And no cause of challenge to the jury, whether to the array or to the polls, can be taken, either in arrest of judgment, or otherwise, after the jury are sworn. R. v. Sheppard, 1 Leach, 101 : R. v. Sutton, 8 B. & C. 417. No challenge can be taken, nor need the jury be re-sworn, when the defendant is given in charge to them on an allegation of a previous conviction, under 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 11, or 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 111, or on a charge of being a habitual drunkard under 61 & 62 Vict. c. 60, s. 1, sub-s. 2 : R. v. Key, 2 Den. 347; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 35. By the Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96), s. 116, which now regulates most of such cases, see ante, p. 185, and the Inebriates Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 60), where the prisoner is given in charge to the jury on an allegation of a previous conviction, it is not necessary to swear the jury again (and therefore no challenge can be taken). The same rule appears to apply to the Coinage Offences Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 99), s. 37, which contains a like provision.

The court, even without challenge taken, may and ought to excuse a juryman on the panel when called, if he is obviously unfit to perform his duty, from physical or mental infirmity, or semble, from expressed unindifferency. Mansell v. R., 8 St. Tr., N. S. 831; 8 E. & B. 54; Dears. & B. 375; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 4.

Giving the prisoner in charge to the jury.]—When a full jury have been sworn [or have made solemn affirmation in cases where they are entitled to do so, under 51 & 52 Vict. c. 46, s. 2, or any other Act, see post, "Evidence," chap. ii.], in cases of treason and felony, the crier (at the assizes) makes proclamation in the following form:—"If any one can inform my lords the King's justices, or the King's attorney-general, or the King's serjeant, or this inquest to be taken between our sovereign lord the King and the prisoners at the bar, of any treason, murder, felony, or misdemeanor, committed or done by them, or any of them, let him come forth, and he shall be heard; for the prisoners stand at the bar upon their deliverance." Cro. Cir. Com. 6 (10th ed.). The clerk of the court then calls the prisoner to the bar, and says:—"Gentlemen of the jury, the prisoner stands indicted by the name of A. B. for that he, on the" [stating the substance of the offences charged in the indictment]. "Upon this indictment he has been arraigned, and upon his arraignment he has pleaded that he is not guilty: Your charge therefore, is to inquire whether he be guilty or not guilty, and to hearken to the evidence." See R. v. Dowlin, 5 T. R. 311, 313. As to the mode of giving the prisoner in charge to the jury where he is indicted for any offence punishable under the Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96), committed after a previous conviction, see s. 116 of that Act (ante, p. 185). As to the mode of giving the prisoner in charge to the jury where he is indicted for an offence against the Coinage Offences Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 99), committed after a previous conviction, for an offence against any Act relating to the coin, see s. 37 of that Act: and as to the mode of giving the prisoner in charge to the jury where he is indicted for a crime as defined by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, after previous conviction for a crime, see s. 9 of that Act.

In cases of misdemeanor the defendant is not given in charge to the jury, but the counsel for the prosecution at once proceeds to open the case, and call witnesses in support of the indictment. See R. v. Dowlin, 5 T. R. 314.

Sect. 3.

Proceedings at Trial.

Case for the prosecution.]—In a criminal prosecution on indictment the prosecutor has no right to address the jury or state the case for the prosecution. R. v. Brice, 2 B. & Ald. 606; 1 Chit. Rep. (K. B.) 352: R. v. Gurney, 11 Cox, 414. He must be represented by counsel or by a solicitor in those courts of quarter sessions at which counsel do not attend. Id. It is usual, except in simple cases where the prisoner is undefended, for counsel to make an opening statement: see Re Morgan, 6 Cox, 116, Talfourd, J. When the prisoner is given in charge to the jury, the counsel for the prosecution, or, if there be more than one, the senior counsel, opens the case to the jury, stating the leading facts upon which the prosecution rely. In doing so he ought to state all that it is proposed to prove, as well declarations of the prisoners as facts, so that the jury may see if there be a discrepancy between the opening statements of counsel, and the evidence afterwards adduced in support of them; per Parke, B., R. v. Edward, 1 M. & Rob. 257: R. v. Hartel, 7 C. & P. 773: R. v. Davis, Id. 785; unless such declarations should amount to a confession, where it would be improper for counsel to open them to the jury.

R. v. Swatkins, 4 C. & P. 548, Bosanquet, J., and Patteson, J.: R. v. Davis, 7 C. & P. 785, Parke, B.: R. v. Orrell, Id. 774, Bolland, B.: R. v. Creau, 8 Cox, 509 (Ir.). The reason for this rule is, that the circumstances under which the confession was made may render it inadmissible in evidence. The general effect only of any confession said to have been made by a prisoner ought, therefore, to be mentioned in the opening address of the prosecuting counsel. When any additional evidence, not mentioned in the opening speech of counsel, is discovered in the course of a trial, counsel is not allowed to state it in a second address to the jury. R. v. Courvoisier, 9 C. & P. 362. In opening a case for murder, the counsel for the prosecution may put hypothetically the case of an attack upon the character of any particular witness for the crown, and say that should any such attack be made he shall be prepared to meet it. Per Tindal, C.J., and Parke, B., R. v. Courvoisier, 9 C. & P. 362. It was also ruled by the same learned judges that counsel may read to the jury the observations of a judge in a former case, as to the nature and effect of circumstantial evidence, provided that he adopts them as his own opinions, and makes them part of his address to the jury. And in R. v. Dowling, 7 St. Tr., N. S. 381, 390; 3 Cox, 509, the attorney-general having, in his opening address to the jury, made reference to disturbances in Ireland, Erle, J., held, on objection made, that such reference was not irregular, it being laid down in books of evidence that allusion might be made in courts of justice to notorious matters, even of contemporaneous history. And see R. v. Duffy, 7 St. Tr., N. S. 795, 917.

As to the order of proof, the mode of examining witnesses, and the evidence necessary to support the case for the prosecution, see post, Part II., "Evidence."

Since 1865 the counsel for the prosecution has been entitled, in certain cases, at the close of the examination of his witnesses, to sum up his evidence. This right was first given, and the circumstances under which it may be exercised are defined, by s. 2 of Denman's Act (28 & 29 Vict. c. 18), the first clause of which enacts that:—"If any prisoner or prisoners, defendant or defendants, shall be defended by counsel, but not otherwise, it shall be the duty of the presiding judge, at the close of the case for the prosecution, to ask the counsel for each prisoner or defendant so defended by counsel, whether he or they intend to adduce evidence, and in the event of none of them thereupon announcing his intention to adduce evidence, the counsel for the prosecution shall be allowed to address the jury a second time in support of his case, for the purpose of summing up the evidence against such prisoner or prisoners, or defendant or defendants." The right to sum up is not taken away, nor is any right to reply given by the calling of the prisoner as sole witness on his own behalf under the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 3). The effect of that Act is to postpone the summing up until after the prisoner's evidence has been given, and counsel for the prosecution may comment on the prisoner's evidence: R. v. Gardner [1899] 1 Q. B. 150; 68 L. J. Q. B. 42 (C. C. R.).

In exercising this right of summing up evidence, it is not lawful for the counsel for the prosecution to comment on the failure of the prisoner, or the husband or wife of the prisoner, to give evidence; 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 1 (1) (b); nor is it proper to comment on the absence of other witnesses for the defence, unless it might be fairly expected that witnesses would be called; or to urge, on a trial for rape, as an argument for conviction, that otherwise the character of the prosecutrix would be blasted. R. v. Rudland, 4 F. & F. 495: R. v. Puddick, Id. 497. Nor is it the duty of counsel for the prosecution to sum up in every case in which the prisoner's counsel does not call witnesses, or only calls the defendant. His right ought only to be exercised in exceptional cases, such as where erroneous statements have been made and ought to be corrected, or when the evidence differs from the instructions. The counsel for the prosecution should state his case before he calls the witnesses; and after the evidence has been given, either say simply, "I say nothing," or "I have already told you what would be the substance of the evidence, and you see the statement which I made is correct;" or, in exceptional cases, to say, "something is proved different to what I expected," and add any suitable explanation which is required. R. v. Holchester, 10 Cox, 226, Blackburn, J.: R. v. Berens, 4 F. & F. 842, 843, and n. See also R. v. Webb, Id. 862.

The defence.]—As to defence by counsel and in formâ pauperis, see ante, p. 187 et seq. Where a prisoner is undefended, he cross-examines the witnesses for the prosecution if he thinks fit, or the judge does so on his behalf. On a trial for misdemeanor in the court of King's Bench in 1824, where the defendant reserved to himself the right to address the jury, and to examine and cross-examine witnesses, he was allowed to do so, and his counsel was allowed to argue any points of law that arose in the course of the trial, and to suggest questions to him for the cross-examination of the witnesses; R. v. Parkins, Ry. & M. 166; 1 C. & P. 548; but the defendant cannot have counsel to examine and cross-examine the witnesses, and reserve to himself the right of addressing the jury. R. v. White, 8 Camp. 98; 13 R. R. 765; and see R. v. Redhead, Yorke, 25 St. Tr. 1003, 1021. Although a prisoner cannot have counsel to speak for him and also make a speech for himself, he may make such statement of facts as he relies on for his defence, but he must be strictly confined to such statement. R. v. Everett, C. C. C. Sess. Pap., vol. 97, p. 335, Hawkins, J.

Since 1702 witnesses for the defence in treason and felony have been examined on oath under 1 Anne, st. 2, c. 9, s. 3. Witnesses for the defence in misdemeanor were always sworn. Under the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, a prisoner is now a competent witness in his own defence in all criminal cases. See post, Part II., Evidence, chap. ii. sect. 2.

[As to the cross-examination of witnesses, see post, Part II. chap. ii. sect. 5, sub-s. 8.

Where two prisoners are jointly indicted, and are defended by different counsel, there has been some difference of opinion as to the order in which counsel should cross-examine and address the jury. In R. v. Esdaile, 1 F. & F. 213, 237, Lord Campbell directed counsel to cross-examine and address the jury in the order of seniority at the bar. But the general, and it is submitted the established rule, is that in the absence of agreement between counsel the court will call on them to cross-examine and address the jury, not in the order of seniority, but in that in which the names stand on the indictment: R. v. Barber, 1 C. & K. 434; R. v. Meadows [1856] 2 Jur. N. S. 716, and n., Erle, J.; and see Fletcher (P. O.) v. Crosbie, 2 M. & Rob. 417, Rolfe, B.: R. v. Richards, 1 Cox, 62.

Statement to jury by prisoner when defended by counsel.]—The Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 36), which enables every person charged with an offence to be a witness for the defence at every stage of the proceedings, provides (s. 1 (h) that "Nothing in this Act shall affect . . . any right of the person charged to make a statement without being sworn." This provision entitles the prisoner if he chooses to make an unsworn statement instead of giving evidence on his own behalf. R. v.

Pope, 18 T. L. R. 717. It was at one time held that the effect of s. 1 of the Prisoners' Counsel Act, 1836 (6 & 7 W. 4, c. 114), which first enabled counsel appearing on behalf of persons charged with felony to address the jury on their behalf, was to take away from the prisoner, except under some very special circumstances, any right to make any statement on his own account. R. v. Rider, 8 C. & P. 539: R. v. Malings, id. 242: R. v. Manzano, 2 F. & F. 64: R. v. Stephens, 11 Cox, 669. But for many years prior to the coming into operation of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, it became the practice of the judges to allow a prisoner defended by counsel to address the jury as well as his counsel. There was, however, considerable divergence of opinion as to whether the prisoner should address the jury before or after his counsel. Where the prisoners, who were indicted for robbery with violence, were defended by counsel, but called no witnesses, Hawkins, J., after consultation with Lush, J., allowed the prisoners to give their own account of the matter to the jury, after their counsel had addressed the jury. R. v. Hull and Smith, Yorkshire Winter Assizes at Leeds, 3rd Feb., 1880. Where a prisoner, who was indicted for murder, was defended by counsel, but called no witnesses, Bowen, J., allowed the prisoner to read a statement of his account of the matter to the jury, before his counsel addressed them. R. v. Blades (Yorkshire Summer Assizes at Leeds, Aug. 2nd, 1880). Under similar circumstances, Stephen, J., allowed a prisoner to make a statement to the jury before his counsel addressed them, at the same time warning the prisoner that his making such statement would give the counsel for the prosecution a right to reply. R. v. Doherty, 16 Cox, 306. This ruling was followed by Phillimore, J., in R. v. Pope, ubi supra, so far as relates to the making of the statement by his prisoner before his counsel's address. In R. v. Millhouse, 15 Cox, 622, Lord Coleridge, C.J., stated that by the resolution of the majority of the judges, in which he did not agree, but by which he was bound, it was undoubtedly competent for a prisoner defended by counsel to make a statement of facts to the jury, and that the proper time for his doing so was after his counsel had addressed the jury. His Lordship, however, held that the resolution did not extend to cases where it was proposed to call witnesses for the prisoner. Notwithstanding this resolution of the judges, the practice in recent years since the passing thereof has not been uniform. See the cases collected in Warburton's Leading Cases in the Criminal Law (3rd ed.), p. 393, and 3 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 465 n. In R. v. Shimmin, 15 Cox, 122 (post, p. 211), Cave, J., stated that the rule which the judges intended to follow was that a prisoner defended by counsel should make his statement at the conclusion of his counsel's speech, with this proviso, that what he states from the dock is subject to the right of reply on the part of the prosecution as being in the nature of new matter laid before the jury. And see R. v. Everett (ante, p. 209); R. v. Doherty, ubi supra. In R. v. Sherriff, 20 Cox, 334, Darling, J., held that a prisoner's unsworn statement must be made before the counsel for the prosecution sums up the case and before his own counsel addresses the court.

Address of prisoner's counsel.]—"In the opinion of the judges it is contrary to the administration and practice of the criminal law as hitherto allowed, that counsel for prisoners should state to the jury as alleged existing facts matters which they have been told in their instructions, on the authority of the prisoner, but which they do not propose to prove in evidence." Resolution of the Judges, 26*th Nov.*, 1881: R. v. Shimmin, 15 Cox, 122. This resolution settled the practice as to a matter upon which there had previously been a conflict of authority. See R. v.

Butcher, 2 M. & Rob. 228; R. v. Beard, 8 C. & P. 142; R. v. Weston, 14 Cox, 346.

Where two prisoners are indicted together, and one of them only is defended by counsel, it seems to be in the discretion of the judge whether he will allow the prisoner who is undefended to make his statement to the jury before or after the address of counsel. Where A., B., and C. were jointly indicted, and separately defended, and at the close of the case for the prosecution C. was acquitted, and was then called as a witness for A., and his evidence tended to criminate B., it was held that B.'s counsel had a right to cross-examine C., and to reply. R. v. Burdett, Dears. 431; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 63; 6 Cox, 458; R. v. Woods, 6 Cox, 224: R. v. Copley, 4 F. & F. 1097. The same rule applies where one defendant is called as a witness and inculpates a co-defendant. R. v. Hadwen and Ingham [1902] 1 K. B. 882: 18 Cox, 206 (C. C. R.).

The counsel for the prisoner, or the prisoner himself, is entitled, at the close of the examination of his witnesses, to sum up his evidence. This right was first given by Denman's Act (28 & 29 Vict. c. 18), s. 2, in the following terms:—"Upon every trial for felony or misdemeanor, whether the prisoners or defendants, or any of them, shall be defended by counsel or not, each and every such prisoner or defendant, or his or their counsel respectively, shall be allowed, if he or they shall think fit, to open his or their case or cases respectively; and after the conclusion of such opening or of all such openings, if more than one, such prisoner or prisoners, or defendant or defendants, or their counsel, shall be entitled to examine such witnesses as he or they may think fit, and when all the evidence is concluded to sum up the evidence respectively; and the right of reply, and practice and course of proceedings, save as hereby altered, shall be as at present." In summing up the evidence for the defence, the prisoner's counsel is not to be restricted merely to remarks on the evidence of his witnesses, but if anything occurs to him which it is desirable to say on the whole case, he is at liberty to say it. R. v. Wainwright, 13 Cox, 171, Cockburn, C.J.

The reply.]—If any witness other than the defendant is called for the defence or any document is put in evidence for the defence, the counsel for the prosecution has the right to reply. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, s. 2, supra; 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36 (Criminal Evidence Act, 1898), s. 3: see R. v. Gardner [1899] 1 Q. B. 150 (C. C. R.). Even if the evidence for the defendant be only as to his character, it gives, in strictness, a right of reply, although the right is never now exercised in such case. R. v. Stannard, 7 C. & P. 676; 6 L. J. (M. C.) 37; R. v. Corfell, 1 Cox, 123, Alderson, B. But see R. v. Dowse, 4 F. & F. 492. And even if the defendant's counsel, in addressing the jury, introduces new matter (whether it be the prisoner's own account of the transaction or not), without intending to support it by evidence, it has been said that the prosecutor will be entitled to a reply. R. v. Butcher, 2 M. & Rob. 228. The better opinion, however, is that no such right can be claimed, though the judge in his discretion might, in a flagrant case, permit its exercise. 1 Tayl. Evid., p. 274 (9th ed.), and authorities there cited. The decision to the contrary in R. v. Shimmin, 15 Cox, 122 (ante, p. 210), will probably not now be followed since the passing of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, as the course adopted in R. v. Sherriff, 20 Cox, 334 (ante, p. 210), gives the prosecutor adequate opportunity of dealing with any new matter introduced by a prisoner in an unsworn statement. If two prisoners are indicted jointly for the same offence, and one call witnesses, it seems that the counsel for the prosecution is entitled to a general reply; but if the offences are separate, and they might have been separately indicted, he can reply only on the case of the party who had called witnesses. R. v. Hayes, 2 M. & Rob. 155: R. v. Jordan, 9 C. & P. 118. Where four prisoners were jointly indicted for an assault with intent to do grievous bodily harm, and one of them was not defended by counsel and the other three were defended by counsel, and the prisoner who was not defended by counsel called witnesses to prove an alibi, but no witnesses were called on behalf of the other three prisoners, it was held that counsel for the prosecution had no general right of reply, but that the proper course was that he should sum up his evidence generally and reply upon the evidence called by the prisoner who was not defended by counsel, before the counsel for the other prisoners addressed the jury. R. v. Kain, 15 Cox, 388, Stephen, J. So where several prisoners were jointly indicted, and defended by several counsel, and witnesses were called for some of the prisoners but not for the others, it was held that the counsel for the prosecution should first reply to the counsel of those prisoners who called witnesses, but that the counsel for the prisoners who called no witnesses had the right to address the jury last. R. v. Burns, 16 Cox, 195, Day and Wills, JJ.; and see Warburton, Leading Cases on Cr. Law (3rd ed.). Where on an indictment against several defendants, one of them calls evidence which is applicable to the cases of all, the prosecution has a general right of reply, although the other defendants call no witnesses; R. v. Hayes, 2 M. & Rob. 155; R. v. Davis, 17 T. L. R. 164, Lawrance, J.; but where such evidence is applicable only to the case of the defendant calling it, and does not apply to the cases of the other defendants, the right of the prosecution to reply is confined to the case of the defendant calling the evidence. R. v. Trevelli, 15 Cox, 289, Hawkins, J. Where the prosecution has the right of reply, no comment may be made by the prosecution on failure of any person charged with an offence, or of the wife or husband, as the case may be, of the person so charged, to give evidence. 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, 1 (b); and see ante, p. 209.

Rebutting evidence.]—Whenever the defendant gives evidence to prove, by way of defence, new matter, which the crown could not foresee, the counsel for the prosecution is entitled to give evidence in reply to contradict it. See R. v. Frost, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 85, 386; 9 C. & P. 159. If he does so, counsel for the defence has the right to comment on the evidence so called. Id. 4 St. Tr., N. S. p. 387.

Right of reply by officers of the crown.]—"In those crown cases in which the attorney or solicitor-general is personally engaged, a reply, where no witnesses are called for the defence, is to be allowed as of right to the counsel for the crown, and in no others." Resolution of the Judges of Dec. 1884: 5 St. Tr., N. S. 8, n. (c). (a) This disposes of doubts formerly existing as to the right of reply in such cases by counsel other than the law officers appearing for a government office. See 2 St. Tr., N. S. 1019.

View of locus in quo by the jury.]—It is competent for the judge to permit the jury to view the locus in quo at any time during the trial, even without the consent of the prosecutor (R. v. Whalley, 2 C. & K. 376; 2 Cox, 231), and even after his summing up, but he should take precautions not to allow improper communications being made to them at the view. R. v. Martin, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 378; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 113. A view may be permitted on an indictment for perjury. Anon. 2 Chit. Rep. (K. B.) 422. Where it is alleged that the jury upon the view have received evidence in the absence of the judge and of the prisoner, it is for the court before which the trial takes place to investigate the facts, and ascertain whether the alleged irregularity has occurred. R. v. Martin, ubi supra. Quære, whether if such irregularity be so found to have occurred, the court for Crown Cases Reserved has jurisdiction to order a venire de novo, as for a mis-trial. Id.; and see post, chap. viii. sect. 1. 276.

Adjournment of trial.]—If the trial is not concluded on the same day on which it began, the judge has authority to adjourn it from day to day without the defendant's consent. R. v. Castro, L. R., 9 Q. B. 350, 356; 43 L. J. (Q. B.) 105, 108; R. v. Stone, 25 St. Tr. 1155; 6 T. R. 530; 3 R. R. 253; R. v. Hardy, 24 St. Tr. 199, 418. The adjournments should be stated in the record if it is made up. O'Brien v. R., 26 L. R. Ir. 451. But for purposes of a record at assizes they are treated as one day. Whitaker v. Wisbey, 6 Cox, 109, 114, Maule, J.

On the adjournment of a trial for treason, treason felony, or murder, the jury must be kept together during the night, under the charge of officers of the court, and may have a fire and reasonable refreshment at their own expense (33 & 34 Vict. c. 77, s. 23).

In the case of other felonies the judge may by statute (60 & 61 Vict. c. 18, s. 1), and in the case of misdemeanors the judge may at common law, allow the jury to separate during any adjournment of the court, and to return to their homes for the night, being charged not to converse with any person on the subject of the trial. If they separate without leave, the jury must be discharged and a new trial had. R. v. Ward, 10 Cox, 573; 16 W. R. 281; R. v. Kinnear, 2 B. & Ald. 462. Where the witnesses for the prosecution have all been examined, the court may order the case to be adjourned, and direct another trial to be proceeded with, in order to give time for the production of a thing essential to the proof, but deposited at a distance. R. v. Wenborn, 6 Jur. 267. And on a trial for murder, where, after the opening address of counsel, it was discovered that, in consequence of the detention of a railway train, the witnesses for the prosecution had not arrived in the city, the trial was adjourned, the jury were locked up, a fresh jury was called into the jury box, and another case was proceeded with. R. v. Foster, 3 C. & K. 201, Maule, J.; but see R. v. Parr, 2 F. & F. 861, Wightman, J. It has been held that adjournments except to the next day are not permitted after the jury is sworn or evidence called. R. v. Tempest, 1 F. & F. 381, Watson, B.: R. v. Robson, 4 F. & F. 360, Willes, J. But in R. v. Fernandez, 2 F. & F. 862, n., Cockburn, C.J., said that the trial could be temporarily suspended for part of a day, the jury remaining in the box; and the Juries Detention Act, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. c. 18), gets rid of the difficulty by allowing a jury, with the consent of the judge, to separate except in the cases of treason, treason felony, and murder. Where a juror was sworn in a wrong name, and the objection was taken before verdict, Maule intimated that the proper course was to discharge the jury, and try the prisoners again; although, there being in that case a second indictment against the prisoners, such a course was there not necessary. R. v. Metcalf, 3 Cox, 220. The same course is adopted when it is discovered during the trial that a juror not on the panel is sworn. R. v. Phillips, 11 Cox, 142. But it has been held that a trial must proceed, although in the course of the proceedings it is discovered that one of the jurors is related to the prisoner on trial, as that fact was a ground of challenge. R. v. Wardle, C. & Mar. 647. But under 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21, a judgment after verdict cannot be stayed or reversed because a person has served on the jury who has not been returned as a juror, nor for a misnomer or misdescription of any juror. R. v. Tremearne, 5 B. & C. 254; 20 R. R. 234, appears to be overruled by this enactment. Where a prisoner indicted for felony, with whom the jury were charged, was by sudden illness rendered incapable of remaining at the bar, the jury were discharged, and the prisoner on recovering was tried before another jury. R. v. Stevenson, 2 Leach, 546: and see post, p. 224. The usual course is to swear a fresh juror in place of the one incapacitated, but to offer the prisoner in a case of felony his full right of challenge to the whole panel. R. v. Edwards, R. & R. 224: 3 Camp. 207. The trial must begin de novo, and the witnesses be resworn and examined afresh, and it is not sufficient to reswear the witnesses and read over to them the judge's note of their evidence. R. v. Bertrand, L. R., 1 P. C. 520, 534, L. J. P. C., which disapproves the contrary practice followed in R. v. Beere, 2 M. & Rob. 242, and R. v. Foster, 7 C. & P. 495. In R. v. Monson, 67 J. P. Rep. 267; 47 Sol. J. 529, 574; 38 L. J. Newsp. 261; these cases were followed, R. v. Bertrand not being cited. In a case of misdemeanor, where the prisoner became ill and was carried out of court, the judge discharged the jury, being of opinion that the consent of his counsel, that the case should proceed in the absence of the defendant, was not, under such circumstances, sufficient. R. v. Streek, 2 C. & P. 413; contrà, R. v. Castro, ante, p. 213. That case was, however, tried in the Court of Queen's Bench. If a prisoner so taken ill recovers during the assizes, he may be put on his trial again, the trial being, of course, begun de novo. R. v. Streek, ubi supra.

[As to the discharge of the jury, when they cannot agree as to their verdict, see post, p. 223.]

Agreement to withdraw from or to stifle prosecution.]—See post, Bk. II. Part II. c. iii. sect. 14, tit. "Compounding Offences."

Summing up.]—The court, in summing up the case after the conclusion of the evidence and arguments, is bound to direct the jury as to the law applicable, and may go through and comment on the evidence given, and may even comment on the absence of evidence which might have been given, including the failure of the defendant to exercise his right to give evidence under 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, if in the discretion of the court such comment appears to be fair and just. See R. v. Rhodes [1899] 1 Q. B. 77; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 83 (C. C. R.): Kops v. R. [1894] App. Cas. 650. The existence of this power to direct the jury is recognized in Fox's Libel Act, 32 G. 3, c. 60, s. 2. As to the mode of correcting errors in law made by the court, see post, chap. viii., Criminal Appeal.

Sect. 4.

VERDICT.

Verdict.]—After the conclusion of the trial the jury are not allowed to separate until they have considered and returned their verdict, or have been discharged for failure to agree. See post, p. 222. On a trial for treason or felony the jurors must deliver their verdict in open court, in the presence of the defendant. R. v. Haynes [1900] 64 J. P. 441. Ridley, J., allowed a verdict of not guilty to be found on a coroner's inquisition for manslaughter on proof that the accused was certified insane and detained in an asylum; but the case was exceptional, and affords no precedent. In cases of misdemeanor, the presence of the defendant during the trial is not essential. Co. Litt. 227 b; 3 Co. Inst. 110; Bac. Abr., Verdict (B.). It is very doubtful whether a verdict can be received and recorded on Sunday. Winsor v. R., L. R., 1 Q. B. 289, 317, 322; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 121. The verdict is delivered by the foreman; and the assent of all the jurors to a verdict pronounced by the foreman in the presence and hearing of the rest, without their express dissent, is to be conclusively presumed. R. v. Wooller, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 111; 18 R. R. 402. The verdict in a criminal case is either (1) general, on the whole charge (which the jury are at liberty to find in all cases, both upon the law and facts of the case; Co. Litt. 228; 4 Bl. Com. 361): or (2) partial, as to a part of the charge; as where the jury convict the defendant on one or more counts of the indictment, and acquit him of the residue; or convict him on one part of a divisible count, and acquit him as to the residue: or (3) special, where the facts of the case alone are found by the jury, the legal inference to be derived from them being referred to the court. As to special verdicts, see post, p. 219, and as to libel, see 32 G. 3, c. 60, ss. 1, 3. Where several defendants are included in the same indictment, the jury may find one guilty and acquit the others, and vice versâ; and under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 94, the jury may do so, even where the prisoners are jointly charged with a felonious receiving. See ante, p. 87. But if several be indicted for a riot, and the jury acquit all but two, they must acquit those two also, unless it be charged in the indictment, and proved, that they committed the riot together with some other person not tried upon that indictment. 2 Hawk. c. 47, s. 8. And if, upon an indictment for a conspiracy, the jury acquit all the defendants but one, they must acquit that one also, unless it be charged in the indictment, and proved, that he conspired with some other person not tried upon that indictment. 2 Hawk. c. 47, s. 8; 3 Chit. Cr. L. 1141: R. v. Thompson, 16 Q. B. 832; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 183: R. v. Manning, 12 Q. B. D. 241; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 85: R. v. Plummer [1902] 2 K. B. 339; 20 Cox, 269 (C. C. R.). And where a count in an indictment charged eight defendants with one conspiracy to effect certain objects, a finding that three of the defendants were guilty generally, and that five of them were guilty of conspiracy to effect some, and not guilty as to the residue of these objects, was held bad and repugnant. O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1; 11 Cl. & F. 155; 8 Eng. Rep. 1061. The principle underlying that decision is that where there are two or more persons charged with conspiracy in the same count, the count is a single and complete count, and cannot be separated into parts. R. v. Manning (ubi supra), per Coleridge, L.C.J.: R. v. Plummer (ubi supra).

Verdict of lesser offence than charged in the indictment. 1. Common law.]—At common law a defendant cannot be convicted of an offence of an entirely different character from that charged in the indictment. For instance, he may not be convicted of misdemeanor on an indictment for felony, or of felony on an indictment for misdemeanor. For felony and misdemeanor are different things, and on an indictment for one there can be no conviction of the other, except under the express provisions of some statute. R. v. Thomas, L. R., 2 C. C. R. 141; 44 L. J. (M. C.) 42. Therefore where the prisoner was indicted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 12, for the felony of uttering counterfeit coin after a previous conviction for uttering, and the jury found him guilty of the subsequent uttering, but negatived the previous conviction, it was held that he could not be convicted of the misdemeanor of uttering. Id. So a prisoner indicted under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 42, of the felony of an assault with intent to rob, cannot be convicted of a common assault. R. v. Woodhall, 12 Cox, 240. So where the prisoner was indicted under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 94, s. 3 (rep.), for the felony of unlawfully and carnally knowing and abusing a girl under the age of twelve years, it was held that he could not be convicted of a common assault. R. v. Catherall, 13 Cox, 109, Amphlett, B.

This rule is subject to the statutory exceptions stated below at p. 218. But at common law a defendant may be convicted of a less aggravated felony or misdemeanor on an indictment charging a felony or misdemeanor of greater aggravation, provided that the indictment contains words apt to include both offences. In other words, it is not necessary to prove the offence charged in the indictment to the whole extent laid, provided that the facts proved constitute an offence punishable by law, for which the defendant may by law be convicted on the indictment. R. v. Hollingberry, 4 B. & C. 329: R. v. Hunt, 2 Camp. 583; 31 St. Tr. 367, 408; and see ante, p. 71, Surplusage. Thus, where a statute annexes a higher degree of punishment to a common law felony, if committed under certain circumstances, if, upon an indictment under the statute, the prosecutor prove the felony to have been committed, but fail in proving it to have been committed under the circumstances specified in the statute, the defendant may be convicted of the common law felony. So, if a misdemeanor at common law be subject to severer punishment by statute, if committed under certain circumstances, the defendant may be convicted of the misdemeanor at common law, if the prosecutor succeed in proving the commission of the offence, but fail in proving that it was committed under the circumstances specified in the statute. 2 Hale, 191, 192.

Upon an indictment for murder, if the prosecutor fail in proving the malice prepense, the defendant may be convicted of manslaughter; R. v. Mackalley, 9 Co. Rep. 67 b. On a charge of burglary and stealing goods, if no burglary be proved; or of robbery, if the property be not taken from the person by violence or putting in fear, the prisoner may be convicted of the simple larceny. 2 Hale, 302. Indeed, upon an indictment for burglary and stealing, the prisoner may be convicted either of burglary, of entering a dwelling-house in the night with intent to commit felony therein, of housebreaking, of stealing in a dwelling-house to the amount of 5*l.* (if the property stolen be laid to be of that value in the indictment), or of simple larceny, according to the facts proved. R. v. Compton, 3 C. & P. 418: R. v. Bullock, 1 Mood. C. C. 324, n.: R. v. Brookes, C. & Mar. 543. So, upon an indictment for housebreaking and stealing, the prisoner may be convicted, as the proof may be, either of housebreaking, of stealing in a dwelling-house to the amount of 5*l.* (if the property be laid as of that amount), or of simple larceny. 2 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 59. And upon an indictment for robbery the prisoner may be convicted either of the robbery, of stealing from the person, of simple larceny, or (under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 41) of an assault with intent to rob, according to the facts proved. Upon an indictment for assaulting and unlawfully wounding and ill-treating the prosecutor, and thereby occasioning him actual bodily harm (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 47), the defendant may be convicted of a common assault. R. v. Oliver, Bell, 287; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 12: R. v. Yeadon, L. & C. 81; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 70. In the latter case a venire de novo was awarded by the Court of Crown Cases Reserved. So, also, the defendant might have been convicted of a common assault upon an indictment containing one count only, charging that the defendant in and upon a girl between the ages of ten and twelve, "unlawfully did make an assault, and her did then unlawfully and carnally know and abuse against the form," etc., being the ordinary form of an indictment for a misdemeanor under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 51 (rep.): R. v. Guthrie, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 241; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 95. The defendant may also be convicted of a common assault upon an indictment charging him in the first count with unlawfully and maliciously wounding, and in the second count with unlawfully and maliciously inflicting grievous bodily harm, although the word "assault" is not used in the indictment. R. v. Taylor, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 194; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 106. On a count for indecent assault, and semble even on a count under 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 5 (1), the defendant may be convicted of common assault. R. v. Bostock, 17 Cox, 700, Charles, J. Where an indictment contained a count for an assault upon a gamekeeper, framed on 9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 2, and a count for a common assault, and the prosecution at the trial elected to abandon the latter count, it was held, that the defendant could not, after such abandonment, be convicted of a common assault upon the first count. R. v. Day, 11 Cox, 505 (C. C. R.). Any person charged with a corrupt practice at an election for parliament, or a municipal office, or a county, district, or parish council, may, if the circumstances warrant such finding, be found guilty of an illegal practice (which offence is ordinarily punishable on summary conviction, but for that purpose shall be an indictable offence). 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51, s. 52; 47 & 48 Vict. c. 70, s. 30; 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 75; 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, s. 48. On an indictment for publishing a defamatory libel, "knowing the same to be false," the misdemeanor the punishment of which is provided for by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 4, the defendant may be convicted of merely publishing a defamatory libel, the misdemeanor the punishment of which is provided for by s. 5. Boaler v. R., 21 Q. B. D. 284; 57 L. J. (M. C.) 85. Where the defendant was indicted for stealing a colt, it was held that he could not be convicted under 1 Edw. 6, c. 12, s. 10, which did not mention colts, but might be convicted of the simple larceny. R. v. Beaney, R. & R. 416. Upon an indictment for perjury, it is sufficient if any one of the assignments of perjury be proved. See R. v. Rhodes, 2 Ld. Raym. 886. And if upon the trial of an indictment for perjury it appears that the false oath, although taken before a competent authority, was not taken in a judicial proceeding, the defendant may be convicted of the common law misdemeanor of taking a false oath. R. v. Hodgkiss, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 212; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 14. See 52 & 53 Vict. c. 10, s. 7. Upon an indictment for high treason, proof of any one overt act is sufficient, provided the overt act so proved be a sufficient overt act of the treason laid in the indictment. 1 Hale, 122; Fost. 194; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 188. Upon an indictment for conspiring to prevent the workmen of J. G. from continuing to work, it was held sufficient to prove a conspiracy to prevent any of the workmen from working. R. v. Bykerdike, 1 M. & Rob. 179.

Upon an indictment against two charging two persons jointly with an offence, as stealing in the dwelling-house, either may be found guilty; but they cannot be found guilty of separate parts of the charge, or upon proof of two distinct felonies. In the former case, a pardon must be obtained, or a nolle prosequi entered, as to the one who stands second upon the indictment, before judgment can be given against the other; R. v. Hempstead, R. & R. 344; in the latter case, judgment may be given against the party who is proved to have committed the first felony in order of time, but the other must be acquitted. R. v. Dovey, 2 Den. 86; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 105. But where several are indicted for burglary and larceny, one may be found guilty of the burglary and larceny, and the others of the larceny only. R. v. Butterworth, R. & R. 520; and see ante, p. 87.

2. Under statute. (a) Conviction of a felony not charged.]—On an indictment for embezzlement or fraudulent application or disposition of property (under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 68, 70) the accused may be convicted of simple larceny or larceny as a clerk or servant or as a person employed in the public service or police, and on indictment for larceny under ss. 67 & 69 of the same Act the accused may be convicted of embezzlement within ss. 68 or 70: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 72.

(b) Proof of felony on indictment for misdemeanor, or vice versâ.]—By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12, "if, upon the trial of any person for any misdemeanor, it shall appear that the facts given in evidence amount in law to a felony, such person shall not by reason thereof be entitled to be acquitted of such misdemeanor; and no person tried for such misdemeanor shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for felony on the same facts, unless the court before which such trial may be had shall think fit, in its discretion, to discharge the jury from giving any verdict upon such trial, and to direct such person to be indicted for felony, in which case such person may be dealt with in all respects as if he had not been put upon his trial for such misdemeanor." By the Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88), on the trial of an indictment for false pretences the defendant is not entitled to be acquitted because it is proved that he obtained the property in question by means amounting to larceny. But a conviction for false pretences is not possible on an indictment for larceny.

Upon an indictment for child murder the jury may find the defendant guilty of endeavouring to conceal the birth of the child. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 60. Upon an indictment charging the defendant with any felony (except murder or manslaughter) where the indictment alleges that the defendant cut, stabbed, or wounded any person, the jury may acquit of the felony charged, and find him guilty of unlawfully wounding (14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 5), and thereupon the defendant is liable to be punished in the same manner as if he had been convicted upon an indictment for the misdemeanor of unlawful wounding. This enactment does not apply to an indictment charging felonious shooting with intent to do grievous bodily harm. R. v. Miller, 14 Cox, 356, Bowen, J.; see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 11, 18, 20. Upon an indictment for the felony of administering poison, etc., so as to endanger life or to inflict grievous bodily harm, the jury may find the defendant guilty of the misdemeanor of administering poison, etc., with intent to injure, aggrieve, or annoy. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 23, 24, 25.

On an indictment for felonious rioting within s. 11 of the Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97), the accused may be convicted of a misdemeanor within s. 12 of that Act; on an indictment for robbery the accused may be convicted of assault with intent to rob (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 41). And by 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69 (Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885), s. 9, "If upon the trial of any indictment for rape, or any offence made felony by s. 4 of this Act, the jury shall be satisfied that the defendant is guilty of an offence under ss. 3, 4, or 5 of this Act, or of an indecent assault, but are not satisfied that the defendant is guilty of the felony charged in such indictment, or of an attempt to commit the same, then and in every such case the jury may acquit the defendant of such felony, and find him guilty of such offence as aforesaid, or of an indecent assault, and thereupon such defendant shall be liable to be punished in the same manner as if he had been convicted upon an indictment for such an offence as aforesaid, or for the misdemeanor of indecent assault." This enactment overrides the decision in R. v. Catherall, 13 Cox, 139. And on indictments for corrupt practices at elections the accused may be convicted of an illegal practice. 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51, s. 52, and see post, Bk. II. ch. vi. sects. 9, 10.

(c) Conviction of attempt on indictment for complete offence.]—S. 9 of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, after reciting that offenders often escape conviction by reason that such persons ought to have been charged with attempting to commit offences, and not with the actual commission thereof; for remedy thereof enacts, that "if, on the trial of any person charged with any felony or misdemeanor, it shall appear to the jury upon the evidence that the defendant did not complete the offence charged, but that he was guilty only of an attempt to commit the same, such person shall not by reason thereof be entitled to be acquitted, but the jury shall be at liberty to return as their verdict that the defendant is not guilty of the felony or misdemeanor charged, but is guilty of an attempt to commit the same, and thereupon such person shall be liable to be punished in the same manner as if he had been convicted upon an indictment for attempting to commit the particular felony or misdemeanor charged in the said indictment; and no person so tried as herein lastly mentioned shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for an attempt to commit the felony or misdemeanor for which he was so tried." Under this enactment the defendant can only be convicted of the attempt to commit the very offence with which he is charged; R. v. McPherson, Dears. & B. 197; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 134 (C. C. R.)

In R. v. Connell, 6 Cox, 178, to an indictment for administering poison with intent to murder, a plea of autrefois acquit was pleaded, setting up a prior acquittal of murder; and it was argued that on the former trial the accused might under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9, have been convicted of the attempt. The court held the plea bad, on the ground that that section only authorized a conviction of the attempt where it was a misdemeanor. But see thereon R. v. Cook [1899] 20 New South Wales Rep. (Law), 264.

On an indictment which charged H. with rape, and W. with aiding and abetting in the rape, the jury found H. guilty of attempting to commit a rape, and W. of aiding H. in the attempt. It was contended that this finding amounted to an acquittal of W., as the case was not within s. 9 of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100. The objection was, however, overruled, and the conviction of W. for misdemeanor was affirmed. R. v. Hapgood, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 221: S. C. sub nom. R. v. Wyatt, 39 L. J. (M. C.) 83.

Special verdict.]—The jury have a right, in all criminal cases, to find a special verdict: 2 Hawk. c. 47, s. 3: but the judge has no power to compel them to find a special verdict. R. v. Allday, 8 C. & P. 136. (See forms of special verdict in R. v. Dudley, 14 Q. B. D. 273; 54 L. J. (M. C.) 32.) R. v. Staines Local Board, 52 J. P. 215. Such verdict must state positively the facts themselves, and not merely the evidence adduced to prove them, and all the facts necessary to enable the court to give judgment must be found; for the court cannot supply by intendment or implication any defect in the statement. 2 Hawk. c. 47, s. 9; 2 East, P. C. 708, 784; see R. v. Plummer, Kel. (J.) 109: R. v. Francis, 2 Str. 1015: R. v. Royce, 4 Burr. 2073; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 643. But if the jury find all the substantial requisites of the charge, they are not bound to follow in terms the technical language of the indictment. Thus where the defendant was charged with forgery of a bank note, and the special verdict stated that he erased and altered the note by changing the word "two" into "five," this was held sufficient. R. v. Dawson, 1 Str. 19. So, where an indictment for murder enumerated three wounds, and the special verdict mentioned one only, this was held not to be a fatal variance. R. v. Morgan, 1 Bulstr. 84, 87. So, where the evidence need not correspond precisely with the statement in the indictment (see post, Part II. ch. i.), the special verdict will be good, although in the same respects it vary from the statement in the indictment; as where the fact is found to have occurred, in a case of a transitory nature, at a different place within the jurisdiction of the court, or (where time is immaterial) on a day different from that stated in the indictment. Dowdale's case, 6 Co. Rep. 47; 2 Rolle Abr. 689. If the verdict does not state the time when the facts occurred, it seems that the court will intend them to have happened in the order in which the jury have stated them. R. v. Keite, 1 Ld. Raym. 138, 142. The jury need not, and indeed ought not, after stating the facts, to draw any legal conclusion, for that is the matter referred to the court: and if they do so, and the inference drawn by them is erroneous, the court will reject it as superfluous, and pronounce the judgment warranted by the facts stated. See 1 Chit. Cr. L. 645, and the cases there cited. A special verdict is not amendable as to matters of fact (ante, p. 219); but a mere error of form may be amended, even, as it seems, in capital cases, in order to fulfil the evident intention of the jury, where there is any note or minute to amend by. 2 Hawk. c. 47, s. 9; R. v. Hayes, 2 Str. 844; R. v. Hazel, 1 Leach, 368, 382; 1 East, P. C. 236; R. v. Woodfall, 5 Burr. 2661. If three offences are charged in the indictment, and the special verdict state evidence which applies to two of them only, the court may adjudge the defendant guilty of those two, and enter an acquittal as to the residue. R. v. Hayes, supra. The court cannot, however, on a special verdict on an indictment for felony, adjudge the defendant guilty of a misdemeanor. R. v. Westbeer, 2 Str. 1133; 1 Leach, 12. But where it appears clearly from the facts stated in the special verdict, that the defendant has been guilty of a crime, though not of the degree charged upon him in the indictment, the court will not discharge him, but will direct a fresh indictment to be preferred. R. v. Francis, 2 Str. 1015. Where the verdict is so imperfect that no judgment can be given upon it, venire de novo may, in misdemeanors, be awarded. See post, ch. viii. sect. 5, Venire de novo. In cases of felony the court may enter a judgment of acquittal where the facts found by the special verdict do not warrant a judgment against the defendant; see R. v. Huggins, 2 Ld. Raym. 1574, 1585; 17 St. Tr. 309; but this will be no bar to another prosecution for the same felony. R. v. Burridge, 3 P. Wms. 439, 480; 24 Eng. Rep. 1133, 1148; Com. Dig., Indictment (N.).

A verdict is not vitiated by surplusage. 2 Hawk. c. 47, s. 10.

Where a special verdict has been found at the assizes, the record may be brought into the High Court of Justice by an order of that court only, without a writ of certiorari, the courts of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery (including the Central Criminal Court) being now by the 16th section of the Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict c. 66), made part of the High Court. R. v. Dudley, 14 Q. B. D. 273, 280, 560; 54 L. J. (M. C.) 32, 34; R. v. Parke [1903] 2 K. B. 432, 439. Where on a special verdict the High Court is of opinion that the defendant ought to be convicted, that court ought to pronounce judgment and pass sentence. R. v. Dudley, 14 Q. B. D. 273, 278.

Special verdict of insanity.]—By s. 1 of the Criminal Lunatics Act, 1800

(39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 94), the petty jury was empowered to find a verdict of insanity upon the evidence; and under s. 2 of the same Act they can, if it appears to them that a person on trial is insane, return a verdict to that effect. As to what constitutes insanity, see ante, pp. 23, et seq.

Where, on the trial of a deaf mute for felony, the jury returned the following verdict: "We find the prisoner guilty on the evidence; and we also find that he is not capable of understanding, and, as a fact, has not understood the nature of the proceedings;" it was held that the prisoner could not be convicted, but must be detained as a non-sane person during the Queen's pleasure. R. v. Berry, 1 Q. B. D. 447; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 123; 13 Cox, 189. S. 1 was expressly, and s. 2 on this point is virtually, repealed by the Trial of Lunatics Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 38, s. 4). S. 2 of the latter Act provides that, "Where in any indictment or information any act or omission is charged against any person as an offence, and it is given in evidence on the trial of such person for that offence that he was insane, so as not to be responsible, according to law, for his actions at the time when the act was done or omission made, then, if it appears to the jury before whom such person is tried, that he did the act or made the omission charged, but was insane as aforesaid at the time when he did or made the same, the jury shall return a special verdict to the effect that the accused was guilty of the act or omission charged against him, but was insane as aforesaid at the time when he did the act or made the omission" (sub-s. 1).

"Where such special verdict is found, the court shall order the accused to be kept in custody as a criminal lunatic, in such place and in such manner as the court shall direct, till his Majesty's pleasure shall be known; and it shall be lawful for his Majesty thereupon, and from time to time, to give such order for the safe custody of the said person during pleasure, in such place and in such manner as to his Majesty may seem fit" (sub s. 2).

"All provisions in any existing Act, or in any rules or orders made in pursuance of any existing Act, having reference to a person or persons acquitted on the ground of insanity, shall apply to a person or persons in respect of whom a special verdict is found under this Act" (sub-s. 4).

The Acts referred to in sub-s. 4 are the Criminal Lunatic Acts (see Wood-Renton, Lunacy, 792–880, 856). A form of detention order was prescribed in 1884. Broadmoor was in 1861 appointed as a prison for prisoners detained at the King's pleasure. These orders and the rules regulating the prison are printed in Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 8, tit. "Lunatic (E.)." The Act of 1883 is modified as to the control of persons detained under it by the Criminal Lunatics Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 64).

Ambiguous verdicts.]—Where on an indictment for obtaining food and money by false pretences the jury found the following verdict of "guilty of obtaining food and money under false pretences: but whether there was any intent to defraud the jury consider there is not sufficient evidence, and therefore strongly recommend the prisoner to mercy," it was held that this amounted to a verdict of not guilty, as it negatived one of the most material allegations in the indictment, namely, the intent to defraud. R. v. Gray, 17 Cox, 299 (C. C. R.)

Receiving the verdict.]—A judge is not bound (unless the jury insist on having it recorded) to receive the first verdict which the jury give, but may direct them to reconsider it: and the verdict which the jury ultimately return is the verdict to be recorded. R. v. Meany, L. & C. 213;

32 L. J. (M. C.) 24: per Pollock, C.B., in R. v. Yeadon, L. & C. 81; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 70: and see Cromp. 114; 2 Harg. St. Tr. 60. The jury may, before the verdict is recorded (or even promptly after the verdict is recorded, R. v. Parkin, 1 Mood. C. C. 45), rectify their verdict, and it will stand as ultimately amended. 1 Chit. Cr. L. 647. This may be done even after the defendant has been discharged out of the dock (in pursuance of a supposed verdict of acquittal), if done before the jury have left the box. R. v. Vodden, Dears. 229; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 7. On the trial at nisi prius of a criminal case the postea could be amended, on sufficient cause shown, where there was a judge's note or other sufficient document to show that it was incorrect. R. v. Virrier, 12 A. & E. 317; 9 L. J. (M. C.) 120; and see R. v. King, 7 Q. B. 782. Where an indictment contains two counts for misdemeanor, to which the defendant pleads not guilty, and the finding of the jury is guilty on the second count (without noticing the first), whereupon judgment is passed, such judgment is not affected by reason of no finding being entered on the first count, for each count is a separate indictment on which a separate judgment can be entered. Latham v. R., 5 B. & S. 635; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 197: cf. Selvester v. U. S. [1898] 170 U. S. 262.

Upon the delivery of the verdict, if the defendant be thereby acquitted on the merits, he is for ever free and discharged from that accusation, and is entitled to be immediately set at liberty, unless there be some other legal ground for his detention. (The old form of recording acquittal was quorum eat quietus sine die). As to pleading an acquittal in bar of another indictment, see ante, p. 169, "Autrefois acquit."

Retirement of jury.]—If the jury are unable to agree upon their verdict without retiring from their box, they withdraw to a convenient place appointed for that purpose, an officer being sworn to keep them, and to suffer none to speak to them without leave of the court, nor to speak to them himself, except only to ask them whether they are agreed. 2 Hale, 297. There was an old rule against allowing them food, drink, or fire. 1 Co. Inst. 227; 4 B. & Ald. 681; Doct. & Student, 158, 272: Winsor v. R., L. R., 1 Q. B. 289, 308, 317; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 121. But it was abolished in 1870, and they may now have fire or reasonable refreshment at their own expense. 33 & 34 Vict. c. 77, s. 23. The jury when once enclosed must not separate or leave the place appointed for their deliberations without the special permission of the court. Co. Litt. 227 b: 4 Bl. Comm. 360: R. v. O'Connell, 1 Cox, 410. The law in this respect has not been altered by 60 & 61 Vict. c. 18 (ante, p. 218). If a juror falls ill while the jury are enclosed, a medical man may, by leave of the court, see and prescribe for him. R. v. Newton, 13 Q. B. 716, 735, Rolfe, B.; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 201.

Disagreement of jury.]—If the jury agree to a verdict on some counts of an indictment, but disagree on others, it would seem that the defendant can be retried on the counts on which the disagreement has taken place, even after judgment on the counts on which he has been convicted or acquitted, as each count is a separate indictment. Latham v. R., 5 B. & S. 636: cf. Selvester v. U. S., 170 U. S. 262. But where the counts are not for distinct offences, but merely vary the legal description of a single transaction, the defendant would apparently be entitled to plead autrefois convict or acquit on the second trial. R. v. Grimwood, 60 J. P. 809, Pollock, B.

Entry of verdict.]—The form of entry of the verdict on the record is as follows:—After the similiter (ante, p 169), comes the award of venire, thus:—"Therefore let a jury thereupon here immediately come before the said justices of our lord the King last above mentioned, and others their fellows aforesaid, of free and lawful men of the said county of ——, by whom the truth of the matter may be better known, and who are not of kin to the said J. S., to recognize upon their oath whether the said J. S. be guilty of the felony in the indictment above specified, or not guilty; because as well the said H. K. A., who prosecutes for our said lord the King in this behalf, as the said J. S., have put themselves upon the said jury. And the jurors of the said jury, by the sheriff for this purpose impanelled and returned, to wit [naming them], being called, come: who, to speak the truth of and concerning the premises being chosen, tried, and sworn, upon their oath say, that the said J. S. is guilty [or not guilty] of the felony aforesaid, on him above charged, in manner and form aforesaid, as by the said indictment is above supposed against him."

An indictment for perjury contained two counts, charging perjury to have been committed by the defendant on two separate occasions. The verdict was in the following form, "that the said T. C. is guilty of the premises on him above charged in and by both counts of the indictment aforesaid above specified, in the manner and form aforesaid, as by the indictment aforesaid is above supposed against him." It was held that this was in fact a finding of guilty upon each count of the indictment. Castro v. R., 6 App. Cas. 229; 50 L. J. (Q. B.) 497: cf. O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1.

Discharge of Jury.(a)]—It is now established law that a jury sworn and charged with a prisoner, even in a capital case, may be discharged by the judge at the trial, without giving a verdict, if a "necessity," that is, a high degree of need, for such discharge is made evident to his mind. Winsor v. R., L. R. 1 Q. B. 289, 390; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 121, 161 (dissenting from Conway v. R., 7 Ir. L. R. 149; 1 Cox 210:) R. v. Shields, 28 St. Tr. 619, 646: R. v. Cobbett, 2 St. Tr., N. S. 789, 903; 3 Burn's J. 98 (30th ed.); 4 Bl. Com. 360.

Where the jury, on a trial for murder at the assizes, were locked up from the middle of the day until the following morning, and then, on their being sent for into court, stated that it was impossible they should ever agree, and that was the first day of business at the next assize town, whereupon the judge discharged them, it was held that he was warranted by law in doing so. R. v. Newton, 13 Q. B. 716; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 201.

(a) It has been said that, in the case of a trial at the assizes, the jury, if they do not agree before the judges depart the county, may be carried with them in a cart to the borders of the county, or, according to some authorities, from place to place through the circuit, until they are unanimous: 19 Ass. Pl. 6: 41 Ass. Pl. 11: 2 Hale, 297; Bac. Abr., Juries (G.); R. v. Ledgingham (1670); 1 Vent. 97. This dictum, however, rests on no foundation of judicial decision or actual practice, and if it was ever law, which seems doubtful, is not so at the present day. Winsor v. R., L. R. 1 Q. B. 289, 326; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 121. It has also been said to be a general rule of law, "that a jury sworn and charged in case of life or member, cannot be discharged by the court or any other, but they ought to give a verdict." Co. Litt. 227 b. See also 3 Co. Inst. 110; Bro. Abr. Enquest, 30; Bac. Abr., Juries (G.); 2 Hawk. c. 47, s. 1; Fost. 29-39. This doctrine, however, which, if taken literally, seems to command the confinement of the jury till death if they do not agree, is too broadly stated by Lord Coke, and was denied to be law in Ferrar's case, Sir T. Raym. 84 (an indictment for forgery), where it is laid down as having been "resolved by all the justices, that although the jury be charged and sworn in the case of a plea of the crown, yet a juror may be drawn or the jury dismissed, contrary to common tradition which hath been held by many learned in the law."

It is for the judge alone to decide whether a necessity exists for discharging the jury, and his decision is not subject to review. Winsor v. R., ubi supra: R. v. Davison, 8 Cox, 360; 2 F. & F. 250. R. v. Charlesworth, 1 B. & S. 460, so far as it dissents from this view is no authority. The same view has been adopted in the United States. U. S. v. Perez [1824] 9 Wheaton 579, Story, J.: Dreyer v. Illinois [1903] 187 U. S. 71, 86; and in New South Wales, R. v. Grand [1903] 3 N. S. W. State Rep. 216.

If one of the jury die before the delivery of the verdict, the remaining eleven will be discharged, and a new jury may be at once sworn or a new juror added to the eleven, and the defendant tried by them, or (if necessary) remanded to the next assizes. R. v. Gould, 3 Burn's Justice, 98 (30th ed.). So, also, if one of the jurors be taken so ill that he is not able to proceed with the trial. R. v. Scalbert, 2 Leach, 620: R. v. Beere, 2 M. & Rob. 472: R. v. Ashe, 1 Cox, 150. In case another juror is added to the eleven, they must be sworn anew, and the prisoner must again have his challenges. R. v. Edwards, R. & R. 224; 4 Taunt. 309; 13 R. R. 601; 2 Leach, 621 n.; 3 Camp. 207 n. The evidence must be taken de novo: and it is not proper to read over to the witnesses the note taken of their evidence at the first trial. R. v. Bertrand, L. R. 1 P. C. 520 (see ante, p. 214). Where, in the course of a trial, one of the jurors, without leave, left the jury box and also the court, whereupon the jury was discharged, and a fresh one impanelled for the trial of the prisoner, it was held, that this was the only course that could have been adopted. R. v. Ward, 10 Cox, 573; 11 W. R. 281 (C. C. R.). And so where in the course of a trial it was discovered that a person was on the jury who was not on the jury panel, and who had by mistake been summoned as a juryman, the jury were discharged, and a fresh jury constituted by taking another juryman in the place of the one who had served in mistake. R. v. Phillips, 11 Cox, 142. This defect would have been cured by verdict under 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21: and see ante, p. 200.

In Hill v. Yates, 12 East, 229, it was held that the grant of a new trial because a juror not summoned had served was discretionary, and that if no injustice had resulted, a new trial should be refused. Per Ellenborough, L.C.J. "If we were to listen to such an objection we might set aside the verdicts given at every assize, where the same thing might happen from accident or advertence, and possibly sometimes from design, especially in criminal cases." He cited the case of a juryman (1783, 12 East, 231, n.), where the judges in a crown case held that service of a man not summoned was no ground of objection to verdict even on a writ of error, much less on a summary application. See post, p. 279.

It has been also held, that in order to enable a prisoner to take a point in his defence which he could not otherwise have taken, the court might, by his consent, discharge the jury, and that the doing so would not bar any further proceedings. Kinloch's case, Fost. 16, 31: 18 St. Tr. 395: R. v. Stokes, 6 C. & P. 151: and see R. v. Deane, 5 Cox, 501, Erle, J. The jury has also been discharged, or a juror withdrawn, in a criminal case, on account of the sudden illness of a witness; 2 Harg. St. Tr. 832: R. v. Streek, 2 C. & P. 413: R. v. Stevenson, 2 Leach, 546; and so, also, where material witnesses had been kept away by collusion; 1 Vent. 69; or even were absent by accident; R. v. Stokes, 6 C. & P. 151. But see R. v. Wedderburn, Fost. 22, 30; 18 St. Tr. 425; and see 2 Hale, 295. In R. v. Charlesworth, 1 B. & S. 460; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 25, all the judges who decided that case expressed a strong opinion against the propriety of discharging the jury, merely because the case for the prosecution fails for want of evidence, and in the hope that further evidence may be got on a second trial. In R. v. Wade (1825), 1 Mood. C. C. 86, it was not held proper to discharge a jury sworn to try an indictment for rape in order to give time for the instruction of a witness to fit her to be sworn.

The power of discharge, while discretionary, ought not to be exercised without very strong reasons: yet it may be exercised without any absolute "necessity." Where a material and necessary witness for the prosecution refused to answer a question put to him, and, although informed by the judge that he was bound to do so, persisted in such refusal, and was thereupon adjudged to be guilty of a contempt of court, and fined and imprisoned, the judge on the application of the counsel for the prosecution, and against the will of the defendant, discharged the jury. R. v. Charlesworth, 2 F. & F. 326, Hill, J. The course pursued in this case was afterwards questioned in the court of Queen's Bench, and although it did not become necessary to give judgment upon its propriety, Blackburn, J., expressed an opinion that it was right, which opinion seems to have been shared by Cockburn, C.J., who denied that the rule laid down in 4 Bl. Com. 360, that "the jury cannot be discharged, unless in cases of evident necessity, till they have given in their verdict," is a true or correct exposition of the law as practised in our day. Wightman, J., and Crompton, J., on the other hand, thought the discharge of the jury under the circumstances mentioned above, was improper. R. v. Charlesworth, 1 B. & S. 460; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 25.

Effect of discharge.]—The discharge of the jury is not equivalent to a verdict of acquittal: and the prisoner can be remanded for a fresh trial. Id.: R. v. Davison, 8 Cox, 360; 2 F. & F. 250.

A defence founded on the improper discharge of the jury cannot be taken by plea, for the only pleas known to the law founded upon a former trial are pleas of a former conviction, or a former acquittal, for the same offence (ante, pp. 169, 174); but if the former trial had been abortive without a verdict, there has been neither a conviction nor an acquittal. Winsor v. R., L. R. 1 Q. B. 390, 395; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 161 Ex. Ch. And the discretion exercised by the judge in this respect, at all events where he discharges the jury on the ground of necessity, of the existence of which necessity it is for him alone to determine, cannot be reviewed in any way. Winsor v. R., ubi supra.

As to discharge of the jury where the prisoner appears to be insane, see ante, pp. 183.

Sect. 5.

Proceedings between verdict and judgment.

The allocutus.]—If the defendant be found guilty, it is thereupon demanded of him by the court, in cases of treason and felony, what he has to say why the court should not proceed to judgment against him; and if this (which is called the allocutus) do not appear on the record when made up, it will be bad on writ of error. R. v. Geary, 2 Salk. 630, 3 Mod. 265. It is not necessary to demand of the defendant why the court should not proceed to judgment, and execution against him. O'Brien v. R., 2 H. L. C. 465; 9 Eng. Rep. 1169; 7 St. Tr., N. S. 1; 3 Cox, 360; cf. O'Neill v. R.; 6 Cox, 495 (Ir.). In misdemeanors, it is not usual thus to call upon the defendant before judgment. "On all trials for felonies or misdemeanors in the King's Bench Division, except upon informations filed by leave of the court, and ex-officio informations where the attorney-general shall pray that the judgment may be postponed, judgment may be pronounced during the sittings or assizes at which the trial has taken place by the judge before whom the verdict has been taken, as well upon the defendant who shall have suffered judgment by default or confession as upon those who shall have been tried and convicted, and whether such persons be present or not in court." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, s. 172, which reproduces 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 70, s. 9 (rep. 51 & 52 Vict. c. 7). "The judge before whom the trial shall be had may either issue an immediate order or warrant, for committing the defendant in execution, or respite the execution of the judgment on such terms as he shall think fit, and for such time as may be necessary, for the purpose of enabling the defendant to move for a new trial, or in arrest of judgment, and if imprisonment be part of the sentence, may order the period of imprisonment to commence on the day on which the party shall be actually taken to and confined in prison," r. 173.

The allocutus is entered on the record after the verdict in the following form :—"And thereupon it is forthwith demanded of the said J. S., if he hath or knoweth anything to say why the said justices here ought not upon the premises and verdict aforesaid to proceed to judgment against him; who nothing further saith, unless as he had before said. Whereupon," etc. [continuing with the judgment, as post, p. 230.

Suspending entry of judgment.]—On this subject see R. v. N. E. Railway Co., 70 L. J. (K. B.) 548: 19 Cox, 682; 49 W. R. 524.

Arrest of judgment.]—The defendant may, at any time between the conviction and the sentence, but not afterwards, move the court in arrest of judgment. 1 Chit. Cr. L. 661. This motion can be grounded only on some objection arising on the face of the record itself; and no defect in the evidence, or irregularity at the trial, can be urged at this stage of the proceedings. But any want of sufficient certainty in the indictment, as in the statement of time or place (where material), of the person against whom the offence was committed, or of the facts and circumstances constituting the offence, or otherwise, which has not been amended during the trial, and is not aided by the verdict, will be a ground for arresting the judgment. We have already seen (ante, pp. 51, 84) what defects of form are cured by verdict, or have become altogether immaterial, under 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21, and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24 (ante, p. 54). Even if the defendant himself omits to make any motion in arrest of judgment, the court, if on a review of the case it be satisfied that the defendant has not been found guilty of any offence in law, will of itself arrest the judgment. R. v. Waddington, 1 East, 143, 146. If the judgment is arrested, all the proceedings are set aside, and judgment of acquittal is given; but this will be no bar to a fresh indictment. Com. Dig. Indictment (N.): 4 Bl. Com. 375: Vaux' case, 4 Co. Rep. 45 a.

Where a statute upon which an indictment is founded was repealed after the finding of the indictment, but before plea pleaded, the court arrested the judgment. R. v. Denton, Dears. 3; 18 Q. B. 761; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 207: see also R. v. Mawgan in Meneage, 8 A. & E. 496; 7 L. J. (M. C.) 98: R. v. McKenzie, R. & R. 429.

On a motion in arrest of judgment in misdemeanor, the defendant must be present in court. R. v. Spragg, 2 Burr. 928.

Where a court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery or quarter sessions refuses to arrest judgment, it may reserve a case under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78 (see post, ch. viii. s. 1); or the defendant may sue out a writ of error (see post, ch. viii. s. 2). As to proceedings by way of appeal from a conviction on a trial for misdemeanor in the High Court or in the civil court at the assizes, see post, ch. viii. s. 4, tit. "New Trial."

Process after verdict and before judgment.]—In the case of treason or felony the defendant must be present when judgment is given. 1 Ld. Raymond, 48, 267. In the case of a misdemeanor it is not necessary that the defendant should be present when judgment is given; but his presence is usually required (R. v. Harwood, 2 Str. 1088), unless the judgment is to be only for payment of a fine (R. v. Williams, 18 W. R. 806); or the court is satisfied by evidence that the defendant is too ill or infirm to be brought up; R. v. Constable, 7 D. & R. 663; R. v. Kinglake, 18 W. R. 806, cit.; or is in prison and unable to find bail. R. v. Boltz, 5 B. & C. 334; 4 L. J. (O. S.), K. B. 262. Wherever it is necessary that a defendant found guilty by verdict of a jury should be present in court when judgment is pronounced against him (see R. v. Chichester, 17 Q. B. 504, n.; 2 Den. 458), if he is at large and will not voluntarily attend in court, process may be issued for the purpose of bringing him up to receive judgment, in the same way as process is issued for the purpose of bringing an offender into court to answer to an indictment found or information filed against him, and he is liable upon such process to be prosecuted to outlawry. (See ante, p. 109.) If a defendant be under recognizance to appear and receive sentence in a King's Bench Division, notice of the intention to bring him up for judgment on a day specified is served on such defendant and his bail; and in default of appearance after such notice served and appearance required according to the course and practice of the court, the recognizances, in the discretion of the court, will be estreated, and a warrant issued for his apprehension, or a capias for proceeding to outlawry. R. v. Chichester, ubi supra.

As an aid to determining the appropriate punishment the court will, after verdict, hear evidence for the crown or the defendant, either vivâ voce or by affidavit. R. v. Bunts, 2 T. R. 683: R. v. Dignam, 7 A. & E. 593: R. v. Cox, 4 C. & P. 540. But the court may consider the acts of the defendant subsequent to the trial and up to the day of sentence. R. v. Withers, 3 T. R. 428. Under 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 70, s. 9 (rep.), it was held that the defendants could not move in mitigation of punishment on affidavits showing nothing which might not have been adduced at the trial. R. v. Lloyd, 4 B. & Ad. 135. The section is now represented by Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 172 (ante, p. 226). It is the practice at the Central Criminal Court, after verdict, to hear evidence of character generally, and of previous convictions not included in the indictment. This is disapproved of by some judges, and in R. v. Ellis, 6 B. & C. 145, 148; 5 L. J. (O. S.) M. C. 1, it was ruled that affidavits in aggravation were not admissible in felony.

The court may, at any time during the same assizes or sessions, or any adjournment thereof, vacate the judgment passed upon the defendant, before it has become matter of record, and pass another less or even more severe. Com. Dig. Indictment (N.): Bac. Abr., Court of Sessions: 2 Salk. 606: R. v. Price, 6 East, 323, 328: R. v. Leicestershire, JJ. [1813] 1 M. & Sel. 442. When once the judgment is solemnly entered on the record, no court can make any alteration in it; but if any material defect appear on the face of it, it can be reversed by writ of error; R. v. Fox, 10 Cox, 502 (Ir.); or amended on a case reserved. R. v. Horn, 15 Cox, 205 (C. C. R.); R. v. Turner [1904] 1 K. B. 181; see post, ch. viii. s. 1, "Crown Cases Reserved," p. 271.

Right to copy of indictment on acquittal.]—Whether a person indicted for felony is of right entitled to a copy of the indictment against him, after acquittal by verdict of the jury or on the bill being ignored by the grand jury is a question on which there is a conflict of authority. It is laid down (R. v. Brangan, 1 Leach, 27, Willes, C.J.; and see 31 R. R. 328, n.), that he is entitled to it ex debito justitiæ. The contrary is laid down by Lord Holt in Groenvelt v. Burrell, 1 Ld. Raym. 252; and see Browne v. Cumming, 10 B. & C. 70, note by reporters. In cases of misdemeanor there seems to be no doubt that a party acquitted is entitled to a copy of the record. Morrison v. Kelly, 1 W. Bl. 385, and note. See the authorities on this subject collected, 2 Tayl. Evid. (9th ed.), p. 986; 3 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 463; and see Attorney-General v. Scully, 4 Ontario L. R. 394; 33 Canada, 16, in which it is stated (4 Ontario L. R. p. 410) that inquiry of the attorney-general in England had elicited the reply that the fiat of the attorney-general was never asked for to enable a person acquitted to get a copy of the record of his indictment.

Discharge of prisoners.]—Every prisoner charged with or indicted for any felony, or with or for any misdemeanor, or as an accessory thereto, before any court of criminal jurisdiction in England and Wales, against whom no bill of indictment shall be found by the grand jury, or who on his or her trial shall be acquitted, or who shall be discharged by proclamation for want of prosecution, shall be immediately set at large without payment of any fee or sum of money, for or in respect of such discharge, to the sheriff, gaoler or keeper of the gaol or prison, from whence he shall be so discharged and set at liberty, or to the clerks of the court, or for their appearance to the indictment or information, or for allowing them to plead thereto, or for recording the appearance or plea, or for discharging any recognizance taken by him or by any sureties for him. 55 G. 3, c. 50, ss. 4, 5, as amended by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 114. Detention of an acquitted prisoner is illegal. Mee v. Cruikshank [1902] 20 Cox, 210. Persons who disobey these directions are guilty of misdemeanor. 55 G. 3, c. 50, ss. 9, 13. As to discharge on bail, see Bail, ante, p. 110. As to discharge on endurance of punishment, see 61 & 62 Vict. c. 41, s. 12, post, p. 231.

Respite.]—The term "respite" is usually applied to postponement of the judgment or sentence of the court until a future date. See Keen v. R., 10 Q. B. 928. This is done when a case is stated for the court for Crown Cases Reserved, or where the court, having regard to the nature of the offence, or the antecedents or mental or physical condition of the convict desires to defer sentence. It is common to put the offender under recognizances to come up for judgment when called upon, coupled in some cases with an undertaking not to offend again. The offender, if he offends again, may be called up and sentenced on the first conviction, instead of being tried for the subsequent charge. See R. v. Ryan, 7 Cox, 109 (Ir.). On a conviction by verdict for a capital offence where judgment has been respited, it may be given by subsequent justices of gaol delivery for the same jurisdiction. 1 Edw. 6, c. 7, s. 5.

Reprieve.]—A reprieve is the withdrawal of the sentence for an interval of time, whereby the execution of it is suspended; and it may be granted either by the King or by the court empowered to award the execution. 4 Bl. Com. 395; 1 Hale, 368; 2 Hale, 412; 2 Hawk. c. 51, s. 8; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 758. A reprieve is grantable by the crown (ex mandato regis) at its mere discretion; and it is grantable by the court (ex arbitrio judicis) at its discretion, whenever substantial justice requires it. As to reprieve in capital cases, see 4 G. 4, c. 48 (post, p. 233); 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 2 (post, p. 233). The judges of assize have the power of reprieve after their commission is determined; 8 Rep. Crim. L. 176; though the learned commissioners observe, that the continuance of this power is said to be rather of common usage than strict right. See 2 Hale, 412; 4 Bl. Com. 394: 2 Hawk. c. 51, s. 8. In two cases the court is bound (ex necessitate legis) to grant a reprieve. First, where the prisoner under sentence, being a female, is pregnant. 3 Co. Inst. 17; and see authorities last above cited. Secondly, where the prisoner becomes insane after judgment pronounced against him. 3 Co. Inst. 4; 4 Bl. Com. 395; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 761.

Jury of matrons.]—Where a female, upon a capital conviction (on the allocutus, ante, p. 225), alleges, or the court has reason to suppose, that she is pregnant, the law is, that a jury of twelve matrons shall be impanelled and sworn to try whether or not she is quick with child; see 1 Chit. Cr. L. 759; 4 St. Tr., 634; and in case they shall find in the affirmative, the court is to respite such offender until she shall be delivered of a child, or it is no longer possible in the course of nature that she should be so delivered. They are entitled to hear medical evidence before returning their verdict. R. v. Wycherley, 8 C. & P. 262. The forms of oaths to such jury of matrons are as follows:—

"You, as forematron of this jury, shall swear that you will search and try the prisoner at the bar, whether she be with child of a quick child, and thereof a true verdict give, according to your skill and understanding.—So help you God."

The oath to each of the other matrons is then administered:—

"The same oath which your forematron has taken on her part, you shall well and truly observe and keep on your part.—So help you God."

Unless pregnancy is pleaded on the allocutus, the right to a jury of matrons appears not to be absolute. R. v. Hunt, 2 Cox, 261, Erle, J.

Preliminary.]—The punishments assigned by the law of England for particular indictable offences will be found under the appropriate headings in the subsequent parts of this work. There are, however, certain general statutory provisions relating to sentences and punishments, which are collected here for facility of reference. Each of the Criminal Law Consolidation Acts of 1861, besides affixing a specific punishment for each offence, considerably modified by the Penal Servitude Act, 1891, post, p. 235, and by consequential repeals effected by Statute Law Revision Acts) contains certain general provisions for punishment of offences against its provisions, which are collected at the head of the titles. Larceny, Book II. Part I. chap. i. s. 1: Arson, Id., s. 6: Forgery, Id., s. 8: Murder, Id., chap. ii. s. 1: Part II. chap. i.: and Coinage Offences, Id., s. 5, post. The punishment of persons on a second or subsequent conviction is dealt with, post, Book II. Part V. and the punishment of habitual drunkards under the Inebriates Act, 1898, is dealt with, post, Book II. Part V.

The judgment or sentence of the court is given orally by the presiding judge, and a note thereof made on the indictment and in the calendar of the cases for trial, signed by the judge at the conclusion of the sittings of the court. By 14 H. 6, c. 1, justices of nisi prius are empowered to give judgment, and award execution on acquittal or conviction in treason and felony. A similar provision was contained in 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 70, s. 9 (rep.), as to giving judgment on trial of felony or misdemeanor, on a record of the court of King's Bench. Under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 29, courts of assize and the Central Criminal Court are parts of the High Court of Justice. R. v. Dudley, 16 Q. B. D. 273, 560; 1 Steph. Hist. Cr. L. 97: R. v. Parke [1903] 2 K. B. 432. Where, in a capital case at the assizes, judgment of death is respited, it may be given by the judges sitting on a subsequent commission of gaol delivery for the same jurisdiction. 1 Edw. 6, c. 7, s. 5.

Form of judgment.]—The judgment when pronounced is minuted on the indictment or in the books of the court; but a formal conviction is not usually drawn up except where the record is made up for the purposes of a writ of error. 1 Steph. Hist. Cr. L. 309. At common law in strictness a conviction consists of verdict, judgment and sentence. Burgess v. Boetefeur, 7 M. & G. 481; 13 L. J. (M. C.) 122; 8 Scott, N. R. 194; and cf. 1 Hale, 685: R. v. Kenworthy, 1 B. & C. 711. But in Jephson v. Barker, 3 Times L. R. 40, Stephen, J., held that an order made after a verdict of guilty, and that the prisoner should enter into recognizances to come up for judgment when called for, was a conviction within 25 G. 3, c. 36, s. 5. And for the purposes of the Criminal Law Consolidation Acts of 1861, "conviction" seems to mean plea or verdict of guilty. R. v. Blaby [1894] 2 Q. B. 170.

The form of judgment, on conviction, is as follows: "Wherefore all and singular the premises being seen and fully understood by the said court here, it is considered and adjudged by the said court here, that the said J. S., for the said offence be imprisoned," etc., etc., [as the case may be.] The form in case of an acquittal (or an allowance of a plea of pardon) is—"Whereupon all and singular the premises being seen and fully understood by the said court here, it is considered and adjudged by the said court here, that the said J. S. be discharged of the premises, and do depart hence without delay in this behalf." See Co. Ent. 356-390; Rast. Ent. 47, 51, etc.; 2 Hale, 392; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 719.

Where the judgment was, that the defendant, "for the felony, aforesaid," should be transported for ten years, and it appeared that the indictment contained two counts, the offence charged in the first count warranting a sentence of transportation for ten years, but the other not, this was held bad on error, "felony" not being nomen collectivum. Campbell v. R., 11 Q. B. 799, 814; 2 Cox, 463; 17 L. J. (M. C.) 89.

But "misdemeanor" is nomen collectivum: and therefore if an indictment for misdemeanor contains several counts, all of which are good in law, and all found by the jury to be proved, a judgment of transportation or imprisonment "for the misdemeanor aforesaid" is good. R. v. Powell, 2 B. & Ad. 75. See Ryalls v. R., 11 Q. B. 781, 795; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 69. But if any one count be bad, a general judgment against the defendant "for his offences aforesaid" is also bad. O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1; 11 Cl. & F. 155; 1 Cox, 413; 8 Eng. Rep. 1061: Gregory v. R., 15 Q. B. 974; 19 L. J. (Q. B.) 366: see ante, p. 92. The miscarriage of justice which arose in Campbell v. R. (supra), and O'Connell v. R. (supra), may be entirely avoided by the court passing a separate judgment upon each count, and it is now the practice to enter up judgment and sentence on each count on which the jury has given a verdict of guilty, so that if any count is found good on error, or a case reserved, the judgment thereon may stand. Holloway v. R., 17 Q. B. 317; 2 Den. 287: O'Connell v. R. 11 Cl. & F., at p. 377. It is not the law that, however many counts there may be, whether charging distinct offences or not, only one judgment can properly pass upon one indictment for misdemeanor, and it is not only allowable, but proper, and advisable for the reasons above mentioned, to pass a separate judgment upon each count. Castro v. R., 6 App. Cas. 229; 59 L. J. (Q. B.) 497. Errors of law and fact in the judgment as drawn up can be corrected. Boaler v. R., 57 L. J. (M. C.) 85: and see post, ch. viii. s. 2, "Writ of Error."

Commencement and termination of sentence.]—The sittings of a court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery or quarter sessions are for most purposes contemplated in law as one day; see Whitaker v. Wisbey, 6 Cox, 109. And the sentence runs from the first day of the sittings of the court of trial, unless otherwise ordered; R. v. Wilkes, 4 Bro. P. C. 367; 4 Burr. 2527: King v. R., 7 Q. B. 782; 14 L. J. (M. C.) 172, Ex. Ch.; and at quarter sessions from the day when it is pronounced, unless otherwise ordered. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 73, s. 12.

The Prison Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 41), s. 14, provides that "(1) In any sentence of imprisonment passed after the commencement of this Act [12th August, 1898], the word month shall, unless the contrary is expressed, be construed as meaning calendar month" (cf. 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 3, as to Acts passed since 1850); "(2) A prisoner whose term of imprisonment or penal servitude expires on any Sunday, Christmas Day, or Good Friday, shall be discharged on the day next preceding." The sentence is computed by including the day on which the sentence of imprisonment begins, and excluding the numerically corresponding day in the month in which the sentence expires. If there is no such day the imprisonment, subject to the above enactment, ends on the last day of the month. Migotti v. Colville, 4 C. P. D. 233; 48 L. J. (C. P.) 695; 14 Cox, 305. If a prisoner is detained beyond the term of imprisonment adjudged, the gaoler is liable to an action for false imprisonment. Id.; and see Mee v. Cruikshank, ante, p. 228.

Sentence for felony where convict is under previous sentence for another crime.]—"Wherever sentence shall be passed for felony on a person already imprisoned under sentence for another crime, it shall be lawful for the court to award imprisonment for the subsequent offence, to commence at the expiration of the imprisonment to which such person shall have been previously sentenced; and where such person shall be already under sentence, either of imprisonment or of transportation [penal servitude], the court if empowered to pass sentence of transportation [penal servitude], may award such sentence for the subsequent offence, to commence at the expiration of the imprisonment or transportation [penal servitude] to which such person shall have been previously sentenced, although the aggregate term of imprisonment or transportation [penal servitude] respectively may exceed the term for which either of those punishments could be otherwise awarded. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 10.

Concurrent or consecutive sentences.]—The court has power to direct that sentences for different offences shall run consecutively or concurrently, except in the case of conviction of a convict released on licence, for a fresh offence, in which case the new sentence must be consecutive on the remanet of the old sentence. R. v. King [1897] 1 Q. B. 214; 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 87; 18 Cox, 447, Hawkins, J.

So where a defendant is charged with several offences at the same time, of the same kind, he may be sentenced to several terms of imprisonment or penal servitude, one after the conclusion of the other. R. v. Rhenwick Williams, 1 Leach, 529, 536: R. v. Wilkes, 19 St. Tr. 1132: R. v. Cutbush, L. R. 2 Q. B. 379; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 70; 10 Cox, 489. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 10 (supra), relates only to cases where sentence is passed for felony, but the rule thus laid down by statute with regard to felony, also holds good at common law where sentence is passed for misdemeanor. R. v. Castro, 5 Q. B. D. 490: Castro v. R., 6 App. Cas. 229; 50 L. J. (Q. B.) 497; 14 Cox, 452. Therefore, upon an indictment for misdemeanor, containing two counts for distinct offences, the defendant, if found guilty on each count, may be sentenced to imprisonment or penal servitude for two consecutive terms of punishment, one in respect of each count, although the aggregate of the punishments may exceed the punishment allowed by law for one offence. Id. The judges, in answer to a general question by the House of Lords whether a sentence of imprisonment to commence from and after the termination of an imprisonment to which the defendant had been before sentenced for another offence, was good in law, replied that it was good. R. v. Wilkes, ubi supra. So also, where an indictment contained two counts for the misdemeanor of passing false coin, and the defendant was sentenced to two years' imprisonment, the judges held that this sentence was wrong, but they stated that a sentence of one year's imprisonment might have been passed for each offence, and that the commencement of the second might be postponed until the termination of the first. R. v. Robinson, 1 Mood. C. C. 413. Where an indictment for misdemeanor contained four counts, the third of which was held on error to be bad in substance, and the defendant, being convicted on the whole indictment, was sentenced to four successive terms of imprisonment, of equal duration, one on each count, it was held that the sentence on the fourth count was not invalidated by the insufficiency of the third count, and that the imprisonment on it was to be computed from the end of the imprisonment on the second count. Gregory v. R., 15 Q. B. 974; 19 L. J. (Q. B.) 366.

Punishments.

Death.

Judgment of death can now be awarded on a conviction on indictment only for four offences: viz. treason (post, Book II. Part II. ch. i. s. 1), murder (post, Book II. Part I. ch. ii. s. 1), offences against s. 2 of the Piracy Act, 1837 (7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 88), and offences against the Dockyards Protection Act, 1772 (12 G. 3, c. 24). The provisions of 2 G. 2, c. 25, s. 2, punishing with death as a felon persons who voluntarily escape or break prison, or return from transportation after sentence of transportation for perjury, though not expressly repealed, appear to be superseded by 5 G. 4, c. 84, s. 22, and 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 67. The provisions as to the execution of the sentence in cases of treason or murder are collected under "Treason" and "Murder," post. The treatment in prison of persons under sentence of death is regulated by the Local Prison Rules, 1899 (St. R. & O., No. 322), rr. 93–95.

4 G. 4, c. 48 (Judgment of Death Act, 1823), s. 1.]—"Whenever any person shall be convicted of any felony except murder and shall by law be excluded (sic) the benefit of clergy in respect thereof, and the court before which such offender shall be convicted shall be of opinion that, under the particular circumstances of the case, such offender is a fit and proper subject to be recommended for the royal mercy, it shall and may be lawful for such court, if it shall think fit so to do, to direct the proper officer then being present in court to require and ask, whereupon such officer shall require and ask, if such offender hath or knoweth anything to say why judgment of death should not be recorded against such offender; and in case such offender shall not allege any matter or thing sufficient in law to arrest or bar such judgment, the court shall and may, and is hereby authorized to abstain from pronouncing judgment of death upon such offender; and instead of pronouncing such judgment to order the same to be entered on record, and thereupon such proper officer as aforesaid shall and may, and is hereby authorized to enter judgment of death on record against such offender, in the usual and accustomed form, and in such and the same manner as is now used, and as if judgment of death had actually been pronounced in open court against such offender by the court before whom such offender shall have been convicted." By the Central Criminal Court Act, 1837 (7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 77, ss. 1, 3–7), the practice of that court was assimilated to that of other criminal courts: the report to the crown on capital sentences was abolished, and the practice of recording sentence of death made the same as in other courts under 4 G. 4, c. 48.

The only felonies to which 4 G. 4, c. 48, now applies are those under the Dockyards Protection Act, 1772 (12 G. 3, c. 24): and s. 2 of the Piracy Act, 1837 (7 W. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 88).

4 G. 4, c. 48, excepted murder from the cases in which death might be recorded, but by the effect of 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 30, s. 2 (now repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95), sentence of death might from 1836 until 1861 be recorded even in cases of murder. R. v. Hogg, 2 M. & Rob. 380, Denman, L.C.J. The Offences against the Person Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 2), directs that "upon every conviction for murder the court shall pronounce sentence of death."

As to sentence of death on pregnant women, see ante, p. 229.

Penal Servitude.

The Penal Servitude Act, 1853 (16 & 17 Vict. c. 99), introduced this punishment in lieu of transportation in certain cases and under certain regulations. Ss. 1–4 of that Act were repealed by the Penal Servitude Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 3), s. 1 (post, p. 235). By transportation was meant not the mere conveyance of the convict to the place to which he was ordered to be transported, but his remaining there during the currency of the sentence. Bullock v. Dodds, 2 B. & Ald. 258; 20 R. R. 420. Banishment beyond the seas, which could be imposed as a sentence on certain members of Romanist monastic orders, by 10 G. 4, c. 7, ss. 29, 34, was included in the Act of 1851 (see s. 15). Banishment was not a lawful punishment, except under the obsolete procedure of abjuring the realm or under statutory authority. See Countess of Portland v. Prodgers, 2 Vern. 104; 2 Hawk. c. 33, s. 137.

Penal servitude can be imposed only where specifically allowed by statute. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 8, provides "that every person convicted of any felony not punishable with death shall be punished in the manner prescribed by the statute or statutes specially relating to such felony; and that every person convicted of any felony, for which no punishment hath been, or hereafter may be specially provided, shall be deemed to be punishable under this Act, and shall be liable at the discretion of the court to be transported beyond the seas for the term of seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years" [now penal servitude for not more than seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment with or without hard labour for not more than two years: 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, s. 2; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, post, p. 235.]

The following enactments are all those authorizing and regulating sentences of penal servitude, which it appears necessary to set out here:—

16 & 17 Vict. c. 99 (Penal Servitude Act, 1853), s. 6—Place and mode of confinement of offenders sentenced to penal servitude—Hard labour.]—Every person who under this Act shall be sentenced or ordered to be kept in penal servitude may, during the term of the sentence or order, be confined in any such prison or place of confinement in any part of the United Kingdom, or in any river, port, or harbour of the United Kingdom, in which persons under sentence or order of transportation may now by law be confined, or in any other prison in the United Kingdom, or in any part of her majesty's dominions beyond the seas, or in any port or harbour thereof, as one of her majesty's principal secretaries of state may from time to time direct; and such person may during such term be kept to hard labour, and otherwise dealt with in all respects as persons sentenced to transportation may now by law be dealt with while so confined.

[As to the scope of this section, see R. v. Mount, L. R. 6 P. C. 283; and the Colonial Prisoners Removal Acts of 1869 and 1884 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 10; 47 & 48 Vict, c. 31); and the Orders in Council made under these Acts and published in Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 2, tit. "Colonial Prisoner."]

Sect. 7.—All Acts and provisions of Acts now applicable with respect to persons under sentence of transportation shall, so far as may be consistent with the express provisions of this Act, be considered to extend and be applicable to all persons under any sentence or order of penal servitude under this Act. . . . [The rest of the section deals with the appointment of convict prisons in England.]

Sect. 13.—Saves the prerogative of mercy.

Sect. 14.—Provided, also, that no thing herein contained shall interfere with or affect the authority or discretion of any court in respect of any punishment which such court may now award or pass on any offender other than transportation; but where such punishment may be awarded at the discretion of the court, instead of transportation or in addition thereto the same may be awarded instead of or (as the case may be) in addition to the punishment substituted for transportation under this Act.

20 & 21 Vict. (Penal Servitude Act, 1857), c. 3.]—Recites 16 & 17 Vict. c. 99, and (s. 1) repeals ss. 1, 2, 3, and 4 of the recited Act.

Sect. 2.—Penal servitude substituted for transportation.]—"No person shall be sentenced to transportation; and any person who, if this Act and the said Act had not been passed, might have been sentenced to transportation, shall be liable to be kept in penal servitude for a term of the same duration as the term of transportation to which such person would have been liable if the said Act and this Act had not been passed; and in every case where, at the discretion of the court, one of any two or more terms of transportation might have been awarded, the court shall have the like discretion to award one of any two or more of the terms of penal servitude which are hereby authorized to be awarded instead of such terms of transportation."

Sect. 3—Conveyance of convicts beyond the seas.]—"Any person under sentence or order of penal servitude may, during the term of the sentence or order, be conveyed to any place or places beyond the seas to which offenders under sentence or order of transportation may be conveyed, or to any place or places beyond the seas which may be hereafter appointed as herein mentioned; and all Acts and provisions now applicable to and for the removal and transportation of offenders under sentence or order of transportation to and from any places beyond the seas, and concerning their custody, management, and control, and the property in their services, and the punishment of such offenders if at large without lawful cause before the expiration of their sentence, and all other provisions now applicable to and in the case of persons under sentence or order of transportation, shall apply to and in the case of persons under sentence or order of penal servitude, as if they were persons under sentence or order of transportation."

Sect. 4.—Provides for the appointment of places beyond the seas to which persons under sentence of penal servitude may be conveyed. [This power has not been exercised.]

Sect. 6.—Construction of statutes referring to "transportation."]—"Where in any enactment now in force the expression "any crime punishable with transportation," or any expression of the like import, is used, the enactment shall be construed and take effect as applicable also to any crime punishable with penal servitude."

54 & 55 Vict. c. 69 (Penal Servitude Act, 1891), s. 1—Length of sentences of penal servitude and authorizing imprisonment in lieu thereof.]—"(1.) Where under any enactment in force when this section comes into operation [5th August, 1891] a court has power to award a sentence of penal servitude, the sentence may, at the discretion of the court, be for any period not less than three years, and not exceeding either five years, or any greater period authorized by the enactment. (2.) Where under any Act now in force or under any future Act a court is empowered or required to award a sentence of penal servitude, the court may in its discretion, unless such future Act otherwise provides, award imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. (3.) S. 2 of the Penal Servitude Act, 1864 [27 & 28 Vict. c. 47, s. 2], is hereby repealed with respect to any sentence awarded after the date at which this section comes into operation."

Note.—The Act of 1891 introduced some very important changes in the punishment of indictable offences, the main one being the abolition of the minimum sentence of five years' penal servitude introduced by 27 & 28 Vict. c. 47, s. 2 (rep.), and the substitution of a minimum sentence of three years' penal servitude. The last-named sentence was the minimum prescribed by the Criminal Law Consolidation Acts of 1861, with a single exception, viz., the minimum sentence of ten years' penal servitude for sodomy prescribed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 61. This exception was done away with by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, under which the minimum sentence of penal servitude for sodomy, as for other crimes, is now three years.

In some cases, as in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96 (Larceny Act), ss. 4 and 42, the only term of penal servitude prescribed by the original enactment was three years. This enactment so far as length of penal servitude was concerned was virtually repealed by 27 & 28 Vict. c. 47, s. 2 (rep.), but in such cases the court is now empowered by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-s. 1, to pass a sentence of penal servitude for not exceeding five years and not less than three years.

As an alternative sentence to that of penal servitude the Criminal Law Consolidation Acts of 1861 gave, again with a single exception, that of imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour. That exception occurred in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 61, to which we have already referred, the only punishment prescribed for the offence dealt with by that section being penal servitude for life or for not less than ten years, with no alternative of imprisonment. In this case the court has now power by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-s. 2, to impose as an alternative punishment to penal servitude imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour.

Excepting in the cases to which reference has already been made in this note, that is, cases in which the only sentence of penal servitude prescribed was three years, and the case of sodomy, the effect of 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, on the punishments prescribed by the Criminal Law Consolidation Acts of 1861, appears to be to restore them as they stood originally in those Acts. So much of those Acts, however, as authorized a minimum sentence of penal servitude of three years, or an alternative punishment of two years' imprisonment, with or without hard labour, or a sentence of penal servitude for three years only, or, as in the case of sodomy, a minimum sentence of ten years' penal servitude, has been expressly repealed by 55 & 56 Vict. c. 19 (Statute Law Revision Act, 1892). It becomes therefore necessary in every case where the Criminal Law Consolidation Acts of 1861 prescribe a sentence of penal servitude, to read into them the provisions of 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1. The editors have endeavoured to do this in describing the punishments for each offence.

Several statutes authorize a sentence of penal servitude, and as an alternative, imprisonment for terms exceeding two years—for examples see 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, s. 193 (Smuggling). By the Penal Servitude Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 69), s. 1, sub-s. 2 (ante, p. 235), the power to inflict an alternative sentence of imprisonment is now confined in all such cases to a term not exceeding two years. The discretion given by the sub-section seems to mean a discretion to substitute imprisonment for penal servitude, and the sub-section appears not to affect statutes under which imprisonment is not an alternative to penal servitude. The sub-section expressly excepts future Acts.

The mode of treatment of persons sentenced to penal servitude is regulated by the Convict Prison Rules, 1899 (Stat. Rules & Orders, 1899, No. 321).

Imprisonment.

(a) General Provisions.

Imprisonment without hard labour is a common-law punishment for misdemeanors, and is also, under many statutes, a substantive or alternative punishment for felony, and for many misdemeanors.

There is not at common law any limit to the term of imprisonment. Castro v. R., 5 Q. B. D. 490, 509, Bramwell, L.J.; 1 Stephen, Hist. Cr. L. 490; and see Re Forbes, 8 New South Wales Rep. (Law), 68, and 3 St. Tr., N. S. 1353, Appendix H. The ordinary statutory maximum term of imprisonment is two years (see 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, ante, p. 235), and in practice this is not exceeded even in the case of offences to which it has not been specifically applied.

Certain Acts which do not authorize penal servitude but authorize imprisonment for three or more years, e.g., 9 W. 3, c. 35, s. 1 (blasphemy); 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 3 (threats to publish libel), appear not to be affected by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, p. 235).

The mode of treatment of prisoners sentenced to imprisonment is regulated by the Local Prison Rules, 1899 (St. R. & O., 1899, No. 322).

(b) Solitary Confinement.

The power of courts of justice in England to impose the punishment of solitary confinement has been taken away by the repeal of the enactments conferring it; see 56 & 57 Vict. c. 54 (S. L. R.). For some time before 1893 solitary confinement was very rarely, if ever, imposed by a criminal court as part of its sentence. This probably arose from the fact that criminal prisoners when consigned to gaol were subjected to a confinement, which, if not in name, was in effect almost solitary, under the Prison Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 126), s. 17, sub-s. 5:—"In a prison where criminal prisoners are confined, such prisoners shall be prevented from holding any communication with each other, either by every prisoner being kept in a separate cell by day and by night, except when he is at chapel or taking exercise, or by every prisoner being confined by night to his cell and being subjected to such superintendence during the day as will, consistently with the provisions of this Act, prevent his communicating with any other prisoner."

This enactment was repealed by s. 15 (2) of the Prison Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 41), on the coming into force (on May 1st, 1899), of the Local Prison Rules, 1899, made and approved by parliament under s. 4 of that Act, and the separate confinement of prisoners is now regulated by these rules, for which see Statutory Rules and Orders, Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 10, tit. "Prison, E.," pp. 6, 77.

(c) Imprisonment with Hard Labour.

Imprisonment with hard labour can be imposed only under statutory authority. See 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, p. 235), and the particular enactment dealing with the offence in question.

Imprisonment with hard labour for not over two years can be imposed instead of penal servitude. 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (2) (ante, p. 235), and also for the following misdemeanors:—

3 G. 4, c. 114 (Hard Labour Act, 1822.]—Recites 56 G. 3, c. 162, and enacts, that "whenever any person shall be convicted of any of the offences thereafter specified and set forth: that is to say, . . . any attempt to commit felony; any riot, . . . keeping a common gaming-house, a common bawdy-house, or a common ill-governed and disorderly house; wilful and corrupt perjury, or of subornation of perjury; . . . in each and every of the above cases, and whenever any person shall be convicted of any or either of the aforesaid offences, it shall and may be lawful for the court before which any such offender shall be convicted, or which by law is authorized to pass sentence upon any such offender, to award and order (if such court shall think fit) sentence of imprisonment with hard labour, for any term not exceeding the term for which such court may now imprison for such offences, either in addition to or in lieu of any other punishment which may be inflicted on any such offenders by any law in force before the passing of this Act; and every such offender shall thereupon suffer such sentence, in such place, and for such time as aforesaid, as such court shall think fit to direct."

14 & 15 Vict. c. 100 (Criminal Procedure Act, 1851), s. 29.]—"Whenever any person shall be convicted of any one of the offences following, as an indictable misdemeanor; that is to say, any cheat or fraud punishable at common law; any conspiracy to cheat or defraud, or to extort money or goods, or falsely to accuse of any crime, or to obstruct, prevent, pervert, or defeat the course of public justice; any escape or rescue from lawful custody on a criminal charge; any public and indecent exposure of the person; . . . any public selling, or exposing for public sale or to public view, of any obscene book, print, picture, or other indecent exhibition; it shall be lawful for the court to sentence the offender to be imprisoned for any term now warranted by law, and also to be kept to hard labour during the whole or any part of such term of imprisonment." This enactment does not extend to common law forgery. R. v. Hamilton [1901] 1 K. B. 740; 70 L. J., K. B. 480: 65 J. P. 265, 19 Cox, 675.

The nature of the labour to be performed under a sentence of imprisonment with hard labour is prescribed by the Local Prison Rules, 1899 (St. R. & O. 1899, No. 322), rr. 39, 42, 44.

Imprisonment without hard labour was substituted in 1816 (56 G. 3, c. 138, s. 2) as a punishment for the pillory. And that mode of punishment was last inflicted in 1830, and was wholly abolished by 7 W. 4, & 1 Vict. c. 23.

Imprisonment without hard labour can be imposed for any common law misdemeanor not subjected to special statutory punishment: and, in cases within 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (2) (ante, p. 235), may be imposed as an alternative to penal servitude.

The common-law rules as to imprisonment without hard labour are modified by the following statutory provisions:—

40 & 41 Vict. c. 21 (Prison Act, 1877), s. 40.]—"The Prison Commissioners shall see that any prisoner under sentence inflicted on conviction for sedition or seditious libel shall be treated as a misdemeanant of the first division, within the meaning of s. 67 of the Prison Act, 1865 (see post, p. 239) notwithstanding any statute, provision, or rule to the contrary."

Sect. 41.—"Any person who shall be imprisoned under any rule, order or attachment" [but not on judgment on conviction on indictment] "for contempt of any court shall be in like manner treated as a misdemeanant of the first division, within the meaning of the said section of the said Act."

61 & 62 Vict. c. 41 (Prison Act, 1898), s. 6.]—"(1.) Prisoners convicted of offences either on indictment or otherwise, and not sentenced to penal servitude or hard labour, shall be divided into three divisions.

"(2.) Where a person is convicted by any court of an offence and is sentenced to imprisonment without hard labour, the court may, if it thinks fit, having regard to the nature of the offence and the antecedents of the offender, direct that he be treated as an offender of the first division or as an offender of the second division. If no direction is given by the court, the offender shall, subject to the provisions of this section, be treated as an offender of the third division.

"(4.) Any person imprisoned for default of entering into a recognizance or finding sureties to keep the peace, or for being of good behaviour, shall be treated under the same rules as an offender of the second division, unless he is a convicted prisoner, or unless the court direct that he be treated under the same rules as an offender of the first division.

"(5.) References in ss. 40 and 41 of the Prison Act, 1877 (supra, 40 & 41 Vict. c. 21), to a misdemeanant of the first division within the meaning of s. 67 of the Prison Act, 1865, shall be construed as references to an offender of the first division within the meaning of this section."

[The classification and treatment of persons under this section is regulated by the Local Prison Rules, 1899, Parts III., IV., and V. (Stat. Rules & Orders, 1899, No. 322). By the effect of s. 15 (2) of the Prison Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 41), s. 67 of the Prison Act, 1865, was repealed on May 1, 1899, on the coming into operation of the Local Prison Rules, 1899, No. 322), made under ss. 2, 6, of the Act of 1898.]

Whipping.

Whipping was one of the ordinary common-law punishments for misdemeanors committed by persons of either sex, but is not now in practice inflicted except under statutory authority. In 1820 it was made illegal to whip females, and imprisonment was substituted. 1 G. 4, c. 57.

Of adult males.]—The power of whipping males for felony given by 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 8, was repealed by 51 & 52 Vict. c. 57 (S. L. R.), but the whipping of adult males is still authorized by statute in the following cases: on the sentence of incorrigible rogues at quarter sessions, 5 G. 4, c. 83, s. 10; on conviction of offences against the person of the Sovereign under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, s. 2 (see R. v. O'Connor, 7 St. Tr., N. S. 3 & n.); on conviction of offences against s. 43 of the Larceny Act, 1861, or s. 21 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861. The offences in question are robbery under arms, assault under arms with intent to rob, robbery or assault with intent to rob by a gang, or robbery with violence; and attempting by any means whatever to choke, strangle, or suffocate any person, or any of such cases; or attempting to render any person insensible, unconscious, or incapable of resistance by any means calculated to choke, suffocate, or strangle such person with intent in any of such cases thereby to enable himself or any person to commit, or with intent in any of such cases to assist another in committing any indictable offence (26 & 27 Vict. c. 44). Whipping has been awarded for use of the violence indicated, with intent to commit rape. R. v. Smallbones, Hants Winter Assizes [1898], 33 L. J. Newsp. 124. On conviction of a male person of offences under either of these sections:—"The court before whom he is convicted may, in addition to the punishment awarded by the said sections, or any part thereof, direct that the offender, if a male, be once, twice, or thrice privately whipped, subject to the following provisions: 1. That in the case of an offender whose age does not exceed sixteen years, the number of strokes at each whipping do not exceed twenty-five, and the instrument used shall be a birch rod: 2. That in the case of any other male offender the number of strokes do not exceed fifty at each such whipping: 3. That in each case the court in its sentence shall specify the number of strokes to be inflicted, and the instrument to be used: provided that in no case shall such whipping take place after the expiration of six months from the passing of the sentence: provided also, that every such whipping to be inflicted on any person sentenced to penal servitude shall be inflicted on him before he shall be removed to a convict prison with a view to his undergoing his sentence of penal servitude." 26 & 27 Vict. c. 44, s. 1 (Garrotters Act, 1862).

Of youthful male offenders.]—Males under sixteen may be sentenced to whipping on conviction under many sections of the Larceny Act, 1861, the Malicious Damage Act, 1861, and the Offences against the Person Act, 1861, and under s. 4 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885. The mode of adjudging the sentences on conviction on indictment is prescribed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 119; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 75; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 70. As to whipping offenders on summary conviction for indictable offences, see Stone, Justices' Manual (36th ed.).

Of prisoners.]—Prisoners in any convict or local prison may not now be flogged for offences committed against prison discipline except under the provisions of s. 5 of the Prison Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 41), and of the Convict Prison Rules, 1899, rr. 82-85, and the Local Prison Rules, 1899, rr. 88-91, Stat. R. & O. Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 10, tit. "Prison, E."

Fine.

Treason and felony.]—At common law a fine was rarely, if ever, imposed on conviction of treason or felony. Its place was taken by the forfeiture on conviction and attainder, abolished in 1873 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 1, post, p. 244). The Criminal Law Consolidation Acts of 1861 do not contain any powers to inflict a fine on conviction of felony (except in the case of manslaughter), 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 5; nor is such a fine now ever inflicted without statutory authority.

Misdemeanor.]—At common law the court may impose as part or the whole of a sentence for misdemeanor, a fine or ransom, i.e., a pecuniary penalty, or pecuniary forfeiture. There is no general statutory limit to the amount of such fine, except the provisions of Magna Charta, 25 Edw. 1, c. 14, and the Bill of Rights (1 W. & M.), sess. 2, c. 2, against excessive and unreasonable fines and assessments; and see 1 Steph. Hist. Cr. L. 490: Re Forbes, 8 N. S. W. Rep. (Law), 68. A married woman could not be fined for misdemeanor at common law: R. v. Thomas, cas. (K. B.) temp. Hard. 278; but since the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75), there seems no reason why she should not be fined, if she has separate estate not subject to restraint on anticipation.

The Criminal Law Consolidation Acts of 1861 all contain a discretionary power to fine for misdemeanors within the Acts. Reference should be made to the particular enactment, post, creating a misdemeanor, or fixing its punishment.

Recognizances.

Felony.]—A person convicted of any felony within the Criminal Law Consolidation Acts of 1861 (except murder), may, if the court think fit, be required, in addition to any other punishment, to enter into his own recognizances, with or without sureties, to keep the peace, and on failure to find sureties may be imprisoned for not over a year. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96 (Larceny), s. 117: c. 97 (Malicious Damage), s. 73: c. 98 (Forgery), s. 51: c. 99 (Coinage Offences), s. 38: c. 100 (Offences against the Person), s. 71.

Misdemeanor.]—A person convicted of any misdemeanor, whether at common law or by statute, may, in addition to, or in substitution for any other punishment, be required to enter into a recognizance, with or without sureties, to keep the peace and be of good behaviour for a reasonable time to be specified in the order; R. v. Dunn, 12 Q. B. 1026, 1031, 1041, n.; Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 234; and in cases within the Criminal Law Consolidation Acts of 1861 (see the sections above quoted), may, in default of sureties, be imprisoned for not over one year. For the enactments, see the particular titles. A married woman may be required to find sureties: 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.), 66 n. Where such an order is made, it usually prescribes imprisonment until the recognizances are entered into. Where the conditions of such recognizances are broken, the recognizance may be estreated. See C. O. R., ss. 124, 126; Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 424, and ante, p. 117, et seq.

Punishment of First Offenders.

See post, p. 243.

Punishment of Youthful Offenders.

As to whipping of youthful offenders.]—See ante, p. 240.

As to treatment of youthful offenders in prison.]—See Part VII. of the Local Prison Rules, 1899 (St. R. & O., 1899, No. 322).

29 & 30 Vict. c. 118 (Industrial Schools Act, 1866), s. 15].—Where a child, apparently under the age of twelve years, is charged before two justices or a magistrate with an offence punishable by imprisonment or a less punishment, but has not been in England convicted of felony, or in Scotland of theft, and the child ought in the opinion of the justices or magistrate (regard being had to his age and the circumstances of the case) to be dealt with under this Act, the justices or magistrate may order him to be sent to a certified industrial school.

1 Edw. 7, c. 20 (Youthful Offenders Act, 1901) s. 5.] A court of assize or quarter sessions may exercise the like power of committing a child to an industrial school as may be exercised by two justices or a magistrate under s. 15 of the Industrial Schools Act, 1866 (q.v. supra), and the provisions of that Act shall be construed accordingly. [By "child" is meant a person who in the opinion of the court before whom he is brought is under the age of 12 years (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 49: 1 Edw. 7, c. 20, s. 11)].

56 & 57 Vict. c. 48 (Reformatory Schools Act, 1893), s. 1.]—"Where a youthful offender who, in the opinion of the court before whom he is charged is less than 16 years of age, is convicted whether on indictment or by a court of summary jurisdiction of an offence punishable with penal servitude or imprisonment, and either (a) appears to the court to be not less than 12 years of age; or, (b) is proved to have been previously convicted of an offence punishable with penal servitude or imprisonment, the court may, in addition to or in lieu of sentencing him according to law to any punishment, order that he be sent to a certified reformatory school, and be there detained for a period of not less than three and not more than five years, so, however, that the period is such as will in the opinion of the court, expire at or before the time at which the offender will attain the age of 19 years." See proviso, 62 & 63 Vict. c. 12, infra.

Sect. 4.]—Repeals the first part of 29 & 30 Vict. c. 117, s. 14, omitted below, and substitutes for it the above provisions.

29 & 30 Vict. c. 117 (Reformatory Schools Act, 1866), s. 14.]—"The particular school to which the youthful offender is to be sent, may be named either at the time of his sentence being passed, or within seven days thereafter by the court justices or magistrate who sentenced him, or in default thereof at any time before the expiration of his imprisonment by any visiting justice of the prison to which he is committed. In choosing a certified reformatory school, the court justices, magistrate or visiting justices, shall endeavour to ascertain the religious persuasion to which the youthful offender belongs, and as far as possible a selection shall be made of a school conducted in accordance with the religious persuasion to which the youthful offender appears to the court, justices, magistrate, or visiting justice to belong, which religious persuasion shall be specified by the court justices, magistrate, or visiting justice. . . ."

Sect. 15.]—Provision for delivery of the offender to the superintendent of the reformatory by the gaoler, and with the warrant or order of detention, possession whereof by the superintendent, &c., to be sufficient authority for detention.

56 & 57 Vict. c. 48, s. 2.]—"Without prejudice to any other powers of the court, the court may direct that the offender be taken to a prison, or to any other place not being a prison, which the court thinks fit, and the occupier of which is willing to receive him, and be detained there for any time not exceeding seven days, or in case of necessity for a period not exceeding fourteen days, or until an order is sooner made for his discharge, or for his being sent to a reformatory school, or otherwise dealt with under this or any other Act; and the person to whom the order is addressed is hereby empowered and required to detain him accordingly: and if the offender escapes he may be apprehended without warrant and brought back to his place of detention."

62 & 63 Vict. c. 12 (Reformatory Schools Act, 1899), s. 1.]—The Reformatory Schools Act, 1893, shall be read and have effect as if the following proviso were added at the end of s. 1, that is to say, "provided that when the offender is ordered to be sent to a certified reformatory school, he shall not in addition be sentenced to penal servitude or imprisonment."

Postponing or mitigating Punishment.

Binding over to come up for judgment.]—Instead of imposing any of the punishments above described the court may, except in the case of murder, require the convicted person to enter into recognizances with or without sureties to come up for judgment when called upon.

This course may be adopted (1) when a case is reserved for the consideration of the Court of Crown Cases Reserved. See 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, s. 1, post, p. 271): and R. v. Hamilton [1899] 12 Manitoba, 507; (2) in cases within the Probation of First Offenders Act, 1887 (infra), or in any other case where the circumstances of the case make such a course expedient in the interests of justice. It is not unusual also to require the defendant to enter into recognizances in the mean time to keep the peace and be of good behaviour.

At common law an order of this kind is a substitute for punishment by stay of judgment, and not a judgment of the Court. Burgess v. Boetefeur, ante, p. 230.

Where no time is specified for coming up for judgment, and it is proposed to bring the defendant up for judgment, a notice must be given to him and to his bail, which in the King's Bench Division is a four days' notice. R. v. Chichester, 17 Q. B. 804, n.: R. v. Williams, 18 W. R. 806: Short v. Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 231, 640. If he does not appear, a capias is issued, and if he cannot be found, proceedings for outlawry may be taken. The recognizance may also be estreated by order of the court. See Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 231. In a Canadian case, R. v. Young [1901] 2 Ontario L. R. 228, it has been held that it is for the crown and not for a private prosecutor to take action in such cases.

Release on probation.]—The Probation of First Offenders Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 25). After reciting that it is expedient to make provision for cases where the reformation of persons convicted of first offences may, by reason of the offender's youth or the trivial nature of the offence, be brought about without imprisonment, enacts as follows:—

Sect. 1.]—(1) In any case in which a person is convicted of larceny or false pretences, or any other offence punishable with not more than two years' imprisonment before any court, and no previous conviction is proved against him, if it appears to the court before whom he is so convicted that, regard being had to the youth, character, and antecedents of the offender, to the trivial nature of the offence, and to any extenuating circumstances under which the offence was committed (see 56 J. P. 330), it is expedient that the offender be released on probation of good conduct, the court may, instead of sentencing him at once to any punishment, direct that he be released on his entering into a recognizance, with or without sureties, and during such period as the court may direct, to appear and receive judgment when called upon, and in the meantime to keep the peace and be of good behaviour. (2) The court may, if it thinks fit, direct that the offender shall pay the costs of the prosecution, or some portion of the same, within such period and by such instalments as may be directed by the court.

Sect. 2.]—(1) If a court having power to deal with the offender in respect of his original offence, or any court of summary jurisdiction, is satisfied by information on oath that the offender has failed to observe any of the conditions of his recognizance, it may issue a warrant for his apprehension.

(2) An offender when apprehended on any such warrant shall, if not brought forthwith before the court having power to sentence him, be brought before a court of summary jurisdiction, and that court may either remand him by warrant until the time at which he was required by his recognizance to appear for judgment, or until the sitting of a court having power to deal with his original offence, or may admit him to bail with a sufficient surety conditioned on his appearing for judgment.

(3) The offender when so remanded may be committed to a prison either in the county in or for which the court remanding him acts, or for the county or place where he is bound to appear for judgment, and the warrant of remand shall order that he be brought before the court before which he was bound to appear for judgment, or answer as to his conduct since his release.

Sect. 3.]—The court, before directing the release of an offender under this Act, shall be satisfied that the offender or his surety has a fixed place of abode or regular occupation in the county or place for which the court acts, or in which the offender is likely to live during the period named for the observance of the conditions.

Sect. 4.]—In this Act the term "court" includes a court of summary jurisdiction.

Note.]—This statute does not give courts of record in England any jurisdiction which they had not already. Vide supra, and see 32 L. J. Newsp. 538, for the reasons which have led such courts rarely to use the Act. As to indictable offences tried summarily, see s. 16 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49); and s. 1 of the Youthful Offenders Act, 1901 (1 Edw. 7, c. 20), post, p. 245.

Commutation of Sentence.

7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 13.]—"Where the King's Majesty should be pleased to extend his royal mercy to any offender convicted of any felony punishable with death or otherwise, and by warrant under his royal sign manual countersigned by one of his principal secretaries of state shall grant to such offender either a free or a conditional pardon, the discharge of such offender out of custody in the case of a free pardon, and the performance of the condition in the case of a conditional pardon shall have the effect of a pardon under the great seal for such offender as to the felony for which such pardon shall be so granted: Provided always that no free pardon nor any such discharge in consequence thereof, nor any conditional pardon, or the performance of the condition thereof in any of the cases aforesaid shall prevent or mitigate the punishment to which the offender might otherwise be lawfully sentenced on a subsequent conviction for any felony committed after the granting of any such pardon." Cf. 9 G. 4, c. 54, s. 33 (I.). [Where a pardon is granted conditional on imprisonment for a term, the procedure for giving effect to the condition is prescribed by 11 G. 4, & 1 W. 4, c. 39, s. 7, and where after sentence of death a pardon is granted conditional on penal servitude, the enforcement of the condition is regulated by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 99, s. 5, ante, p. 178. As to the effect of pardon, see R. v. Beacall, 1 C. & P. 456, n.

Forfeitures and Disqualifications consequent on Conviction.

33 & 34 Vict. c. 23 (Forfeitures), s. 1.]—"No confession, verdict, inquest, conviction, or judgment of or for any treason or felony or felo de se shall cause any attainder or corruption of blood, or any forfeiture (which word by s. 5 of the same statute does not include any fine or penalty imposed on any convict by virtue of his sentence), or escheat; provided that nothing in this Act shall affect the law of forfeiture consequent upon outlawry." [The Act also contains provisions with reference to the property of convicts, i.e., persons "against whom judgment of death, or of penal servitude, shall have been pronounced or recorded by any court of competent jurisdiction in England, Wales, or Ireland, upon any charge of treason or felony" (s. 6). The object of these provisions appears to be to provide for the payment out of such property of all just claims upon it, and, while placing it out of the power of the convict during the continuance of his sentence, to provide for its management and to secure its eventual return to himself or to his representatives. See Carr v. Anderson [1903] 1 Ch. 90, 2 Ch. 279.]

33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 2. Effect of conviction for treason or felony on capacity for holding office, etc., and exercising certain civil rights.]—"If any person hereafter (i.e., after 4th July, 1870) convicted of treason or felony, for which he shall be sentenced to death, or penal servitude, or any term of imprisonment with hard labour, or exceeding twelve months, shall at the time of such conviction hold any military or naval office, or any civil office under the crown or other public employment, or any ecclesiastical benefice, or any place, office, or emolument in any university, college, or other corporation, or be entitled to any pension or superannuation allowance, payable by the public, or out of any public fund, such office, benefice, employment, or place, shall forthwith become vacant, and such pension or superannuation allowance or emolument shall forthwith determine and cease to be payable, unless such person shall receive a free pardon from his Majesty, within two months after such conviction, or before the filling up of such office, benefice, employment or place, if given at a later period; and such person shall become and (until he shall have suffered the punishment to which he had been sentenced, or such other punishment as by competent authority may be substituted for the same, or shall receive a free pardon from his Majesty) shall continue thenceforth incapable of holding any military or naval office, or any civil office under the crown, or other public employment, or any ecclesiastical benefice, or of being elected or sitting or voting as a member of either house of parliament, or of exercising any right of suffrage or other parliamentary or municipal franchise whatever within England, Wales, or Ireland." [Many other disqualifications for particular offices are created by conviction of crime. See Official Index to Statutes (ed. 1904), tit. "Disqualification." As to what is "crime," see Conybeare v. London School Board [1891] 1 Q. B. 118.]

1 Edw. 7, c. 20 (Youthful Offenders Act, 1901), s. 1.]—"Where a child or young person having been convicted of felony is discharged in accordance with s. 16 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, or the Probation of First Offenders Act, 1887 (ante, p. 243), or is punished with whipping only, the conviction shall not be regarded as a conviction of felony for the purposes of s. 15 of the Industrial Schools Act, 1866 (ante, p. 241), or of any disqualification attaching to felony." [By "young person" is meant a person who in the opinion of the court before whom he is brought is of the age of 12 years and under the age of 16 years (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 49: 1 Edw. 7, c. 20, s. 11). As to the meaning of "child," see ante, p. 241].

9 G. 4, c. 32, s. 3. Effect of endurance of punishment for felony.]—"And whereas it is expedient to prevent all doubts respecting the civil rights of persons convicted of felonies not capital, who have undergone the punishment to which they were adjudged: Be it therefore enacted that where any offender hath been or shall be convicted of any felony not punishable with death, and hath endured or shall endure the punishment to which such offender hath been or shall be adjudged for the same, the punishment so endured shall have the like effect and consequences as a pardon under the great seal as to the felony whereof the offender was so convicted. Provided always, that nothing herein contained nor the enduring of such punishment shall prevent or mitigate any punishment to which the offender might otherwise be lawfully sentenced on a subsequent conviction for any other felony." [See ante, p. 178, and Hay v. Tower Division Justices, 24 Q. B. D. 561.]

CHAPTER VI.

COSTS AND REWARDS.

SECT. 1. Costs payable out of public funds, p. 246.
2. Costs payable by the prosecutor, p. 259.
3. Costs payable by the defendant, p. 259.
4. Rewards, p. 261.

SECT. 1.

Costs payable out of Public Funds.

AT common law the crown neither pays nor receives costs: and all the provisions as to payment of costs in criminal cases rest upon statute. 25 G. 2, c. 36, and 27 G. 2, c. 3, authorized payment out of the county rates of the costs of prosecution for felony in the event of conviction. 18 G. 3, c. 19, extended the power to award costs to cases of acquittal where the prosecution was properly instituted, and to witnesses attending on recognizance or subpœna, and see 58 G. 3, c. 70. These Acts were repealed and consolidated by 7 G. 4, c. 64 (ss. 22–25, on which, as subsequently amended, the law as to costs in criminal cases now rests. For the history of this subject, see Parl. Pap. 1903, c. 1650, 1651.

Costs of prosecution when allowable.]—Courts competent to try indictments may order payment to the prosecutor of the costs and expenses of preferring an indictment, and to the prosecutor and to the witnesses for the prosecution if they appear on recognizance or subpœna in the case of the following offences:—

1. Any felony (except treason felony: 11 & 12 Vict. c. 12, s. 10), and subject in the case of coinage offences to the provisions of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 42, infra, p. 248.

And the following misdemeanors (except where otherwise stated the misdemeanor is named in 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 23):—

2. "Assault with intent to commit felony."
3. "Attempt to commit felony."
4. "Conspiring to commit felony" (14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 2).
5. "Conspiring to charge any person with any felony, or to indict any person of any felony" (Id.).
6. "Riot."
7. "Assault upon a peace officer [or upon a workhouse officer or relieving officer, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 101, s. 9] in the execution of his duty, or upon persons acting in aid of such officer."
8. "Neglect or breach of duty as a peace officer" (and see 5 G. 4, c. 83, s. 12).
9. "Assault committed in pursuance of any conspiracy to raise the rate of wages" (see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 41 (rep.); 34 & 35 Vict. c. 32, s. 7 (rep.), and 38 & 39 Vict. c. 86).

10. "Any misdemeanor for receiving any stolen property knowing the same to have been stolen" (see now 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 77).

11. "Knowingly and designedly obtaining any property by false pretences" (see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 88, 117), including winning money by cheating at cards (8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 17: R. v. Gardner, 5 Cox, 140).

12. "Wilful and indecent exposure of the person" (cf. 5 G. 4, c. 83, s. 4, and R. v. John, 7 L. J. (M. C.) 92; S. C. Anon, 8 A. & E. 589) and "indecent assault" (48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 18).

13. "Wilful and corrupt perjury and subornation of perjury."

14. "Unlawfully taking or causing to be taken any unmarried girl, being under the age of sixteen years, out of the possession and against the will of her father or mother, or of any other person having the lawful care or charge of her" (14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 2; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 55, 77).

And indictable misdemeanors against the following Acts:—

15. The Prevention of Offences Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 19, s. 14).

16. The Criminal Law Consolidation Acts of 1861, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 8 (Accessories and abettors), 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 121 (Larceny), including it would seem misdemeanors under Acts to be read as one with the Larceny Act, viz., 31 & 32 Vict. c. 116; 38 & 39 Vict. c. 24, s. 3; 59 & 60 Vict. c. 52; 1 Edw. 7, c. 10; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 77 (Malicious Damage), c. 98, s. 54 (forgery), c. 99, s. 42 (Coinage offences): in case a conviction takes place, see infra, p. 248); c. 100, s. 77 (Offences against the person) including common assault: R. v. Waldron, 18 Cox, 373.

17. The Debtors Act, 1869, as amended by the Bankruptcy Acts, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 163), and 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 71, s. 26), where a prosecution has been ordered by a court having bankruptcy jurisdiction, see 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 17.

18. Forgery, etc., under s. 17 of the Sea Fisheries Act, 1883, if prosecuted on indictment (46 & 47 Vict. c. 22, s. 17).

19. The Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 18).

20. The Official Secrets Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 52, s. 4).

24. Corrupt practices (including personation) at or in connexion with a parliamentary or municipal election, including elections under the Local Government Acts of 1888 & 1894: 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, ss. 10, 13: 35 & 36 Vict. c. 33, s. 24: 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51, s. 53, sub-s. 1, s. 57, sub-s. 2: 47 & 48 Vict. c. 70, s. 30: 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 75: 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, s. 48: 62 & 63 Vict. c. 14. 35 & 36 Vict. c. 33, s. 24, is temp. but continued annually by the Expiring Laws Continuance Act. The costs are not to be allowed on a private prosecution unless the prosecutor has entered into a recognizance in the form prescribed in 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, s. 13.

25. Offences summarily punishable with more than three months' imprisonment which are tried on indictment at the election of the accused made under 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 17 (1) (a).

26. Offences tried on indictment under the Inebriates Act, 1898, s. 2 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 60); see Inebriates Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 35), s. 1.

(a) It is submitted that this enactment does not apply to cases where the defendant elects under the provisions of another Act to be tried on indictment, eg., the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 28), as s. 14 of that Act makes specific provision with costs; and the Conspiracy and Protection of Property Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 86), s. 9 of which is silent as to costs.

Discretion of the Court.]—The power to award costs in all these cases is discretionary, and in frivolous prosecutions the court can disallow costs even where there has been a committal. R. v. Powell, 1 C. & P. 96: R. v. Rawson, 2 B. & C. 598: 4 D. & R. 124. The discretion is, however, subject to the following limitations. Where a prosecution for perjury is ordered by a court or officer competent to make the order, the costs of the prosecution are to be allowed by the court of trial, unless the latter specially otherwise direct. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 19. In prosecutions under the Debtors Act (ante, No. 17), under the order of a court having bankruptcy jurisdiction, the costs seem to be allowable as of right on production of the order for prosecution. 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 17. Where a prosecution for any offence under the Coinage Offence Act, 1861, is conducted under the direction of the Solicitor to the Treasury, the court must allow the costs. On a private prosecution for such offence the court may not allow the costs unless a conviction takes place. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 42. On prosecution for felony it has been held that costs may be allowed, though neither prosecutor nor his witnesses appear on subpœna or recognizance. R. v. Butterwick, 2 M. & Rob. 196. In misdemeanors it would seem that the prosecutor will not get his costs as a prosecutor unless bound over to prosecute or under subpœnâ. See R. v. Jeyes, 3 A. & E. 416: R. v. Sheering, 7 C. & P. 440. The costs may be allowed at assizes where the prosecutor has been bound over by the quarter sessions to prosecute at the assizes. R. v. Paine, 7 C. & P. 135. As to indictments tried in the King's Bench Division or Central Criminal Court, see post, p. 257, 258.

Costs may be awarded when the prosecutor or witnesses have bonâ fide attended on recognizance or subpœna where no bill is preferred; 7 G. 4, c. 64, ss. 22, 23; and where the accused has been by mistake discharged on proclamation; R. v. Robey, 5 C. & P. 552; and where the recognizances are to prosecute for felony, and then on the advice of counsel the bill is sent up for a misdemeanor on which costs cannot be allowed. R. v. Hanson, 2 C. & K. 912.

As a general rule the costs are not allowed until after the trial has actually taken place; but this rule, which, if strictly carried out, would often work grievous hardship, is by no means inflexibly followed. In R. v. Hunter, 3 C. & P. 591 and Re Young, 2 Cox, 280, interlocutory orders for costs were refused where the trial was postponed. In R. v. Flannery [1832] 1 Lewin, 133, Alderson, B., allowed the costs where a trial was postponed for non-appearance by the defendant who was not under recognizance, and in R. v. Bolam, Roscoe, Cr. Ev. (12th ed.), 24, the same judge made a similar order where a trial for murder was postponed on the application of the defendant. In R. v. Dwerryhouse, 2 Cox, 446, and R. v. Dooley [1871] 12 Cox, 623, n., similar orders were made where the defendant was in an asylum and hopelessly insane; and in R. v. Wilson, 12 Cox, 622, Lush, J. allowed the costs up to postponement where it was due to the illness of an essential witness for the crown.

It sometimes happens at the trial that two distinct prosecutors appear, each having instructed and appearing by separate counsel, and each claiming as against the other to conduct the prosecution and to be entitled to the costs, one of such prosecutors being a police officer or other official person bound over to prosecute by the committing magistrate, and the other of such prosecutors being the person injured by the alleged crime. See R. v. Yates, 7 Cox, 361, and R. v. Bushell, 16 Cox, 367.

What costs and expenses may be allowed.]—The costs allowable are: (1) The costs and expenses which the prosecutor incurs in preferring the indictment, including the costs of solicitor and counsel, post, p. 254.

(2) A sum reasonable and sufficient in the opinion of the court to reimburse the prosecutor and witnesses for the expenses severally incurred by them in attending before the examining magistrate and the grand jury, and in otherwise carrying on the prosecution, and to compensate them for their trouble and loss of time therein. 7 G. 4, c. 64, ss. 22, 23. These do not include costs of witnesses attending before a coroner on an inquiry previous to the indictment, nor of an autopsy directed by the coroner. R. v. Rees, 5 C. & P. 302: R. v. Taylor, Id. 301; nor the costs of a gaoler in taking a prisoner to the county assizes. R. v. Waters, 8 Cox, 350; nor the costs of obtaining the arrest of a prisoner who flies from the realm. R. v. Barrett, 6 Cox, 78; but have been held to include the cost of getting up evidence. R. v. Lewen, 2 Lewin, 161. And the costs of arguing a special case may be allowed, see post, p. 278.

Costs where no committal for trial.]—Even where on a prosecution for an offence mentioned in 7 G. 4, c. 64, ss. 22, 23, or 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 2 (see ante, pp. 246, 247), the magistrate does not commit for trial, he can, in a case of a charge of felony, bonâ fide made on reasonable and probable cause, or on a charge of misdemeanor bonâ fide made, certify for the expenses of and trouble and loss of time of the witnesses called before him. The certificate is sent to the clerk of the peace, and a court of quarter sessions may, on the report of the proper officer that the certificate is correct and in accordance with the scales printed, infra, may order payment of the certified amount by the treasurer of the county or borough. 29 & 30 Vict. c. 52, temp., continued by 4 Edw. 7, c. 29.

Indictable offences summarily dealt with.]—Where indictable offences are punishable summarily orders for payment of costs may be made under s. 28 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, which has been extended by the Inebriates Act, 1899 (62 & 63 Vict. c. 35, s. 1), to prosecutions under s. 2 of the Inebriates Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 60).

Scale of costs.]—A secretary of state may make and alter regulations as to the rates or scales of payment of all or any of the costs, expenses and compensations already mentioned, and as to the rates or scales according to which the examining magistrate may certify for the costs, etc., of prosecutors and witnesses at the preliminary inquiry, and the forms of such certificates and the details to be inserted therein of expenses, trouble, or loss of time to which the certificates relate. The regulations so made bind all courts and persons. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 5.

The regulations at present in force are as follows:—

REGULATIONS MADE BY THE SECRETARY OF STATE, DATED JUNE 14, 1904, GOVERNING THE ALLOWANCES PAYABLE TO PROSECUTORS AND WITNESSES IN CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS. (STAT. R. & O. [1904] No. 1219, LEGAL SERIES No. 9).

In pursuance of the powers vested in me by section 5 of the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 55), I hereby make the following regulations:— (a)

(a) These regulations supersede all the former regulations, viz., those of March 6, 1857, Feb. 9, 1858, Feb. 14, 1868, Feb. 27, 1895, Dec. 21, 1895, Sept. 7, 1896, April, 1900, and Nov. 12, 1903, of which all but the last two were printed in the 22nd edition of this work, at pp. 224-233.

1. Witnesses giving Professional Evidence.

There may be allowed to practising members of the legal and medical professions, for attending to give professional evidence, but not otherwise, allowance not exceeding the sums stated in the following scale:—

For attending to give evidence in the town or place where the witness resides or practices—

If the witness attends to give evidence in one case only, not more than one guinea per diem;

If the witness gives evidence on the same day in two or more separate and distinct cases, not more than two guineas;

For attending to give evidence elsewhere than in any town or place where the witness resides or practices, whether in one or more cases, not more than two guineas per diem.

In this Regulation "town" means municipal borough or urban district; and "place" means within a radius of three miles from the court at which the witness attends to give evidence.

No allowance may be given under this Regulation to the solicitor for the prosecution, except that, if such solicitor gives professional evidence which, in the opinion of the court, was necessary and saved the attendance of another witness, a fee of 6*s*. 8*d*. may be allowed.

2. Expert Witnesses and Interpreters.

There may be allowed (a) to expert witnesses such allowances for attending to give expert evidence as the court may consider reasonable, including, where necessary, an allowance for qualifying to give evidence, and (b) to persons employed as interpreters, such allowances as the court may consider reasonable.

3. Police Officers.

There may be allowed to police officers:—

When attending as prosecutors or witnesses at courts situate within the area of their own police authority, no allowance other than travelling allowances as provided in Regulation 8.

When attending as prosecutors or witnesses at courts situate outside the area of their own police authority—

(a) In the case of constables and sergeants, a sum not exceeding—

For the day	4*s*.
For the night	4*s*.

(b) In the case of inspectors, a sum not exceeding—

For the day	5*s*.
For the night	5*s*.

(c) In the case of superintendents and chief constables, a sum not exceeding—

For the day	7*s*.
For the night	5*s*.

For the purposes of this Regulation, any court at which cases arising in the area of any police authority or part thereof are ordinarily heard or tried, shall be deemed, so far as regards such cases, to be situate within that area.

4. Prison Warders.

There may be allowed to prison warders attending as prosecutors or witnesses or in charge of a prisoner produced to give evidence, a sum equal to that allowed them by the Regulations of the Prison Department, viz.:—

	Day and night.	Day only.
Chief warders . .	8*s.*	Breakfast . . 1*s.* Dinner . 2*s.* 6*d.* Supper . . 1*s.*	4*s.* 6*d.*
Principal warders .	6*s.* 6*d.*	Same as above.
Warders and assistant warders . .	6*s.*	Breakfast . . 1*s.* Dinner . . 2*s.* Supper . . 1*s.*	4*s.*

For a prisoner so produced in the custody of warders, such sum for subsistence as the warders have been authorized to spend, and has been actually expended, on his behalf.

5. Ordinary Witnesses.

There may be allowed to witnesses, other than those hereinbefore mentioned, allowances not exceeding 7*s.* for the day and 5*s.* for the night: Provided that the day allowance to the under-mentioned classes of witnesses, when they are not necessarily detained from home for a night, shall not, except for special reasons allowed by the court, exceed the following rates:—

(1) For children the allowance shall not exceed 1*s.* per diem;
(2) For persons of the pauper or vagrant class the allowance shall not exceed 1*s.* per diem;
(3) For other persons who do not lose wages, earnings, or income by attendance, the allowance shall not exceed 2*s.* 6*d.* per diem;
(4) For persons in the service of an employer who lose wages by attendance, the allowance shall not exceed the following rates, except on the production of a certificate from the employer showing that the wages so lost are in excess of such rates:—

	s.	d.
For agricultural labourers, unskilled labourers, and others similarly employed	3	6	per diem.
For artisans, mechanics, and others similarly employed	5	0	„
For clerks, shop assistants, and others similarly employed	5	0	„

Provided also that no night allowance, within the above-mentioned limit of 5*s.* shall exceed the expense reasonably incurred by the witness.

6. Seamen.

Where seamen have been detained on shore for the purpose of giving evidence in a criminal prosecution, the amount actually and reasonably incurred for their maintenance during their detention may be allowed in addition to any allowances made under the foregoing rule.

7. General Regulation.

No full day allowance under Regulations 1, 3, and 5 shall be paid unless the witness is necessarily detained away from his home, or place of business or employment, for at least four hours for the purpose of giving evidence.

If the time during which the witness is necessarily detained away from his home, or place of business or employment, be less than four hours, he shall receive not more than one-half of the allowance which he would have received had he been detained for the full day:

Provided that this regulation shall not apply (1) where the full day allowance is not more than 1*s.*; and (2) where the court is satisfied that a witness, though absent for less than four hours, necessarily loses, in consequence of his attendance, his whole day's wages.

No night allowance under Regulations 3, 4, and 5 shall be paid unless the witness in order to give evidence is necessarily detained away from home for the night.

There may be allowed to any prosecutor or other person who, in the opinion of the court, necessarily attends for the purpose of the prosecution otherwise than as a witness, the same allowance, including travelling allowance as to an ordinary witness.

8. Travelling Allowances.

For attending court from a distance of over two miles there may be allowed:—

(1) To witnesses travelling by railway or other public conveyance, the fare actually paid. Railway fares, except for special reasons allowed by the court, shall be 3rd class; and if return tickets are available, only return rates shall be allowed. In the case of police witnesses, the reduced rates under the Cheap Trains Act, 1883, shall not be exceeded, except where the single fare is less than 1*s.*, or for special reasons allowed by the court.

(2) Where no railway or other public conveyance is available, and one or more witnesses necessarily travel by a hired vehicle, the sum actually paid for the hire of such vehicle, not exceeding 1*s.* a mile each way: provided that, where two or more witnesses attend from the same place, the total allowance shall not exceed 1*s.* a mile each way, unless the court is satisfied that it was reasonably necessary to hire more than one vehicle.

(3) To each witness travelling on foot or by a private conveyance, where no railway or other public conveyance is available, a sum not to exceed 2*d.* a mile each way.

Allowances made under (2) and (3) shall be made separately as mileage.

For the conveyance of witnesses suffering from serious illness, or for the carriage of heavy exhibits, sums in excess of the above rates may be allowed if the court is satisfied that the expense incurred was reasonably necessary.

Warders in charge of prisoners produced to give evidence may be allowed the cost of travelling by such means of conveyance as the governor of the prison may have directed.

9. Form of Certificate.

The form of certificate in Appendix A hereto shall be used when a magistrate or magistrates acting under the Indictable Offences Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 42), grants a certificate of the allowances payable to prosecutors, witnesses, and other persons appearing before them. The profession, trade, or occupation, of each person, or the fact that he is without employment or occupation, must be stated on the form.

The form in Appendix B may be used when a magistrate grants a certificate under sect. 28 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 49), for the costs of prosecution of an indictable offence tried summarily.

10. Date of Commencement.

These regulations shall take effect on and after the 1st July, 1904.

The Order of the 12th November, 1903 (ante, p. 249, n.), is hereby revoked.

Given under my hand at Whitehall this 14th day of June, 1904.

A. Akers-Douglas,
One of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

Counsel and Solicitors.]—The regulations above printed do not make any provision for the fees to be paid to counsel or solicitors, and these fees stand in a somewhat anomalous position. Under s. 26 of 7 G. 4, c. 64 county and borough quarter sessions had power to make and alter regulations as to the rate of costs. That section was repealed by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 4, with a provision that the regulations in force on August 1, 1851, should remain in force until revoked, or until regulations in relation to the matter thereof were made by the secretary of state. The secretary of state has never made any regulations as to the fees of solicitors and counsel, and county and borough justices have from time to time varied their rules as to such fees. A return of the practice of county sessions is printed in Parl. Pap., 1903, c. 1651, at p. 154. As to borough sessions and assizes, no returns are available. The result is that counsels' and solicitors' fees are still regulated by scales framed in the different jurisdictions under the Act of 1826 (Parl. Pap., 1903, c. 1650, p. 8, c. 1651, p. 154. Under the system in force before the Local Government Act, 1888 (post, p. 256), directions were issued by the Treasury in 1869 in the form of Rules, which indicated the view of the Treasury as to the amount of the allowances in cases not covered by the Home Office Regulations then in force. The Treasury directions of 1869 are still used as a guide in those counties and boroughs where a definite scale of county allowance has not been settled. In the matter of allowances to counsel and solicitors the taxing-officer exercises his discretion subject to the direction of the court. See R. v. Jones, 63 J. P. 139, and Parl. Pap., 1903, c. 1651, p. 154.

Costs of the defence, witnesses.]—In all cases of felony and misdemeanor the court of trial may allow the costs of witnesses for the defence who have been examined at the preliminary inquiry and bound over to appear at the court. This power arises under s. 5 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 35), which provides that "The court before which any accused person shall be prosecuted or tried, or for trial before which he may be committed or bailed to appear for any felony or misdemeanor, is hereby authorized and empowered, in its discretion at the request of any person who shall appear before such court on recognizance to give evidence on behalf of the person accused, to order payment unto such witness so appearing such sum of money as to the court shall seem reasonable and sufficient to compensate such witness for the expenses, trouble, and loss of time he shall have incurred or sustained in attending before the examining magistrate, and at or before such court; and the amount of such expenses of attending before the examining magistrate, and compensation for trouble and loss of time therein, shall be ascertained by the certificate of such magistrate, granted before the attendance in court (ante, p. 253); and the amount of all other expenses and compensation shall be ascertained by the proper officer of the court, who shall, upon receipt of the sum of sixpence for each witness" (not payable where the officer is paid by salary, 32 & 33 Vict. c. 89, s. 10), "make out and deliver to the person entitled thereto an order for such expenses and compensation, together with the said fee of sixpence, upon such and the same treasurers and officers as would now by law be liable to payment of an order for the expenses of the prosecutor or witnesses against such accused person; and if the accusation be of such kind that the court shall have no power to order the expenses of the prosecutor, then upon the treasurer or other officer in the capacity of a treasurer of the county, riding, division, city, borough, or place where the offence of such accused person may be alleged to have been committed, which treasurer or other officer is hereby required to pay the same orders upon sight thereof, and shall be allowed the same in his accounts: provided always, that in no case shall any such allowances or compensation exceed the amount now by law permitted to be made to prosecutors and witnesses for the prosecution; and provided always, that such allowances and compensation shall be allowed and paid as part of the expenses of the prosecution."

Poor prisoners.]—Where a certificate for legal aid has been obtained by a poor prisoner under s. 1 (1) of the Poor Prisoners' Defence Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 38), "The expenses of the defence, including the cost of a copy of the depositions, the fees of solicitor and counsel, and the expenses of any witnesses, shall be allowed and paid in the same manner as the expenses of a prosecutor in cases of an indictment for felony, subject nevertheless to any Rules under this Act, and to any regulations as to rates or scales of payment which may be made by one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state."

For the Rules, see ante, p. 249.

The rates and scales of payment in force are as follows:—

REGULATIONS OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE, DATED DECEMBER 30, 1903, AS TO THE ALLOWANCES WHICH MAY BE MADE UNDER SECTION 1 (2) OF THE POOR PRISONERS' DEFENCE ACT, 1903 (STATUTORY RULES AND ORDERS, 1903, No. 1150).

In pursuance of section 1 (2) of the Poor Prisoners' Defence Act, 1903 (3 Edw. 7, c. 38), I hereby make the following regulations as to the rates and scales of payment which may be made for the expenses of the defence:—

1. There may be allowed to the solicitor a fee not exceeding £2 2*s.* 0*d.*, provided that the presiding judge, after the conclusion of the trial, may, if he think fit, certify that the case was one of exceptional length or difficulty, and thereupon the fee may be increased to such sum as he may direct, but not in any case exceed £5.

In addition to such fee the solicitor may be allowed travelling expenses actually and necessarily incurred by himself and his clerk on the scale applicable to the travelling expenses of ordinary witnesses for a prosecution.

2. There may be allowed to counsel a fee of £1 3*s.* 6*d.*; provided that the presiding judge, after the conclusion of the trial, may, if he think fit, certify that the case was one of exceptional length or difficulty, and thereupon the fee may be increased to such sum as he may direct, but not in any case exceeding £3 5*s.* 6*d.*

3. There may be allowed to the clerk to the justices or other person by whom a copy of the depositions is supplied to the prisoner's solicitors payment for the same at the rate of twopence per folio of 90 words.

4. There may be allowed to witnesses giving professional evidence and to expert witnesses the same expenses as might be allowed to witnesses for a prosecution (ante, p. 250), provided that the said sum shall not in any case exceed one guinea a day, except in pursuance of a special order made by the presiding judge.

5. There may be allowed to other witnesses the same expenses as may be allowed to witnesses for a prosecution (ante, p. 251).

6. The travelling expenses of witnesses may be allowed as in the case of a prosecution (ante, p. 252).

7. In these regulations the term "presiding judge" includes a recorder and a chairman of quarter sessions or their deputies.

Given under my hand at Whitehall, this 30th day of December, 1903.

A. Akers Douglas,
One of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

Local taxation grant.]—For some time prior to the passing of the Local Government Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 41), a parliamentary grant was made in aid of the repayment of the costs in those criminal cases falling within 7 G. 4, c. 64, and the other Acts already mentioned. S. 24 of the Act of 1888 substituted for a grant or aid a system of local taxation grants under which the Treasury has no direct concern in the amounts allowed at assizes and sessions, except in the case of offences within the Admiralty jurisdiction. See Parl. Pap. 1903, c. 1650, pp. vi.–viii.

Taxation and payment.]—Where the court orders the payment of costs the amount must be ascertained by the proper officer of the court according to the Home Office regulations so far as applicable, and to the regulations or practice of the court. The costs of the preliminary inquiry are certified by the examining magistrate, but the certificate is not conclusive on the taxing officer at assizes or sessions. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 6. When the amount is ascertained an order for payment is forthwith made out and delivered by the proper officer to the prosecutor or other person in whose favour it is made, on payment of a fee of one shilling for the prosecutor, and sixpence for each other person. 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 24. The extra cost of subpœnaing an infant will be allowed, as his recognizances cannot be estreated. R. v. Ernest Smith, 17 Cox, 601, Day, J. The order is made on the treasurer of the county, riding, or division in which the offence was committed, or is supposed to have been committed, and the treasurer must pay upon sight, and is allowed the amount in his account. 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 24. Where a borough does not contribute to the county rate, the costs of offences committed, or supposed to have been committed, in the town, are payable out of the borough fund by the borough treasurer. 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 25. This power is irrespective of the place of trial. See R. v. Brown, 19 Cox, 33. In that case it was held where the offence is actually committed in one jurisdiction and the trial takes place in another jurisdiction under 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 12 (ante, p. 43), the court may order payment of the costs by the treasurer of the county in which the offence was in fact committed; and an order was made on a county treasurer to pay the costs of a trial for murder in which the felonious act was done in a borough but the death took place in the county. In R. v. McKeever (114 L. T. Jo. 318; 37 L. J. Newsp. 621), the defendant was accused of murdering Mr. Kensit. The deceased was assassinated in Birkenhead and died in Liverpool. A controversy arose whether the borough or the city was liable for the costs of prosecution, but the matter, on the suggestion of Jelf, J., was settled by each district paying half. And see R. v. Treasurer of Oswestry, 12 Q. B. 239. The entire order of the court must be served on the treasurer, including all details or particulars. R. v. Jones, 2 Mood. C. C. 171; 9 C. & P. 401. If the treasurer refuses to pay, the remedy seems to be by indictment, and not by mandamus. R. v. Jeyes, 3 A. & E. 416: R. v. Bristow, 6 T. R. 168: 3 R. R. 144: R. v. Johnson, 4 M. & Sel. 515 (and see ante, p. 5). But see R. v. Treasurer of Oswestry, 12 Q. B. 239; 17 L. J. (Q. B.) 223: R. v. Treasurer of Exeter, 5 Man. & Ry. 167. The allowances are made to the Director of Public Prosecutions in Treasury and Mint cases, and to the Post Office Solicitor in Post Office cases falling within the lists given ante, p. 246.

The incidence of the costs has been somewhat changed by the Local Government Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 41), which has merged (s. 88) in the administrative county most of the liberties and franchises formerly existing (see 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 25), and has made special provisions as to boroughs. The result is that in each administrative county the costs are paid out of the county fund by the treasurer, and that the treasurer of the county, or some person on his behalf, must attend at the assizes and quarter sessions to pay the sums ordered by the court to be paid. 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 67. In the case of quarter sessions boroughs having a population of 10,000 (excepting county boroughs, but including counties of cities), the costs of assizes and sessions, including the above costs and allowances, and the costs of rewards ordered to be paid by the court (see post, p. 261), are paid by the county treasurer, and the borough contributes to the county rate. 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 169; 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 35 (5) (8): Re Kent County Council [1891] 1 Q. B. 389; 60 L. J. (Q. B.) 314. In quarter sessions boroughs having a less population than 10,000, the costs of quarter sessions fall on the borough fund. 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 169; 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 38: Mayor, etc., of Thetford v. Norfolk County Council [1898] 2 Q. B. 468. These costs, if allowed at assizes in respect of offences committed, or supposed to have been committed, in county boroughs, are paid by the treasurer of the county in which the borough lies, unless separate assizes are held for the borough (see ante, p. 45); but the county borough must contribute its proper share to the county assizes. 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 32 (3) (a). The costs at quarter sessions are paid out of the borough fund (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 169) if the county borough has a court of quarter sessions; otherwise by the county treasurer, subject to contribution by the county borough. 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 32 (1) (b).

At the Central Criminal Court the costs of prosecutors and witnesses are paid under order of two commissioners of the court by the treasurer of the county in which the offence would have been tried but for the Central Criminal Court Act, 1834, and the treasurer or some known agent must attend the sessions to pay the orders. 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36, s. 12.

Costs of removed indictments.]—7 G. 4, c. 64 and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55 do not apply to indictments removed by certiorari into the K. B. D.

R. v. Johnson, 1 Mood. C. C. 173: R. v. Richards, 8 B. & C. 420; 2 Man. & Ry. 405: R. v. Treasurer of Exeter, 5 Man. & Ry. 167: R. v. Kelsey, 2 Dowl. 481: R. v. Oates, 1 Mood. C. C. 175, cit. But there is some ground for saying that these authorities only apply to cases where the prosecutor has himself removed the indictment by certiorari. See the report of R. v. Richards in 1 Archbold's Peels Acts (3rd ed.) 214; and Anon. 8 A. & E. 589, 591. As to indictments transmitted from sessions to assizes, see ante, p. 128.

Where an indictment or inquisition is sent to the Central Criminal Court for trial under "Palmer's Act" (19 & 20 Vict. c. 16), the court may order the costs of the prosecutor and witnesses to be paid by the same persons and in the same manner as if the court were held in the county or place where the indictment or inquisition was found or taken. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, s. 13. And where the removal was at the instance of the crown, and the defendant is acquitted, the court may order the Treasury to reimburse to him the amount properly expended for the removal of the trial, less any amount advanced to him by the Treasury under certificate of the High Court granted on ordering the removal. 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, ss. 25, 26.

Where an offence committed in a county of a city is tried at the assizes in the next adjoining county, the costs of prosecution are payable by and to the same persons and in the same manner as if the indictment had been tried in a court of oyer and terminer, or general gaol delivery, in the county of the city. 38 G. 3, c. 52, s. 8; 51 G. 3, c. 100, s. 2; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, ss. 19, 23; 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 169.

Offences in admiralty jurisdiction.]—"Such costs and expenses of and incidental to any prosecution for a felony or misdemeanor as are by law payable out of any county or other local rate, shall, where the felony or misdemeanor was committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty of England, be paid in the same manner and subject to the same regulations as if the felony or misdemeanor had been committed in the county in which the same is heard and determined, or, where the same is heard and determined at the Central Criminal Court as if the same had been committed in the county of London: and all sums properly paid out of any county or other local rate in respect of the said costs and expenses shall be repaid out of money provided by parliament." 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, s. 701.

Prosecutions by guardians of the poor.]—Guardians of a poor-law union may charge to the common fund of the union their reasonable costs of prosecutions at their instance, and so far as not defrayed by the offender, or (ut supra) out of the county or other local rate, in respect of the following offences; (a) obstructing or assaulting any officer engaged in the administration of the poor law; (b) neglect or breach of duty in his office by an officer employed in the administration of the poor laws, or maltreatment or abuse by such officer of any poor person; (c) fraudulently obtaining, stealing, purloining, embezzling, wasting, injuring, or wilfully misapplying property applicable to or connected with the relief of the poor; (d) any offence directly affecting the administration of the poor laws, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 59; 28 & 29 Vict. c. 79, s. 9; (e) ill-treatment of servants or apprentices or bodily injury to persons under sixteen where two justices certify that the prosecution ought in the interests of justice to be conducted by the guardians, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 73; (f) assault, ill-treatment, neglect, abandonment, or exposure of a child. 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 21.

SECT. 2.

COSTS PAYABLE BY THE PROSECUTOR.

Corrupt practices.]—On private prosecutions for corrupt and illegal practices at elections, if the defendant is acquitted, he is entitled to recover from the prosecutor the costs sustained by reason of the indictment. R. v. Law [1900] 1 Q. B. 605; 19 Cox, 452; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, ss. 12, 13.

Defamatory libel.]—"In any case of any indictment or information by a private prosecutor for the publication of any defamatory libel, if judgment shall be given for the defendant, he shall be entitled to recover from the prosecutor the costs sustained by the said defendant by reason of such indictment or information, . . . such costs to be taxed by the proper officer of the court before which the said indictment or information is tried." 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 8.

Merchandise marks.]—On a prosecution under the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887, the court may order costs to be paid to the defendant by the prosecutor, having regard to the information given by and the conduct of the defendant and prosecutor respectively. 50 & 51 Vict. c. 28, s. 14.

Removed indictments.]—As to the liability of the Treasury to pay defendant's costs under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, see ante, p. 136. As to costs on removed indictments, see ante, p. 258.

Road indictments.]—As to the liability of the prosecutor to pay costs on indictments as to highways, see post, tit. "Nuisance."

Vexatious indictments.]—Where the prosecutor, after refusal by the magistrate to commit for trial, has been bound over to prosecute under the Vexatious Indictments Act (ante, p. 7), if the defendant is acquitted, the court may, in its discretion, order the prosecutor to pay the just and reasonable costs of the defendant and his witnesses to be taxed by the proper officer of the court. The taxed amount, if not paid within one month of the order, is recoverable by the same process as a judgment of the High Court: 30 & 31 Vict. c. 35, s. 2. This section does not extend to the Director of Public Prosecutions. Stubbs v. Director of Public Prosecutions, 24 Q. B. D. 577.

SECT. 3.

COSTS PAYABLE BY THE DEFENDANT.

(a) In Treason and Felony.

Persons convicted of treason or felony may be condemned in costs.]—"It shall be lawful for any court by which judgment shall be pronounced or recorded, upon the conviction of any person for treason or felony, in addition to such sentence as may otherwise by law be passed, to condemn such person to the payment of the whole or any part of the costs or expenses incurred in and about the prosecution and conviction for the offence of which he shall be convicted, if to such court it shall seem fit so to do; and the payment of such costs and expenses, or any part thereof, may be ordered by the court to be made out of any moneys taken from such person on his apprehension, or may be enforced at the instance of any person liable to pay, or who may have paid the same, in such and the same manner (subject to the provisions of this Act) as the payment of any costs ordered to be paid by the judgment or order of any court of competent jurisdiction in any civil action or proceeding, may for the time being be enforced; provided, that in the meantime and until the recovery of such costs and expenses from the person so convicted as aforesaid, or from his estate, the same shall be paid and provided for in the same manner as if this Act had not passed; and any money which may be recovered in respect thereof from the person so convicted, or from his estate, shall be applicable to the reimbursement of any person or fund by whom or out of which such costs and expenses may have been paid or defrayed." 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 3. The right of the court to make such an order is not affected by the bankruptcy of the offender after apprehension but before trial. R. v. Roberts, L. R. 9 Q. B. 77; 43 L. J. (M. C.) 17. Where local solicitors conducted a prosecution under the Debtors Act, 1869, on behalf of the Treasury, and an arrangement was made by which the defendant paid certain costs, the solicitors were held accountable to the Treasury for the costs so received. Re Parkinson, 76 L. T. (N. S.) 715.

It has been suggested that where a statute passed since 1870 contains a provision that the costs of a prosecution for misdemeanor shall be payable as in cases of felony, the court may make an order for costs against the defendant under 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 3. Such an order was made in R. v. Abrahams, Cent. Cr. Ct., Sept. 1897; 126 C. C. C. Sess. Pap. 827, on an indictment for keeping a betting house preferred in consequence of the election of the accused under 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 17 (1). But it is submitted that this is erroneous. See R. v. Manchester Clerk of the Peace (1889), noted in Stone's Justices of the Peace (35th ed.), 42.

First offenders.]—See ante, p. 243.

(b) In Misdemeanors.

Assaults.]—On conviction on indictment of any assault, whether with or without battery and wounding or either of them, the court, if it think fit, in addition to any sentence which it deems proper for the offence, may adjudge the offender to pay the prosecutor his actual and necessary costs and expenses of the prosecution and such moderate allowance for loss of time as the court shall by affidavit or other inquiry or examination, have ascertained to be reasonable. Unless the sum is sooner paid the offender may be imprisoned for not more than three months in addition to any term of imprisonment imposed for the offence itself. The court may also issue a warrant to levy the amount by distress and sale of the offender's goods. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 74, 75.

Corrupt practices at elections.]—On prosecutions for corrupt practices at elections the court may order the defendant to pay the costs reasonably incurred in and about the prosecution. See 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, s. 10; 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51, ss. 53, sub-s. 1, 57, sub-s. 2, and the Acts incorporating them enumerated ante, p. 247.

Defamatory libel.]—Where a defendant justifies a defamatory libel and the justification fails, the prosecutor is entitled to recover the costs sustained by reason of the plea of justification, subject to taxation by the proper officer of the court of trial. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 8.

First offenders.]—See ante, p. 243.

Merchandise marks.]—On a prosecution under the Merchandise Marks Act, 1887, the court may order the defendant to pay costs to the prosecutor, having regard to the conduct of the parties. 50 & 51 Vict. c. 28, s. 14.

Sexual offences.]—On conviction of a misdemeanor indictable under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885, or of indecent assault, the court may order the defendant to pay the costs, as in cases of felony; and every order for the allowance and payment of such costs shall be made out, and the sum of money mentioned therein shall be paid and repaid upon the same terms and in the same manner in all respects as in cases of felony. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 18.

Sect. 4.

REWARDS.

Any court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery may, if any person shall appear to have been active in or towards the apprehension of any person charged with any of the following offences, order payment to such person of such a sum of money as shall seem reasonable and sufficient to compensate for his expenses, exertions, and loss of time:—viz., in cases of "Murder"—(see R. v. Durkin, 2 Lewin, 163)—"Feloniously and maliciously shooting at, or attempting to discharge any kind of loaded fire-arms at any other person"—"Stabbing"—"Cutting"—"Poisoning"—"Administering anything to procure the miscarriage of any woman"—"Rape"—"Burglary" (R. v. Dunning, 5 Cox, 142)—"Felonious housebreaking"—"Robbery on the person" (but not stealing from the person: R. v. Thompson, 1 Cox, 43)—"Arson"—"Horse stealing"—"Bullock stealing" (which includes all cases of cattle stealing of that particular description, e.g., ox, cow, heifer, etc.: R. v. Gilbrass, 7 C. & P. 444)—"Sheep stealing"—"Being accessory before the fact to any of the offences aforesaid"—"Receiving stolen property, knowing it to have been stolen." 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 28. The amount of these rewards is in addition to any costs, etc., as witness, and is unaffected by the regulations as to costs. 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 28; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 7; and see ante, p. 246. The like power is extended, by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, s. 8, to courts of sessions of the peace, with respect to such of the above offences as they have jurisdiction to try, but the compensation is limited to the sum of £5.

Such rewards are not confined to cases where the person apprehending has had an actual loss of time, or been at an expense. R. v. Barnes, 7 C. & P. 166. They are said not to extend to cases where the offender has escaped from England. R. v. Barrett, 6 Cox, 78. But they have been given for display of courage; R. v. Womersley, 2 Lewin, 162; and for locking burglars in a room till help arrived. R. v. Dunning, 5 Cox, 142.

The order is made out by the clerk of the court on the sheriff of the county in which the offence was committed, who must pay the amount at sight to the person named or his authorized representative, and is entitled to immediate recoupment by the Treasury. 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 29. Under the Local Government Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 100), the rewards appear to be payable from the same funds as the costs of assizes and sessions. If the facts, whether as to expense, exertion, or loss of time, on which the application is grounded have not appeared in evidence, the judge will require them to be laid before him on affidavit. The power of a secretary of state (which has not yet been exercised) to make regulations as to the scale of costs, extends to the amount of rewards to be paid, except where the court consider that extraordinary courage and diligence towards apprehension was shown, in which case the court may adjudge any reward which it deems reasonable, subject to the limit of £5 imposed on courts of quarter sessions. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, ss. 6, 7, 8. See R. v. Jones, 7 C. & P. 167: R. v. Haines, 5 Cox, 114.

A person who discovers and prosecutes to conviction a person at large without licence during a term of penal servitude is entitled to a reward of £20, payable by order of the court before whom the conviction is made, out of the county funds. 5 G. 4, c. 84, s. 22: R. v. Emmons, 2 M. & Rob. 279: R. v. Ambury, 6 Cox, 79.

7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 30. Compensation to relatives of persons killed in arresting felons.]—If any man shall happen to be killed in endeavouring to apprehend any person charged with any of the offences before mentioned, the court may order the sheriff of the county to pay a sum of money to his widow, if he were married; or to his children, in case his wife be dead; or to his father or mother, in case he shall have left neither wife nor child. Under the Act the sheriff is entitled to immediate recoupment from the Treasury.

In R. v. Platel (C. C. C., May, 1903) an order was made by Grantham, J., for the payment of £233 to the widow and family of a man who was shot and killed in endeavouring to arrest a man who had shot a police constable. See 38 L. J. Newsp. 278.

CHAPTER VII.

COMPENSATION AND RESTITUTION OF PROPERTY.

SECT. 1. Compensation, p. 263.
2. Restitution of property, p. 265.

SECT. 1.

COMPENSATION.

Relation of civil and criminal remedies.]—As a general rule, the remedies for civil injuries and crimes cannot be enforced in the same proceeding.

In a few cases the court which tries an indictable offence is authorized by statute to award compensation to persons injured by it. Compensation to the relatives of persons killed in arresting certain offenders is dealt with ante, p. 262.

The Forfeitures Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 23), provides (s. 4), that "it shall be lawful for any such court as aforesaid (i.e., for any court by which judgment shall be pronounced or recorded, see s. 3), if it shall think fit, upon the application of any person aggrieved, and immediately after the conviction of any person for felony, to award any sum of money not exceeding one hundred pounds, by way of satisfaction or compensation for any loss of property suffered by the applicant through or by means of the said felony, and the amount awarded for such satisfaction or compensation shall be deemed a judgment debt due to the person entitled to receive the same from the person so convicted, and the order for payment of such amount may be enforced in such and the same manner as in the case of any costs ordered by the court to be paid under the last preceding section of this Act." The discretionary power given by this section is not confined to cases of larceny or cognate offences, as to which see post, p. 265, but does not extend to personal injuries. As to its exercise, see R. v. Lovett, 11 Cox, 602. The cases in which it is most easily applied are to the compensation of persons who are required under a restitution order to give up property obtained by larceny and transferred to them before conviction. But the courts usually act under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 35, s. 9 (post, p. 266). Compensation for injuries to property may be awarded in lieu of a conviction on summary prosecution for a first offence against the Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 108), or the Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 66).

And occasionally, where proper compensation is made to a person injured, the court refrains from imposing punishment for an offence.

Except in the cases above referred to, it is not usual to allow civil and criminal proceedings in respect of the same act or omission to be carried on concurrently. In the case of misdemeanors, there never seems to have been ruling that concurrent proceedings might not be taken. But until a comparatively recent date, it was considered that the civil remedy in cases of injury by a felonious act could not be pursued until the completion of the prosecution of the alleged felon. In Crosby v. Leng, 12 East, 413; 11 R. R. 437, Lord Ellenborough says, "The policy of the law requires that before the party injured by any felonious act can seek civil redress for it, the matter should be heard and disposed of before the proper criminal tribunal, in order that the justice of the county may be first satisfied in respect of the public offence; and after the verdict, either of conviction or acquittal, the judgment is so far conclusive in any particular matter, that the objection is thereby removed of bringing that sub judice in a civil action which was the proper subject of a criminal prosecution." Similar views are expressed in Stone v. Marsh, 6 B. & C. 551; 5 L. J., K. B. (O. S.) 201: Marsh v. Keating, 1 Mont. & A. 662; 8 Bligh, N. S. 651; 2 Cl. & F. 250; 37 R. R. 175: ex parte Bolland, Mont. & Mac. 397; and ex parte Elliott, re Jermyn, 3 Mont. & A. 110.

Another mode of stating this rule is that the King's rights to the forfeitures of felons would be defeated by a failure to prosecute the offender effectively, and an acquittal by collusion of the prosecutor would debar him from his civil remedy. Crosby v. Leng, ubi supra. The rule was also explained on the ground that it was the duty of the person injured by a felony to prosecute before suing. But this has been questioned in Ward v. Lloyd, 7 Scott, N. R. 499, 507, Maule, J.; and Wells v. Abrahams, L. R. 7 Q. B. 554, 663, Lush, J. The rule barred proof in bankruptcy as well as suits at law or in equity: ex parte Elliott, ubi supra; but did not bar an action where the felon had been convicted and executed for another felony; ex parte Bolland, ubi supra: nor actions against persons other than the felon in possession of the proceeds of the felony, unless it were larceny and the stolen goods had been sold in market overt: White v. Spettigue, 11 M. & W. 603: Lee v. Bayes, 18 C. B. 599: nor to an action by A.'s master against B. for loss of servant caused by felonious act of B.'s servant: Osborn v. Gillett, L. R. 8 Ex. 88.

A distinction seems to have once been drawn between actions of trespass or other tort and actions of debt: see Master v. Miller, 4 T. R. 322, Buller, J.; but it has now evaporated, and the authorities now lay down as follows:—

(1) Money obtained by theft or forgery is a debt due to the loser of it, which is sufficient consideration for the assignment of the offender's property to the injured person. Chowne v. Baylis, 31 L. J. (Ch.) 757; 31 Beav. 351: Ex parte Ball, 10 Ch. D. 667, where all the cases are collected: but where a debt arises out of a felonious act by the debtor the civil remedy may have to be postponed until public justice is satisfied. Where the plaintiff, who claimed to be a creditor for the amount paid by him on a forged cheque had commenced a prosecution for the forgery upon which a bill was found and the prisoner arraigned, abstained from bringing on the trial by the direction of the judge, who thought the ends of justice were satisfied by sentencing the prisoner on an indictment for another forgery to which he pleaded guilty, it was held that the plaintiff had done enough to satisfy the rule of law, and that his civil remedy revived. Dudley, etc., Banking Co. v. Spittle, 1 J. & H. 14: Ex parte Ball, 10 Ch. D. 667: Ex parte Leslie, Re Guerrier, 20 Ch. D. 131; 51 L. J. (Ch.) 689. The acquittal of the accused on an indictment for felony is no bar to an action for civil injury arising out of the incriminated acts, unless the plaintiff colluded with the defendant in procuring the acquittal. Crosby v. Leng, 12 East, 409.

(2) Where the felonious act also constitutes a trespass it used to be considered that the trespass merged in the felony. Markham v. Cobb, Sir W. Jones, 147; Noy, 82: Higgins v. Butcher, Yelv. 89: Lutterell v. Reynell, 1 Mod. 282: White v. Spettigue, 13 M. & W. 603. But it is now held that the criminal remedy merely, suspends, or must precede, the civil remedy.

Most of the authorities with reference to the basis and extent of the rule are discussed in Wells v. Abrahams, ubi supra: in Midland Insurance Co. v. Smith, 6 Q. B. D. 561; 50 L. J. (Q. B.) 329: A. v. B. 24 L. R. Ir. 235, reported also as S. v. S. 16 Cox, 566 (a), and in Ex parte Ball, 10 Ch. D. 667. In the last case, Bramwell, L.J., suggested four theories to support the supposed rule. 1. That no cause of action arises at all out of the felony. 2. That it does not arise till prosecution. 3. That it arises on the act, but is suspended till prosecution. 4. That there is neither defence nor suspension of the claim by or at the instance of the felon debtor, but that the court, of its own motion or on the suggestion of the crown, should stay proceedings till public justice is satisfied. He indicates the difficulties of each theory, but accepts Wellock v. Constantine, 2 H. & C. 146, as establishing the existence of the rule, and see also per Baggallay, L.J., at p. 673.

Whatever be the true theory, the rule is now in a state of suspended animation because of the decisions above cited. Apparently, it can only be enforced, if at all, by application to stay proceedings in such cases as suggested by Blackburn, J., in Wells v. Abrahams, L. R. 7 Q. B. at p. 559. The objection cannot be taken by plea, and is not a ground for non-suit, id., nor for demurrer. Roope v. D'Avigdor, 10 Q. B. D. 412. The question, however, only indirectly affects the subject of the present work. As to the illegality of compromises or arrangements to settle criminal proceedings, see post, tit. "Compounding Offences."

Sect. 2.

Restitution of Property.

Common Law.

At common law the court of King's Bench could award a writ of restitution as part of its judgment on an appeal of larceny; but this power ceased on the abolition of these appeals by 59 G. 3, c. 46 (rep.). R. v. Mayor, etc., of London, L. R. 4 Q. B. 371; S. C. 38 L. J. (M. C.) 107; 11 Cox, 280; sub nom. Walker v. Mayor, etc., of London. 21 H. 8, c. 11 (which is now repealed and is replaced by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 100, below), empowered the court of trial to award restitution on conviction on indictment (see 2 Hawk. c. 23, ss. 49–57), but gave no authority to the court of King's Bench. Id.

Statutes.

2 & 3 Ph. & M. c. 7; 31 Eliz. c. 12 (restitution of horses). These Acts are not repealed by the Sale of Goods Act, 1893, see 56 & 57 Vict. c. 71, s. 22 (2); but are now rarely used: see Moran v. Pitt, 42 L. J. (*Q. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96 (Larceny Act, 1861), s. 100—Restitution of Property.] —If any person guilty of any such felony or misdemeanor as is mentioned in this Act, in stealing, taking, obtaining, extorting, embezzling, converting, or disposing of, or in knowingly receiving, any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, shall be indicted for such offence by or on the behalf of the owner of the property, or his executor or administrator, and convicted thereof, in such case the property shall be restored to the owner or his representative; and in every case in this section aforesaid, the court before whom any person shall be tried for any such felony or misdemeanor, shall have power to award from time to time writs of restitution for the said property, or to order the restitution thereof in a summary manner:

Provided that if it shall appear before any award or order made that any valuable security shall have been bonâ fide paid or discharged by some person or body corporate liable to the payment thereof, or, being a negotiable instrument, shall have been bonâ fide taken or received, by transfer or delivery, by some person or body corporate, for a just and valuable consideration, without any notice or without any reasonable cause to suspect that the same had, by any felony or misdemeanor, been stolen, taken, obtained, extorted, embezzled, converted, or disposed of, in such case the court shall not award or order the restitution of such security:

Provided also, that nothing in this section contained shall apply to the case of any prosecution of any trustee, banker, merchant, attorney, factor, broker, or other agent intrusted with the possession of goods or documents of title to goods, for any misdemeanor against this Act. [See 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 77–86, and 1 Edw. 7, c. 10. S. 100 appears also to apply to the Larceny Acts of 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 116), and 1896 (59 & 60 Vict. c. 52].

42 & 43 Vict. c. 22 (Prosecution of Offences Act, 1879), s. 7—Restitution where the director of public prosecutions intervenes.]—The prosecution of an offender by the director of public prosecutions shall, for the purpose of enabling a person to obtain a restitution of property, or obtaining, exercising, or enforcing any right, claim, or advantage whatsoever, have the same effect as if such person had been bound over to prosecute, and had prosecuted the offender, subject to this proviso, that such person shall give all reasonable information and assistance to the said director in relation to the prosecution.

[Sub-s. 1 does not alter the law. See R. v. Horan, Ir. Rep. 6 C. L. 293.] (2) Notwithstanding any enactment to the contrary (v. supra), where goods have been obtained by fraud or other wrongful means not amounting in law to larceny, the property in such goods shall not revest in the person who was the owner of the goods, or his personal representative, by reason only of the conviction of the offender." [Sub-s. 2 alters the law as laid down in Bentley v. Vilmont, 12 App. Cas. 471; 57 L. J. (Q. B.) 18, *where the history of the law as to restitution is stated. the stealing of any property, and it shall appear to the court by the evidence that the prisoner has sold the stolen property to any person, and that such person has had no knowledge that the same was stolen, and that any moneys have been taken from the prisoner on his apprehension, it shall be lawful for the court, on the application of such purchaser, and on the restitution of the stolen property to the prosecutor, to order that out of such moneys a sum not exceeding the amount of the proceeds of the said sale be delivered to the said purchaser." (See also 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 4, ante, p. 263.

60 & 61 Vict. c. 30—Police Property Act, 1897.]—The Act provides for the making by a court of summary jurisdiction of orders as to property coming into the possession of the police in connexion with any criminal charge, or under the Metropolitan or City of London Police Acts (2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 66; 2 & 3 Vict. c. xciv.), or under a search warrant (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 103), or under s. 34 of the Pawnbrokers Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 93).

As to the position of property which comes in custodiam legis by the action of the police, see ex parte Otto [1894] 1 Q. B. 420; Bessell v. Wilson 20 L. T. Rep. (O. S.) 233; Campbell, L.C.J.; Peel v. Jervis, 49 J.P. 264, and Dillon v. O'Brien, 20 L. R. Ir. 316: 16 Cox, 345; and the discussion of these authorities in Barnett v. Campbell, 21 N. Z. L. R. 484. In Winter v. Banks, 19 Cox, 687; 65 J. P. 468, a constable who after B.'s acquittal delivered to B. the goods which he was charged with stealing, was held liable to A., the true owner, for conversion of the goods. As to protection from such actions see Bullock v. Dunlap, 2 Ex. D. 43.

Until the enactment of s. 24, sub-s. 2 (ante, p. 266) of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893, s. 100 of the Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96), had a wider scope than 21 H. 8, c. 11 (R. v. de Veaux, 2 Leach, 585; 2 East, P. C. 789, 839: Bentley v. Vilmont, 12 App. Cas. 471; 57 L. J. (Q. B.) 18; and extended to all offences under the Larceny Act, 1861 (except under ss. 75–86, as amended by 1 Edw. 7, c. 10, post, tit. "Embezzlement"), such as obtaining goods by false pretences (Bentley v. Vilmont, ubi supra), or receiving goods so obtained. R. v. Goldsmith, 12 Cox, 594. But it seems not to apply to larcenies prosecuted under other Acts. In R. v. Jones, 14 Cox, 528, restitution was refused on a conviction of larceny under the Post Office Acts.

The operation of s. 100 is now restricted by s. 24 (2) of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 71), ante, p. 266, in the case of "goods" as defined in s. 62 of that Act (ante, p. 266). But the section still applies in cases where on an indictment for obtaining goods by false pretences where no property has passed, the defendant is convicted on evidence proving larceny, by a trick or otherwise (see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88), and in such cases the court may make a restitution under R. v. Walker, 65 J. P. 729, Fulton, Recorder. In R. v. Bianci, 67 J. P. Rep. 443, where a defendant pleaded guilty to two indictments with respect to the same goods, the first for obtaining them by false pretences, the second for stealing them, it was held that a restitution order could be made on a pawnbroker with whom the defendant had pledged the goods.

In R. v. George (C. C. C.), 65 J. P. 729, the question arose before Bosanquet, Common Serjeant, whether the court could make an order in any case of restitution where property had been obtained by false pretences. The common serjeant, after consulting Bigham, J. and Fulton, Recorder, said they were all of opinion that the 24th section of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893, prevented property obtained by fraud being revested by the mere fact of the conviction, and therefore restitution could not be ordered against a bonâ fide purchaser who had a good title at law. He quoted the law as stated by Lord Watson in Bentley v. Vilmont, 12 App. Cas. 471, "it now appears that the sale was induced by fraud, a circumstance which gives the seller the option either of adhering to his bargain or of rescinding it in a question with the fraudulent purchaser," and held that where, as in the case under consideration, the goods were found in the possession of the person who had obtained them by fraud, the former owner might disaffirm the transaction, and was then entitled to recover the property; and in that case an order of restitution should be made.

The first proviso to 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 100, protects from restitution bonâ fide holders for value of negotiable instruments, including bank-notes. Chichester v. Hill, 52 L. J. (Q. B.) 160: 15 Cox, 258; Miller v. Race, 1 Smith, L. C. (11th ed.), 463; 1 Burr. 452. An order cannot be made for the restitution of current coin stolen and passed as currency to innocent persons; but can be made where the money is found on the thief or under his control. Moss v. Hancock [1899] 2 Q. B. 111, 120, Channell, J.; cf. Holiday v. Hicks, Cro. Eliz. 638, 661; 1 Hale, 542. And where a 5*l.* piece was stolen, and though a current coin was sold as a curiosity, it was held that a restitution order could be made against the buyer. Moss v. Hancock, ubi supra.

Certain difficulties in applying the enactment arise from ss. 8, 9 of the Factors Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 45), and s. 25 of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893, under which mercantile agents, bailees or factors, and certain other persons can give a better title to goods to purchasers from them. See Helby v. Matthews [1895] App. Cas. 471: Payne v. Wilson [1895] 1 Q. B. 653; 2 Q. B. 537: Kirkham v. Gill [1897] 1 Q. B. 201: Farquharson v. King [1902] App. Cas. 325; 71 L. J. K. B. 667; and as to factors, R. v. Wollez, 8 Cox, 337, and it is doubtful how far restitution can be made in cases where a bailee under a hire purchase agreement misappropriates the goods hired. See Payne v. Wilson [1893] 1 Q. B. 653: Helby v. Matthews, ubi supra: Lee v. Butler [1893] 2 Q. B. 318.

Revesting on conviction.]—On a conviction for larceny of goods as defined by the Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (s. 62, ante, p. 266), the property in the goods stolen revests in the person who was the owner of the goods or his personal representative, notwithstanding any intermediate dealing with them, whether by sale in market overt or otherwise. This merely expresses the rule laid down in Horwood v. Smith, 2 T. R. 750; 1 R. R. 613: Scattergood v. Sylvester, 15 Q. B. 506; 19 L. J. (Q. B.) 447: White v. Spettigue, 13 M. & W. 603; Moss v. Hancock [1899] 2 Q. B. 111, 118: R. v. Horan, Ir. Rep. 6 C. L. 293, and makes good the title of the original owner even against an innocent purchaser. This rule only applies to "goods" as defined in the Act of 1893 (s. 62, ante, p. 266), and does not apply to negotiable instruments. Chichester v. Hill, 52 L. J. (Q. B.) 160; 15 Cox, 258; 47 J. P. 324. But restitution orders cannot be made as to such instruments if not paid or negotiated in good faith (ante, p. 266). Until conviction of the thief "goods" innocently bought in market overt are the property of the purchaser. Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 71), s. 22: Walker v. Matthews, 8 Q. B. D. 109: Hargreave v. Spink [1892] 1 Q. B. 25. And therefore, if he sells them again before the conviction, even if previously to selling them he has had notice of the theft, no order for restitution can be made against him. Horwood v. Smith, 2 T. R. 750. There is a special remedy against pawnbrokers in London who sell stolen goods after notice: see 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 27, ante, p. 267: ex parte Davison, 60 J. P. 808.

By whom and how made.]—An order of restitution can be made only by the court before which the offender is convicted, and the High Court has no summary power to award restitution. R. v. Mayor, etc., of London, L. R. 4 Q. B. 371: S. C. sub nom. Walker v. Mayor, etc., of London, 38 L. J. (M. C.) 107; 11 Cox, 280.

The order is discretionary. See Vilmont v. Bentley, 18 Q. B. D. 327. Its refusal is no bar to a civil action or summary proceedings to recover the goods. Ex parte Davison, 60 J. P. 808: Scattergood v. Sylvester, 15 Q. B. 506; 19 L. J. (Q. B.) 447: and in cases of difficulty or complications it is usual to refuse an order and leave the prosecutor to his other legal remedies for recovery of his property. The Recorder of London, upon the trial and conviction at the Central Criminal Court of a prisoner charged with larceny, having refused to order (under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 100) the person with whom the stolen property was pledged to restore it to the prosecutor, the Queen's Bench Division refused to grant a mandamus directed to "the judges and justices of the Central Criminal Court," to compel the recorder to make such order, on the ground that the Central Criminal Court being a Superior Court, no mandamus would lie against it. R. v. Justices of Central Criminal Court, 11 Q. B. D. 479; 52 L. J. (M. C.) 121: and see ante, p. 220. Before making the order the court may hear counsel on behalf of persons in possession of the goods. R. v. Macklin, 5 Cox, 216. The order if made by a Court of Assize or the Central Criminal Court is enforceable by attachment. R. v. Wollez, 8 Cox, 337; and see L. J. Newsp. 486.

On whom made.]—The order may be made on the offender or on his agent or on his trustee in bankruptcy or on any pledgee or sub-purchaser or possessor of the goods, even though he innocently bought in market overt. Cundy v. Lindsay, 3 App. Cas. 459; 47 L. J. (Q. B.) 481; 13 Cox, 162, 588: Horwood v. Smith, 2 T. R. 750; 1 R. R. 618; but it cannot be made on a purchaser who has resold before conviction. Cundy v. Lindsay (ubi sup.); and see R. v. Stancliffe, 11 Cox, 318: R. v. Goldsmith, 12 Cox, 594. As to the law when the offender has become bankrupt, see Re Vautin [1899] 2 Q. B. 549.

As to what made.]—The power to award restitution seems to be limited to property produced and identified at the time (or more probably to property specified in the indictment) as being the subject of the offence. R. v. Goldsmith, 12 Cox, 594: R. v. Smith, Id. 597. The power does not extend to property found on the prisoner, but not connected with the offence: R. v. Mayor, etc., of London, E. B. & E. 509; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 231: S. C. sub nom. R. v. Pierce, Bell, 235; 8 Cox, 344; and an order made in such a case was quashed by the High Court. Id. The power to award restitution extends to the proceeds of the property as well as the property itself if in the hands of the prisoner or of an agent holding for him. R. v. Justices of Central Criminal Court, 18 Q. B. D. 314; 56 L. J. (M. C.) 25; 16 Cox, 196, C. A. But it does not authorize delivery to the prosecutor of pawntickets supposed to represent the stolen goods. R. v. Rolfe, 53 J. P. 823.

SECT. 1.

CROWN CASES RESERVED.

Former practice.]—A practice had long existed, where any objection was taken on the part of a defendant, on a trial for treason or felony, before any court of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, either to the indictment or the evidence, which the court considered worthy of more mature consideration, to take the opinion of the jury upon the facts proved, and to reserve the objection for the consideration of all the judges of the superior courts of common law upon a case stated by the judge who presided at the trial: and if the judges, or a majority of them, were of opinion that the objection was well founded, the defendant was recommended to the crown for a pardon. Upon a case so reserved, the judges, although they heard counsel for the defendant, whenever he thought fit to employ counsel to argue the objection before them, and in that case heard counsel for the prosecution also, did not sit strictly as a court, but rather as assessors to the judge who tried the case, and the judgment ultimately pronounced was considered in law as his judgment: the reasons on which it was founded not being publicly declared by the judges, though the results of their conferences are preserved in the reports. Courts of quarter sessions had no power to reserve cases on indictments tried before them for the opinions of the judges. But see ante, p. 128.

Present law and practice.]—The Crown Cases Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 78), was passed to remedy this defect in the law. Below are stated the provisions of the Act and the modifications effected by the Judicature Acts.

11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, s. 1.]—"When any person shall have been convicted of any treason, felony, or misdemeanor, before any court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, or court of quarter sessions, the judge or commissioner or justice of the peace before whom the case shall have been tried, may, in his or their discretion, reserve any question of law which shall have arisen on the trial for the consideration of the justices of either bench and barons of the Exchequer; and thereupon shall have authority to respite execution of the judgment on such conviction, or postpone the judgment, until such question shall have been considered and decided, as he or they may think fit; and in either case the court in its discretion shall commit the person convicted to prison, or shall take a recognizance of bail, with one or two sufficient sureties, and in such sum as the court shall think fit, conditioned to appear at such time or times as the court shall direct, and receive judgment, or to render himself in execution, as the case may be."

The section extends to special commissioners of oyer and terminer, etc.; R. v. Bernard, 8 St. Tr. (N. S.) 887, 1001; 1 F. & F. 240; and to recorders of boroughs. R. v. Masters, 1 Den. 332; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 2; but apparently not to trial on a record of the K. B. D. See New Trial, post, sect. 4. As to granting bail, see R. v. Harris, 4 Cox, 21; R. v. Bird, 5 Cox, 11.

36 & 37 Vict. c. 66 (Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873), s. 47.]—"The jurisdiction and authorities in relation to question of law arising in criminal trials which are now vested in the justices of either bench and the barons of the Exchequer by the Crown Cases Act, 1848, or any Act amending the same, shall and may be exercised by the judges of the high court. . . . The determination of any such question by the judges of the high court in manner aforesaid shall be final and without appeal; and no appeal shall lie from any judgment of the said high court in any criminal cause or matter, save for some error of law apparent upon the record, as to which no question shall have been reserved for the consideration of the said judges under the Crown Cases Act, 1848" (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, s. 47).

Sect. 100.]—"In the construction of this Act, unless there is anything in the subject or context repugnant thereto, the several words hereinafter mentioned shall have, or include, the meanings following (that is to say): . . .

"Rules of court shall include forms.

"Cause shall include . . . any criminal proceeding by the crown. . . .

"Matter shall include every proceeding in the court not in a cause. . . .

"Crown cases reserved shall mean such questions of law reserved in criminal trials as are mentioned in the Crown Cases Act, 1848."

38 & 39 Vict. c. 77 (Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1875), s. 19.]—"Subject . . . any rules of court to be made under this Act, the practice and procedure in all criminal causes and matters whatsoever in the high court . . . and in the court of appeal respectively, including the practice and procedure with respect to crown cases reserved, shall be the same as the practice and procedure in similar causes and matters before the commencement of this Act." [The first schedule referred to in that section contained rules of court, which rules were superseded by the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, criminal proceedings, see Order LXVIII. The Act is to be construed as one with 36 & 37 Vict. c. 66; see s. 1.]

42 & 43 Vict. c. 22 (Prosecution of Offences Act, 1879), s. 2.]—"It shall be the duty of the director of public prosecutions under the superintendence of the attorney-general to institute, undertake, or carry on such criminal proceedings, whether in the Court for Crown Cases Reserved . . . as may be for the time being prescribed by regulations under this Act, or may be directed in a special case by the attorney-general. . . ." [For regulations see post, p. 278.]

44 & 45 Vict. c. 68 (Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1881), s. 15.]—

"The jurisdiction and authority in relation to questions of law arising in criminal trials, which under s. 47 of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (supra), is now vested in the judges of the high court of justice, may be exercised by any five or more of such judges . . . provided that the lord chief justice of England shall always be one of such judges, unless, by writing under his hand or by the certificate in writing of his medical attendant, it shall appear that he is prevented, by illness or otherwise, from being present at any court duly appointed to be held for the purpose aforesaid, in which case the presence of the said lord chief justice at such court shall not be necessary."

11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, s. 2. Statement and hearing of the case.]—"The judge or commissioner or court of quarter sessions shall thereupon state, in a case signed in the manner now usual, the question or questions of law which shall have been so reserved, with the special circumstances upon which the same shall have arisen (see post, p. 275); and such case shall be transmitted to the said justices and barons; and the said justices and barons shall thereupon have full power and authority to hear and finally determine the said question or questions, and thereupon to reverse, affirm, or amend any judgment which shall have been given on the indictment or inquisition on the trial whereof such question or questions have arisen, or to avoid such judgment, and to order an entry to be made on the record, that in the judgment of the said justices and barons, the party convicted ought not to have been convicted, or to arrest the judgment, or order judgment to be given thereon at some other session of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, or other sessions of the peace, if no judgment shall have been before that time given, as they shall be advised, or to make such other order as justice may require; and such judgment and order, if any, of the said justices and barons shall be certified, under the hand of the presiding chief justice or chief baron, to the clerk of assize, or his deputy, or the clerk of the peace, or his deputy, as the case may be, who shall enter the same on the original record in proper form; and a certificate of such entry, under the hand of the clerk of assize, or his deputy, or the clerk of the peace, or his deputy, as the case may be, in the form as near as may be or to the effect mentioned in the schedule annexed to this Act, with the necessary alterations to adapt it to the circumstances of the case, shall be delivered or transmitted by him to the sheriff or gaoler in whose custody the person convicted shall be; and the said certificate shall be a sufficient warrant to such sheriff or gaoler, and all other persons, for the execution of the judgment, as the same shall be so certified to have been affirmed or amended, and execution shall be thereupon executed on such judgment, and for the discharge of the person convicted from further imprisonment, if the judgment shall be reversed, avoided, or arrested, and, in that case, such sheriff or gaoler shall forthwith discharge him, and, also, the next court of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, or sessions of the peace, shall vacate the recognizance of bail, if any; and, if the court of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, or court of quarter sessions, shall be directed to give judgment, the said court shall proceed to give judgment at the next session."

Form of certificates.]—The forms used for the certificate of the court for crown cases reserved are as follows:—

Court for the consideration of the Court for Crown Cases Reserved pursuant to the statute 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78.

At a sitting of the said court holden at the Royal Courts of Justice, in the city of Westminster, on the — day of —— in the year of our Lord 18—, before the judges of the High Court of Justice, the undersigned the Lord Chief Justice of England presiding, assembled for the purpose of hearing and determining questions of law reserved for their consideration under and by virtue of the Statute above mentioned.

The King against. A case having been transmitted from ——, to the said judges, pursuant to the Statute in such case made, setting forth that at —— the said —— had been tried and convicted before ——, on an indictment in the said case mentioned, also stating certain questions of law which had arisen upon the said trial, and which had been reserved for the consideration of the said judges. Now the said judges having duly proceeded to the hearing and determining of the said questions.

It was thereupon considered and determined by the said judges that the said —— [ought not to have been found guilty, or to be convicted on the said indictment. Wherefore, it was ordered that judgment which stands postponed on the said indictment, be altogether stayed and arrested, and that no judgment whatever be passed on the said —— for or by reason of the premises of which —— so been found guilty. And that —— be forthwith discharged from —— commitment to prison on the said indictment (b), (c), (d).] In witness whereof, I, the presiding chief ——, have hereunto set my hand according to the Statute in that behalf.

(b) [Or] was properly convicted on the said indictment, wherefore the judgment given on the said indictment against the said —— is affirmed.

(c) [Or] was properly found guilty, and ought to be convicted on the said indictment, wherefore it was ordered that the judgment which stands postponed on the said indictment be given thereupon against the said ——, and that such judgment be given at the next ——, at which the said —— shall personally appear, and at which —— may be lawfully sentenced on the said indictment.

(d) [Or] ought not to have been convicted on the said indictment, wherefore it was ordered that an entry to that effect be forthwith made on the record of the said indictment, and that the judgment given upon the same be altogether reversed, avoided, and altogether held for nothing, and that the said —— be forthwith discharged from —— imprisonment under and by virtue, and in execution of the said judgment.

The form of certificate by the clerk of the court from which the case is reserved is as follows (11 & 12 Vict. 78, sched.):—

Whereas at the sessions of the peace for the county of ——, held on ——, before ——, and other their fellows, [or at the session of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery held for the county of ——, on ——,] before, among others, Sir S. M., knight, one of the justices of the High Court of Justice (in England), and ——, [here name the quorum commissioners, justices of oyer and terminer, and gaol delivery] A.B., late of ——, labourer, having been found guilty of felony, and judgment thereupon given, that [state the substance] the court before whom he was tried reserved a certain question of law for the consideration of the justices, and execution was thereupon respited in the meantime:

This is to certify, that the said justices having met in the Royal Courts of Justice, London, [or Dublin, as the case may be], on the —— day of ——, it was considered by the said justices and barons there that the judgment aforesaid should be annulled, and an entry made on the record that the said A. B. ought not, in the judgment of the said justices and barons, to have been convicted of the felony aforesaid; and you are therefore hereby required forthwith to discharge the said A. B. from your custody.

To the gaoler of ——, and the sheriff of ——, and all others whom it may concern.

Clerk of the peace of the county of ——,
[or clerk of assize for ——, as the case may be.]

11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, s. 3. Judgment to be delivered in open court.]—. . . The judgment or judgments of the said justices and barons shall be delivered in open court, after hearing counsel or the parties, in case the prosecutor or the person convicted shall think it fit that the case shall be argued, in like manner as the judgments of the superior courts of common law at Westminster or Dublin, as the case may be, are now delivered." [The rest of the section was repealed in 1875: 38 & 39 Vict. c. 66, S. L. R.]

Sect. 4. Amendment of case.]—"The said justices and barons, when a case has been reserved for their opinion, shall have power, if they think fit, to cause the case or certificate to be sent back for amendment, and thereupon the same shall be amended accordingly, and judgment shall be delivered after it shall have been amended." [See post, p. 277.]

Sect. 6. Penalty for forgery of documents.]—"Every person who shall forge or alter, or shall offer, utter, or dispose of, or put off, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any certificate of, or copy certified by a chief justice, or any certificate of or copy certified by a clerk of assize or his deputy, or the clerk of the peace or his deputy, as the case may be, with intent to cause any person to be discharged from custody, or otherwise to prevent the due course of justice, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable . . . to be transported beyond the seas for any term not exceeding ten years." [Now penal servitude for not more than ten nor less than three years, or imprisonment with or without hard labour for not more than two years. See 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, p. 235), and 57 & 58 Vict. c. 56 (S. L. R.); and see post, tit. "Forgery."]

Questions of law which may be reserved.]—Under the Act the court of trial has authority to reserve, and the court for Crown Cases Reserved to entertain, not only questions of law which are raised by the evidence, but also questions of law which arise on a motion in arrest of judgment; R. v. Martin, 1 Den. 398; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 137; or as to the sufficiency of the indictment: R. v. Webb, 1 Den. 338; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 39: R. v. Craddock, 2 Den. 31; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 31: R. v. Garland, 11 Cox, 224 (Ir.); Ir. Rep. 3 C. L. 383; or as to the legality of the sentence. R. v. Summers, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 182; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 62: R. v. Garland (ubi supra): R. v. Horn, 15 Cox, 205. But a case cannot be reserved on questions which arise on demurrer; for as this court is empowered to hear and finally determine, to entertain a question of demurrer would be to take away the right of a prisoner to review the decision by writ of error, and ultimately in Parliament. R. v. Fadermann, 1 Den. 565; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 147. [And see Orders of Court, infra, p. 277.] Where a prisoner pleaded guilty to an indictment and after the judge left the assize town his attention was called to an unreported case (R. v. Dodd, 1877), which, if law, showed that the indictment was bad on its face, and he thereupon stated a case, requesting the opinion of the court for Crown Cases Reserved whether the conviction was good, it was held that the objection to the indictment was a question which had arisen at the trial so as to give the court for Crown Cases Reserved jurisdiction. R. v. Brown, 24 Q. B. D. 357; 59 L. J. (M. C.) 47; 16 Cox, 715. In this case the court distinguished a prior case to the contrary effect, R. v. Clark, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 54; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 16; 10 Cox, 338, but were prepared to overrule it had it been directly in point, and it was disapproved in R. v. Plummer [1902] 2 K. B. 339. Where it was discovered, on the day after the conviction of a prisoner for felony, that one of the jurors who tried the case had by mistake answered to the name of another juror on the panel when called, and so had served on the jury without objection, whereby it was suggested that there had been a mistrial, this was held not to be "a question of law which arose on the trial," and therefore that the court for Crown Cases Reserved had not jurisdiction to set aside the verdict and judgment, or to award a venire de novo. R. v. Mellor, Dears. & B. 468; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 121; 7 Cox, 454. It seems to have been thought that this court has in no case authority to award a venire de novo, or to order a new trial. Id. See also R. v. Martin, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 378; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 113; 12 Cox, 204. It did, however, award a venire de novo in R. v. Yeadon, L. & C. 81; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 70; 9 Cox, 91, in a case in which a court of quarter sessions had declined to receive a verdict of common assault on an indictment under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 29, and the jury had therefore returned a general verdict of guilty. In R. v. Saunders [1899] 1 Q. B. 490, the court directed the reversal of judgment against one of three prisoners who had not joined in an objection to the admissibility of evidence which had been taken on behalf of another prisoner, and was held to be a valid objection on a case reserved on the latter's behalf. They purported to act on the words "make such other order as justice may require," in s. 3 (ante, p. 275). In recent cases on a colonial Act in the same terms it was suggested that these words would authorize the grant of a new trial in misdemeanor. R. v. O'Keefe [1893] 15 N. S. W. Rep. (Law), 1; R. v. Smith [1896] 17 N. S. W. Rep. (Law), 104. This course, if ever possible, cannot, it would seem, be taken where the accused has been in jeopardy on the first trial. R. v. Gibson, 18 Q. B. D. 537; 56 L. J. (M. C.) 49; 16 Cox, 181: R. v. Saunders, ubi supra. It is uncertain whether, if a view is allowed during the trial, and if any evidence is given irregularly to the jury at such view, that fact is ground for a case for the consideration of the court for Crown Cases Reserved, or is matter to be placed upon the record, and the subject of a writ of error, or merely furnishes ground for an application to the home secretary for remission of the sentence. R. v. Martin, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 378; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 113. The court for Crown Cases Reserved cannot amend the indictment, R. v. Garland, 11 Cox, 224 (Ir.); Ir. Rep. 8 C. L. 383, but it can consider its sufficiency, even if no question is reserved upon it; R. v. Webb, 1 Den. 338; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 39; and may look at it even if it is not set out in the case. R. v. Williams, 2 Den. 61; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 106; 4 Cox, 356. The court cannot entertain questions of mere practice, such as whether a case was properly left to the jury on the unconfirmed testimony of an accomplice. R. v. Stubbs, Dears, 555; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 16; 7 Cox, 48. And it can only decide those points which are reserved for its opinion, although other points in the prisoner's favour appear on the face of the case, which are not reserved for the opinion of the court. R. v. Tyree, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 177; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 58; 6 Cox, 377.

Where an amendment, without which the indictment was bad, had been improperly made at the trial, after verdict, this court ordered the record to be restored to its original state, and a verdict of not guilty to be entered. R. v. Larkin, Dears. 365; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 125.

Counsel who appeared at the trial for the prisoner, but is not instructed to argue the case reserved, may cite authorities as amicus curiæ: R. v.

Thomas, L. & C. 313; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 22; 9 Cox, 376, 382, and has been allowed to argue the case. R. v. Moore, 61 L. J. (M. C.) 80; 17 Cox, 458. Prisoners jointly defended below are not entitled to appear separately on the argument of a case reserved. R. v. Bird, 5 Cox, 20 (C. C. R.).

Preparation and argument of case.]—By rules of court made 1st June, 1850, signed by all the judges, it is ordered, (1) "That when any case shall be transmitted by a court of oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery, or court of quarter sessions, for the consideration of this court, the original case signed by the judge or commissioner, or chairman of sessions, reserving the question of law, and seventeen copies of such case, one for each judge, and one for each party shall be delivered to the clerk of this court, at the Exchequer Chamber, Westminster, at least four days before the day appointed for the sitting of the said court."

(2) "That every case transmitted for the consideration of this court shall briefly state the question or questions of law reserved (R. v. Gray, 68 J. P. Rep. 40), and such facts only as raise the question or questions submitted; if the question turn upon the indictment, or upon any count thereof, then the case must set forth the indictment, or the particular count."

(3) "That no case be heard upon any demurrer to the pleadings."

(4) "That every case state whether judgment on the conviction was passed or postponed, or the execution of the judgment respited, and whether the person convicted be in prison, or has been discharged on recognizance of bail to appear and receive judgment, or to render himself in execution."

(5) "That when any case is intended to be argued by counsel, or by the parties, notice thereof be given to the clerk of this court at least two days previously to the sitting of the said court." See R. v. Gray, 68 J. P. Rep. 40 (C. C. R.).

(6) "That with every case delivered to the judges of this court (except such cases as shall be reserved by such judges) the fee payable to the clerks of the said judges shall not exceed the fee payable on "Demurrer and other paper books," as contained in the table of fees allowed and sanctioned by the judges pursuant to the statute, 7 W. 4, & 1 Vict. c. 30 (rep.)." [This table appears to have been superseded by the Crown Office Fees Order, 1886. See Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Practice, 676.]

The case should not contain hypothetical questions for the guidance of the court below on future occasions. R. v. Whitehead, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 33; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 186; 10 Cox, 234; nor statements of a jury which are not part of the verdict. R. v. Trebilcock, Dears. & B. 453, 457; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 103; 7 Cox, 408. It should state the facts briefly. R. v. Steer, 18 L. J. (M. C.) 30; 1 Den. 349; and be submitted in a complete form. R. v. Holloway, 1 Den. 370; 2 C. & K. 942; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 60; 3 Cox, 241. The judge stating the case may not adopt shorthand notes. R. v. Gray, ubi supra. If the case appears to omit a material point, counsel may properly communicate with the judge and ask for any amendment which appears necessary. R. v. Smith, 1 Den. 510, 512; 2 C. & K. 882; 4 Cox, 42. As to signing a case where the judge who tried the indictment dies, see R. v. Featherstone, Dears. 369; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 127. If material facts are omitted the case may be returned for amendment. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, s. 4 (ante, p. 275); R. v. Hey, 1 Den. 602, 604: R. v. Perkins, 2 Den. 459, 460. This will be done where the case is imperfectly stated, R. v. Gray, ubi supra, but not on the mere application of counsel. R. v. Hilton, Bell, 20, 24; 28 L. J. (M. C.) 28. And if, after being so sent back, it is returned substantially unaltered, the court will not interfere, nor receive affidavits to supplement its defects. R. v. Studd, 10 Cox, 258.

The cases are now (1904) lodged in the Crown Office, the King's coroner acting as the special officer of the court.

By the regulations made on Jan. 25, 1886, under the Prosecution of Offences Act, 1879 (St. R. & O. Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 4, tit. "Criminal Procedure, E.")—

"(4) Where it is brought to the notice of the director of public prosecutions that a case has been reserved for the opinion of the High Court of Justice under the Crown Cases Reserved Act, 1848 (ante, p. 271), and that counsel has not been instructed for the prosecution, he shall, if he thinks the case of sufficient importance or is so directed by the attorney-general, instruct counsel to appear for the prosecution."

Counsel, in arguing the case, must confine themselves to the facts as they appear on the case stated to the court. R. v. Smith, 1 Den. 510: R. v. Blakemore, 2 Den. 410; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 60. The counsel for the prisoner begins, and has a reply. R. v. Gate Fulford, Dears. & B. 74, 94; 7 Cox, 280. The court, however, will hear counsel for the prisoner, or for the prosecution, although no counsel appear on the other side. R. v. Garner, 1 Den. 329; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 1; R. v. Masters (ante, p. 272): R. v. Martin (ante, p. 276). Where no counsel appear, the lord chief justice or other judge presiding reads the case, and then judgment is pronounced as in other cases.

If the five judges differ on a question of law it is usual to have the case re-argued before all the judges. R. v. Burrell, L. & C. 354; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 54; 9 Cox, 368.

Costs of argument.]—The court which reserves a question of law for the consideration of this court has the power under 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 22 (ante, p. 249) to make an order for payment out of the local rate of the costs of the argument on the part of the prosecution. R. v. Cluderoy, 3 C. & K. 205: R. v. Woolley, 452. In the first of these cases the order seems to have been made before, in the second after, the argument in the C. C. R.

The C. C. R. itself rarely makes an order for costs. In R. v. Hornsea, Dears. 291; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 59, 62, n.; 6 Cox, 299, 302, n., which was an indictment for non-repair of a highway, the court refused to entertain a question of costs, as not being within their jurisdiction, although it was specially agreed that the court should have the same power with respect to such costs as the judge could legally have exercised at the trial. In R. v. Dolan [1855] Dears. 436, 445; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 59, 61, n.; 6 Cox, 449, 453, n., Lord Campbell, C.J., said that the court had no jurisdiction to tax costs and no taxing officer. In R. v. Lewis [1857] Dears. & B. 326, 328, n.; 7 Cox, 406, Cockburn, C.J., said that the C. C. R. had no power to order payment of the costs in the C. C. R., and that that power rested with the court reserving the case. But he said that it would be convenient that the officer of the court should certify the proper amount of costs to be allowed for the proceedings in the C. C. R., and that if necessary the court would make a rule for establishing this course of practice. No such rule has yet been made. Where an order for costs is made they are now taxable in the Central Office.

Sect. 2.

WRIT OF ERROR.

What.]—A writ of error is an original writ, formerly issued from the Petty Bag Office (the common law side of the Court of Chancery), but now issued (by virtue of R. S. C. of 31st January, 1889) from the Crown Office Department of the King's Bench Division. It is directed to the judge or judges of a court of record, requiring him or them to send the record and proceedings of the indictment, inquisition or information on which judgment has been pronounced, and in which error is alleged, to the court authorized to review the same, and is in the nature of a commission from the King to the judges of the superior court, by which they are authorized to examine the record upon which judgment was given in the inferior court, and, on such examination and a consideration of the errors assigned, to affirm or reverse the judgment according to law. (a) Finch, L. 484; F. N. B. Error; Termes de la Ley, Error; Bac. Abr., Error; 3 Bl. Com. 49.

To what courts.]—A writ of error does not lie on a summary conviction, but only on judgments of courts of record acting according to the common law. 1 Ld. Raym. 469; cas. temp. Holt, 184; Com. Dig. Pleader, 3 B. 7. It does not lie till after judgment, R. v. Seton, 7 T. R. 378; 4 R. R. 466; and is the only means of removing the record in a criminal case to a higher court after judgment. R. v. Seton, ubi supra: R. v. Yorkshire, West Riding JJ., 7 T. R. 467. It lies at the suit either of the subject, or of the crown. See Sanger v. U. S. [1891] 144 U. S. 310 (where the English cases are collected): Fox v. R., 10 Cox, 502 (Ir.): R. v. Levy, 6 Cox, 482 (Ir.). It is not now the practice for the High Court in England to issue a writ of error to a colonial court. See R. v. Lees, E. B. & E. 828; 27 L. J. (Q. B.) 403; and its authority to do so is doubtful. See ex parte Anderson, 3 E. & E. 487; 30 L. J. (Q. B.) 129; 25 & 26 Vict. c. 20. The remedy in such cases is by petition to the King in Council. See R. v. Bertrand, L. R. 1 P. C. 520: Re Dillett, 12 App. Cas. 459: Ex parte Carew [1897] App. Cas. 719: Wheeler, Privy Council Practice, 755.

On what grounds.]—It lies for every substantial defect appearing on the face of the record, for which the indictment might have been quashed, or which would have been fatal on demurrer, or in arrest of judgment, provided such defect is not cured by verdict. Until 1826 writs of error were frequently brought for trivial and purely formal errors. But 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21, declared certain defects in the indictment to be cured by verdict (ante, pp. 78, 84), and provided also that "judgment after verdict on indictments or informations shall not be stayed or reversed for want of a similiter (ante, p. 169), nor by reason that the jury process has been awarded to the wrong officer upon an insufficient suggestion (ante, p. 196), nor for any misnomer or wrong description of the officer returning the process, or of any of the jurors, nor because any person has served upon the jury who has not been returned by the sheriff or other officer" (ante, pp. 214, 226). And since 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 25, ante, p. 55) every objection for any formal defect apparent on the face of an indictment shall be taken by demurrer or motion to quash before the jury are sworn and not afterwards, and the court may order the indictment forthwith to be amended. And, independently of those statutes, it is a general rule of pleading at common law that, where an averment which is necessary for the support of the pleading is made but is imperfectly stated, and the verdict on an issue involving that averment is found, if it appears to the court after verdict that the verdict could not have been found on this issue without proof of this averment, then, after verdict, the defective averment, which might have been bad on demurrer, is cured by verdict. Heymann v. R., L. R. 8 Q. B. 102, 105. In pursuance of this rule, and independently of 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21, it was held that, assuming that an indictment for receiving goods obtained by false pretences might have been quashed or was bad on demurrer for not setting out the false pretences, the defect, if any, was cured by verdict. R. v. Goldsmith, L. R., 2 C. C. R. 74; 42 L. J. (M. C.) 94: Taylor v. R. [1895] 1 Q. B. 25; 61 L. J. (M. C.) 11 (see ante, p. 165). The rule does not apply to the case of the total omission of an essential averment, and such total omission is not cured by verdict. When it is said in the rule that the verdict could not have been found without proof of the averment, the meaning is, that the verdict could not have been found without finding this imperfect averment to have been proved in a sense adverse to the accused. See judgment of Brett, J.A., in Aspinall v. R., 2 Q. B. D. 48, 58; 46 L. J. (M. C.), 149, 150. But a writ of error is still the proper remedy in the case of every defect in substance in an indictment not cured by verdict, where a question of law has not been reserved for the judges of the court for Crown Cases Reserved (see ante, p. 271), e.g., for irregularity in awarding the jury process, for any material defect in the caption, for irregularity in the verdict or judgment, or any manifest error on the face of the record: 4 Bl. Com. 391; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 747. And if a question of law has been raised by demurrer, a writ of error is the only remedy, the court for Crown Cases Reserved in such a case having no jurisdiction. R. v. Fadermann, 1 Den. 565; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 147 (ante, p. 275).

(a) In O'Brien v. R., 26, L. R. (Ir.) 451, 523, Palles, C.B., raised the question whether, since the Judicature Acts the High Court could reverse, on writ of error, a decision of one of its judges sitting in a court of assize. The point has not been mooted in England.

Where the court appears by the indictment to have jurisdiction over the offence, it cannot be assigned as error that the offence was committed out of the jurisdiction of the court. Ex parte Newton, 4 E. & B. 869; 24 L. J. (Q. B.) 246; and failure to comply with the Vexatious Indictments Act, 1859, is not ground for a writ of error. Knowlden v. R., 5 B. & S. 532; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 219; 9 Cox, 483; Boaler v. R., 57 L. J. (M. C.) 85; 16 Cox, 488.

But a writ of error may be brought on an indictment for perjury on which judgment has been given, if it does not appear that the oath upon which the perjury is assigned has been taken in a judicial proceeding; Overton v. R., 4 Q. B. 83, 90; 12 L. J. (M. C.) 61; or that the court had authority to administer the oath; Lavey v. R., 2 Den. 504; 17 Q. B. 496; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 10 (Ex. Ch.); and see R. v. Hallett, 2 Den. 237; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 197 (C. C. R.): R. v. Chapman, 1 Den. 432; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 152 (C. C. R.); or that the defendant swore "falsely"; R. v. Oxley, 3 C. & K. 317. So, if an indictment be preferred for libellous words which are not indictable, and judgment be given thereon (as in R. v. Penny, 1 Ld. Raym. 153). In R. v. Mason, 2 T. R. 581; 1 R. R. 545, an indictment charging the defendant with obtaining money by false pretences without showing what the pretences were, was held to be insufficient, and such a defect was held to be ground for reversing the judgment. But this decision was disapproved in Heymann v. R., supra; and see R. v. Goldsmith, and Taylor v. R., supra. It would appear from those cases that the omission to set forth the false pretences, in an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences, is a defect which would be cured by verdict at common law, as well as under 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21 (ante, p. 78). If in an indictment for burglary it appeared that the prisoner broke and entered the dwelling-house with intent to commit a trespass or misdemeanor, and not a felony, error would lie. R. v. Powell, 2 Den. 403 (C. C. R.). And where value is of the essence of the offence, the omission of a statement of the value would render the indictment bad on error. In the same way, where local description is necessary (see ante, p. 67), its omission would be ground for a writ of error unless an amendment were allowed during the trial. So, also, where time is of the essence of the offence, as in burglary; see ante, p. 67.

An indictment charging a conspiracy to cheat and defraud certain tradesmen of divers quantities of their goods and chattels, was held insufficient on error, for not setting out the names or designating the class of persons intended to be defrauded. King v. R., 7 Q. B. 795; 14 L. J. (M. C.) 172; and see Lord Hale's Com. F. N. B., tit. "Error." The defect on which the court of Exchequer Chamber acted in the above case of King v. R. was, that the indictment charged a conspiracy to cheat and defraud certain liege subjects being tradesmen. It was held that such an allegation in such form in pleading meant certain definite tradesmen alleged to be known to the defendants at the time of the criminal agreement, and, therefore, that such definite tradesmen ought, in describing the conspiracy, to be named, or an excuse be averred for not naming them. If there had been added after the words being tradesmen the phrase, who should thereafter deal with the defendants, the indictment would have been sufficient according to R. v. Gill, 2 B. & Ald. 204; 20 R. R. 407; R. v. Gompertz, 9 Q. B. 824; Sydserff v. R., 11 Q. B. 245: R. v. Silverlock [1894] 2 Q. B. 766. See Aspinall v. R., 2 Q. B. D. 48, 62, 63; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 152, Brett, J. A. Where the defendant challenges a juror peremptorily, and the crown demurs, and judgment is wrongly given by the court in which the trial is proceeding against the defendant's right to a peremptory challenge, a court of error will reverse the whole proceedings. Gray v. R., 6 St. Tr., N. S. 117; 11 Cl. & F. 427; 8 Eng. Rep. 1164. But semble, there must be a regular judgment on an issue joined in law or in fact, on which to found the writ of error, and a mere order by the court that a juror challenged by the crown shall stand by, though irregular, is not ground of error. Id.; Mansell v. R., 8 St. Tr., N. S. 831; 8 E. & B. 54; Dears. & B. 375; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 4. So, also, where a challenge to the array is improperly overruled, it is error. O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1; 11 Cl. & F. 155; 8 Eng. Rep. 1061. If the verdict of the jury were returned during the absence of one of the jurors, it would be error. So, also, where it does not appear upon the record that the jurors were boni et legales homines. But where the record set out an award of venire to the sheriff, which required him to impanel and return a jury of good and lawful men of the county, and then proceeded to state that the sheriff, for the purpose aforesaid, impanelled and returned certain persons named, and arrayed them in one panel; it was held that by reasonable intendment the record showed that the persons named in the panel were good and lawful men of the county. Mansell v. R., 8 St. Tr., N. S. 831; 8 E. & B. 54; Dears. & B. 375; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 4. Error also may be assigned on a special verdict, where judgment has been passed on the defendant; R. v. Chadwick, 11 Q. B. 205; 17 L. J. (M. C.) 33; and on the omission of the allocutus, or demand of the defendant what he has to say why judgment shall not proceed against him. See O'Brien v. R., 7 St. Tr., N. S. 1, 361; 2 H. L. C. 465; 9 Eng. Rep. 1169. So, also, if judgment for corporal punishment be passed against a prisoner not present in court: 1 Ld. Raym. 267. It is not ground of error that the verdict is not entered of record when given: R. v. Richard Carlile, 2 St. Tr., N. S. 459; nor that entry of a partial acquittal is not made: O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1, 795; nor that continuances were not entered: Id. pp. 753, 791; but see 6 St. Tr., N. S. 552, n. If a general judgment be given on the whole of an indictment containing several counts, any one of which is bad in substance, the judgment will be reversed on error. O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1; 11 Cl. & F. 155; 8 Eng. Rep. 1061; Gregory v. R., 15 Q. B. 957. But where verdict and judgment have been entered on all counts, and one is good, error will lie as to the judgment severally entered on the bad counts. Holloway v. R., 2 Den. 287; 17 Q. B. 317. If an indictment be preferred at the quarter sessions for an offence not cognizable by justices of the peace, and the defendant be convicted and judgment passed upon him, the proceedings will be reversed on error: such as an indictment on a penal statute, where jurisdiction is not given to the sessions; 4 Mod. 379; 3 Salk. 188; or for a conspiracy, not within the exceptions of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 38, s. 1; or for larceny of documents of a court of law or equity. King v. R., 61 J. P. 663 (see ante, p. 126).

Duplicity in pleading is not ground of error. Nash v. R., 4 B. & S. 935; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 94.

If the judge in the exercise of his discretion discharge the jury on the ground of necessity, such exercise of his discretion cannot be reviewed in a court of error. Winsor v. R., L. R. 1 Q. B. 289, 390; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 121, 161 (Ex. Ch.); and see ante, p. 224.

Where evidence is given irregularly to the jury at a view permitted by the judge in the course of the trial (see ante, p. 212) it is not settled whether it is matter to be placed upon the record, and the subject of a writ of error, or is ground for a case for the consideration of the court for Crown Cases Reserved, or for an application to the Home Secretary for remission of the sentence. R. v. Martin, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 378; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 113. Error lies where an illegal judgment is given, or the prisoner is not properly arraigned. Fox v. R., 10 Cox, 502 (Ir.); 15 W. R. 106; and cf. R. v. Levy, 6 Cox, 482 (Ir.).

A writ of error also lies to reverse an outlawry; R. v. Wilkes, 19 St. Tr. 2527; 4 Burr. 2537; Wright v. R., 14 Q. B. 148; 16 L. J. (Q. B.) 10; 2 Cox, 91; 2 Hawk, c. 50, s. 11; Hand's Cr. Prac. 487, n. But if the outlawry is after conviction the reversal does not affect the conviction. Wright v. R. (ubi supra).

Fiat of attorney-general.]—By the Crown Office Rules, 1886, r. 184, "no writ of error shall lie without the fiat of the attorney-general having been first obtained." This expresses the practice as established by the cases below cited. Until the reign of Queen Anne, a writ of error was grantable in any criminal case only ex gratiâ regis, upon the law officers of the crown certifying that there was cause of error; Crawle v. Crawle, 1 Vern. 170; R. v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2527, 2550. But in the Aylesbury case, R. v. Patey, [1704], 2 Salk. 503; 14 East, 92, n.; 14 St. Tr. 862, n., ten of the judges declared their opinion that, in all cases under treason and felony, a writ of error was not merely of grace, but ought ex debito justitiæ to be granted; not meaning thereby that it was a writ of course, but that where there was probable error it ought not to be denied. In cases of treason or felony it was always in strict law, entirely in the breast of the crown whether the writ should be granted or refused. See 4 Bl. Com. 392; 2 Hawk. c. 50, s. 11; R. v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2527, 2551. In misdemeanors, also, the writ does not issue as a matter of course, but under the like fiat (R. v. Lees, 27 L. J. (Q. B.) 403), which however in these cases the attorney-general ought to grant whenever probable grounds are laid. It was said that the Court of King's Bench would order him to do so if he refuse; 4 Burr. 2551; but it has since been held that this is not so, and that the court will not interfere after he has exercised his discretion, and refused to grant a fiat. Ex parte Newton, 4 E. & B. 869; 16 C. B. 97; 24 L. J. (Q. B.) 246. In fact, it may now be treated as settled law that "no court in the kingdom has any controlling jurisdiction over the attorney-general as to the issue of his fiat." R. v. Comptroller of Patents [1899] 1 Q. B. 906, 914, Smith, L.J.; R. v. Clark, 7 W. R. 601; Re Pigott, 11 Cox, 311; 19 L. T. (N. S.) 114 (Ir.). But see R. v. Rowe, 2 Mol. Ir. Ch. 27. The clerk of the Crown Office (formerly of the Petty Bag) is not bound to issue the writ until the fiat is produced: Castro v. Murray, L. R., 10 Ex. 213; 44 L. J. (M. C.) 70. Where, therefore, it is intended to sue out a writ of error in a criminal case, the first step is to apply to the attorney-general for his fiat, and for this purpose a certificate signed by the prisoner's counsel, accompanied by an affidavit, or statutory declaration, if error in fact be alleged, should be submitted to the attorney-general. R. v. Wilkes, 4 Burr. 2550. It is uncertain whether a writ of error can be sued out in formâ pauperis, R. v. Stokes, 3 C. & K. 185, 189; and see ante, p. 190. One of several persons jointly convicted even of conspiracy may sue out error without the other. Wright v. R., 14 Q. B. 148; 16 L. J. (Q. B.) 10; 2 Cox, 91.

No fee seems ever to have been charged in England by the attorney-general for considering a writ of error for the purpose of deciding whether to issue his fiat. At one time a fee of 15 guineas was demanded by the attorney-general for Ireland; but the fee was held to be illegal. Ex parte Costello, Ir. Rep. 2 C. L. 380.

Procedure.]—The procedure on writs of error is now regulated by Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, rr. 183–215, and the forms in the Appendix to those rules.

Error from inferior court to King's Bench Division.]—"Error upon a judgment shall lie to the King's Bench Division." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 183. A præcipe, together with the attorney-general's fiat, must be taken to the Crown Office before the writ of error can be issued. A form of the attorney-general's fiat for writ of error on indictment at sessions is given in App. to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Form 125.

Issuing writ, and form of writ of error.]—On the filing of a præcipe and the production of the attorney-general's fiat, the writ of error, which must be prepared by the party or his solicitor, on parchment, is sealed and issued by the officers of the Crown Office. The form of a writ of error to an inferior court is given in App. to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Form 126. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 109, s. 38, which formerly regulated the matter, is repealed by 56 & 57 Vict. c. 54 (S. L. R.).

Upon delivering the writ of error to the clerk of the peace or other officer of the court to which it is directed, who has the custody of the indictment, he allows it and he makes up the record, and makes out the return to the Court. "The writ of error upon judgment given in inferior courts, with the return thereto, shall be filed at the Crown Office." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 185. The return is made by annexing the engrossment of the record of the judgment (the original need not be returned), and by indorsing the writ of error thus:—"The answer of A. B., one of the justices within mentioned."

(Signed) A. B. (L. S.)

Diminution of record.]—If the whole record be not certified, or not truly certified, by the inferior court to which the writ of error is directed, the plaintiff in error may allege a diminution of the record, showing that part of the record has been omitted and remains in the inferior court not certified, and if this be proved a certiorari will be awarded. King v. R., 7 Q. B. 795; 14 L. J. (M. C.) 172: Termes de la Ley, 249: Co. Ent. 232, 242: 4 Bl. Com. 390. Thus, where it was objected, on argument of a writ of error from the King's Bench to the Exchequer Chamber, that mention of a motion in arrest of judgment in the court below did not appear on the face of the record; it was held that it was then too late to take the objection, and Parke, B., said that in order to raise the question, the plaintiff in error should have alleged a diminution of the record. Dunn v. R., 12 Q. B. 1031, 1035, n.; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 14, 43. The court below can on motion amend its record. Gregory v. R., 15 Q. B. 957; and see Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 332.

Assignment of errors.]—When the writ has been duly returned, the next proceeding is the assignment of errors. But a motion may previously be made to quash the writ quia improvide emanavit, etc. See Alleyne v. R., 5 E. & B. 399; Dears. 505, 512; 24 L. J. (Q. B.) 282: R. v. Broome, 17 L. J. (Q. B.) 208; 2 Bail. C. C. 259; Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 204. On a charge of felony, the party suing out the writ must formerly have appeared in person to assign errors: 8 Rep. Crim. Law, 173: Mansell v. R., 8 St. Tr., N. S. 831; 8 E. & B. 54; Dears. & B. 375; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 4. But under Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, "The plaintiff in error shall assign errors in person or by his solicitor, and if in person and in custody shall be brought up into court for that purpose upon a writ of habeas corpus." R. 187. The expenses of the habeas corpus, and the gaolers' travelling charges, are borne by the plaintiff in error. "If the plaintiff in error assigns errors by his solicitor or in person and is not in custody, he may do so by delivering the assignment of errors in writing to be filed at the crown office." Id. r. 188. "If the plaintiff in error assigns errors in person and is in custody, he shall be brought into court and assign errors, and move that counsel may be assigned to him, and shall then deliver to the officer of the court in writing the assignment of errors to be filed at the crown office." Id. r. 189. "Upon delivery of the assignment of errors under the preceding rule an order of court shall be drawn up to commit the plaintiff in error to the King's prison, until the decision of the court upon the writ." Id. r. 190. "In misdemeanor the plaintiff in error need not assign errors in person, or have counsel assigned to him, or if in custody, be present at the hearing of the case or when judgment is given, unless the court shall otherwise order." Id. r. 191. The plaintiff in error can assign error in fact if matters which took place at the trial are omitted from the record; but the cases do not clearly indicate how far, if at all, the record can be contradicted. See R. v. Richard Carlile, 2 B. & Ad. 362, 971; 2 St. Tr., N. S. 459, 618.

A form of assignment of errors in the King's Bench Division is given in Appendix to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Form 129. If the plaintiff in error does not assign errors in proper time, the defendant may sign judgment of non pros. R. v. King, 14 L. J. (Q. B.) 86; 9 Jur. 551.

Joinder in error.]—"An order for the attorney-general or King's coroner and attorney to join in error within eight days after service may be drawn up at the crown office and be served, with a copy of the assignment of errors, on the prosecutor or his solicitor. Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 192. "If no joinder be filed within eight days, the plaintiff in error being personally present in court, upon a certificate of notice having been given to the attorney or solicitor-general, signed by him, or on his behalf, of such intended application, may move the court for an order nisi for judgment; and upon an affidavit of service of the order nisi upon the officer of the court from whence error is brought, the court may examine the record and give judgment of reversal, or such judgment as the court from which error is brought ought to have done." Id. r. 193. "If no joinder be filed within eight days, and the plaintiff in error be in custody, he may be brought into court by order if he be in the King's prison, or by habeas corpus if elsewhere, and the plaintiff in error, or his counsel may then move on an affidavit of service of the order to join in error, and that on search made at the crown office that it appears there is no joinder filed, for judgment for the plaintiff in error, and for the prisoner's discharge." Id. r. 194. When error is brought on a judgment for felony, and the crown does not join in error, the defendant will be discharged. R. v. Howes, 7 A. & E. 60 n.; 3 N. & M. 462; and see Alleyne v. R., 5 E. & B. 399; Dears. 505; 24 L. J. (Q. B.) 282, Ex. Ch. As to misdemeanor, see r. 202 (post, p. 288). "Joinder in error shall be filed at the crown office by the prosecutor, and a copy served on the plaintiff in error or his solicitor. Id. r. 195.

The Appendix to the Crown Office Rules contains a form of joinder in error (Form 130), and a form of entry of judgment for want of joinder in error (Form 133).

Entry of case for argument.]—"At any time after filing of the joinder in error the case may be put into the crown paper for argument upon the application of either party." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 196. A rule of court for a concilium is no longer necessary.

Paper books.]—"Two paper books for the use of the judges shall be delivered by the plaintiff in error at the crown office two days before the day appointed for hearing" (Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 197); and "shall be marked 'for the use of the judges in the King's Bench Division,' and not with the name of any particular judge." Id. r. 144. The paper books should contain copies of the writ of error, of the record, of the assignment of errors, and of the joinder in error. It was formerly necessary to state in the margin of the paper books the points intended to be argued, but this is no longer required. Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 325. "If paper books are not delivered the other party may, on the day following, deliver such copies as ought to have been so delivered by the party making default, and the party making default shall not be heard until he shall have paid for such copies or deposited at the crown office a sufficient sum to pay for the same. In default of both parties the case shall be struck out, unless otherwise ordered." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 146, which alters the old practice as stated in Sill v. R., 17 Jur. 208, n.; 16 L. T. (O. S.) 494.

Bail in error.]—"Where a writ of error has been brought by the defendant and not by the attorney-general, the defendant on the indictment on obtaining his writ of error, or consent for an appeal to the House of Lords, shall have the execution of the judgment stayed, and receive back the amount of any fine levied upon him upon the judgment, and further if in custody shall be entitled to be discharged from imprisonment on entering into a recognizance with two sufficient sureties to prosecute the writ of error in the Form No. 127, in the Appendix to the Crown Office Rules, 1886, before a judge of the High Court, or justice of the peace of the county, borough, or place where the defendant may be in custody. The bail to be justified in the usual manner, on twenty-four hours' notice to the prosecutor, or on such other notice as the judge, or justice of the peace, may order. Provided that in the case of any defendant under legal disability, it shall be sufficient if two persons to be appointed to be approved of by such judge or justice shall become bound by such recognizance on behalf of such defendant." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 199. This rule embodies, with some alterations, the provisions of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 68, s. 1 (rep.).

"Every such recognizance shall be filed at the crown office, and the King's coroner and attorney, or the master of the crown office, shall make out and deliver a certificate sealed with the seal of the office that such recognizance is duly filed of record, which certificate shall be a sufficient warrant to the gaoler having the custody of the plaintiff in error, to discharge him out of custody, and for the repayment of any fine which may have been imposed by the court by the person having in his possession the whole or any part of the fine levied in execution of such judgment. Provided that no person who shall have received any such money and have paid it over to any other person according to the course of the Exchequer shall be liable to repay to the defendant any part of the money so paid over." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 200.

Where the defendant has been discharged from prison without a proper recognizance being filed and certified, the court in which the conviction was had will order fresh process to issue for his apprehension and recommitment. Dugdale v. R., Dears. 254; 2 E. & B. 129; 6 Cox, 161; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 55. "If the plaintiff in error shall make default in prosecuting the writ of error with effect or in any other way break the conditions of his recognizance, the court may estreat the recognizance in a summary way without issuing a writ of scire facias, and order the writ of error to be quashed without any argument thereon, and in every such case the plaintiff in error shall forthwith be liable to execution upon the judgment." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 201. This rule embodies the provisions of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 68, s. 5, and 16 & 17 Vict. c. 32, s. 2, both now repealed.

Hearing.]—The presence in court of the plaintiff in error used to be necessary in all criminal cases (Howard v. R., 10 Cox, 54; 13 W. R. 316), unless dispensed with by leave of the court. Murray v. R., 7 Q. B. 700; 14 L. J. (Q. B.) 357. No provision is made by the Cr. Off. Rules as to the case where the plaintiff in error is in prison for felony, but the court can dispense with his presence. Richards v. R. [1897] 1 Q. B. 574; 66 L. J. (Q. B.) 459. Where the plaintiff in error is in prison for misdemeanor he need not if in custody be present in court at the argument or judgment "unless the court so order." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 191. As to the right of reply for the crown where the crown is defendant in error, see O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1; 11 Cl. & F. 155; 1 Cox, 413, and ante, p. 212.

Remand or discharge on judgment.]—"On judgment being given, an order, either for remanding the prisoners to undergo the remainder of their sentence, or for their discharge, shall be drawn up and lodged with the gaoler by the prosecutor." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 198.

Judgment of affirmance.]—If the judgment of the court below be affirmed, the following is the form of the entry of judgment of the King's Bench Division given in Appendix to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Form 131:—

Whereupon the King's Bench Division of his majesty's High Court of Justice, before the King himself, now here having seen and fully understood all and singular the premises aforesaid, and having examined and inspected as well the record and proceedings aforesaid, and the judgment thereon given as aforesaid, as the matter above assigned and alleged for error, it appears to the court here, but neither in the record and proceedings aforesaid, nor in giving the judgment aforesaid, is there any error. Therefore it is considered and adjudged by the said court here, that the said judgment be in all things affirmed.

16 & 17 Vict. c. 32, s. 4, which provided for the committal of a plaintiff in error who had personally appeared on proceedings on the writ, if the writ were quashed or the judgment affirmed, was repealed in 1892 (S. L. R.). Its place is taken by Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, rr. 203–206, infra. "Whenever the judgment against a plaintiff in error shall have been for the payment of a fine, and imprisonment until such fine be paid, either with or without imprisonment for a certain time, and the plaintiff in error shall have paid the fine, or the same or any part thereof shall have been levied and shall have been received back under the provisions of rr. 199 and 200 (ante, pp. 285, 286), and the judgment upon writ of error brought shall be affirmed, the plaintiff in error shall not be entitled, by reason of such payment as aforesaid, to be discharged from imprisonment, notwithstanding the expiration of any certain time of imprisonment for which the original judgment shall have been given until the fine shall be again paid." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 203. "When a recognizance on bail in error shall have been estreated, or judgment been affirmed, or writ of error been quashed on an affidavit or a certificate of the proper officer of the court to any such effect, and that default has been made for the space of four days in rendering the plaintiff in error to prison, a judge at chambers may issue his warrant to cause the defendant to be apprehended and imprisoned pursuant to and in execution of the judgment on an ex parte application by the prosecutor." Id. r. 204. "Whenever a plaintiff in error shall be committed by the court in execution, of the judgment given against such plaintiff in error, and whenever a plaintiff in error shall, by virtue of any warrant or in other manner, be rendered to prison in execution of such judgment, the imprisonment (if imprisonment shall not have commenced under such execution) shall be reckoned to begin from the day when such plaintiff in error shall be in actual custody in the prison in which he may have been adjudged to be imprisoned under such judgment; and if the plaintiff in error shall have been discharged from imprisonment on giving bail in error, as is in these rules before mentioned, such plaintiff in error shall be imprisoned for such further period in the same prison as with the time during which such plaintiff in error may already have been imprisoned under such execution shall be equal to the period for which he was adjudged to be imprisoned as aforesaid." Id. r. 205. "Whenever default shall have been made in rendering a plaintiff in error to prison in execution of a judgment for misdemeanor, and a warrant shall have been issued against such plaintiff in error to enforce such render to prison, according to the provisions of these rules, such plaintiff in error shall be liable to pay the costs and charges of such render; and if the prosecutor shall, before the expiration of the plaintiff in error's imprisonment, have caused the amount of such costs and charges to be ascertained by one of the masters at the crown office (now by the Central Taxing Office), and shall have left with the said plaintiff in error, and with the keeper of the prison or his deputy, a certificate under the hand of such master, of the amount of such costs so ascertained, then the said plaintiff in error shall not be discharged out of custody until such costs and charges shall have been paid, or until an order for such discharge has been made by a court exercising bankruptcy jurisdiction." Id. r. 206.

By Cr. Off. Rules, 1866, r. 179, which is applied by r. 186 to all judgments upon writs of error:—"The court on giving final judgment or the Court of Appeal on affirmance (see post, p. 289), may, if they shall so think fit, on the application of the defendant then present, respite the execution of the judgment for such time as may be necessary for the defendant to obtain the attorney-general's fiat for a writ of error, or consent for an appeal to the House of Lords (see post, p. 290), upon the defendant entering into a recognizance with two sufficient sureties, upon such terms as the court may order, to render himself into custody or to prosecute his writ of error or appeal with effect, and may order the period of imprisonment, if that be part of the sentence, to commence on the day on which the party shall be actually taken to and confined in prison."

Judgment of reversal.]—If the judgment of the court below be reversed, the following is the form of the entry of judgment of the King's Bench Division, given in Appendix to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Form 132:—

[As in Form 131 (ante, p. 286) to the words "it appears"] to the said court here, that in the record and proceedings aforesaid, and also in giving the judgment aforesaid, there is manifest error. Therefore, it is considered and adjudged by the said court here, that the judgment aforesaid for the errors aforesaid, and for other errors, appearing on the record and proceedings aforesaid, be reversed, annulled, and altogether held for nothing. And that the said T. B. be restored to all things which by reason of the judgment and proceedings aforesaid he has lost, and that he depart hence without day in this behalf. [When the judgment of the court below is amended, vary this form accordingly.]

"Whenever any writ of error shall be brought for the reversal of any judgment in misdemeanor and error shall be assigned thereon, no judgment of reversal shall be entered either for want of a joinder, or otherwise, without the order of the court in which such writ of error shall be pending, pronounced in open court; and upon a certificate, signed by or on behalf of the attorney or solicitor-general, that notice has been given to one of them of such intended application, and if there be no joinder in error such court may proceed to examine the record in error, and give such judgment thereon as the court from which error is brought ought to have done, although no joinder in error may have been filed." Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 202.

Upon the reversal of a judgment against any person convicted of any offence, the judgment, execution and all former proceedings become thereby absolutely null and void. If living he (or if dead, his heir or personal representative, as the case may be) will be entitled to be restored to all things which he may have lost by such erroneous judgment and proceedings, and shall stand in every respect as if he had never been charged with the offence in respect of which judgment was pronounced against him. But a judgment reversed is no bar to a second indictment. R. v. Drury, 3 C. & K. 193, 196; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 189 (and see ante, p. 172).

Amending of judgment below.]—By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, s. 5, "whenever any writ of error shall be brought upon any judgment on any indictment, information, presentment, or inquisition, in any criminal case, and the court of error shall reverse the judgment, it shall be competent for such court of error either to pronounce the proper judgment, or to remit the record to the court below, in order that such court may pronounce the proper judgment upon such indictment, information, presentment, or inquisition." See the observations of Lord Campbell, C.J., on this enactment, in Holloway v. R., 2 Den. 287; 17 Q. B. 317. Prior to this enactment, if the court below had pronounced an erroneous judgment, the court of error had no power to pronounce the proper judgment, or to remit the record to the court below, but were bound to reverse the judgment and discharge the defendant. Bourne v. R., 7 A. & E. 58; 6 L. J. (M. C.) 129: R. v. Drury, 3 C. & K. 193; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 189.

Error from the King's Bench Division to the Court of Appeal.]—"No appeal shall lie from any judgment of the High Court of Justice in any criminal cause or matter save for some error of law apparent on the record, as to which no question shall have been reserved for the consideration of the judges under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78." 36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, s. 47 (ante, p. 272). Such appeal in England is by writ of error only. R. v. Steel, 2 Q. B. D. 37; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 1: R. v. Fletcher, 2 Q. B. D. 43; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 4: R. v. Foote, 10 Q. B. D. 378: Ex parte Woodhall, 20 Q. B. D. 832: R. v. Rudge, 16 Q. B. D. 459; 55 L. J. (M. C.) 112. In Ireland the proceedings are by way of appeal. O'Brien v. R., 26 L. R. (Ir.), 451. The powers of the court of Exchequer Chamber in England to correct errors in judgments of the court of King's Bench under 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 70, s. 8 (see Wright v. R., 1 A. & E. 434; 3 N. & M. 192), have not passed to the Court of Appeal, and the section was repealed in 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 91, S. L. R.). The practice in England is now regulated by the Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, and not by the practice of the Exchequer Chamber, as to which see Mansell v. R., 8 St. Tr., N. S. 831; 8 E. & B. 54; Dears. & B. 375; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 4.

The rules affecting the practice are as follows:—Cr. Off. Rules, 1886: "Every writ of error from a judgment of the King's Bench Division of the High Court shall be made returnable before the Court of Appeal, and served by delivery at the crown office" (r. 207). "Upon delivery of the writ of error the prosecutor shall enter the proceedings up to judgment on the roll, and carry it into the crown office, and if the prosecutor does not, within a reasonable time, carry in the roll, the plaintiff in error may obtain a judge's order upon a summons to compel him to do so" (r. 208). "When the roll has been carried in, the plaintiff in error, on application to the King's coroner and attorney or the master of the crown office, may obtain a memorandum or certificate of the allowance of the writ of error for service upon the defendant in error or his solicitor" (r. 209). "The plaintiff in error, within twenty days after the allowance of the writ of error, shall make a transcript of the record on parchment and lodge it at the crown office, and if the record be not transcribed within such time the defendant in error may move the Court of Appeal for leave to sign judgment of non prosequitur at the crown office" (r. 210). "When the transcript has been lodged it shall be annexed to the writ of error, and (on a return made and signed by the Lord Chief Justice of England) delivered into the Court of Appeal by the proper officer at the crown office" (r. 211). "The plaintiff in error shall, within eight days after delivery of the record into the Court of Appeal, assign errors thereon" (r. 212). "Upon filing of the joinder in error the case shall be put into the list of appeals for argument, upon application of either party" (r. 213). "The rules as to assigning errors and subsequent proceedings up to judgment in the King's Bench Division shall apply to the Court of Appeal" (r. 214). "Upon the judgment of the Court of Appeal being pronounced in favour of the plaintiff in error, the court may either pronounce the proper judgment and order his discharge, if in custody, or remit the record to the King's Bench Division, to be dealt with according to law" (r. 215): see ante, p. 288.

For form of attorney-general's fiat for writ of error from King's Bench Division to Court of Appeal, see App. to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Form 134; for form of writ of error from King's Bench Division to Court of Appeal, Id., Form 135; for form of roll, Id., Form 112; for form of memorandum of allowance of writ of error, Id., Form 136; for form of statement of grounds of error to be engrossed on copy memorandum of allowance, Id., Form 137; for instances of writs of error in the C. A., see Aspinall v. R., 2 Q. B. D. 48: Bradlaugh v. R., 3 Q. B. D. 607: Castro v. R., 5 Q. B. D. 490.

Appeal to the House of Lords.]—By the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 59), s. 3, an appeal lies to the House of Lords from the judgment of the Court of Appeal on a writ of error. By s. 4, "Every appeal shall be brought by way of petition to the House of Lords, praying that the matter of the order or judgment appealed against may be reviewed before his majesty the King in his court of parliament, in order that the said court may determine what of right, and according to the law and custom of this realm, ought to be done in the subject-matter of such appeal." And by s. 10, "An appeal shall not be entertained by the House of Lords without the consent of the attorney-general or other law officer of the crown in any case where proceedings in error or on appeal could not hitherto have been had in the House of Lords without the fiat and consent of such officer." The only instance in which this procedure has been used on a writ of error is Castro v. Reg., 6 App. Cas. 229. As to form of præcipe and petition and fiat under the old H. L. practice, see R. v. Lavey, 2 Den. 512 n.

Costs.]—The High Court and Court of Appeal have no jurisdiction to give costs on a writ of error except in cases where the unsuccessful party is under recognizance. See Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 324. The jurisdiction of the House of Lords as to costs is stated in West Ham Guardians v. Bethnal Green Churchwardens [1896] App. Cas. 477; 65 L. J. (M. C.) 201.

Sect. 8.

Bill of Exceptions.

It was long considered clear law that a bill of exceptions would not lie in any criminal case, and in cases of treason and felony a bill of exceptions has never been allowed. Bac. Abr., Bill of Exceptions. In a case of felony, In re Haynes and Rice [1846] 3 Jones & Latouche, 568, Sir E. Sugden, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, refused a writ for a bill of exceptions; saying, "having regard to the terms of the 13 Edw. 1 (stat. West. sec. c. 31) and of the Irish Act, 28 G. 3, c. 31, and to the authorities, that a bill of exceptions cannot be taken in a case like this, particularly Sir Harry Vane's case (6 St. Tr. 119, 130; 1 Sid. 85; 1 Keble, 324; 1 Lev. 68; Kelyng (J.), 15 (5)), and R. v. McDonnell (1 Hud. & Br. (Ir.) 439), and having regard to the circumstance that there is no authority in favour of the Statute of Westminster applying to a criminal case like this, I am of opinion, on a review of all the authorities, that upon this application there should be no rule." It was at one time considered that a bill of exceptions would lie in cases of misdemeanor. R. v. Bishop of Coventry, 1 Leon. 5: R. v. Higgins, 1 Vent. 366: R. v. Nutt, 1 Barnard (K. B.), 307: R. v. Preston-on-the-Hill, Cas. (K.B.) temp. Hardw. 249; 2 Str. 1040. In R. v. Alleyne, Q. B., Dec. 1, 1851, where the defendants were indicted for obtaining money by false pretences, and for a conspiracy to defraud, a bill of exceptions was tendered to the admissibility of certain documents in evidence, Lord Campbell, C.J., stated that it was the first time he had ever known a bill of exceptions in a criminal case; but after hearing arguments at chambers, his lordship sealed the bill of exceptions, leaving the question whether it would lie to be argued in the court of error. MS. But his lordship subsequently stated that, having further considered the matter, and conferred with other judges, he was of opinion that no bill of exceptions lies in any criminal case, not even in misdemeanor. R. v. Brown, Q. B., Feb. 1858. The same point had been decided in R. v. Edmonds, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 785, 883. See also R. v. Alleyne, Dears. 505: Mansell v. R., 8 St. Tr., N. S. 831: 8 E. & B. 54; Dears. & B. 375; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 4: R. v. Jelly, 10 Cox, 553.

These rulings appear to dispose of the opinion once entertained that if a challenge, whether to the array or to the polls, be overruled without demurrer, the ruling of the judge might be made the subject of a bill of exceptions. Bac. Abr., Juries (E.) 12; 2 Co. Inst. 427; R. v. Worcester [1683] Skin. 101.

Sect. 4.

new trial.

1. A writ of certiorari will not go to bring up any indictment from an inferior court after verdict, for the purpose of granting a new trial. R. v. Oxfordshire, 13 East, 411, 416: 12 R. R. 486, Ellenborough, L.C.J. And see ante, p. 132.

2. It appears to be now settled that a new trial cannot be granted in felony, even where the felony is tried in the High Court. R. v. Bertrand, L. R. 1 P. C. 520; 36 L. J. (P. C.) 51: R. v. Murphy, L. R. 2 P. C. 535; 38 L. J. (P. C.) 53. These decisions dissent from R. v. Scaife, 17 Q. B. 238; 2 Den. 281; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 229, so far as that case dealt with new trials as distinct from venire de novo (post, p. 294); and adopt the statement of the law in R. v. Mawbey, 6 T. R. 619, 638; 3 R. R. 282. See also 1 Chit. Cr. L. 658; Corner, Cr. Pr. 161: R. v. Lea, 2 Mood. C. C. 9: R. v. Eduljee Byramjee, 5 Moore P. C. 276, 289; 13 Eng. Rep. 496.

3. Where an indictment for misdemeanor has been preferred in the King's Bench Division, or removed into that court by certiorari, a new trial may, after conviction, be moved for, on the ground that the prosecutor has omitted to give due notice of trial, or that the verdict has been against the weight of the evidence, after allowing for presumptions in favour of innocence (see 1 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.), 104: Best, Evidence (8th ed.), 390; R. v. Stytche [1901] 20 N. Z. L. R., 744), or contrary to evidence, or to the direction of the judge, or on the ground that there was no evidence to warrant the conviction (R. v. Sandoval, 3 Times R. 411; 16 Cox, 206), or for the improper reception or rejection of evidence (R. v. Berger [1894] 1 Q. B. 823; 63 L. J. Q. B., 529), or for any other mistake or misdirection of the judge, or for any gross misbehaviour of the jury among themselves, or for surprise, or for any other cause, where it shall appear to the court that a new trial will further the ends of justice (3 Bl. Com. 387; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 654: Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 350: R. v. Whitehouse, Dears. 1). It is said that where there appears to be sufficient evidence to support the indictment, after rejecting any improper evidence which may have been received, the rule for a new trial will be refused. 1 East, P. C. 354. But on this point see R. v. Gibson, 18 Q. B. D. 537; 56 L. J. (M. C.) 49.

It would seem that a motion may also be made for judgment non obstante veredicto, as an alternative to a new trial. See R. v. Platts, 48 L. J. Q. B. 818; 28 W. R. 915, per Lush, J., and Crown Office Rules, 1886, r. 166, post, p. 293.

After acquittal of the defendant, in general, a new trial will not be granted. R. v. Mann, 4 M. & Sel. 337; 16 R. R. 480: R. v. Wandsworth, 1 B. & Ald. 63: R. v. Sutton, 5 B. & Ad. 52; 2 L. J. (M. C.) 75. But where the verdict has been obtained by fraud of the defendant, or in consequence of irregularity in his proceedings, as by keeping back witnesses for the prosecution, or neglecting to give due notice of trial, a new trial will be granted. A new trial has been granted, where after verdict it was discovered that an infant not returned on the panel, had served on the jury. R. v. Tremearne, 5 B. & C. 254; 29 R. R. 234. But it would seem that such an occurrence, if not discovered till after verdict, would not affect the judgment. See 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21 (ante, p. 279). In cases where the object of the proceeding substantially is to try a civil right, and the verdict would bind the right, as in cases of indictments for non-repair of a highway or bridge, it has been held that a new trial may be had after verdict for the defendant, if evidence have been improperly received, or there have been misdirection, or a verdict contrary to the evidence. R. v. Yorkshire (West Riding), 2 East, 353, n.; 6 R. R. 447, n.: R. v. Chorley, 12 Q. B. 515: R. v. Cricklade, 3 E. & B. 947, n. An indictment for obstructing a navigation, or a highway, was held not to be within this latter rule, inasmuch as in such a case the defendant is liable on conviction to fine and imprisonment, and the verdict of acquittal does not bind any right. R. v. Russell, 3 E. & B. 942; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 173: R. v. Johnson, 2 E. & E. 613; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 133: R. v. Duncan, 7 Q. B. D. 198; 50 L. J. (M. C.) 95. And even where the object of the proceeding is to try a civil right, and the verdict would bind the right, as in cases of indictments for non-repair of a highway or bridge, it has been held that after a verdict of not guilty has been returned a new trial will not be granted; but that under very special circumstances the court may order all proceedings upon the judgment to be suspended, so as to give an opportunity for the question to be again raised upon a fresh indictment. R. v. Southampton (Inhabitants), 19 Q. B. D. 590; 56 L. J. (M. C.) 112, 118. In R. v. North Eastern Railway Co., 70 L. J. K. B. 584; 19 Cox, 682, the defendants were indicted for obstructing a highway. The judge at the trial directed the jury to acquit on the first count on the ground that the defendants were by their special Acts entitled to do the acts on which the count was framed, and the jury acquitted on the other counts. A motion to stay entry of judgment on the ground of misdirection was refused, on the ground that the entry of judgment would not prevent the prosecutors from indicting again if the obstruction continued.

A new trial is allowed only in cases where there has been a general verdict; where a special verdict has been returned, a venire de novo is awarded. 1 Chit. Cr. L. 654 (post, p. 294). If the jury find a verdict for a sum certain, according to a calculation which does not warrant the amount, it is a ground for a new trial. R. v. Grimwood, 1 Price, 369.

It has been said that, as a general rule, no motion for a new trial or for a venire de novo (see post, p. 294), in a criminal case, ought to be made after motion in arrest of judgment; but the court of King's Bench, in its discretion, heard motions in arrest of judgment before applications for a new trial. R. v. Rowlands, 2 Den. 364, at 386: see R. v. Mawbey, 6 T. R. 619, 627; 3 R. R. 282; Bac. Abr., Trial (L.), 1. And a motion for judgment non obstante veredicto, may be coupled with the motion for a new trial as an alternative remedy. R. v. Platts, 28 W. R. 915. No motion for a new trial is allowed, unless the defendant, or, if more than one, the defendants who have been convicted, be present in court when the motion is made. R. v. Lord Cochrane, 3 M. & Sel. 10, n.: R. v. Caudwell, 17 Q. B. 503; 1 Den. 372, n.; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 48. But this rule does not apply where the offence of which the defendant has been convicted is punishable by a fine only; R. v. Parkinson, 2 Den. 459; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 48, n. 2; or where the defendant is in custody on criminal process. R. v. Hollingberry, 4 B. & C. 329. Where one or more of several defendants have been convicted, and another or others acquitted, a new trial may be granted with respect to the former only. R. v. Mawbey, 6 T. R. 619. But in the case of an indictment for conspiracy if a new trial is granted as to one person convicted it must be granted as to all. R. v. Gompertz, 9 Q. B. 824, 842. Affidavits to jurors are not admissible to explain their verdict; but they may be read to repel charges of misconduct on the part of the jury; and where there is a doubt upon the judge's report as to what actually passed at the time of delivering the verdict, information may be received either from a juryman or any person present when it was delivered. R. v. Woodfall, 5 Burr. 2661, 2667.

The court of King's Bench would not grant a certiorari to remove an indictment and the proceedings thereon at the assizes, after verdict and before judgment, in order to found an application for a new trial upon the judge's report of the evidence, upon the ground that the verdict was against evidence, and against the direction of the judge. R. v. Oxfordshire, 13 East, 411; 12 R. R. 486. But when a special verdict had been found at the assizes, it could be removed by certiorari to be argued and decided in the King's Bench. R. v. Hazel, 1 Leach, 368, 370; R. v. Huggins, 2 Ld. Raym. 1574, 1578, 17 St. Tr. 309. Since the amalgamation of courts of assize with the High Court no certiorari is now needed, and the High Court (K. B. D.) will direct the officer to bring the proceedings before it. R. v. Dudley, 14 Q. B. D. 273, 560. In R. v. Parke [1903] 2 K. B. 432, 439, it was held that the Central Criminal Court had been made part of the High Court by ss. 16, 29, of the Judicature Act, 1873. But it has not yet been determined whether the amalgamation of these courts with the High Court gives any right to move for a new trial where such right did not previously exist. R. v. Marshall [1899] 34 L. J. N. 48.

On the transfer to the Court of Appeal of the power to grant new trials in civil cases in the King's Bench Division, the jurisdiction of the King's Bench Division as to new trials in criminal cases was specifically preserved. 53 & 54 Vict. c. 44, ss. 1, 4.

The procedure on motions for new trials in criminal cases is regulated by the Cr. Off. Rules, 1886:—"Applications for a new trial, or to enter judgment non obstante veredicto, or to arrest judgment where such applications may by law be made, shall be by motion for an order nisi. Such motion shall be made to a divisional court of the King's Bench Division, and in cases tried in London or Middlesex within eight days after the trial, or on the first subsequent day on which a divisional court shall sit to hear motions on the crown side, or if the trial has been had at the assizes, within the first seven days after the last day of the sittings on the circuits for England and Wales; the time of the vacations shall not be reckoned in the computation of time for moving" (r. 166). "The time in either case may be extended by the court or a judge. The grounds upon which the order was granted shall be stated in the order" (r. 167). "A copy of such order shall be served on the opposite party within four days from the time of the same being granted" (r. 168). "On moving for a new trial on indictment, information, or inquisition, all the defendants, if more than one, who are not either in custody, or who are only liable to a fine, must be present in court, unless the court shall otherwise order" (r. 169).

The procedure was not affected by the Common Law Procedure Acts (R. v. Stephens, 7 B. & S. 710, 724), nor by the Rules of the Supreme Court (38 & 39 Vict. c. 77, s. 19: R. S. C. O. 68).

The motion is made either upon the judge's notes of the trial, or upon affidavit. The judge's notes are bespoken of the judge's clerk, as in civil cases. If a rule nisi be granted, it is drawn up as upon any other motion; Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pract. 253; and is served on the solicitor for the prosecution; or if it be a case where a new trial can be granted on the motion of the prosecutor, on the solicitor for the defendant, and the associate of the circuit on which the case was tried, in order that he may return the postea. It is then put into the crown paper, and is called on in its turn. If the motion has been made on affidavits, they are filed, and the opposite party must take office copies of them before he is allowed to show cause. When the case is called on for argument, the judge's notes and the affidavits are read, and where there is a printed copy or a shorthand writer's notes of the trial, the general accuracy of which is spoken to by the counsel on both sides, copies of the report may, for convenience' sake, be referred to while the judge's notes are read. R. v. Rowlands, 2 Den. 264; 17 Q. B. 671, where each of the judges was furnished with a copy. The court then either makes the rule absolute or discharges it, with or without costs. The following is the form of a rule absolute for a new trial :—

Monday, 2 June,
Yorkshire,
The King against
M. S. and T. R.

Upon hearing counsel on both sides, it is ordered that the verdict of guilty obtained for the Crown at the last Spring Assizes holden in and for the county of York, in this prosecution, be set aside, and a new trial had.

Mr. —— for the prosecution.
Mr. —— for the defendants.

Where a new trial is ordered of an indictment removed by certiorari into the King's Bench Division, at the instance of the defendant, the court may, in its discretion, order that the costs shall abide the event of the new trial. R. v. Whitehouse, Dears. 1; see R. v. Ford, 1 Nev. & M. 776.

When the rule has been made absolute, fresh notice of trial must be given, and the case proceeds as if no trial had taken place. See Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 253. Continuances are now abolished; Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 155; and need no longer be entered on the record after an order for a new trial.

There is no appeal to the court of appeal from the judgment or order of the King's Bench division granting or refusing a new trial in a criminal case. The decision can be questioned, if at all, only by writ of error. 36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, s. 47; see ante, p. 289.

Sect. 5.

venire de novo.

It has already been stated that the court of trial during the course of the trial has power in certain events to discharge the jury, and direct a fresh jury to be sworn. See ante, pp. 213, 223. A like power is said to exist to award the writ of a venire facias de novo juratores after verdict, where there has been some irregularity in the proceedings not affecting the merits, but amounting to a mistrial, i.e., cases of defect of jurisdiction in respect of time, place, and person, or cases of verdicts so imperfect (1 Wils. 56), or so insufficiently worded, or so ambiguous or inconsistent that no judgment can be founded thereon. Evans v. R., 7 Cox, 151 (Ir.): R. v. Murphy, L. R. 2 P. C. 535, 538. This has been held as to a defective special verdict. R. v. Woodfall, 5 Burr. 2661. And see R. v. Oxfordshire, 13 East, 411, 416, n. (b); 16 R. R. 336; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 651; 2 Tidd's Prac. 905; Burn's J. (30th ed.), New Trial: R. v. Day, Sayer, 202: R. v. Peters, 1 Burr. 568; Bac. Abr., Trial (L.): R. v. Mayor of Oxford, 3 Nev. & M. 877.

A court of error has power to award a venire de novo (and it is said to go as matter of right and not to be discretionary like a new trial) on a writ of error in cases of mistrial of treason, felony, or misdemeanor; e.g., where the defendant was denied his right of challenge; R. v. Edmonds, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 785; 4 B. & Ald. 471; 23 R. R. 350: Gray v. R., 6 St. Tr., N. S. 117, 158; 11 Cl. & F. 427; 8 Eng. Rep. 1164, or the jury process has been misawarded; Campbell v. R., 11 Q. B. 799; 17 L. J. (M. C.) 89; but see 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 21; (ante, p. 279), or where the jury has been improperly chosen or irregularly returned, and perhaps in some cases of misconduct by the jury, discovered after judgment. See 2 Tidd's Prac. 922: Witham v. Lewis, 1 Wils. (K. B.) 48: R. v. Yeadon, L. & C. 81; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 70. It has, however, been held that in a case of felony, where the indictment is good, and the prisoner has been given in charge to a jury duly impanelled, chosen, and sworn, and a verdict has been returned, and judgment given, a venire de novo will not lie, although there may have been conduct on the part of the jury which the court considers unsatisfactory. R. v. Murphy, L. R., 2 P. C. 535; 38 L. J. (P. C.) 53. R. v. Fowler, 4 B. & Ald. 273, which at first sight appears to be an authority to the contrary, was explained in R. v. Murphy, supra, to be in fact no decision on this point. The court of error can also, it seems, award a venire de novo in felony on an imperfect verdict: per Blackburn, J., in Winsor v. R., 35 L. J. (M. C.) 121, 133, citing Campbell v. R., 11 Q. B. 799; 17 L. J. (M. C.) 89. When a writ of venire facias de novo is awarded, the parties stand precisely as they did before the first trial, and the whole of the facts are to be reheard.

The following is the form of order by a court of error after prayer of judgment:—"And because it appears to the said court here that the said verdict so given against O. W. K. as aforesaid was unduly given; therefore the said verdict is by the court here vacated and made void, and all other process ceasing against the jury before impanelled, the sheriff, of, etc., is commanded so that he cause a jury anew thereupon to come, etc., by whom the truth of the matter may be better known," etc. [And see R. v. Mawbey, 6 T. R. 619, 640; 3 R. R. 282.]

The following is the form of a venire de novo at quarter sessions, in a case of felony, where there has been a mistrial:—

Therefore let a new jury come before the justices at the next general quarter sessions of the peace, to be holden at Chichester, in and for the said county, to try whether the defendants or either of them are guilty of the premises in the indictment charged against them or not; because as well W. B. L., who prosecutes for our lord the King, as the said defendants, have put themselves upon the jury: the same day, etc.; at which last-mentioned general quarter sessions, holden at Chichester aforesaid, on, etc., before, etc., justices of our said lord the King, assigned to keep the peace in the said county, also to hear and determine divers felonies, etc., committed in the county aforesaid, come as well the said W. B. L., who prosecutes for our lord the King, as the defendants in their proper persons, etc.

PART II.

EVIDENCE GENERALLY.

CHAPTER I.

WHAT ALLEGATIONS MUST BE PROVED.

WHERE the defendant pleads the general issue, "not guilty" (see ante, p. 179), the prosecutor is obliged to prove at the trial every fact or circumstance stated in the indictment which is material and necessary to constitute the offence charged, as to which see ante, pp. 51–85.

Where the replication or other pleading on the part of the prosecution consists of a general traverse of the defendant's pleading, the defendant must prove the facts thus traversed and put in issue.

Caution is necessary as to the evidence adduced for the prosecution, because in criminal cases, if any evidence not legally admissible against the prisoner is left to the jury, and they find him guilty, the conviction is bad, notwithstanding that there was other evidence before them properly admitted, and sufficient of itself to warrant a conviction. R. v. Gibson, 18 Q. B. D. 537; 56 L. J. (M. C.) 49: cf. Makin v. Att.-Gen. for N.S.W. [1894] App. Cas. 57; 63 L. J. (P. C.) 41; 17 Cox, 704: R. v. Saunders [1899] 1 Q. B. 490; 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 298.

Variance between the indictment and evidence.]—The following statutes regulate the amendment of variances between the description of an offence in the indictment and the evidence given: 7 G. 4 c. 64, s. 19: 11 & 12 Vict. c. 46, s. 4; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 10; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, ss. 1, 2, 3, 30. The text of the statutes is printed ante, pp. 51–55.

Amendment, when made.]—Under these statutes the amendment must be made before the case goes to the jury. R. v. Frost, Dears. 474; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 116: R. v. Larkin, Dears. 365; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 125. In R. v. Fullarton, 6 Cox, 194 (Ir.) amendment of a misnomer was allowed after defendant's counsel had addressed the jury; but in R. v. Rymes, 3 C. & K. 326, it was held that amendments ought to be made before defendant's counsel addressed the jury.

Where an amendment has once been made there is no power of amending the amendment, or of reverting to the indictment as it originally stood, and the case must be decided upon the indictment in its amended form. R. v. Barnes, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 45; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 204: R. v. Pritchard, L. & C. 34; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 169: R. v. Webster, L. & C. 77. See Greaves, Lord Campbell's Acts, p. 9.

What amendments allowed.]—An indictment may be amended by striking out an erroneous and unnecessary statement of the time of the passing of an Act of Parliament referred to in it. R. v. Westley, Bell, 193; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 35 (C. C. R.). An indictment for the obstruction of a footway may be amended where one of the termini of the footway has been misdescribed; R. v. Sturge, 3 E. & B. 734; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 172; and an indictment under the Night Poaching Act, 1828 (9 G. 4, c. 69, s. 9) may be amended where the occupation of the field is misdescribed. R. v. Sutton, 13 Cox, 648, Lindley, J. An amendment may be made where the ownership of stolen property is wrongly described; R. v. Vincent, 2 Den. 464; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 109 (C. C. R.): R. v. Marks, 10 Cox, 367; or where the stolen property itself is wrongly described, as where the statement in the indictment is that the prisoner stole nineteen shillings and sixpence, whereas the proof is that she stole a sovereign. R. v. Gumble, L. R., 2 C. C. R. 1; 42 L. J. (M. C.) (ante, p. 77). Where on an indictment for perjury it was alleged that the perjury was committed on a trial for burning a barn, whereas the proof was that the trial was for firing a stack, it was held that the indictment might be amended. R. v. Neville, 6 Cox, 69. And where in an indictment for perjury before justices they were described as being justices for the county, and the evidence was that they were borough justices only, this was held a proper subject for amendment. R. v. Western L. R., 1 C. C. R. 122; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 81. Where an indictment charged the prisoner with the intent to kill and murder A. W., an infant, and the prosecution failed to prove that the child had ever borne such a name, the indictment was amended by striking out the name and describing the child as "a certain female child whose name is to the jurors unknown." R. v. Welton, 9 Cox, 297. An amendment which alters the nature or quality of the offence charged will not be made; therefore, where the defendant was indicted for a forgery charged as a statutable felony, but the offence turned out to be a forgery at common law, and therefore only a misdemeanor, the judge refused to order the word "feloniously" to be struck out of the indictment. R. v. Wright, 2 F. & F. 320. Where an indictment for false pretences alleged that the prisoner pretended that he had served an order of justices on J. B., and the evidence was that he had said that he had left the order with the landlady of the house where J. B. lodged, it was held that this variance was not amendable under the statute, as it was not a variance in the name or description of any matter or thing named or described in the indictment. R. v. Bailey, 6 Cox, 29. It was held by Lush, J., that in an indictment for obtaining money, etc., by false pretences, it is necessary to allege that the obtaining was "with intent to defraud," and where those words are omitted the indictment cannot be amended by inserting them. R. v. James, 12 Cox, 127.

Subject to the power of amending variances between pleading and proof given by the above statutes, the parts of a pleading required to be proved, may be considered under the following heads:—

Time.]—The day and year on which the facts are stated in the indictment or other pleading to have occurred are not in general material; and the facts may be proved to have occurred upon any other day previous to the preferring of the indictment. See 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24 (ante, p. 54): R. v. Charnock, 12 St. Tr. 1379; cas. temp. Holt, 301; 1 Salk. 288; see also Fost. 8; R. v. Payne [1789] cited and approved in Purcell v. Macnamara, 9 East, 157, 160; 1 Camp. 199; 9 R. R. 578; 1 Phil. Ev. 203: R. v. Levy, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 450: R. v. Treharne, 1 Mood. C. C. 298. To this rule, however, there were at common law certain exceptions:—(1) Where bills of exchange, promissory notes, or other written instruments not under seal, are pleaded, the date, if stated, must correspond with the date of the instrument when produced in evidence at the trial. Coxon v. Lyon,

2 Camp. 307, n. See Freeman v. Jacob, 4 Camp. 209. (2) As deeds may be pleaded either according to the date which they bear, or to the day on which they were delivered, if a deed produced in evidence bear date on a day different from that stated in the pleading, the party producing it must prove that it was in fact delivered on the day alleged in the pleading. (3) If any material time stated in the pleading is to be proved by matter of record, it should be correctly stated. See Purcell v. Macnamara, ubi supra; Woodford v. Ashley, 2 Camp. 193; 11 East, 508: Rastall v. Straton, 1 H. Bl. 49; 2 Saund. 291 b. Any variance between the time so stated, and that appearing from the deed or record when produced, will be fatal, if not amended (see above). (4) When the precise date of any fact is necessary to ascertain and determine with precision the offence charged, or the matter alleged in excuse or justification, any variance between the pleading and evidence in that respect will be fatal unless amended. (5) Where time is of the essence of the offence, the offence must be proved to have been committed within the essential time, e.g., in the night time in burglary; R. v. Brown, M. & M. 163; although the day on which the offence is charged to have been committed is immaterial, and it may be proved to have been committed on any other day previous to the preferring of the indictment. (6) In murder, the death must be proved to have taken place within a year and a day from the time at which the stroke is proved to have been given, counting the day on which the hurt was done as the first day. 1 Hawk. c. 31, s. 9; 4 Bl. Com. 197; 1 East, P. C. 343, 344. (7) Where a time is limited for prosecuting an offence, the offence must be proved to have been committed within that time before the prosecution began. See ante, p. 94. The almanack annexed to the Common Prayer Book has been held evidence that such a day of the year was Sunday, or the like. In R. v. Dyer, 6 Mod. 41, it was stated that the almanack was part of the law of England to be judicially noticed. Cf. Page v. Faucet, Cro. Eliz. 227: 1 Leon. 242: Brough v. Perkins, 6 Mod. 81. The original almanack was superseded in 1750, by that scheduled to the Style Act (24 G. 2, c. 23).

Place.]—It is not in general necessary to prove that the facts stated in the indictment or subsequent pleading occurred in the parish or place therein alleged (if any be alleged, which is now in general unnecessary); it is sufficient to prove that they occurred within the county or other extent of the court's jurisdiction. 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 84 (ante, pp. 36, 37). But they must be proved to have been committed within the county, or other extent of the court's jurisdiction, otherwise the defendant must be acquitted. (See ante, p. 67). And where a forged bill of exchange was found upon J. S., who resided in Wiltshire, and had resided there about a year, under a false name, but which bill bore date more than two years previously to its being found upon him, and at a time when he lived in Somersetshire; on an indictment against him for a forgery of the bill in Wiltshire, this was held not to be sufficient evidence of the offence having been committed in that county. R. v. Crocker, 2 B. & P. (N. R.) 87; R. & R. 97, 99, n. But although the offence must be proved to have been committed in the county where the prisoner is tried, after such proof, the acts of the prisoner in any other county, tending to establish the charge against him, are properly admissible in evidence. Where the offence is not local, it is immaterial if there be no such place as that stated in the indictment. R. v. Woodward, 1 Mood. C. C. 323: R. v. Dowling, Ry. & M. 433.

To the above rule, as to the parish and place being immaterial, there are said to be several exceptions: (1) That if the statute upon which the indictment is framed give the penalty to the poor of the parish in which the offence was committed, the offence must be proved to have been committed in the parish stated in the indictment. R. v. Glossop, 4 B. & Ald. 616. (2) Upon an indictment against a parish for not repairing a road, the part of the road out of repair must be proved to be within the parish; and the same in all other cases in which the place where the fact occurred is a necessary ingredient in the offence. R. v. Steventon, 1 C. & K. 55. (3) If a place mentioned in pleading be stated as part of the description of a written instrument, or is to be proved by matter of record, any variance between the place as stated, and that appearing from the written instrument or record when produced, would be fatal, unless amended at the trial (see ante, p. 296). Pitt v. Green, 9 East, 188: Pool v. Court, 4 Taunt. 700: Goodtitle v. Walter, Id. 671: Morgan v. Edwards, 6 Taunt. 394: Goodtitle v. Lammiman, 2 Camp. 274. (4) In the case of affray, the offence must be alleged and proved to have been committed in a public street or highway. R. v. O'Neill [1871] Ir. Rep. 6 C. L. 1. (5) Where the place is stated as matter of local description, and not as venue merely, any variance between the description of it in the indictment and the evidence will be fatal, unless amended, even though the injury be partly local, and partly transitory; for, the whole being one entire fact, the local description becomes descriptive of the transitory injury. R. v. Cranage, 1 Salk. 385; 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.), 436, and see R. v. Owen, 1 Mood. C. C. 118. Thus, for instance, on an indictment for stealing in the dwelling-house, etc. (R. v. Jarrald, L. & C. 301); for burglary (R. v. St. John, 9 C. & P. 40); or house-breaking (R. v. Bullock, 1 Mood. C. C. 324, n.); or for forcible entry, or the like, if there be a variance between the indictment and evidence in the name of the parish or place where the house is situate, or in any other description given of it, the defendant must be acquitted, unless the judge, in his discretion, think fit to amend the indictment. See 1 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.), 209. Where premises were described as situate in the parish of Lambeth, the real name of the parish being St. Mary, Lambeth, though usually called Lambeth, there was held to be no variance. R. v. Glossop, 4 B. & Ald. 616: Kirtland v. Pounsett, 1 Taunt. 570; cf. R. v. St. John, 9 C. & P. 40.

Where a parish was situate in two counties, if the offence was of a local nature, it was held that it must be alleged to have been committed in that part of the parish which was within the county in which the defendant is tried. R. v. Brookes, C. & Mar. 543; cf. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 24, 26. Under s. 36 of the Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), the whole of a parish must now be within the same administrative county.

The offence charged.]—Every offence consists of certain acts done or omitted, under certain circumstances, all of which must be stated in the indictment (see ante, pp. 68–72), and be proved as laid; subject to the powers of amending immaterial variances between statement and proof (ante, p. 52).

Thus, for instance, where, in an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences, the false pretence stated was that the defendant said that he had paid a sum of money into the bank, and the proof was, that he said that a sum of money had been paid into the bank, without saying by whom, the defendant was acquitted for the variance, Lord Ellenborough holding that there was a difference in substance between the two assertions. R. v. Plestow, 1 Camp. 494.

In an indictment for larceny, the evidence must correspond with the indictment as to the species of goods stolen; as, for instance, an indictment for stealing a pair of shoes has been held not to be supported by evidence of a pair of boots. See ante, p. 76. Where an indictment (on 15 G. 2, c. 34 (rep.) and 14 G. 2, c. 6 (rep.), which made it felony without benefit of clergy to steal any cow, ox, heifer, &c.) charged the defendant with stealing a cow, and in evidence it was proved to be a heifer, this was held to be a fatal variance; for the statute having mentioned both cow and heifer, proved that the words were not considered by the legislature as synonymous. R. v. Cook, 2 East, P. C. 616; 1 Leach, 105. See also R. v. Douglass, 1 Camp. 212. In like manner it was held that, as the statute specified lambs and sheep, an indictment for stealing lambs was not proved by evidence of stealing sheep; R. v. Loom, 1 Mood. C. C. 160; and for the same reason it was held upon 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 25 (rep.), that an indictment for stealing a sheep is not supported by proof of stealing an ewe. R. v. Puddifoot, 1 Mood. C. C. 247: R. v. Birket, 4 C. & P. 216: R. v. Douglass, 1 Camp. 212. But it is submitted that these cases are overruled by R. v. Spicer, 1 Den. 82; 1 C. & K. 699; and R. v. McCulley, 2 Mood. C. C. 34; and that a generic description in an indictment will be proved by evidence of a species which is clearly within the generic description. But it is sufficient if the evidence agree in substance with the allegation in the indictment. Thus a variance in the number of articles, or in their value, is immaterial, provided the value proved be sufficient to constitute the offence in law (ante, p. 76). And if there be ten different species of goods enumerated, and the prosecutor prove a larceny of any one or more, it will be sufficient, although he fail in his proof of the rest; except in a case where value is essential to constitute the offence, and the value is ascribed to all the articles collectively; for in that case the offence must be made out as to every one of the articles. R. v. Forsyth, R. & R. 274.

Money.]—Money or bank-notes may be described simply as money, without specifying any particular coin or bank-notes (ante, p. 54); and such allegation, so far as regards the description of the property, shall be sustained by proof of any amount of coin, or of any bank-note, although the particular species of coin of which such amount was composed, or the particular nature of the bank-note, shall not be proved. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 18 (ante, pp. 54, 77).

Persons.]—The party injured may, as we have seen (ante, p. 56), be described either by his real name, or by that by which he is usually known. R. v. Norton, R. & R. 510; R. v. Williams, 7 C. & P. 298. And immaterial variances between pleading and proof as to the names of persons may be amended (see ante, pp. 54, 56). At common law the names of the persons against whom the offence was committed, and of any party whose existence is legally essential to the charge, must be proved as laid. (See ante, p. 56; R. v. Earl of Cardigan, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 601; R. v. Frost, Dears. 474; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 116.) Thus, in an indictment for larceny, the property in the goods must be proved as laid; that is, the person whose goods they are alleged to be must be proved to be either the actual owner or the bailee of them. (See ante, p. 58). Even where an indictment for burglary charged the defendant with breaking and entering the house of J. D., with intent to steal the goods of J. W., and it appeared in evidence that no goods of any person of the name of J. W. were in the house, but that the name of J. W. had been inserted in the indictment by mistake, the judges held that the variance was fatal, and the defendant was accordingly acquitted. R. v. Jenks, 2 East, P. C. 514. At common law, if it appeared by the evidence that the alleged owner of the goods stolen was a feme covert, the defendant was entitled to acquittal because the goods in law belonged to the husband, 1 Hale, 513; but under the Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 75), s. 12, the separate property of a married woman may be described as hers in an indictment for an offence affecting it (see ante, p. 59).

Additions.]—An indictment cannot now be held insufficient for want of or imperfection in the addition of any defendant; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24 (ante, pp. 54, 56); and immaterial misdescriptions of any person whatever on an indictment can be amended under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1 (a) (ante, p. 52).

Records.]—At common law, records produced in evidence must be strictly conformable with the statement in the pleading which they are intended to prove; and any variance in substance between the matter set out and the record produced in evidence was fatal. But the variance can now be amended at the trial (see ante, p. 51). The rule was the same as in civil actions under the old practice, see Purcell v. Macnamara, 9 East, 157; 9 R. R. 578; 1 Camp. 199: Woodford v. Ashley, 11 East, 508.

So, where an indictment for perjury, assigned on an affidavit made for the purpose of setting aside a judgment, alleged that the judgment was entered up "in or as of" Trinity Term, 5 W. 4, and, on an examined copy of the record being produced, it appeared that the day on which the judgment was signed was entered in the margin, June the 26th, 5 W. 4, according to the rules of practice of Hilary Term, 4 W. 4, this was held a fatal variance, and the judge refused to amend under 9 G. 4, c. 15 (rep.): R. v. Cooke, 7 C. & P. 559. And where, on a charge of perjury, alleged to have been committed before commissioners to examine witnesses in a chancery suit, the indictment stated that the four commissioners named in the commission were commanded to examine the witnesses, but the commission, when put in, appeared to authorize the commissioners, "or any two or three of them," to examine the witnesses, this was held a fatal variance, and the judge refused to amend. R. v. Hewins, 9 C. & P. 786. Cf. R. v. Fellowes, 1 C. & K. 115. But where an indictment for perjury stated that a certain cause (in which the perjury was alleged to have been committed) was tried at the assizes before E. W., one of the judges, etc., it was held to be proved in substance by the Nisi Prius record, which stated in the usual form that the cause was tried before the two justices of assize, one of whom was E. W. R. v. Alford, 14 East, 218, n. So, where an indictment for perjury alleged the trial of an issue before A. B., sheriff of D., by virtue of a writ of trial directed to the said sheriff, the writ was directed to the sheriff, and the return was of a trial before him, but it was proved that in fact the trial took place before a deputy, not the under-sheriff, this was held no variance. R. v. Dunn, 2 Mood. C. C. 297; 1 C. & K. 730. An indictment stated that, at the assizes held, etc., C. P., "together with one T. P., was" in due form of law tried and convicted, on an indictment depending against them for uttering counterfeit coin, and thereupon it was considered by the court there that C. P. should be imprisoned for two years. The record of the previous conviction when put was found to state the conviction of C. P., and the acquittal of T. P. It was held that there was no variance, for that the allegation in the indictment did not import that T. P. was convicted. R. v. Page, 9 C. & P. 756; 2 Mood, C. C. 219, 221 n.

(a) Addition.]—At common law, if a person necessarily named in the indictment were described with an addition, though unnecessary, it must be proved. R. v. Deeley, 1 Mood. C. C. 303; but see R. v. Ogilvie, 2 C. & P. 230; R. v. Graham, 2 Leach, 547, contra, and see ante, pp. 55 et. seq. Where any person was described as a person to the jurors unknown, and it appeared in evidence that his name was known, it was held a variance. See R. v. Walker, 3 Camp. 264; R. v. Robinson, Holt (N. P.) 595. So where, in an indictment for receiving stolen goods, the principal felon was described as a person to the jurors unknown, but it appeared in evidence that he was known, the receiver was acquitted for the variance. R. v. Walker, 3 Camp. 264. But a bill found by the same grand jury, imputing the principal felony to J. S., does not, sufficiently for this purpose, prove that J. S. committed the felony. R. v. Bush, R. & R. 372. But these variances are now immaterial. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 24 (ante, p. 54).

Other Documents.]—If the matter of a written instrument be introduced in a pleading (which, however, is now in general unnecessary in criminal cases, see ante, p. 74), by the words, "according to the tenor following," or "of the tenor following," or "in the words and figures following," or "the words and matters following," or, in fact, any other words which imply that a correct recital is intended, the instrument must be set out correctly; R. v. Powell, 1 Leach, 77, 2 East, P. C. 976; see Id. 962; even though the pleader need not have set out more than the substance of the instrument in the particular case. A mere literal variance, however (that is, where the omission or addition of a letter does not alter or change a word, so as to make it another word, R. v. Drake, 2 Salk. 668; 3 Id. 226), will not be material; as for instance, "reiceved" for "received," R. v. Hart, 1 Leach, 145; 2 East, P. C. 977; "undertood" for "understood," R. v. Beach, 1 Cowp. 229; "Messrs." for "Messrs.," R. v. Oldfield, 2 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 650, or the like. See R. v. Pippett, 1 T. R. 235, 237, 240. On the other hand, if the matter of a written instrument be introduced by words which imply that the substance only, and not the very words of the instrument, is set out; as, for instance, by the words, "in substance as follows," Wright v. Clements, 3 B. & Ald. 503, or "to the effect following," R. v. Bear, 3 Salk. 226, or, "in manner and form following," R. v. May, 1 Doug. 193; 1 Leach, 192, or the like, if the instrument produced in evidence be in substance the same with that set out, it will be sufficient. See the old authorities collected, Stark. Crim. Pl., tit. "Variance."

If a written instrument be described in pleading, as purporting to be so and so (see ante, p. 75), the instrument when produced in evidence, must appear upon the face of it to be what it is described in the pleading as purporting to be, otherwise the variance may be taken advantage of at the trial. For instance, where the instrument was described in an indictment as "a certain paper writing purporting to be a bank-note," and the note produced, though made to resemble, varied materially in its form from a real bank-note, the defendant was acquitted. R. v. Jones, 1 Doug. 300. So where (before 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 5, ante, p. 54) a bill of exchange was described in an indictment as "purporting to be directed to one J. King, by the name and description of J. Ring," the judgment was arrested; for if it were really directed to J. Ring, it could not purport (that is, appear upon the face of it) to be directed to J. King. R. v. Reading, 1 East, 180, n.; 2 Leach, 590. See R. v. Gilchrist, 2 Leach, 657; R. v. Edsall, Id. 662, n.

Words.]—Where words are the gist of the offence, and consequently set out in the indictment (see ante, p. 75), they must be proved as laid: and if there be any material variance between the words proved and those laid—even if laid as spoken in the third person, and proved to have been spoken in the second. R. v. Berry, 4 T. R. 217, or laid as spoken affirmatively, and proved to have been spoken by way of interrogation, Barnes v. Holloway, 8 T. R. 150, or the like—the defendant must be acquitted, unless amendment if permissible is permitted. But if some of the words be proved as laid, and the words so proved be sufficient to constitute the offence for which the defendant is indicted, failing to prove the remainder of the words will not be material. The rule is the same as in civil actions for defamation under the practice prior to the Common Law Procedure Acts. See Compagnon v. Martin, 2 W. Bl. 790: Walters v. Mace, 2 B. & Ald. 756: Hancock v. Winter, 7 Taunt. 205. Where words are laid as an overt act of treason, it is sufficient to prove that the words really used were the same in substance as those laid, for the reason mentioned, ante, p. 75, and post, tit. "Treason."

Intent.]—The intention of the party at the time he commits an offence is often an essential ingredient in it: and, in such case, it is as necessary to be proved as any other fact or circumstance laid in the indictment, ante, pp. 78–80. As to mode of proof, see post, p. 308. Where an indictment alleged that the defendant cut the prosecutor, with intent to murder, to disable, and to do some grievous bodily harm, it was held not to be supported by proof of an intention to prevent lawful apprehension; R. v. Duffin, R. & R. 365: R. v. Boyce, 1 Mood. C. C. 29, unless for the purpose of effecting his escape, he also harboured the intent stated in the indictment. R. v. Gillow, 1 Mood. C. C. 85. The intention, however, is not capable of positive proof: it can only be implied from overt acts; and every man is supposed to intend the necessary and reasonable consequences of his own acts. R. v. Dixon, 3 M. & Sel. 11; 15 R. R. 381: R. v. Farrington, R. & R. 207. Therefore, if it cannot be implied from the facts and circumstances which, together with it, constitute the offence, other acts of the defendant, from which it can be implied to the satisfaction of the jury, must be proved at the trial. See R. v. Philipps, 6 East, 464. As to what other acts are admissible, see post, p. 308.

In some cases the intent is inferred as a necessary conclusion from the act done; as if a man knowingly uttered a forged instrument as a genuine one, the intent to defraud the party to whom he utters it is a necessary inference. R. v. Hill, 2 Mood. C. C. 30; 8 C. & P. 274; R. v. Cooke, Id. 582.

If a man be charged with an offence as principal in the first degree, evidence of his being principal in the second degree will support the indictment, and e converso; as, for instance, if A. and B. be indicted for murder, and the indictment charge that A. gave the mortal stroke, and that B. was present aiding and abetting, evidence that B. gave the mortal stroke and that A. was present, aiding and abetting, will support the indictment. Fost. 351; R. v. Mackalley, 9 Co. Rep. 67 b; Plowd. 98: R. v. Crisham, C. & Mar. 187 (see ante, p. 15).

Proof of exceptions, provisoes, etc.]—In indictments upon statutes where an exception or proviso is incorporated with the description of the offence, in the enacting clause of the statute, the indictment must show, negatively, that the party, or the matter pleaded, does not come within the meaning of such exception or proviso; but where the exception or proviso is separate from the enacting clause it is for the defendant to set it up. R. v. James [1902] 1 K. B. 540, 545, C. C. R., where the authorities are fully considered. And see ante, p. 80. This rule differs somewhat from that established by statute as to offences punishable summarily, 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 39.

The negative averments, it seems must formerly have been proved in all cases by the prosecutor (see Over v. Harwood [1900] 1 Q. B. 803, 806, Channell, J.); but the present rule upon the subject appears to be, that, in cases where the subject of such averment relates to the defendant personally, or is peculiarly within his knowledge, the negative is not to be proved by the prosecutor, but, on the contrary, the affirmative must be proved by the defendant, as matter of defence; but, on the other hand, if the subject of the averment does not relate personally to the defendant, or is not peculiarly within his knowledge, but either, relates personally to the prosecutor, or is peculiarly within his knowledge or at least be as much within his knowledge as within the knowledge of the defendant, the prosecutor must prove the negative. See 1 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.) 266: 1 Hawk. c. 89, s. 17; Apothecaries Co. v. Bentley, 1 C. & P. 538; Ry. & M. 159: Elkin v. Janson, 13 M. & W. 655, 662, Alderson, B. On an indictment under 43 G. 3, c. 107, s. 1 (rep.), which made it felony to course deer in an enclosed ground without the consent of the owner—that the deer were coursed without the consent of the owner was held necessary to be proved on the part of the prosecution. R. v. Rogers, 2 Camp. 654. But although it was once supposed that the negative, in such cases, could only be proved by the owner, it is now fully established that it may be presumed from circumstances, or be proved by the agent of the owner. R. v. Allen, R. v. Argent, R. v. Chamberlain, 1 Mood. C. C. 154: R. v. Hazy, 2 C. & P. 458.

Divisible averments.]—Where an indictment contains divisible averments laid conjunctively (see ante, p. 82), e.g., that the defendant "forged and caused to be forged," proof of either averment will be sufficient. R. v. Middlehurst, 1 Burr. 399. So, a defendant may be convicted of printing and publishing a libel upon an indictment which charges him with "composing, printing, and publishing" it. R. v. Hunt, 2 Camp. 583; 31 St. Tr. 408: R. v. Williams, 2 Camp. 646. And where two intentions are ascribed to one act, as that a libel was published against magistrates with intent to defame them, and also to bring the administration of justice into contempt, R. v. Evans, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 35; 23 R. R. 754, Bayley, J., or that an assault was committed on a female, with intent to abuse and carnally know her, R. v. Dawson, 3 Stark. (N. P.) 62, Holroyd, J., the averments were held divisible and proof of either intention sufficient. So, where an indictment charged that the defendant was employed in two branches of the post-office (7 G. 3, c. 50, s. 1, rep.), proof of his employment in either was held sufficient. R. v. Ellins, R. & R. 188. And where an information for a libel charged that outrages had been committed in and near the neighbourhood of Nottingham, it was held that the averment was divisible, and that it was sufficient to prove that outrages had been committed in either place. R. v. Sutton, 4 M. & Sel. 532. In larceny, if any one of the articles enumerated in the indictment be proved to have been stolen by the defendant, it will be sufficient. 2 Hale, 302: and cf. R. v. Ellins, R. & R. 188. Upon an indictment for extortion, alleging that the defendant extorted twenty shillings, it is sufficient to prove that he extorted one shilling. R. v. Burdett, 1 Ld. Raym. 148. See R. v. Carson, R. & R. 303. And upon an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences, proof of part of the pretence alleged, if the money were obtained upon that part will be sufficient. R. v. Hill, R. & R. 190. As to cases in which rejection of a divisible averment involves a verdict for an offence less or other than the offence alleged in the indictment, see ante, p. 215.

Immaterial averments—surplusage.]—Allegations which are not essential to constitute the offence, and which may be omitted without affecting the charge, or vitiating the indictment, do not require proof, and may be rejected as surplusage. R. v. Jones, 2 B. & Ad. 611 (and see ante, p 71). Thus, for an indictment for wounding with intent, etc., stating the act to have been done with a stick and kicking, the means were held mere surplusage. R. v. Briggs, 1 Mood. C. C. 318. In R. v. Huntley, Bell, 238 (C. C. R.) the prisoner was indicted for stealing certain goods, and in a second count was charged with feloniously receiving the chattels aforesaid "so as aforesaid" feloniously stolen. He was convicted on the second count, and it was held that the words "so as aforesaid" were immaterial. And where a defendant was charged in the indictment with having committed arson in the night-time, and it was proved that he committed it in the day-time, he was convicted, and the conviction was held good. R. v. Minton, 2 East, P. C. 1021. So, if a man be indicted for robbery near the highway, R. v. Summers, 2 East, P. C. 785; R. v. Wardle, Id.; R. & R. 9, or in a dwelling-house, R. v. Pye, Id. 9, n.; R. v. Johnson, Id. 10, and the prosecutor prove the robbery, but fail in proving it to have been committed near the highway, or in the dwelling-house, the defendant may nevertheless be convicted; for robbery is the same felony wherever committed. So, if an offence, not of a local nature, be described as having been committed in a certain parish; for the offence is the same wheresoever committed, and the county is the only thing material to give the court jurisdiction. R. v. Woodward, 1 Mood. C. C. 323. So, upon an indictment (under 8 & 9 W. 3, c. 26, s. 1, rep.) for having in possession a die made of iron and steel, it was held immaterial of what the die was made, and that proof of a die made of either or both would satisfy the charge. R. v. Oxford, R. & R. 382: R. v. Phillips, Id. 369. Upon the same principle, in R. v. Holt, 5 T. R. 436, 446; 2 Leach, 593, it was held, upon an information for a libel, with intent to bring a proclamation of the King into contempt, that an averment that divers addresses had been presented to his majesty on the occasion of such proclamation, was not connected with the charge, and therefore did not require proof. On an indictment for perjury committed before the Insolvent Debtors' Court, allegations that notice of the defendant's petition was inserted in the Gazette, that a day was appointed for his first examination, and that the sitting on that day was adjourned, were held not to require proof; for the sittings of a court of record are presumed to be lawfully and rightfully held. R. v. Westley, Bell, 193; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 35. Upon an indictment charging the defendant with taking a false oath in a non-judicial proceeding (which is ordinarily not perjury, but a common law misdemeanor), an allegation "that so the defendant did commit wilful and corrupt perjury," may be rejected as surplusage, and need not be proved, and the defendant may be convicted of the common law misdemeanor. R. v. Hodgkiss, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 212; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 14; but see 52 & 53 Vict. c. 10, s. 7. And where an indictment charged the defendant with making a false declaration that he had lost a pawnbroker's ticket, "whereas in truth and in fact he had not lost the said ticket, but had sold, lent, or deposited it as a security," it was held that the allegation "but had sold, lent, or deposited it, etc.." was surplusage which might be rejected and need not be proved, and therefore did not render the indictment ambiguous or uncertain. R. v. Parker, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 225; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 60. This rule is said not to extend to allegations (whether necessary or unnecessary), which are descriptive of the identity of that which is legally essential to the charge. Thus, it is said that an indictment for stealing a black horse will not be supported by proof that the horse was of some other colour: for the allegation of colour is descriptive of that which is legally essential to the offence, and cannot be rejected. 1 Stark. Evid. (3rd ed.) 434.

Matter not alleged, in what cases.]—Where the offence is stated in general terms in the indictment, as for instance, where the defendant is indicted as a common barrator or common scold or for keeping a common gambling-house, or bawdy-house (see ante, pp. 68–70), the prosecutor is allowed to give evidence of all the particular facts which constitute the offence thus generally stated in the indictment.

General rule.]—The general rule in criminal (as in civil) cases is, that nothing shall be given in evidence which does not directly tend to the proof or disproof of the matter in issue. "It is undoubtedly not competent for the prosecution to adduce evidence tending to show that the accused has been guilty of criminal acts other than those covered by the indictment for the purpose of leading to the conclusion that the accused is a person likely from his conduct or character to have committed the offence for which he is being tried." Makin v. Att.-Gen. for N. S. W. [1894] App. Cas. 57; 63 L. J. (P. C.) 41; 17 Cox, 704. Such evidence, where admissible in chief for the prosecution, may now be obtained by cross-examination of the defendant if he elects to give evidence on his own behalf. 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 1 (f) (i). Upon an indictment for an infamous crime, an admission by the defendant that he had committed such an offence at any other time with another person, and had a tendency to such practices, ought not to be received. R. v. Cole, 1 Phil Ev. 181 (7th ed.); 3 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.), 251. And upon the trial of a prisoner for wounding a constable, who had arrested him on suspicion of felony, it was held that the prosecutor was not entitled to ask the constable what the prisoner's previous character had been, in order to assist in showing that there were reasonable grounds for the arrest. R. v. Turberfield, L. & C. 495; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 20.

Exceptions.]—To the general rule, as above stated, some exceptions have been admitted by statute, and there are also some apparent exceptions to it at common law.

Treason.]—In high treason, when tried under 7 & 8 W. 3, c. 3, s. 8, no evidence is admissible of any overt act not expressly laid in the indictment. But this does not prevent overt acts, not laid, from being given in evidence, if they be direct proof of any of the overt acts which are laid; R. v. Rookwood, 13 St. Tr. 139; cas. temp. Holt, 683; and see R. v. Lowicke, 13 St. Tr. 276, 296: R. v. Layer, 16 St. Tr. 211, 215, 232; 8 Mod. 82, 91; R. v. Deacon, 18 St. Tr. 365, Fost. 9: R. v. Wedderburn, Id.; R. v. Watson, 32 St. Tr. 1; 2 Stark (N. P.) 116, 134. And if any one overt act be proved against the defendant in the proper county, acts of treason tending to prove such overt act, though done in a foreign county, may be given in evidence. Fost. 9, 22: R. v. Deacon, ubi supra: R. v. Parkyns, 13 St. Tr. 63, 126, 127; Lord Strafford's case, 3 St. Tr. 138; Lord Lovat's case, 18 St. Tr. 529. Or, if the treason consist of a conspiracy, not only the acts of the defendant himself, but also any acts of the defendant's accomplices, no matter when committed, if done in furtherance of the common design, although not laid as an overt act in the indictment, may be given in evidence, provided it be direct proof of an overt act laid. R. v. Hardy, 24 St. Tr. 199; 1 East, P. C. 98, 99: R. v. Horne Tooke, 1 East. P. C. 98; 25 St. Tr. 1, 127: R. v. Frost, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 85, 9 C. & P. 129, 149.

Conspiracy.]—In cases of conspiracy, acts done by some of the conspirators in the county in which the offence is laid being proved, acts done by others of the conspirators in other countries may be given in evidence. R. v. Bowes, 4 East, 171, cit.; 7 R. R. 557. And in an indictment against persons for a conspiracy to carry on the business of common cheats, evidence was admitted of the defendants having made false representations to other tradesmen besides those named in the indictment. R. v. Roberts, 1 Camp. 399. As a foundation for such evidence, however, the existence of the conspiracy must be first proved; 2*ndly*, evidence must be given to connect the defendant with the conspirators; and 3*rdly*, it must be proved that the person whose acts are about to be given in evidence was connected with the defendant in the same conspiracy. The prosecutor may, however, either prove the conspiracy, which renders the acts of the conspirators admissible in evidence, or he may prove the acts of the different parties, and so prove the conspiracy. R. v. Lord Lovat, 18 St. Tr. 529. See also R. v. Stone, 6 T. R. 527; 25 St. Tr. 1155; 6 R. R. 527; R. v. Standley, R. & R. 305: R. v. Gogerly, Id. 343; R. v. Bingley, Id. 446: R. v. Frost, ubi supra: R. v. Shellard, 9 C. & P. 277; 4 St. Tr., N. S. 1386: R. v. Burdett, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1, 171, Bayley, J.; Redford v. Birley, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1071. In R. v. Hunt, 3 B. & Ald. 566; 1 St. Tr., N. S. 171, upon an indictment for conspiring and unlawfully meeting for the purpose of exciting disaffection and discontent among his Majesty's subjects at Manchester, it was held that the previous conduct of a portion of the assembly, in training, etc., and in assaulting persons whom they called spies, was competent evidence as to the general character and intention of the meeting, although the effect of it, as to each particular defendant, was a distinct matter for the consideration of the jury. It was also held, that it was competent to show, as against Hunt (who though a stranger, except by political connection, had been invited to preside as chairman at the meeting), that at a similar meeting in another place, holden for an object professedly similar, certain resolutions had been proposed by that person; it being in its nature a declaration of his sentiments and views on the particular subject of such meetings and of the topics there discussed. But the court held, that evidence of the misconduct of the military and others in the subsequent dispersion of the meeting, was properly refused by the judge at the trial, as irrelevant and having no bearing upon the intention and objects of the meeting, which intention and objects obviously existed previously to the alleged misconduct of the military attempted to be given in evidence.

Evidence tending to prove other offences not charged in the indictment.]—"The mere fact that evidence adduced tends to show the commission of other crimes does not render it inadmissible if it be relevant to an issue before the jury, and it may be so relevant if it bears on the question whether the acts alleged to constitute the crime charged in the indictment were designed or accidental, or to rebut a defence which would be otherwise opened to the accused." Makin v. Att.-Gen. for N. S. W. [1894]; App. Cas. 57; 63 L. J. (P. C.) 41; 17 Cox, 704. In this, the leading case on the subject, most of the prior cases are collected; and see R. v. Wyatt [1904] 1 K. B. 188: R. v. Mean [1904, Dec. 21], (C. C. R.).

1. Offences connected with the transaction on which the indictment is based.]—Where several offences are connected together, and form one entire transaction, upon an indictment for one, the others may be proved to show the character of the transaction. R. v. Ellis, 6 B. & C. 145: R. v. Egerton, R. & R. 375; R. v. Rooney, 7 C. & P. 517; R. v. Mansfield, C. & Mar. 140: R. v. Bleasdale, 2 C. & K. 765; R. v. Firth, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 172; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 54. Thus with a view to prove the identity of the defendant, it may be shown that other goods not included in the indictment, which were stolen from the premises at the same time, were found in his possession. So, it may be shown, upon an indictment for arson, that property taken out of the house at the time of the firing was afterwards found secreted in the possession of the prisoner. R. v. Rickman, 2 East, P. C. 1035. And upon the trial of four men for a burglary at W., evidence of three other burglaries by the same men on the same night was admitted in order to explain why none of the property taken from W. was found upon one of the prisoners as his share of the booty. R. v. Cobden, 3 F. & F. 833. On a trial for feloniously abusing and carnally knowing a female child under the age of ten years, evidence was admitted of subsequent perpetrations of the same offence on different days, previous to the complaint of the mother, it appearing that the prisoner had threatened the child on the first occasion—on the ground that, virtually, in such a case it was all part of one and the same transaction. R. v. Rearden, 4 F. & F. 76. But if the offences be distinct, and not part of one scheme or transaction (subject to what is stated below), evidence of one offence is, in general, inadmissible on the trial of the prisoner for another offence; R. v. Birdseye, 4 C. & P. 386: R. v. Holt, Bell, 280; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 11: R. v. Fuidge, L. & C. 390; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 74: R. v. Rhodes [1899] 1 Q. B. 77, 82 (C. C. R.); even where it is derived from the admission of the defendant himself. R. v. Butler, 2 C. & K. 221. To prove the defendant to be the author of a libel, evidence of other libels written by the same person and concerning the same subject may be received. R. v. Pearce, 1 Peake, 106 (3rd ed.). But it is said that they must expressly refer to the libel in the indictment or at least to the same subject matter. Finnerty v. Tipper, 2 Camp. 72.

Where on cross-examination of the witnesses for the prosecution evidence is given that persons previously convicted of an offence, which is now charged by the prosecution to have been committed by the prisoners at the bar, were in fact the guilty parties, and that the prisoners at the bar were not,—the evidence of such convicted persons, though establishing only their own alibi, is admissible, apparently on the ground that if the convicts were the guilty parties, the prisoners on trial could not be, and therefore the question of the guilt or innocence of the convicts became relevant to the question of the guilt or innocence of the prisoners. R. v. Dytche, 17 Cox, 39, Hawkins, J.

2. To prove design, system, criminal intent, or guilty knowledge.]

Criminal intent and guilty knowledge.]—Where a design, system, criminal intent, or guilty knowledge on the part of the defendant is to be proved, or the defence of accident or the like is to be met, the prosecutor may give in evidence other instances of his having committed the same offence for which he is under trial.

The principle on which this is allowed is laid down in Makin v. Att.-Gen. for N. S. W. [1894] App. Cas. 57; 63 L. J. (P. C.) 41; 17 Cox, 704.

The following instances illustrate its application to particular kinds of offence:—

1. Homicide.]—Where four indictments were found against a woman, which respectively charged her with poisoning her husband and two of her sons, and with attempting to poison a third son, evidence was tendered on the trial of the first indictment that arsenic had been taken by the three sons a few months after their father's death, that all the four persons when taken ill exhibited the same symptoms; and that the prisoner had been in the habit of preparing their meals; the court held the evidence admissible for the purpose of proving that the husband died of arsenic, and that his death had not been accidental. R. v. Geering, 18 L. J. (M. C.) 215: R. v. Garner, 4 F. & F. 346. In Makin v. Att.-Gen. for N. S. W. [1894] App. Cas. 57; 63 L. J. (P. C.) 41; 17 Cox, 704, R. v. Geering was approved, and the Privy Council held that on an indictment for the murder of an infant, in order to prove malice or meet the defence of accident, the prosecution could properly adduce evidence that other infants had been received by the prisoners for a small sum, on a representation that they desired to adopt them, that the payments were insufficient to support the infants long, and that several bodies of infants had been found buried in the defendants' garden. In R. v. Cotton, 12 Cox, 400, on a charge against a mother for poisoning, evidence of the death of other children by the same poison was held admissible. In R. v. Roden, 12 Cox, 630, on a charge against a mother of murdering her infant by suffocation in bed, evidence was admitted of the previous death of other children at earlier ages. So, for the same reason, former menaces or assaults of the defendant, or expressions of malicious or vindictive feeling towards the deceased, or, in fact, the existence of any motive likely to instigate him to the commission of the offence in question, are also in such a case receivable in evidence. R. v. Clewes, 4 C. & P. 221: see R. v. Hopkins, 10 Cox, 229. Thus, on the trial of an indictment for the murder of an infant child, the fact that the prisoner had said to the mother of the child, about a fortnight before the alleged murder, "The child is no good; it is eating the other children's food," was held to be admissible as evidence. R. v. Hagan, 12 Cox, 357, per Archibald, J., after consultation with Pollock, B. So on a trial for murder, the deposition of the deceased against the prisoner, taken before the magistrates on another charge against him, and for which he was afterwards convicted, was held to be admissible evidence for the prosecution in order to prove malice or motive against the prisoner. R. v. Buckley, 13 Cox, 293, Lush, J. Upon an indictment for murder by poison of S., evidence is admissible of the previous death of J., and of the subsequent death of L., under like circumstances and attended by similar symptoms, to show that the poisoning was not accidental; and where it is proved that a motive for the death of S. might exist, by the fact of the prisoner having insured the life of S., evidence may also be given upon the same indictment that there might be an equal motive for the deaths of J. and L. by showing that their lives also had been insured by the prisoner. R. v. Heesom, 14 Cox, 40. See also R. v. Flannagan, 15 Cox, 403, also a case of murder by arsenical poisoning (in which Butt, J., followed the ruling in R. v. Geering, ubi supra, and disapproved R. v. Winslow, 8 Cox, 397): R. v. Neill Cream, 116 Cent. Crim. Ct. Sess. Pap. 1451: R. v. Klosowski, 167 Cent. Crim. Ct. Sess. Pap. 471, both cases of poisoning: R. v. Serné, 107 Cent. Crim. Ct. Sess. Pap. 418, a case of homicide consequent on arson.

Abortion.]—Upon the trial of an indictment under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 58, for "feloniously and unlawfully using a certain instrument, to wit, a quill, with intent to procure a miscarriage," in order to prove the intent, evidence may be given that at other times the prisoner had caused miscarriages by similar means. R. v. Dale, 16 Cox, 703.

Arson.]—Where the prisoner was indicted for arson with intent to defraud an insurance company, for the purpose of throwing light upon the prisoner's intention, and proving that the fire was the result of design and not of accident, evidence was admitted that the prisoner had previously occupied two houses in succession, both of which had been insured, that fires had broken out in both, and that the prisoner had made claims upon and been paid by the insurance companies in respect of the loss caused by each fire. R. v. Gray, 4 F. & F. 1102; approved in Makin v. Att.-Gen. for N. S. W., ubi supra.

The same rule applies, where it is requisite for the prosecutor to prove malice or intent on the part of the defendant. Thus, on an indictment for maliciously shooting, or for arson, if it be questionable whether the shooting or burning was by accident or design, proof may be given that at some other time the prisoner intentionally shot at the same person, or was attempting to set fire to the same building or stack. R. v. Voke, R. & R. 531: R. v. Dossett, 2 C. & K. 306.

Coinage offences.]—Upon an indictment for procuring base coin with intent to utter it, evidence of the defendant having a large quantity of such coin is admissible to prove the intent. R. v. Fuller, R. & R. 308. And upon an indictment for uttering counterfeit money, it is competent to the prosecutor to prove that other pieces of such counterfeit money were found upon the defendant, or were uttered by him at different times. R. v. Wylie, 1 B. & P. (N. R.) 95. For the same reason, proof of the defendant's conduct in such other utterings, as, for example, that he passed by different names, is admissible. Bayley on Bills, 449. So, on an indictment for having knowingly and with guilty intent the possession of coining instruments, evidence may be given of the defendant's previously uttering bad money. R. v. Weeks, L. & C. 18; 30 L. J. (M.C.) 141.

Cruelty to children.]—On an indictment for neglecting children between two specified dates, evidence of neglect prior to the earlier date was rejected. R. v. Miller, 65 J. P. 313, Phillimore, J.

Embezzlement.]—On an indictment for embezzlement, where the embezzlement had been effected by falsifying accounts, the prosecutor was allowed to prove a number of analogous errors in the prisoner's accounts for the purpose of proving that the case on which the indictment was founded was not accidental. R. v. Richardson, 2 F. & F. 343; 8 Cox, 448. And in R. v. Proud, L. & C. 97; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 71, another case of embezzlement, the master's books, kept by the prisoner, were given generally in evidence by the prosecution, though it was objected on behalf of the prisoner, that the evidence must be confined to the three particular entries referring to the three charges in the indictment, and the prisoner having been convicted, the conviction was affirmed. So where an indictment for embezzlement contained three counts, each charging a distinct act of embezzlement, it was held that the jury might consider the evidence that had been given as to the conduct of the prisoner in relation to the matters referred to in all the counts, when considering any one of them in order to determine whether the prisoner had failed to pay over money accidentally or fraudulently. R. v. Stephens, 16 Cox, 387 (C. C. R.).

False pretences and fraud.]—On the trial of an indictment for attempting to obtain money by false pretences, evidence is admissible of a previous or subsequent obtaining or attempting to obtain money by the defendant by false pretences not charged in the indictment, in order to prove that the defendant had a guilty knowledge of the falsehood of the pretence charged in the indictment. R. v. Francis, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 128: 43 L. J. (M. C.) 97; 12 Cox, 612: R. v. Rhodes [1899] 1 Q. B. 77, 83: R. v. Stenson, 12 Cox, 111: R. v. Cooper, 1 Q. B. D. 19; 45 L. J. (M. C.) 15; 13 Cox, 123. And on this ground it was held, that on an indictment for attempting to obtain money by falsely pretending that a ring was composed of diamonds, which in fact was composed of crystals, evidence was admissible of a false pretence by the defendant on a prior occasion to another person that a chain was gold, whereas it was plated, and on another distinct prior occasion that a ring was of diamonds, which it was not. R. v. Francis, ubi supra. On a charge of obtaining goods by a false pretence, evidence of the defendant's obtaining, within a week after the offence charged in the indictment, other goods from a different person by a similar false pretence was held inadmissible in R. v. Holt, Bell, 280; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 11; 8 Cox, 411. "The question in R. v. Holt was whether the prisoner had the authority or not which he said he had. The piece of evidence there objected to seems to me to be quite immaterial on that point, and how the reception of a perfectly immaterial piece of evidence caused the court to quash the conviction I cannot understand." R. v. Francis, 43 L. J. (M. C.) 99, Blackburn, J. But the other false pretences, to be admissible in evidence, must not be isolated and distinct transactions, but must have some nexus or connection with the offence charged, e.g., as showing part of a scheme for carrying on a bogus business. R. v. Rhodes, ubi supra. In that case R. v. Holt was distinguished as dealing with totally distinct pretences.

R. v. Francis and R. v. Rhodes were followed in R. v. Wyatt [1904] 1 K. B. 188; 68 J. P. Rep. 31 (C. C. R.), where the defendant was charged with obtaining credit by fraud (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, s. 13). The evidence was to the effect that he had obtained board and lodging and had not paid. The court held evidence admissible that he had shortly before obtained lodgings at other places and had left without pay as tending to establish a systematic course of conduct on the part of the accused, and as negativing any accident or mistake, or the existence of any reasonable or honest motive.

In R. v. Ollis [1900] 2 Q. B. 758; 67 L. J. Q. B. 918; 19 Cox, 554, an indictment for obtaining money by falsely pretending that certain cheques given by the prisoner was a good and valid order for the payment of money, it was held by Russell, L.C.J., Wright, Darling, and Channell, JJ., that to prove guilty knowledge evidence was admissible to prove that the prisoner had given the prosecutor in exchange for a cheque of the latter another cheque which was dishonoured on presentation notwithstanding that the prisoner had already been indicted and acquitted on a charge of fraud in respect of this last cheque. Bruce and Ridley, JJ., dissented.

Forgery.]—Upon an indictment for disposing of and putting away a forged bank-note, knowing it to be forged, the prosecutor may give evidence (See R. v. Millard, R. & R. 245) of other forged notes having been uttered by the prisoner at other times, before or after the commission of the offence for which he is indicted; R. v. Wylie, 1 B. & P. (N. R.) 93; S. C. sub nom. R. v. Whiley, 2 Leach, 983; R. v. Tattersal, 1 B. & P. (N. R.) 93, cit.: R. v. Ball, R. & R. 132; 1 Camp. 324; 10 R. R. 695; 1 Den., p. iv.; or that he had in his possession other forged notes of the same kind; R. v. Hough, R. & R. 120; or it would seem, of a different kind, Bayley on Bills, 450; in order to prove, or at least to raise a presumption of, his knowledge that the note in question was forged. So also, upon an indictment for uttering a forged bill of exchange, guilty knowledge may be proved by showing that the prisoner has at different times uttered other bills forged in other names. R. v. Salt, 3 F. & F. 834. See also R. v. Colclough, 15 Cox, 92; 10 L. R. Ir. 241), as to the sufficiency of the proof of the other utterings, not the subject of the indictment, but offered in evidence to prove guilty knowledge.

Larceny.]—Where the prisoner was indicted under 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 37 (rep.), in one count, for stealing coal from the mine of G. and from the mines of thirty other coal owners, and it appeared that the prisoner was himself the lessee of coal, and had carried workings from his own mine into the beds of forty different coal owners, from all of which he had got coal without their sanction, Erle, J., before whom the case was tried, thought it better that the attention of the jury should be confined to the charge of taking the coal of one owner, G.; but in order to show that when the prisoner took G.'s coal he knew he was out of his boundary, the learned judge permitted it to be proved that the prisoner had gone out of his boundary in many other instances, and into the property of many other persons, taking in all 15,000 yards of coal. R. v. Bleasdale, 2 C. & K. 765. And where, upon the trial of an indictment for larceny, it appears that the property alleged in such indictment to have been stolen at one time was taken at different times, although the prosecution may be called upon under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 6, to elect upon which takings they will proceed, evidence may be given of takings other than those upon which they elect to proceed, in order to show guilty knowledge, and the felonious nature of the takings proceeded upon. R. v. Firth, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 172; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 54.

Libel.]—On this see R. v. Pearce, ante, p. 303, R. v. Whiley, ante, p. 311.

Receiving].—The cases and statutes as to evidence on a charge of receiving are given post, Book II. Part I. sect. 1, tit. "Receiving."

Threatening letters.]—On an indictment for sending a threatening letter, prior and subsequent letters from the prisoner to the party threatened may be given in evidence, as explanatory of the meaning and intent of the particular letter upon which the indictment is framed, R. v. Robinson, 2 Leach, 749, if the intent cannot be inferred from the letter itself. R. v. Boucher, 4 C. & P. 562.

Matter of defence, etc.]—Matter of defence, when given in evidence under the general issue (see ante, p. 179), is proved by parol evidence, or by records or other written evidence, according to the rules laid down in the next chapter; when pleaded, and put in issue by the replication, it is also proved in the same manner, subject to the same rules as to variance, as indictments (ante, p. 296, et seq.).

Upon an indictment for a rape, the defendant may give general evidence of the woman's character for want of chastity (or that she is a common prostitute, per Stephen, J., in R. v. Riley, infra), or he may prove that she had before been criminally connected with him; R. v. Riley, 18 Q. B. D. 481; 56 L. J. (M. C.) 52: R. v. Martin, 6 C. & P. 562, and n.; but not that she had been criminally connected with others; R. v. Holmes, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 334; 41 L. J. (M. C.) 12; R. v. Cockcroft, 11 Cox, 410, per Martin, B., and Willes, J. (overruling R. v. Robins, 2 M. & Rob. 512): R. v. Hodgson, R. & R. 211. And the same upon an indictment for an assault with intent to commit a rape; R. v. Clarke, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 241; or for an indecent assault. R. v. Holmes, ubi supra. See R. v. Barker, 3 C. & P. 589. Upon an indictment for libel, the defendant has been allowed to give in evidence such other parts of the same publication as were fairly connected with the libel in question, and upon the same topic, in order to disprove the motive imputed to him by the indictment, and to show the fair construction that should be put upon the passages therein set out. R. v. Lambert, 31 St. Tr. 335; 2 Camp. 398; 11 R. R. 748. And in R. v. Horne Tooke, 25 St. Tr. 1, 345; 1 East, P. C. 61, 62, it being proved on the part of the prosecution that the defendant had distributed several publications advocating republican principles, which was offered in evidence, in order to produce a presumption that parliamentary reform (which was expected to be set up by the prisoner in his defence) was a mere pretext to cover his treasonable purposes, the defendant, in order to rebut that presumption, was allowed to give in evidence a book upon parliamentary reform, written by him, and published twelve years before.

Character.]—The prisoner also will be allowed to call witnesses to speak generally as to his character, but not to give evidence of particular acts, unless it tends directly to the disproof of some of the facts put in issue by the pleadings. Evidence of the defendant's character can be of avail only in doubtful cases; where the probabilities of the defendant's guilt on the one side, and the probabilities of his innocence on the other, are nearly equal, satisfactory testimony as to his general good character for honesty or humanity may have the effect of raising a well-founded presumption in the minds of the jurors that a man of such character could not have been the perpetrator of the offence imputed to him; and in this sense it may be deemed evidence tending to the disproof of the matter in issue. The proper time for calling witnesses to character is before verdict and not after verdict in mitigation of sentence. R. v. Mullins, 3 Cox, 526; 7 St. Tr., N. S. 1110. A witness to character will not be allowed to speak to his own opinion of the prisoner's disposition, but only as to the general reputation in which the prisoner is held. R. v. Rowton, L. & C. 520; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 57. Thus a witness to character for a defendant indicted for perjury has been asked, "Do you consider him a man who would be likely to commit perjury?" R. v. Hemp, 5 C. & P. 468, Denman, L.C.J.: sed quære. Witnesses called by the prisoner as to character may be cross-examined either as to particular facts, R. v. Hodgkiss, 7 C. & P. 298, or as to the grounds of their belief. 1 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.) 250. But it has been held that such a witness cannot be cross-examined as to circumstances of suspicion against the accused arising on the day of the alleged offence. R. v. Rogan, 1 Cox, 291, Erle, J. General evidence of good character may also be rebutted by general evidence of bad character. R. v. Rowton, ubi supra. And if the prisoner endeavours to establish a good character, either by calling witnesses himself, or by cross-examining the witnesses for the prosecution, the prosecution is at liberty, in most cases, to give proof of the prisoner's previous conviction. R. v. Gadbury, 8 C. & P. 676: R. v. Shrimpton, 2 Den. 219; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 37. As to mode of proof, see 28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, s. 6, and 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 18. And where he is himself called as a witness he may be cross-examined as to his character or previous offences, charges, or convictions, if the proof that he has committed or been convicted of another offence is admissible to prove that he is guilty of the offence charged, if he has personally or by his advocate asked questions of the witnesses for the prosecution with a view to establish his good character, or has given evidence of his good character, or if the nature or conduct of the defence is such as to involve imputations on the character of the prosecutor or the witnesses for the prosecution, or he has given evidence against any other person charged with the same offence. 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 1 (f) (ii.), (iii.), post, p. 395). The same course may be adopted if proof of the commission or conviction of another offence is admissible evidence to show that he is guilty of the offence charged, ante, pp. 306–312. And apparently the previous convictions can now be put under 28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, s. 6 (post, p. 404).

The several cases just mentioned, when carefully considered, will be found to be not exceptions to, but rather illustrations of, the rule above mentioned (ante, p. 306), namely, that nothing may be given in evidence which does not tend directly to the proof or disproof of the matter in issue. In most of them, the evidence admitted tended directly to the proof of the knowledge or intention of the defendant at the time of the commission of the offence, which was a material ingredient in the crime imputed (ante, p. 308). In the case of rape above mentioned (ante, p. 312) the evidence tended to show the great improbability of any resistance upon the part of the woman, and also that the woman was not entitled to credit as a witness.

SECT. 1.

PRELIMINARY MATTERS.

EVIDENCE may be classed under three heads: (1) admissions or confessions, (2) presumptions, and (3) proofs. These we shall consider fully in the several sections of this chapter. But before we enter into a particular consideration of the subject, it may be necessary first to notice one or two rules relating to evidence generally. Generally speaking, at common law the rules of evidence in criminal cases are the same as in civil cases. R. v. Burdett, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1; 3 B. & Ald. 717; subject to certain specific statutory modifications, and to the rule of practice that more evidence is required to justify conviction of crime than a verdict for the plaintiff in a civil action for trespass arising out of the same circumstances. See R. v. White, 4 F. & F. 383, and note, and see post, p. 339, "Presumptions."

Primary evidence.]—First, it is a general rule, that the best evidence of which the nature of the case will admit must be produced, if it can possibly be obtained; if not, then the next best evidence that can be obtained is admitted. This means that, as a general rule, where a written document is to be used as proof, the original document must be itself produced, and where a fact can be proved by persons who actually saw or heard it they must be called (but see post, p. 317). For if it appears that there is any better evidence existing than that which is produced, the non-production of it creates a presumption that, if produced, it would have detected some falsehood which at present is concealed. 3 Bl. Com. 368; Gilb. Ev. 16; 1 Taylor Ev. (9th ed.), 277–282: R. v. James, 1 Show. 397; Carth. 220; cas. temp. Holt, 284: R. v. Paine, 1 Salk. 281; 1 Ld. Raym. 729: Williams v. H. E. I. Co., 3 East, 192; 6 R. R. 589. Therefore, before secondary evidence is offered, a foundation for it must first be laid, by proving that evidence at first hand cannot be obtained. The best evidence of the contents of a deed or other written instrument is the written instrument itself; secondary evidence is a true copy, or parol evidence of the contents, of the original. Therefore, before a copy of a written instrument, or parol evidence of its contents, can be received as proof, the absence of the original instrument must be accounted for, by proving that it is lost or destroyed, or that it is in possession of the opposite party. Thus, where it is sought to give in evidence the contents of a telegram sent by the prisoner to a witness, it is necessary that the original message handed to the post office should be produced, and the copy received by the witness cannot be given in evidence unless it is proved that such original has been lost or destroyed. R. v. Regan, 16 Cox, 203, Field, J. The declarations or admissions of the opposite party, however, are always receivable in evidence against him, although they relate to the contents of a deed or other written instrument, and even though its contents be directly in issue in the suit. Slatterie v. Pooley, 6 M. & W. 664: Howard v. Smith, 3 Scott (N. R.) 574. See post, sect. 2, "Admissions."

Records, however, are apparently an exception to the rule as to primary evidence, for they may be proved by exemplifications or other copies, in all cases, unless they are records of the court in which they are to be produced, and, the matter of record forms the gist of the pleading to be proved. See Reid v. Margison, 1 Camp. 469; and Burnand v. Nerot, 1 C. & P. 578. This exception has been adopted from necessity because of the difficulty or impossibility of removing the record from its proper custody. To require the record itself to be given in evidence would be productive of great inconvenience, for it probably might be wanted for that purpose in several parts of the kingdom at the same time; besides, by removing it from the place in which it was deposited, there would necessarily be great danger of its being lost. Gilb. Ev. 7, 8. For the same reasons, journals of the House of Lords or House of Commons, libels, answers, depositions, etc., in the ecclesiastical courts in most cases,—the rolls of a court baron, and other inferior courts,—parish registers,—entries in corporation books, or the books of public companies, relating to things public and general, or entries in foreign registers which may not be removed from their proper place of custody, may all be proved by copies duly certified. See Lyell v. Kennedy, 14 App. Cas. 437, et seq., and as to the modes of proving such documents, see post, p. 344, et seq.; and as to evidence of entries in bankers' books, see post, p. 384.

When the copy of a document, the original whereof is not evidence at common law, is made evidence by Act of Parliament, a copy must be produced; the original is not made admissible evidence by implication. Burdon v. Rickets, 2 Camp. 121, n.

Notice to produce.]—Where a written instrument is in the hands of the opposite party, it is necessary to serve him or his solicitor with a notice to produce it: and if he does not produce it at the trial, in pursuance of the notice, then, upon proving the service of the notice, you will be allowed to give secondary evidence of its contents. The rule in this respect is the same in criminal as in civil cases; Att.-Gen. v. Le Merchant, 2 T. R. 201, n.; 26 R. R. 703; subject to the qualification that the rules for compelling discovery of documents by the defendant do not apply to criminal cases, save in the case of proceedings under the Crown Suits Acts and indictments in which a civil right is in issue. See Spokes v. Grosvenor Hotel Co. [1897] 1 Q. B. 124. The notice to produce must be served a reasonable time before the trial. What is such reasonable time must of course depend on the circumstances of each case. In general, when the parties live at a distance from the assize town, notice must be served before the commission day; R. v. Ellicombe, 1 M. & Rob. 260: see Trist v. Johnson, Id. 259; but this will depend on the nature of the document and the knowledge or probability of its being in the hands of the parties at the assize town, or the contrary. See the cases collected, Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.), p. 13. But in cases where the nature of the pleading gives sufficient notice to the defendant of the subject of inquiry, so that he may prepare himself to produce the written instrument, if necessary for his defence, a notice to produce it is not required; thus, for instance, it has been held that in trover for a bond the plaintiff may give parol evidence of it, to support the general description of it in the declaration, without having given the defendant previous notice to produce it. How v. Hall, 14 East, 274; 12 R. R. 515. So, upon an indictment for stealing a bill of exchange, parol evidence of it was admitted, without a notice to produce it. R. v. Aickles, 1 Leach, 294; 2 East, P. C. 675. And on an indictment for stealing a post letter described as addressed in a certain way, Pollock, C.B., held that a witness might be asked how the letter was addressed, although no notice to produce it had been given. R. v. Clube, 3 Jur. (N. S.) 698. So, upon an indictment for administering an unlawful oath, where it appeared that the defendant read the oath from a paper, parol evidence of what the defendant in fact said was held sufficient, without giving him notice to produce the paper. R. v. Moors, 6 East, 419, n., 421, n. So, where a seditious meeting came to certain resolutions, and the defendant, who was chairman, gave a copy of these resolutions to another person, it was held that this copy might be given in evidence, without a notice to produce the original. R. v. Hunt, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 171; 3 B. & Ald. 566; 22 R. R. 485. In the same case it was also held, that it was not necessary to produce or account for banners bearing certain inscriptions, etc., exhibited at such meeting, but that parol evidence of such matters, by eye-witnesses, was perfectly admissible to show the general character and intention of the assembly. But upon an indictment for setting fire to a house, with intent to defraud an insurance office, secondary evidence of the policy of insurance cannot be given, without proof of due notice to produce the original. R. v. Kitson, Dears. 187; 22 L. J. (M. C.) 118. And upon an indictment for perjury in falsely swearing that there was no draft of a statutory declaration which had been prepared by the defendant, the materiality of the existence of such draft turned upon its contents and the fact of certain alterations having been made in it. Parol evidence of the contents of the draft and of the alterations made in it was held inadmissible, no notice to produce such draft having been given to the defendant. R. v. Elworthy, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 103; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 3. On the trial of an indictment for stealing a ring which had not been recovered, Channell, B., refused to allow evidence to be given of the contents of an inscription upon it, as no notice had been given to the prisoner to produce the ring, although his lordship admitted evidence of the fact that the ring bore some inscription. R. v. Farr, 4 F. & F. 336. But it is submitted that this case is inconsistent with those above cited. And in R. v. Francis, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 128; 43 L. J. (M. C.) 97, it was decided by the Court of Crown Cases Reserved that although where the question is as to the effect of a written instrument, the instrument itself is primary evidence of its contents, and until its non-production is excused, no secondary evidence can be received, there is no case whatever deciding that when the issue is as to the state of a chattel, e.g., the soundness of a horse, or the equality of the bulk of goods to the sample, the production of the chattel is primary evidence, and that no evidence can be given in regard to it, unless it is produced in court, or its absence is accounted for. And therefore on the trial of an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences, evidence was allowed to be given that the prisoner had on a previous occasion endeavoured to obtain money by pretending that a ring, which was not produced at the trial, was a diamond ring, which it was not. Id.

Hearsay, generally.]—It is a general rule, that hearsay is no evidence; and for two reasons: what the other person said was not upon oath: and the party who is to be affected by it had no opportunity of cross-examining him. R. v. Gunnell, 16 Cox, 154 (C. C. R.): R. v. Saunders

[1899] 1 Q. B. 490 (C. C. R.): Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.), 44. To this rule, however, there are some exceptions, arising from necessity:—

(1) Hearsay is admissible to prove the death of a person beyond sea. Bull. (N. P.), 294; Doe v. Griffin, 15 East, 293; 13 R. R. 474.

(2) Hearsay is good evidence to prove a prescription, Bull. (N. P.), 295; or custom, Nicholls v. Parker, 14 East, 331, n.; 12 R. R. 542: Doe v. Sisson, 12 East, 62: see R. v. Antrobus, 2 A. & E. 788: Pim v. Curell, 6 M. & W. 234; or public right, R. v. Bedfordshire, 4 E. & B. 535, 541; 24 L. J. (Q. B.) 81; and for this purpose old witnesses are usually called to prove what they heard in their youth, from old persons since deceased, on the subject. See Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.), 48; 1 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.), 392.

(3) What a witness has been heard to say at another time may, it is said, be given in evidence, in order to invalidate or confirm the testimony he gives in court. 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 23; but see 2 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.), 976.

(4) Res gestæ.]—When hearsay is introduced, not as a medium of proof to establish a distinct fact, but as being part of the transaction in question, it is admissible. R. v. Gordon, 21 St. Tr. 485, 535; 2 Doug. 591. This kind of evidence is usually described as res gestæ; and it does not seem quite accurate to class it as hearsay. See Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.), 53; 1 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.), p. 376. Under this head declarations made by an agent, acting at the time within the scope of his authority, are received against his principal. R. v. Hall, 8 C. & P. 358. It would seem that the conduct of a person against whom an offence is committed, and especially the fact that he complained soon after the offence to persons to whom he would naturally complain, is relevant and admissible. Steph. Dig., Ev. (5th ed.), art. 8, p. 11; R. v. Nicholas, 2 C. & K. 246: R. v. Rowland, 62 J. P. 459.

Homicide.]—On an indictment for murder or manslaughter, a statement, made by the deceased immediately after he was knocked down, as to how the accident happened, has been held admissible. R. v. Foster, 6 C. & P. 325, per Park, J., Patteson, J., and Gurney, B.; R. v. Lunny, 6 Cox, 477 (Ir.), Monahan, C.J. In R. v. Bedingfield, 14 Cox, 341, on an indictment for murder, a statement made by the deceased immediately after the fatal wound was inflicted, on coming out of the house where it had been inflicted, and in which house the prisoner was directly afterwards found lying with his throat cut and speechless, was rejected by Cockburn, C.J., as not being part of the res gestæ. The ruling in this case was impugned by Mr. Pitt-Taylor, and the arguments for and against it, are set forth at large in two pamphlets by his Lordship and Mr. Pitt-Taylor, in which the former denied and the latter maintained the correctness of R. v. Foster, 6 C. & P. 325; see 1 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.), 377, n. R. v. Bedingfield was followed in R. v. Goddard, 15 Cox, 7, by Hawkins, J., in which case the deceased shortly after the occurrence which resulted in her death was found in a fainting condition and apparently dying. It was proposed to give in evidence, as part of the res gestæ, a statement which she then made as to the cause of her injuries. The judge, however, refused to receive it in evidence as part of the res gestæ, but it afterwards appearing that the deceased had prefaced her statement by the words "I'm dying, look to my children;" he admitted the statement as a dying declaration. In R. v. Lunny, 6 Cox, 477 (Ir.), statements made by a deceased person to the first person who came up after the fatal wound was inflicted, were held admissible as part of the res gestæ. Where on the trial of a prisoner for the murder of his wife, a neighbour swore that a week before the alleged crime was committed, the deceased visited her house, bringing an axe and carving-knife, and handed them to the witness, evidence was admitted of what was said by the deceased to the witness on handing her the instruments. R. v. Edwards, 12 Cox, 230, Quain, J. Where on a trial for murder it was proposed by the prosecution to ask a witness what the deceased said on leaving her lodgings, that being the last occasion on which she was seen alive, Cockburn, C.J., refused to allow the question to be put, on the ground that what the deceased said was no part of the act of leaving, but only an incidental remark or statement of intention, which might or might not have been carried out. R. v. Wainright, 13 Cox, 171, Cockburn, C.J. The answer to the question disallowed would have been, "She said she was going to 115, W. Road," a house in the occupation of the prisoner, in which the remains of the deceased were found. See also R. v. Pook, Id. 172, n.

Except in the class of cases next to be considered only the fact and not the terms of the complaint may be proved. Steph. Dig. Ev. (5th ed.), p. 11.

Rape, etc.]—In R. v. Lillyman [1896] 2 Q. B. 167; 65 L. J. (M. C.), 195; 18 Cox, 346; 60 J. P. 536; (C. C. R.), it was held after consideration of the earlier authorities that upon the trial of an indictment for rape or other kindred offences against women or girls the fact that a complaint was made by the prosecutrix shortly after the alleged occurrence, and the particulars of such complaint may, so far as they relate to the charge against the prisoner, be given in evidence on the part of the prosecution, not as being evidence of the facts complained of, but as evidence of the consistency of the conduct of the prosecutrix with the story told by her in the witness box, and as negativing consent on her part.

This decision overrules certain earlier authorities so far as they excluded proof of the particulars of the complaint. R. v. Clarke, 2 Stark, (N. P.) 241; 1 Phillips and Amos on Evidence, p. 204 (2): R. v. Walker, 2 M. & Rob. 212: R. v. Megson, 9 C. & P. 420: R. v. Wink, 6 C. & P. 397: R. v. Osborne, C. & Mar. 622. But the C. C. R. to some extent distinguished these authorities as deciding no more than that the complaint was not part of the res gestæ, but only confirmatory evidence. The court accepted R. v. Brasier, 1 Leach, 199; 1 East, P. C. 443, as correctly deciding that the mere complaint is no evidence of the facts complained of, and that its admissibility depends on proof of the facts by sworn or other legalized testimony; and it also accepted the ruling of Bramwell, L.J., in R. v. Wood, 14 Cox, 46, and the opinion of Sir James Stephen, Dig. Ev. (5th ed.), art. 8, note v.; and see 1 Hawk. c. 41, s. 9; 4 Bl. Com. 211, 213.

The extent of the rule above laid down is not quite exactly ascertained. In R. v. Lillyman (ubi supra) the charges in the indictment were—

(1) Attempt to have carnal knowledge of a girl of the age of 13 and under 16:

(2) Assault on the same girl with intent to ravish (v. R. v. Brasier, ubi supra): and

(3) Indecent assault.

The defendant was convicted on the first count only. On the first charge consent was immaterial, on the second and third it was material.

It would therefore seem that the ratio decidendi in R. v. Lillyman did not depend on the question whether the girl consented or not. And in Stephen, Dig. Ev. (5th ed.), p. 169, it is said to be usual to apply the rule in Lillyman's case, irrespective of the question whether consent is or is not in issue. But the rulings on the subject are not uniform.

In Beatty v. Cullingworth, 62 J. P. 240, affirmed in the Court of Appeal, Hawkins, J., held that the rule in Lillyman's case applied only to rape and kindred offences. And in R. v. Rowlands, 42 Sol. J. 640: 62 J. P. 459, Hawkins, J., ruled that the terms of complaint were admissible only as evidence of want of consent. See Stephen, Dig. Ev. (5th ed.), p. 169. In R. v. Kiddle, 19 Cox, 77, Ridley, J., applied it to a charge of indecent assault on a girl under 13, as to which consent is not material. But in R. v. Kingham, 66 J. P. 393, on a similar charge Laurance, J., refused to apply the rule, saying that it applied only where consent was a material question. In R. Folley, 60 J. P. 569, Hall, Recorder, held that the rule was applicable to all criminal cases, and applied it to a charge of felonious wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm. But it is very doubtful whether this view can be sustained, so as to admit the particulars of the complaint.

In R. v. Merry, 19 Cox, 442, Bruce, J., held that particulars elicited in the course of a conversation consequent on a complaint did not fall within the rule in Lillyman's case and were not admissible, as they were not volunteered by the complainant on her own initiative.

In R. v. Eyre, 2 F. & F. 579, Byles, J., seems to have been of a contrary opinion, but that decision is open to question. See R. v. Lillyman [1896] 2 Q. B. at p. 176.

In R. v. Hoodless, 64 J. P. 282, a quarter sessions case, a complaint of an act of gross indecency with a male person was held not to be within the rule in R. v. Lillyman.

To be admissible the complaint must be made within a reasonable time (R. v. Lillyman, ubi supra) which is for the court before which the complaint is offered in evidence. R. v. Ingrey, 64 J. P. 107, Russell, L.C.J. If a considerable time has elapsed between the commission of the offence charged and the complaint, it is inadmissible. R. v. Rush, 60 J. P. 777, Wright, J.; and in R. v. Ingrey, ubi supra, a complaint of an offence committed on a Saturday was rejected because it was not made till the Tuesday following. But the complaint need not be on the very earliest opportunity. R. v. Kiddle, 19 Cox, 77. In R. v. Guttridge, 9 C. & P. 471, where the prosecutrix was not called, it was sought to put in her complaint, but it was rejected by Parke, B., on the ground that, not being part of the res gestae, but only confirmatory evidence, it could not be used, as the prosecutrix had given no evidence.

(5) Statements as to bodily or mental feelings.]—Whenever the bodily or mental feelings of a person are material to be proved, the usual expressions of such feelings made at the time in question, are admissible. Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 374; Aylesford Peerage claim, 11 App. Cas. 1, and see Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.), 52. Thus the representation by a sick person of the nature and effects of the malady under which he is labouring are receivable. R. v. Blandy, 18 St. Tr., 1117, 1135–1138, and see R. v. Guttridge, 9 C. & P. 471, 472, Parke, B. But written communications from a patient to his doctor describing his symptoms have been held inadmissible. Witt v. Witt, 3 Sw. & Tr. 143: 32 L. J. (P. & M.) 179, Cresswell, J. On a trial for murder by poisoning, statements by the deceased, shortly before he took poison, are admissible to prove the state of his health at that time. R. v. Johnson, 2 C. & K. 354: R. v. Blandy, ubi supra. On an indictment for murder alleged to have been committed by withholding proper food from a child, a complaint by the child of being hungry is admissible. R. v. Conde, 10 Cox, 547. But such expressions, statements, and complaints, although admissible in evidence so far as they show the bodily condition of the person making them, at the time when they were made, cannot be given in evidence to show who caused such condition, or how it was caused. R. v. Gloster, 16 Cox, 471, Charles, J. R. v. Abbott, 67 J. P. Rep. 151, Kennedy, J. As to dying declarations, see infra.

(6) Declarations against interest by deceased persons.]—Declarations made by persons since deceased against their pecuniary or proprietary interest are admissible. Higham v. Ridgway, 10 East, 109; 10 R. R. 235; 1 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 434, et seq.; Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.), 55; 2 Smith, L. C. (11th ed.), 327, et seq., 360.

(7) Declarations by deceased persons in course of duty or business.]—A statement (whether written or oral, R. v. Birmingham, 1 B. & S. 763; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 63, or entry, which it is the duty of a person to make in the ordinary course of his business or professional employment, is admissible in evidence after his decease. Price v. Earl of Torrington, 1 Salk. 285, provided it be made contemporaneously with the act to which it relates. Doe v. Turford, 3 B. & Ad. 890. But such statement or entry is only admissible to prove those facts which it was the duty of the person making the statement or entry to include in it, Chambers v. Bernasconi, 1 C. M. & R. 347, 368, and of which he had personal knowledge. Brain v. Preece, 11 M. & W. 773; R. v. Clapham, 4 C. & P. 29, and see Stephen, Evidence (5th ed.), art. 27, p. 36; 1 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.), p. 453, et seq. In accordance with this exception to the general rule excluding hearsay, where on a trial for murder it appeared that the deceased, a constable, in the course of his duty had made, shortly before his death, a verbal statement to his superior officer as to where the deceased was going, and what he was going to do, it was held that such statement, which was to the effect that deceased was going to watch the prisoner, was admissible. R. v. Buckley, 13 Cox, 293, Lush & Mellor, JJ.

(8) Dying declarations.]—Upon an indictment for murder or manslaughter, the dying declarations of the deceased are receivable in evidence, if it appears to the satisfaction of the judge (R. v. John, 1 East, P. C. 357, 358; 1 Leach, 504, n.: R. v. Welbourn, 1 East, P. C. 358, 360: R. v. Hucks, 1 Stark. (N. P.) 521) that the deceased was conscious of his being in a dying state at the time he made them (R. v. Woodcock, 1 Leach, 502; 1 East, P. C. 354, 356: R. v. Welbourn, 1 East, P. C. 358: R. v. Christie, Carr. Sup. 302: R. v. Van Butchell, 3 C. & P. 629: R. v. Forester, 4 F. & F. 857; 10 Cox, 368: R. v. Goddard, 15 Cox, 7, ante, p. 318), and was sensible of his awful situation (R. v. Pike, 3 C. & P. 598: R. v. Crockett, 4 C. & P. 544: R. v. Hayward, 6 C. & P. 157: R. v. Spilsbury, 7 C. & P. 187: R. v. Perkins, 2 Mood. C. C. 135; 9 C. & P. 395: R. v. Howell, 1 Den. 1; 1 C. & K. 689; 1 Cox, 151: R. v. Mackay, 11 Cox, 148), even though he did not actually express any apprehension of danger (R. v. Woodcock, 1 Leach, 500, 503: R. v. Dingler, Id. 504, n.: R. v. Bonner, 6 C. & P. 386), and his death did not ensue until a considerable time after the declarations were made. R. v. Mosley, 1 Mood. C. C. 97; 1 Lewin, 79: R. v. Bernadotti, 11 Cox, 316: R. v. Reaney, Dears. & B. 151; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 43; 7 Cox, 209.

The result of the decisions is that there must be an unqualified belief in the nearness of death, a belief, without hope, that the declarant is about to die. "There must be an expectation of impending and almost immediate death, from the causes then operating. The authorities show that there must be no hope whatever." R. v. Jenkins, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 187; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 82; 11 Cox, 250. "Dying declarations ought to be admitted with scrupulous, and I had almost said with superstitious, care," Id., per Byles, J., and see R. v. Brooks, 1 Cox, 6: R. v. Dalmas, 1 Cox, 95: R. v. Peel, 2 F. & F. 21: R. v. Mooney, 5 Cox, 318 (Ir.): R. v. Nicolas, 6 Cox, 120: R. v. Qualter, Id. 357. It must be shown for the prosecution that the deceased, at the time he made the statement, was under the impression that death was impending, not merely that he had received an injury from which death must ensue, but that, as the popular phrase goes, he then believed that he was at the point of death. R. v. Forester, 4 F. & F. 857; 10 Cox, 368: R. v. Smith, 16 Cox, 170: R. v. Mitchell, 17 Cox, 503: R. v. Whitmarsh, 62 J. P. 680, 711. A mere sense of danger is not enough. R. v. Thomas, 1 Cox, 52: R. v. Errington, 2 Lewin, 148. There must be a settled hopeless expectation of immediate death in the declarant. R. v. Peel, 2 F. & F. 21, Willes, J. This language was adopted by Charles, J., in R. v. Gloster, 16 Cox, 471. Cf. R. v. Osman, 15 Cox, 1, where Lush, J., is reported to have added, "If he thinks he will die to-morrow, it will not do." Where the party expressed an opinion that she should not recover, and made a declaration at that time; but afterwards, on the same day, asked a person whether he thought she would "rise again," it was held that this showed such a hope of recovery as rendered the previous declaration inadmissible. R. v. Fagent, 7 C. & P. 238: see R. v. Megson, 9 C. & P. 418: R. v. Welbourn, 1 East, P. C. 358. Where, however, it is clearly proved that the declaration was made under the solemn belief of impending death it was held admissible, although the declarant at a later period of the same day thought that she should recover. R. v. Hubbard, 14 Cox, 565, Hawkins, J.; and cf. R. v. Taylor, 3 Cox, 84. Where the declaration was reduced into writing, and in it the declarant was represented in the first instance as saying, "I have made the above statement with the fear of death before me, and with no hope of my recovery," but on its being read over to her, and on her being asked to correct any mistake, she said, "no hope at present of my recovery," and the writer then inserted the words "at present," it was held that this declaration was not admissible in evidence, as it did not appear to have been made under a settled hopeless expectation of death. R. v. Jenkins, ubi supra. So, where a declarant within half an hour before making her declaration said, "I do not think I shall be long with you," and after the declaration, at the request of a doctor, had been made, said, "Yes," in answer to the doctor's question, "Do you make this statement with the fear of death before your eyes?" it was held that these circumstances did not warrant the conclusion that the declaration had been made under such a settled, hopeless expectation of immediate death as to render it admissible. R. v. Gloster, 16 Cox, 471, Charles, J.; and cf. R. v. Abbott, 67 J. P. Rep. 151, Kennedy, J. If the declarant believed himself to be in a dying state when he made the declaration, the fact that the surgeon thought him likely to recover will not render it inadmissible. Per Willes, J., R. v. Peel, 2 F. & F. 21: R. v. Whitworth, 1 F. & F. 382. The dying declarations of a boy ten years old have been held admissible. R. v. Perkins, 2 Mood. C. C. 135; 9 C. & P. 395. Those of a child of four have been held not so. R. v. Pike, 3 C. & P. 598.

In R. v. Cleary, 2 F. & F. 850, Erle, C.J., said that he could not, in the face of a statement by the deceased from which it appeared that he did not think he should die, presume that a man who had been shot through the body must necessarily feel that he was about to die. In R. v. Morgan, 14 Cox, 337, 389, Denman, J., acting, it would seem, upon a misconception of the ruling in R. v. Cleary (ubi supra), said that there was no case in which the consciousness of the deceased that he was in a dying state at the time he made the declaration had been founded entirely upon an inference drawn from the nature of the wound itself, and from giving the deceased credit for ordinary intelligence as to its natural results; but the attention of Denman, J., was not drawn to R. v. Woodcock, 1 Leach, 500; 1 East, P. C. 354, 356: R. v. Dingler, 1 Leach, 504, n., and R. v. Bonner, 8 C. & P. 306, in which the contrary was expressly held, nor were those cases referred to, or was the question to which they relate raised in R. v. Bedingfield, 14 Cox, 341, where Cockburn, C.J., rejected the declaration of a woman made almost immediately after her throat had been frightfully cut, and a few minutes before her death, there being nothing beyond the nature of the wound to show that she was under the sense of impending death. It would seem to be clear from R. v. Woodcock, R. v. Dingler, R. v. Bonner, and R. v. Cleary (ubi supra) that the nature of the wound may be of itself sufficient evidence of impending death; see the reporters' notes to R. v. Morgan and R. v. Bedingfield (ubi supra).

A statement made by a person under circumstances which would not render it admissible as a dying declaration, becomes admissible as such if subsequently repeated in his presence and at his request by the person to whom it was previously made, and if assented to by him, if at the time of such repetition he was in such a state that if he had made a statement it would have been admissible as a dying declaration. R. v. Steele, 12 Cox, 168, per Lush, J. But a statement not amounting to a dying declaration made by the deceased in the presence of the accused ought not to be admitted unless it is accompanied by evidence which would justify the jury in finding that such statement was made upon an occasion when the accused had an opportunity of answering and might reasonably be expected to answer it, and in drawing an inference from his omitting to deny or question it, or from his language or demeanor that he did not dissent from the truth of it. R. v. Smith, 18 Cox, 470, Hawkins, J. The question whether there is any such evidence is for the court; its weight is for the jury. Id.

These dying declarations are only admissible where the death of the deceased is the subject of the charge, and the cause of the death the subject of the dying declaration. Therefore, upon an indictment for perjury, a dying declaration is not admissible to disprove the fact upon which the perjury is assigned. R. v. Mead, 2 B. & C. 605; 4 D. & R. 120, Abbot, C.J. So upon an indictment for rape: R. v. Newton, 1 F. & F. 641; or robbery: R. v. Lloyd, 4 C. & P. 233. So upon an indictment for administering savin or using instruments to procure abortion, or for using instruments with intent to procure her miscarriage, the woman's dying declarations are not admissible, though they relate to the cause of her death. R. v. Hutchinson, 2 B. & C. 608, n.: R. v. Hind, Bell, 253; 29 L. J. (M. C.) 147; 8 Cox, 300. And where a man was robbed, and died before the trial of the person charged with the robbery, Bolland, B., refused to receive his dying declarations respecting the robbery, holding that such declarations were evidence only in cases where the death of the party is the subject of the inquiry. R. v. Lloyd, 4 C. & P. 233. But on an indictment for the murder of A. by poison, which was also taken by B., who died in consequence, the dying declarations of B. were held admissible. R. v. Baker, 2 M. & Rob. 53. On an indictment for manslaughter, the declaration of the deceased at the time when she believed herself dying was admitted in evidence, although it related generally to the conduct of the prisoner, and not to the particular violence. R. v. Murton, 3 F. & F. 492. The dying declarations of an accomplice have been held to be admissible in evidence. R. v. Tinckler, 1 East, P. C. 354, 356 (more correctly reported 1 Den. v, vi), provided he were at the time such a person as would be competent as a witness. R. v. Drummond, 1 East, P. C. 353 (a), 1 Leach, 378. And as dying declarations are only admissible where the death of the deceased is the subject of the charge (R. v. Mead, ante, p. 323), it would seem that the only case in which the dying declaration of an accomplice can be given in evidence against the prisoner is where the prisoner is charged with assisting in the self-destruction of the accomplice. 3 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.), 394. In R. v. Jessop, 16 Cox, 204, on an indictment charging with murder the survivor of two persons who had agreed to commit suicide together, Field, J., admitted statements by the deceased made when purchasing poison in the absence of the prisoner, on the ground that the acts and words of the deceased in carrying out a pre-arranged plan were evidence against the prisoner. Dying declarations in favour of the party charged with the death are admissible in evidence, as they may have an influence on the amount of punishment. R. v. Scaife, 2 M. & Rob. 551; 2 Lewin, 150. Where two such declarations were made, the second of which alone was reduced into writing in the presence of a magistrate, this written declaration not being forthcoming at the trial, the judges held that, in the absence of it, the first declaration was admissible evidence. R. v. Trunter and Reason, 16 St. Tr. 1; 1 Str. 499; Fost. 292. But where a declaration in articulo mortis was reduced into writing and signed by the party, the judge required production of the original and refused to receive either a copy of the paper or parol evidence of the declaration. R. v. Gay, 7 C. & P. 230: R. v. Trowter, 1 East, P. C. 356: R. v. Woodcock, 1 Leach, 500. On these cases see R. v. Wallace [1898], 19 N. S. W. Rep. Law, 155. The declaration if admissible need not be on oath, R. v. Bernadotti, 11 Cox, 316. It is equivalent to sworn evidence, R. v. Ashton, 2 Lewin, 147; but no statement in the declaration is admissible which would not have been so if the declarant had been examined on oath. R. v. Sellers, Carr. Supp. 233. The depositions taken under Russell Gurney's Act (30 & 31 Vict. c. 35), s. 6, are distinct from dying declarations. See post, p. 373.

It was formerly held that it was no objection against a declaration which had been reduced into writing that it was made in answer to questions put to the deceased, and not a continuous statement made by him, R. v. Fagent, 7 C. & P. 238, nor that it was made in answer to leading questions. R. v. Smith, L. & C. 607; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 153; 10 Cox, 882. In R. v. Mitchell, 17 Cox, 503, Cave, J., held that a statement which had been reduced into writing, must, to be admissible as a dying declaration, be in the actual words of the deceased, and if questions are put the questions and answers must both be given; and he expressly dissented from R. v. Mann, 49 J. P. 743, Denman, J. But in R. v. Bottomley [1903] 38 L. J. Newsp. 311; 115 L. T. J. 88, Lawrance, J., followed R. v. Mann in preference to R. v. Mitchell; and see R. v. Whitmarsh, 62 J. P. 680, 711. And in R. v. Corbett [1903] Queensland St. Rep. 246, the Rt. Hon. Sir S. Griffith, C.J., said, that R. v. Mitchell unsettled what had before been the law, and followed R. v. Smith, saying, further, that it was not essential that a dying declaration should be proved by writing.

Sect. 2.

ADMISSIONS AND CONFESSIONS.

Admissions and confessions fall into two classes, judicial and extra-judicial:—

I. Judicial confessions.]—Of judicial confessions there are four kinds of present concern, those by approvers and on abjuration having become obsolete.

1. Where the defendant in open court freely and voluntarily confesses that he is guilty of the offence of which he is charged in the indictment. See Powlter's case, 11 Co. Rep. 29. This admission may be of guilt as to the facts, subject to the view of the court as to whether admission of the facts amount to a plea of guilty in law. See R. v. Brown, 17 L. J. (M. C.) 145; and ante, p. 186. Where the defendant pleads guilty, and the court accepts the plea, further proof or trial is needless, and the plea is recorded by the proper officer, and the court proceeds to judgment on the prisoner's "own confession." This rule applies to treason and misprision of treason, where the accused confesses "willingly, without violence, in open court." 7 & 8 W. 3, c. 3, s. 2; Fost. 241. Confession may be made on arraignment, or at any subsequent stage of the proceedings on the trial, by withdrawal (retraxit), with the consent of the court, of the plea of not guilty, and substitution of a plea of guilty (postea cognovit indictamentum). 1 Chit. Cr. L. 429. As to the procedure where the trial is in the High Court and the plea in writing, see Short & Mellor, Crown Office Practice, 202, 220. The court will not allow a criminal case to be tried on admissions by the solicitors on both sides, nor unless the admissions are made at the trial by the defendant or his counsel. R. v. Thornhill, 8 C. & P. 575.

2. Where the defendant, upon an indictment for misdemeanor, yields himself to the King's mercy, and desires to submit to a small fine: which submission the court may accept, if they think fit, without putting the defendant to a direct confession. 2 Hawk. c. 31, s. 3; 1 Chit. Cr. L. 430, 431. If the plea is accepted the procedure is as in case 1. Lambarde, Eirenarcha, bk. iv. c. 9.

3. Where the defendant, upon the preliminary inquiry as to any indictable offence, before justices of the peace, under the Indictable Offences Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 42), ss. 17, 18, admits either his guilt or any fact which may tend to prove it at the trial.

4. Where in other legal proceedings the defendant has made admissions incriminating himself. See post, p. 328.

3. Confessions, etc., to justices.]—What may be termed magisterial confessions are admissions either of guilt or of any fact which may tend to prove guilt at the trial made by a defendant on a preliminary inquiry before a justice of the peace in respect of any indictable offence under the Indictable Offences Act, 1848. A distinction has been drawn in the books between treason and misprision of treason on the one side and felony and misdemeanor on the other. See Berwick's case, Fost. 10; 18 St. Tr. 367: R. v. Willis, 15 St. Tr. 613, 624. But the Act above cited applies to all indictable offences. As to the old mode of proof of a magisterial confession in cases of treason and misprision, see post, p. 337.

The Indictable Offences Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 42), provides (s. 18) that, after the examinations of all the witnesses on the part of the prosecution of a person brought before any justice or justices of the peace, charged with any indictable offence, shall have been completed, "the justice of the peace or one of the justices by or before whom such examination shall have been so completed as aforesaid shall, without requiring the attendance of the witnesses, read or cause to be read to the accused the depositions taken against him, and shall say to him these words, or words to the like effect: 'Having heard the evidence, do you wish to say anything in answer to the charge? You are not obliged to say anything unless you desire to do so, but whatever you say will be taken down in writing, and may be given in evidence against you upon your trial;' and whatever the prisoner shall then say in answer thereto shall be taken down in writing (N.) and read over to him, and shall be signed by the said justice or justices, and kept with the depositions of the witnesses, and shall be transmitted with them as hereinafter mentioned, and afterwards upon the trial of the said accused person the same may, if necessary, be given in evidence against him, without further proof thereof, unless it shall be proved that the justice or justices purporting to sign the same did not in fact sign the same: provided always that the said justice or justices, before such accused person shall make any statement, shall state to him, and give him clearly to understand, that he has nothing to hope from any promise of favour, and nothing to fear from any threat which may have been holden out to him to induce him to make any admission or confession of his guilt, but that whatever he shall then say may be given in evidence against him upon his trial, notwithstanding such promise or threat; provided nevertheless, that nothing herein enacted or contained shall prevent the prosecutor in any case from giving in evidence any admission or confession or other statement of the person accused or charged, made at any time, which by law would be admissible as evidence against such person."

Before this Act it was a common practice for justices to question or examine the accused: and confessions elicited by such questions were held admissible against him on the trial if no undue influence was exercised. 2 Hawk. c. 46, ss. 31-45: R. v. Ellis, Ry. & M. 432. But since the Act of 1848, the magistrate appears not to be entitled to question the accused at all (R. v. Pettit, 4 Cox, 164, Wilde, C.J.); and answers to questions put to him are inadmissible at the trial (R. v. Berriman, 6 Cox, 388, Erle, J.) unless he elects to be sworn as a witness under 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 1. Even before 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, it was established that where a prisoner is willing to make a statement, the justice ought to receive it, but ought, before doing so, entirely to get rid of any impression on the prisoner's mind, that the statement may be used for his own benefit; and the justice ought also to tell him, that what he thinks fit to say will be taken down, and may be used against him on his trial. See R. v. Arnold, 8 C. & P. 621, Denman, C.J. And the rule is now expressed in 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 18, supra.

The second caution contained in the above proviso is not strictly necessary unless it appears that some inducement or threat had previously been held out to the accused, but it is prudent always to give it. R. v. Sansome, 1 Den. 545; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 143. The 28th section of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42 declares, that the forms given in the schedule are to be deemed good, valid, and sufficient in law. The form (N.) of the prisoner's statement before the magistrate contains the first caution, but not the second. And it has accordingly been held that, if the prisoner's statement be returned purporting to be signed by the magistrate, and bearing on the face of it the first caution, it is admissible, by virtue of section 18, without further proof. Id. But it will always be prudent in the magistrate to give the prisoner the second caution, as being the only course which will preclude all possibility of question as to the admissibility of his statement; for as it has not been decided whether that caution is not absolutely requisite when a previous inducement or threat has been held out, and as the magistrate can never be certain whether such previous inducement or threat has or has not been held out, a perplexing question might arise as to the sufficiency of the first caution to remove the effect on the prisoner's mind of such inducement or threat, should it turn out in fact that it had been held out. See per Erle, J., R. v. Sansome, supra. Where the prisoner, having been once examined before a justice, and cautioned by him in the manner prescribed by this statute, made a statement, which was taken down in writing but not signed by him or by the justice; he was then remanded, and on a subsequent day was brought again before the justice; no new witnesses were then examined, but the prisoner's solicitor put some questions to a witness who had been examined before: the prisoner was again cautioned, but declined to make any further statement: the statement made by him on the first occasion was held admissible against him on his trial. R. v. Bond, 1 Den. 517; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 138; see R. v. Stripp, Dears. 648; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 109. Where the prisoner has been duly cautioned by the magistrate in pursuance of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 18, anything said by him thereupon is admissible in evidence against him, although there may have been a previous promise or threat held out to him to induce him to confess. R. v. Pate, 11 Cox, 686, Montague Smith, J. That the caution has been given requires no further proof than the fact of its appearing to have been so given on the face of the prisoner's statement, returned together with the depositions. Id. Oral evidence may be given against a prisoner at his trial, of statements made by him while cross-examining a witness before the magistrate; unless they have been reduced to writing as part of the depositions, in which case they must be proved by the depositions, and not by the witness so cross-examined. R. v. Taylor, 13 Cox, 77, Brett, J.

At common law examinations of a prisoner taken upon oath before justices respecting a criminal charge then made against him were not admissible. 1 Hale, 585; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 37, and old cases collected in Archbold (22nd ed.), p. 299. This rule did not apply to depositions made by him as a witness in another case. And depositions made by the accused before a magistrate under the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 36), are admissible against him at the trial, even though he declines to give evidence on his trial. R. v. Bird, 62 J. P. 760; 15 T. L. R. 26 (C. C. R.).

Statements by prisoner before coroners.]—It is now the practice to admit statements or depositions of the prisoner before the coroner if properly proved. Formerly there was some doubt as to their admissibility, and the cases on the subject were conflicting. See R. v. Wheeley, 8 C. & P. 250; R. v. Owen, 9 C. & P. 83, 238; R. v. Haworth, Greenw. Coll. Stat. 137; R. v. Sandys, 2 Mood. C. C. 229; C. & Mar. 345. In 1866, Martin, B., after consulting with Willes, J., on a trial for manslaughter, admitted as evidence against the prisoner his deposition on oath taken by the coroner upon the inquest held on the deceased. R. v. Bateman, 4 F. & F. 1068; cf. R. v. Colmer, 9 Cox, 506. By statutes of Quebec, commissioners were appointed to investigate the origin of any fires in the city of Quebec, with power to compel the attendance of witnesses and to examine them on oath. The prisoner being indicted for arson, it was held that his deposition taken on oath upon an inquiry before the commissioners into the cause of the fire was admissible as evidence against him. R. v. Coote, L. R. 4 P. C. 599; 42 L. J. (P. C.) 45.

4. Admissions in other cases.]—Admissions by the prisoner on oath in another case are admissible against him, except as to questions which he was improperly compelled to answer, if he was under no obligation to criminate himself. Thus in R. v. Chidley, 8 Cox, 365, Cockburn, C.J., admitted as evidence against a prisoner a deposition made by him before a justice while under examination as a witness, another person being at that time charged with the crime; and this case was followed in R. v. Laurent, 62 J. P. 250, where admissions of indecent acts made by L. in his evidence on the prosecution of another for larceny were held admissible against him in a charge under 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, s. 11. But this rule does not usually apply to a compulsory examination in which he is bound to answer incriminating questions. See post, pp. 329, 330.

Examinations in bankruptcy.]—The examination of a person taken on oath before commissioners of bankruptcy, he having been cautioned, and allowed to elect what questions he would answer, was held admissible against him on a charge of forgery. R. v. Wheater, 2 Mood. C. C. 45. So, where a bankrupt was examined touching a matter not relating to his trade, dealings, or estate, and did not refuse to answer on the ground that the answers would tend to criminate him, but answered without objection, his answers were held voluntary, and his examination admissible against him on a criminal charge. R. v. Sloggett, Dears. 656; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 93. And it has since been held, that where a bankrupt was examined under s. 117 of the Bankruptcy Act of 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, now repealed, but in substance re-enacted in ss. 17, 24, and 27 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), he was bound to answer all questions, touching matters relating to his trade, dealings, or estate, or which might tend to disclose any secret grant, conveyance, or concealment of his lands, tenements, goods, money, or debts, although his answers may criminate himself; and such answers, though they do tend to criminate him, may be given in evidence against him on a criminal charge; R. v. Scott, Dears. & B. 47; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 128; R. v. Cross, Dears. & B. 68; R. v. Robinson, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 80; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 78; R. v. Hillam, 12 Cox, 174, even although a promise may have been made to the bankrupt before his examination that it should not be used against him or filed; R. v. Cherry, 12 Cox, 32, Martin, B., except in a proceeding in respect of the misdemeanors referred to in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 85 (including those substituted by 1 Edw. 7 c. 10 for those created by ss. 75 and 76 of the Larceny Act, 1861): see 53 & 54 Vict. c. 71 (Bankruptcy Act, 1890), s. 27, sub-s. 2. And so, on an indictment of a trader for obtaining property on credit, under the false pretence of dealing in the ordinary way of his trade, within four months before his liquidation, contrary to s. 11 of the Debtors Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62), an examination of the trader in liquidation taken under ss. 96 and 97 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 71, now repealed, but analogous provisions to which are contained in s. 27 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), is admissible in evidence against him; R. v. Widdop, L. R., 2 C. C. R. 3; 42 L. J. (M. C.) 9; although the summons to the trader to come up for examination may have been irregularly issued, as the trader by appearing, and submitting to be examined, waives the irregularity: Id., but a witness other than the bankrupt examined under this section is entitled to refuse to answer questions on the ground that his answers may criminate him; ex parte Schofield, 6 Ch. D. 230 (C. A.). The Bankruptcy Act, 1883, 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 17 (as amended by the Bankruptcy Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 71), s. 27 (1)), enacts that where the court makes a receiving order, it shall hold a public sitting for the examination of the debtor as to his conduct, dealings, and property; and sub-s. 8 of the same section enacts that "the debtor shall be examined upon oath, and it shall be his duty to answer all such questions as the court may put, or allow to be put to him. Such notes of the examination as the court thinks proper shall be taken down in writing, and shall be read over to, or by the debtor, and signed by the debtor, and may thereafter be used in evidence against him." This sub-section does not exclude other modes of proving the debtor's admissions: R. v. Erdheim [1896], 2 Q. B. 260; 18 Cox, 355. R. v. Hirschfield, 61 J. P. 520. Sects. 24 and 27 of the Act of 1883 also authorize other examinations of the debtor, but they contain no provision like that above cited in s. 17, sub-s. 8, for using the examination in evidence against him. It would appear, however, from the cases above mentioned decided under former bankruptcy statutes containing enactments similar to ss. 24 and 27, that examinations under those sections, as well as under s. 17, may be so used. But by 53 & 54 Vict. c. 71, s. 27, sub-s. 2, a statement or admission made by any person in any compulsory examination or deposition before any court on the hearing of any matter in bankruptcy is not admissible as evidence against that person in any proceeding in respect of any of the misdemeanors referred to in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 85 (including those substituted by 1 Edw. 7, c. 10 for those created by ss. 75 and 76 of the Larceny Act, 1861). A statement of affairs filed by a bankrupt under s. 16 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, is not within 53 & 54 Vict. c. 27, sub-s. 2, and is therefore admissible in evidence against him on a charge of misappropriation of trust moneys under s. 80 of the Larceny Act, 1861. R. v. Pike [1902], 1 K. B. 552; 71 L. J. K. B. 287; 20 Cox, 164; 66 J. P. 296 (C. C. R.). The question of the admissibility of the answers of a director of a company on his examination in proceedings to wind up the company was discussed in R. v. Bottomley (Q. B. D. 1893), and R. v. Balfour (Q. B. D. 1895, Oct. 15), but has not been decided. The answer of the defendant in a suit in equity, instituted against him by the prosecutor, is admissible on an indictment against him, R. v. Goldshede, 1 C. & K. 657, except in cases where it is otherwise provided by statute; see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 85. But on an indictment against a bankrupt for concealing his effects, where it was proposed to prove the petitioning creditor's debt by putting in the bankrupt's balance-sheet delivered in upon oath, Alderson, B., and Patteson, J., held that it was not receivable for that purpose; R. v. Britton, 1 M. & Rob. 297; because, as explained by Patteson, J., in R. v. Wheater, 2 Mood. C. C. 45, 51, the balance-sheet was only admissible in the event of the commission being valid, and therefore it could not itself be given in evidence to prove the petitioning creditor's debt as a part of the commission.

Where the defendant on cross-examination in a civil action has been compelled to answer questions tending to criminate him, the admission so obtained cannot be used against him upon his trial on a criminal charge. R. v. Garbett, 1 Den. 236; 2 C. & K. 474. But declarations of a defendant, though made as a witness before a committee of the House of Commons, and under compulsory process, were held by Abbott, C.J., in R. v. Merceron, 2 Stark. (N. P.), 366, to be admissible against the defendant upon an indictment for corruptly granting licences to public-houses.

Confessions excluded by statute.]—By certain statutes admissions by a person on a former trial or inquiry in which he was examined as a witness, cannot be given in evidence against him on a criminal charge. Thus, by 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51 (Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883), s. 59, sub-s. 1 (b), "an answer by a person to a question put by or before any election court shall not, except in the case of any criminal proceeding for perjury in respect of such evidence, be in any proceeding, civil or criminal, admissible in evidence against him." This provision, which applies primarily to inquiries before an election court respecting parliamentary elections, is extended to similar inquiries respecting municipal elections by 47 & 48 Vict. c. 70, ss. 20, 35, and respecting certain other elections to public offices. Id. s. 36. See R. v. Buttle, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 248; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 115: R. v. Slator, 8 Q. B. D. 267. Provisions of a similar nature are contained in 26 & 27 Vict. c. 119 (Exhibition Medals Act, 1863), s. 5, in 38 & 39 Vict. c. 87 (Land Transfer Act, 1875), s. 103, in 50 & 51 Vict. c. 28 (Merchandise Marks Act, 1887), s. 19, sub-s. 2, and in 46 & 47 Vict. c. 3 (Explosive Substances Act, 1883), s. 6, sub-s. 2. Subject, however, to any exceptions introduced by statute, the general rule deducible from the modern cases seems to be, that although a sworn statement made by a prisoner, under examination when before a magistrate on a criminal charge, cannot afterwards be used in evidence against him, except where by 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, or some other statute, he may be sworn as a witness on his own behalf; R. v. Bird, 62 J. P. 760; 15 T. L. R. 26 (C. C. R.), yet any statement made by a person upon oath, when being examined as a witness, either before a civil tribunal, a coroner, or a magistrate, may be afterwards used against him on his trial on a criminal charge, unless, indeed, at the time of his examination he objected to answer the questions on the ground that the answers would tend to criminate him, and yet was improperly compelled to answer them. 2 Tayl. Ev. (9th ed.), 960; 3 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.), 520; Roscoe Cr. Ev. (12th ed.), 44; 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 1 (post, p. 393).

II. Extrajudicial confessions.]—An extrajudicial confession is made where the defendant makes an admission or confession of his guilt, or of any fact which may tend to the proof of it, to any person other than a judge or magistrate seised of the charge against him; or assents to what is said in his presence and hearing, relative to a fact within his knowledge. Thus, upon the trial of a prisoner for receiving stolen property, a list of the stolen articles which the prisoner had bought, was received in evidence in order to show that he had bought at an under-value. The circumstances under which the list was written, were that a constable asked the prisoner to say when he had bought the stolen property, to which the prisoner replied that his wife should make out a list of it, and on the next day the prisoner's wife in her husband's presence handed to another constable the list tendered in evidence, saying in her husband's hearing, "This is a list of what we bought and what we gave for them." It was held that this list was clearly admissible in evidence. R. v. Mallory, 13 Q. B. D. 33; 53 L. J. (M. C.) 134; but a statement made in the presence of an accused person ought not to be admitted as evidence against him, unless there is evidence (and whether this is or not is for the court to decide) which would justify the jury in finding that such statement was made upon an occasion when the accused had an opportunity of answering and might reasonably be expected to answer it, and in drawing an inference from his omitting to deny or question it, or from his language or demeanor that he did not dissent from the truth of it. R. v. Smith, 18 Cox, 470, Hawkins, J.; and see post, p. 335.

Confessions must be voluntary.]—These several species of confession, in order to be admissible, must be free and voluntary. And in the case of a confession before a magistrate (who before 1848 exercised inquisitorial as well as judicial functions, 1 Steph. Hist. Cr. L. 221), or before any other person, unless it be shown affirmatively on the part of the prosecution that it was made without the defendant's being induced to make it by any promise of favour, or by menaces, or undue terror, it shall not be received in evidence against him. 2 Hale, 285: R. v. Thompson [1893] 2 Q. B. 12; 17 Cox, 641 (C. C. R.); and see generally on this question, R. v. Baldry, 2 Den. 430. "If it proceeds from remorse or a desire to make reparation for the crime, it is admissible; if it flows from hope or fear exacted by a person in authority it is inadmissible. On this point the authorities are unanimous." R. v. Thompson [1893] 2 Q. B. at p. 15, Cave, J. Therefore a confession will be inadmissible if it be said to the defendant that it will be better or worse for him if he do or do not confess; 2 East, P. C. 659; or if the confession be procured by a threat to take the defendant before a magistrate if he do not give a more satisfactory account; R. v. Thompson, 1 Leach, 291: R. v. Parratt, 4 C. & P. 570; or to send for a constable for that purpose; R. v. Richards, 5 C. & P. 318: R. v. Hearn, C. & Mar. 109; or by saying, "Tell me where the things are, and I will be favourable to you;" R. v. Cass, 1 Leach, 293, n.; or, "You had better tell all you know;" R. v. Kingston, 4 C. & P. 387; or, "You had better tell where you got the property;" R. v. Dunn, 4 C. & P. 543; or, "You had better split, and not suffer for all of them;" R. v. Thomas, 6 C. & P. 353; or, "It would have been better if you had told at first;" R. v. Walkley, 6 C. & P. 175; or, "I should be obliged to you if you would tell us what you know about it; if you will not, of course we can do nothing;" R. v. Partridge, 7 C. & P. 551; or, "It will be best for you if you tell me how it was transacted;" R. v. Warringham, 2 Den. 447; or, "It might be better for you to tell the truth and not a lie;" R. v. Bate, 11 Cox, 686; or, "You had better tell the truth, it may be better for you;" R. v. Fennell, 7 Q. B. D. 147; 50 L. J. (M. C.) 126; or, "You had better tell me all about the corn that is gone;" R. v. Rose, 68 L. J. (Q. B.) 289; 18 Cox, 717, C. C. R. Where the prosecutor asked the defendant for the money which he had taken, and, before it was produced, said, "I only want my money, and if you give me that you may go to the devil if you please," upon which the defendant took part of the money from his pocket, and said that was all he had left, a majority of the judges held that the evidence was inadmissible. R. v. Jones, R. & R. 152.

In R. v. Brown [1903] 68 J. P. Rep. 15, on a trial for murder, the prosecutor proposed to put in evidence answers given by one of the prisoners—a soldier to a commanding officer of military police. The officer had come to the barracks of the prisoner's regiment, and a parade of the regiment was ordered. The prisoner was arrested and taken to the guard-room, where the officer asked him certain questions on suggestion of the superintendent of police. After the prisoner had answered a few questions, the superintendent stopped the officer from asking more, and arrested the prisoner. Wills, J., held that the answers were admissible, as the officer had held out no threat nor inducement, and there was no compulsion, and nothing to force the prisoner—a position in which he would be likely to make an untruthful answer.

The prisoner made a confession which was inadmissible in evidence in consequence of its having been made after a promise held out by the person to whom it was made. That person, shortly after the confession so made to her, sent for a neighbour and informed him of the confession, and he then had an interview alone with the prisoner, and asked her questions upon the subject, but he held out no inducement, and she then made a confession to him. It was held that this second confession was so connected with the promise held out by the person to whom the first confession was made as to be inadmissible. R. v. Rue, 13 Cox, 209, Denman, J., after consulting Kelly, C.B. Where a prisoner was told by a constable at 10 o'clock a.m. that it would be better for him to tell the truth, an admission by the prisoner to another constable after 6 o'clock in the evening of the same day was not allowed to be given in evidence, although the second constable had, before the prisoner made the admission, cautioned him not to say anything to criminate himself, for that anything he would say would hereafter come in evidence against him. This decision proceeded on the ground that the caution given by the second constable might not have had the effect of removing the expectation which might have been raised by the language of the first constable. R. v. Doherty (1), 13 Cox, 23, per Whiteside, C.J.: R. v. Doherty (2), 13 Cox, 24, per Fitzgerald, B. A confession, made with a view, and under a hope, of being thereby permitted to turn Queen's evidence, or of obtaining a pardon or reward, has been held inadmissible. R. v. Hall, 2 Leach, 559; R. v. Blackburn, 6 Cox, 333, Talfourd, J. And it is clearly so where such hope is the reasonable result of a communication from, or the conduct of, a person in authority. R. v. Gillis, 11 Cox, 69. See R. v. Burley, 2 Stark. Ev. (3rd ed.), 53: R. v. Boswell, C. & Mar. 584. But cf. R. v. Dingley, 1 C. & K. 637.

To exclude a confession made under the influence of a promise or threat, the promise or threat must be of a description which may be presumed to have had such an effect on the mind of the defendant as to induce him to confess; and therefore an exhortation, admonition, promise or threat, proceeding at a prior time from some one who has no concern in the apprehension, prosecution, or examination of the prisoner, but interferes without any authority, will not be sufficient to render a confession inadmissible. R. v. Row, R. & R. 153: R. v. Hardwick, 1 Phil. Ev. (7th ed.), 111: R. v. Gibbons, 1 C. & P. 97: R. v. Tyler, Id. 129: R. v. Clewes, 4 C. & P. 221. It seems that there was at one time a difference of opinion among the judges on this point—whether a confession made to a person who has no authority, after an inducement held out by that person, is receivable or not. R. v. Spencer, 7 C. & P. 776. It has, however, been long settled that evidence of any confession is receivable, unless there has been some inducement held out by some person in authority, and that if a person not in any office or authority held out to the accused party an inducement to confess, this will not exclude a confession made to that party. R. v. Taylor, 8 C. & P. 733: R. v. Moore, 2 Den. 526; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 199, C. C. R. It is immaterial whether the inducement is held out by the person in authority or in his presence without his dissent by a third person. Thus, where such a person held out an inducement in the presence of the prosecutor's wife, who expressed no dissent, the confession was held not to be receivable. R. v. Taylor, ubi supra. And see R. v. Hewett, C. & Mar. 534: R. v. Garner, 1 Den. 329; 2 C. & K. 920; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 1: R. v. Luckhurst, Dears. 245; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 18. So where the prisoner was taken by the constable to an inn, and the innkeeper, in the constable's hearing, held out an inducement to him to confess, and the prisoner, in the constable's hearing, made a confession to the innkeeper, which the constable was called to prove, Alderson, B., thought the evidence inadmissible. R. v. Pountney, 7 C. & P. 302. And see R. v. Dunn, 4 C. & P. 543: R. v. Slaughter, Id. 544 n.: for the fact of the constable being present and not dissenting from what was said places the expressions used on the same footing as if they had been used by the constable.

R. v. Laugher, 2 C. & K. 225, Pollock, C.B. Where one of two defendants charged with larceny said to the other (a constable, and the owner of the property, W., being present), "You had better tell Mr. W. the truth," neither the policeman nor W. saying anything, a confession made thereupon by the other defendant was held admissible. R. v. Parker, L. & C. 42; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 144. Where a girl, being apprehended for the murder of her child, was left by the constable in the custody of a woman, who told her she had better tell the truth, otherwise it would lie upon her and the man would go free, upon which she made a confession: Parke, J., and Taunton, J., held this confession not receivable, as it was made in consequence of an inducement held out to the prisoner by a person who had her in custody. R. v. Enoch, 5 C. & P. 539. A woman in custody on a charge of murder was placed in a room alone with E. to be searched. E. was a "searcher" of female prisoners, but had no other duties or authority in the gaol. Whilst the search was being made, the prisoner said, "If I tell the truth, shall I be hung?" to which E. answered, "No, nonsense, you will not be hung." It was held that a statement made by the prisoner to E. immediately afterwards was not receivable. R. v. Windsor, 4 F. & F. 361. And confessions obtained from a servant through hopes and threats held out by the wife or by the relations and neighbours of her master and prosecutor (or, in the case of an offence committed against several persons in partnership, by the wife, etc., of any of them, R. v. Warringham, 2 Den. 447, n.), have been held inadmissible by all the judges. R. v. Simpson, 1 Mood. C. C. 410: R. v. Upchurch, Id. 465. This, however, does not apply to a case where the charge against the servant has no relation to the persons or property of the master or his family: e.g., to a case of child murder or concealment of birth. R. v. Moore, 2 Den. 522; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 199.

The inducement must refer to a temporal benefit; for hopes which are referable to a future state merely are not within the principle which excludes confessions obtained by improper influence. R. v. Gilham, 1 Mood. C. C. 186. Where the inducements merely amount to a moral exhortation and do not refer to a temporary benefit, the confession is admissible. Thus where the defendant being in custody on a charge of setting fire to her master's farm-building, her master's married daughter said to her, "I am very sorry for you; you ought to have known better; tell me the truth, whether you did it or no;" the defendant replied, "I am innocent;" whereupon the other said, "Don't run your soul into more sin, but tell the truth;" a confession thereupon made by the defendant was held admissible. R. v. Sleeman, Dears. 249; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 19 (C. C. R.). And see 3 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 493. So where one of the prisoner's employers, having called him up into his private room, said, "I think it right that I should tell you that, besides being in the presence of my brother and myself, you are in the presence of two police officers; and I should advise you that, to any questions that may be put to you, you will answer truthfully, so that if you have committed a fault you may not add to it by stating what is untrue;" and having shown a letter to him, which he denied having written, added, "Take care; we know more than you think we know," and the prisoner thereupon made a confession; it was held that such confession was admissible. R. v. Jarvis, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 96; 37 L. J. (M. C.) 1. So where the mother of a little boy in custody on a criminal charge said to him and another little boy also in custody on the same charge, in the presence of the mother of the latter and of the policeman, "You had better, as good boys, tell the truth," whereupon both boys confessed, it was held that the confession was admissible. R. v. Reeve, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 362; 37 L. J.

(M. C.) 92. In that case, as well as in R. v. Jarvis, supra, the inducements do not seem to refer to a temporal benefit, but merely to amount to a moral exhortation, as in R. v. Sleeman (ante, p. 333).

So, where a prisoner under fourteen years of age, charged with murder, was told by a man, who was present when he was apprehended, "Now, kneel down, I am going to ask you a very serious question, and I hope you will tell me the truth, in the presence of the Almighty," and the prisoner in consequence made a statement, this was held (strictly) admissible. R. v. Wild, 1 Mood. C. C. 452. But where a constable, after having asked the prisoner what he had done with the stolen property, said, "You had better not add a lie to the crime of theft," Gaselee, J., refused to receive a statement thereupon made by the prisoner in evidence. R. v. Shepherd, 7 C. & P. 579.

The only proper questions are, whether the inducement held out to the prisoner was calculated to make his confession an untrue one, and whether the inducement continued to operate at the moment of the confession; if not, it will be admissible. Thus, where a prisoner asked of a witness with whom he was in conversation whether he had better confess, and the witness replied that he had better not confess, but he might say what he had to say to him, for it should go no further, a statement thereupon made by the prisoner was held admissible. R. v. Thomas, 7 C. & P. 345.

It is no objection to the admissibility of a confession, that it was made under a mistaken supposition that some of the defendant's accomplices were in custody, even though it were created by artifice, with a view to obtain the confession. R. v. Burley, 1 Phil. Ev. (7th ed.), 111. A statement made by a prisoner when drunk has been held admissible, even though the liquor was given him in the hope that he would make admissions. R. v. Spilsbury, 7 C. & P. 187. And a letter given by a defendant to the gaoler to put into the post is evidence against him. R. v. Derrington, 2 C. & P. 418. But where the prosecution tendered in evidence a letter written by the prisoner while in custody, to his wife, and given by him to a constable to post, who detained it, Kelly, C.B., refused to admit it, apparently upon the ground that the letter belonged in reality to the wife, who could not have been called upon to produce it had it reached her hands as it was intended by the prisoner to do. R. v. Pamenter, 12 Cox, 177. If the promise, or menace, etc., take place previously to the prisoner's being brought before the magistrate, the court will, in general, refuse to admit the confession to be given in evidence, unless it appear that the prisoner was undeceived by the magistrate, and cautioned by him not to expect the favour, or not to regard the menaces held out to him; 2 East, P. C. 658: and see R. v. Lingate, 1 Phil. Ev. (7th ed.), 414: R. v. Arnold, 8 C. & P. 621: 1 Taylor Ev. (7th ed.) 570. But where (before 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42) a defendant having been told by a constable that he might do himself some good by confessing, afterwards asked the magistrate if it would benefit him to confess, and the magistrate saying he could not say it would, the defendant then declined to confess, but afterwards, when going to prison, made a confession to the constable, the judges held the confession to be admissible, because the answer of the magistrate was sufficient to remove any expectation which the constable might have caused. R. v. Rosier, 2 Phil. Ev. (7th ed.) 112. See R. v. Green, 5 C. & P. 312: R. v. Clewes, 4 C. & P. 221: R. v. Richards, 5 C. & P. 318: R. v. Howes, 6 C. & P. 404: R. v. Dingley, 1 C. & K. 637. The only questions in these cases really are,—was any promise of favour, or any menace or undue terror made use of, to induce the prisoner to confess? and if so, was the prisoner induced by such promise or menace, etc., to make the confession attempted to be given in evidence? If the judge be of opinion in the affirmative upon both these questions, he will reject the evidence. If, on the contrary, it appears to him, from the circumstances, that, although such promises or menaces were held out, they did not operate upon the mind of the prisoner, but that his confession was voluntary notwithstanding, and he was not biassed by such impression in making it, the judge will admit the evidence. See 2 East, P. C. 658: R. v. Thompson [1893] 2 Q. B. 12: R. v. White, 1 Phil. Ev. (7th ed.) 406: and R. v. Nute, 1 Burn's J. 973 (30th ed.), citing 1 Burn's J. 688 (24th ed.).

Questions to prisoners by police constables.]—By the law of this country no person ought to be made to criminate himself, and no police officer has any right, until there is clear proof of a crime having been committed, to put searching questions to a person for the purpose of eliciting from him whether an offence has been perpetrated or not. If there is evidence of an offence a police officer is justified, after a proper caution, in putting questions to a suspected person in order to ascertain whether or not there are fair and reasonable grounds for apprehending him. Even this course should be very sparingly resorted to. R. v. Berriman, 6 Cox, 388, Erle, J. The admissibility of answers to such questions put by the police before arrest must depend in each case upon the whole of the circumstances. R. v. Miller, 18 Cox, 54, Hawkins, J. In R. v. Kershaw, 18 T. L. R. 357; 37 L. J. Newsp. 120, Bucknill, J., after consulting Wills, J., admitted statements by a boy accused of murder made in answer to questions put by the father of the deceased in the presence of a constable. Where they are taken down in writing and voluntarily signed by the accused they are admissible. R. v. Goddard, 60 J. P. 491.

Where a constable said to the prisoner, who was suspected of the murder of her child, that "if she did not tell him where it was she might get herself into trouble, and that it would be the worse for her," a statement thereupon made by her to the constable was rejected. R. v. Coley, 10 Cox, 536, Mellor, J. But a statement made to a constable, after he had told the defendant the nature of the charge against him and that he need not say anything to criminate himself, but that what he did say would be taken down, and used as evidence against him, was held to be admissible. R. v. Baldry, 2 Den. 430; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 130 (C. C. R.); overruling R. v. Drew, 8 C. & P. 140, Coleridge, J.: R. v. Morton, 2 M. & Rob. 514: R. v. Furley, 1 Cox, 76, Maule, J.: and R. v. Harris, Id. 106, Maule, J.

Where a constable in the course of a conversation between himself and the prisoner respecting the subject-matter of the charge and immediately before apprehending the prisoner said to the prisoner, "I must know more about it," it was held that the use of this expression by the constable did not render a statement thereupon made by the prisoner inadmissible. R. v. Reason, 12 Cox, 228, Keating, J., after consultation with Quain, J. It has been held in Ireland that answers given by a prisoner to a constable who has taken him into custody, and has given him no caution, are admissible in evidence against the prisoner on his trial. R. v. Johnston (1864), 15 Ir. Com. Law R. 60 (C. C. R.), which appears to overrule R. v. Bodkin, 9 Cox, 403 (Ir.).

Where a constable said to the prisoner, who was suspected of having stolen the prosecutrix's purse, "Now is the time for you to take it back to her" (the prosecutrix), it was held that the use of these words by the constable did not render inadmissible a statement subsequently made to him by the prisoner, as the words imported no promise or threat to the prisoner to induce him to confess. R. v. Jones, 12 Cox, 241 (C. C. R.).

Although a person who is suspected of a crime may, before he is charged or is in custody, be asked what he has to say in answer to or explanation of the matter, yet after he is in custody the police have no right to ask him questions, and an admission or confession obtained in that way is inadmissible in evidence. R. v. Gavin, 15 Cox, 656, A. L. Smith, J. Where a constable said to the prisoner, before formally taking him into custody, "I am going to ask you some questions, and what you say may be taken down in writing, and might be used as evidence against you," the prisoner's admissions were held admissible. R. v. Brackenbury, 17 Cox, 628, Day, J. (who expressly dissented from R. v. Gavin, supra). Where a constable, after arresting and cautioning the prisoner, asked him questions and informed him of a written statement of a person who was subsequently a witness for the prosecution, which statement, at the prisoner's request, the constable read over to him (the prisoner being charged at the police station with an offence for which no warrant had been taken out), what the prisoner said on hearing the statement above referred to read was held inadmissible. R. v. Male, 17 Cox, 689, Cave, J.: cf. R. v. Morgan, 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 526; 59 J. P. 827. These decisions do not make a preliminary caution essential. Rogers v. Hawken, 67 L. J. (Q. B.) 528; 62 J. P. 279, Russell, L.C.J. Where one of two prisoners in custody on a charge against them jointly voluntarily made and signed a statement implicating the other, and such statement was read over to the prisoner implicated, and the latter, after being cautioned, made a confession which was taken down in writing and signed by him, it was held that the statement of the one prisoner and the confession of the other might be given in evidence upon the trial of the latter. R. v. Hirst, 18 Cox, 374, Dugdale, Q.C. (Commissioner), after consulting Cave, J. Where the prisoner was questioned by a police constable whilst in prison awaiting her trial without being cautioned, and the court was of opinion that such questions had been put to her for the purpose of entrapping her into making admissions, her answers were held inadmissible. R. v. Histed, 19 Cox, 16, Hawkins, J.

Evidence obtained in consequence of inadmissible confessions.]—Although a confession for the above or any other reasons may not be receivable in evidence, yet any discovery that takes place in consequence of such confession, or any act done by the defendant, if it be confirmed by the finding of the property, will be admitted; as, for instance, if a man by a promise of favour be induced to confess that he knowingly received certain stolen goods, and that they are in such a room in his house, and the goods be found there accordingly, although the confession itself cannot in that case be given in evidence, yet it may be proved, that in consequence of something the witness heard from the defendant he found the goods in question in the defendant's house. R. v. Lockhart, 2 East, P. C. 658; 1 Leach, 386: and see R. v. Warrickshall, 1 Leach, 263: R. v. Mosey, Id. 265, n.: R. v. Butcher, 2 East, P. C. 658: R. v. Gould, 9 C. & P. 364. And it would seem also, that declarations of the defendant accompanying such acts, may be received in evidence, even though the confession itself may be inadmissible. R. v. Griffin, R. & R. 151: R. v. Jones, R. & R. 152: R. v. Leatham, 30 L. J. (Q. B.) 205; 8 Cox, 498; and see R. v. Jenkins, R. & R. 492.

How proved.]—Confessions by the accused in open court before the court of trial are recorded and need no further proof, vide ante, p. 325.

A confession before a magistrate, if taken down in writing at the time, should be produced, and appear to have been duly taken. It was at one time supposed that it must be proved by the magistrate who took and signed it, or by his clerk who wrote it: see 1 Hale, 585; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 43: R. v. Bell, 5 C. & P. 162; but it is clearly settled by the later authorities that it may be given in evidence on the prisoner's handwriting being proved by any person who was present at the preliminary enquiry. R. v. Chappel, 1 M. & Rob. 395: R. v. Hopes, Id. 396, n.; 7 C. & P. 136: R. v. Foster, 7 C. & P. 148: R. v. Rees, Id. 568: R. v. Reading, Id. 649: R. v. Pikesley, 9 C. & P. 124. Under s. 18 of the Indictable Offences Act, 1848 (ante, pp. 325, 326), it is proved by production of the statement signed by the justices before whom it was made, from the custody of the officer to whom it has been committed with the depositions; but the statutory mode of proof does not exclude other modes recognized by the common law. R. v. Bird, 79 L. T., N. S. 359; 62 J. P. 761, and see ante, p. 330. Before 1848 it was held that if the prisoner admit, when examined before the magistrate, that the deposition of a witness examined against him is true, that deposition may be read at the trial as part of the prisoner's statement, although the witness himself have been examined at the trial. R. v. John, 7 C. & P. 324. But the statement of one of several prisoners, brought before a magistrate for the same offence, cannot be read in evidence against the others; because they are only called upon to answer the depositions of the witnesses, taken on oath, not the statements of their fellow-prisoners. R. v. Swinnerton, C. & Mar. 593. Where a defendant was examined before the Lords of the Privy Council, and a witness took notes of his examination, which was not signed by or read over to the defendant, it was held that the witness might refresh his memory from the notes, but that the minutes were not admissible as a judicial examination. R. v. Layer, 16 St. Tr. 93, 215. The effect of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 48, s. 18, so far as regards the evidence of a confession, seems to be, that a written examination taken as the statute directs, is evidence per se, and the only admissible written evidence of the defendant's having made a declaration of the things therein contained; whereas, at common law (unless the defendant signed the paper, or, on its being read, allowed it to be true), the confession must have been proved by some person who heard it, and the writing could only have been made use of by the person who wrote it, for the purpose of refreshing his memory. 3 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 542.

Admissions or confessions to persons other than magistrates, if in writing, are proved as any other written instrument. R. v. Swatkins, 4 C. & P. 548. If made by parol, they are proved by parol evidence of some person who heard them. What the prisoner has been overheard to say to another, or to himself, is equally admissible; though it is a species of evidence to be acted on with much caution, as being liable to be unintentionally misrepresented by the witnesses. See R. v. Simons, 6 C. & P. 540. The provisions of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 18 (ante, pp. 325, 326), apply to treason. Apart from that Act the confession of an overt act upon an examination before a magistrate or other person having authority for that purpose, if proved at the trial by two witnesses, has been held sufficient to convict the defendant; R. v. Francia, 15 St. Tr. 897, 1 East, P. C. 133, n.; Fost. 240; but evidence of a confession to a person not having such authority, although given by two or more witnesses, can only be received in corroboration of the other evidence in the case; and the treason must still be proved by two witnesses. R. v. Willis, 15 St. Tr. 613; and see Fost. 241, 243. But a confession before a magistrate or other person may be given in evidence to prove a collateral fact, as for instance, that the defendant is a natural-born subject: R. v. Vaughan, 13 St. Tr. 485: R. v. Smith, Fost. 242, or the like, and may be proved by one witness, as in ordinary cases.

Effect of.]—As to the effect of direct confessions in open court, see ante, p. 325. The court is usually reluctant to accept and record a confession of guilt on indictments for grave crimes, and will generally advise the defendant to retract it and plead not guilty. 2 Hale, 255. But where the defendant refuses to withdraw his confession, there is no alternative but to accept it, even in the case of murder, of which instances have occurred.

A free and voluntary confession of guilt made by a defendant, whether under examination before magistrates or otherwise, where it is direct and positive, if duly made and satisfactorily proved, is sufficient at once to warrant a conviction, without any corroborative evidence aliunde. R. v. White, R. & R. 508: R. v. Tippet, Id. 509: R. v. Eldridge, Id. 440: R. v. Falkner, Id. 481: R. v. Francia, ubi supra: R. v. Lambe, 2 Leach, 552: R. v. Wheeling, 1 Leach, 311, n., and see 3 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.), 478. But admissions by implication are not entitled to the same weight.

In all cases, the whole of the confession should be given in evidence; for it is a general rule, that the whole of the account which a party gives of a transaction must be taken together; and his admission of a fact disadvantageous to himself shall not be received, without receiving at the same time his contemporaneous assertion of a fact favourable to him, not merely as evidence that he had made such assertion, but admissible evidence of the matter thus alleged by him in his discharge. 4 Taunt. 245; and see Queen Caroline's Case, 2 B. & B. 284, 294: 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1348. It has been said, that if there be no other evidence in the case, or none which is incompatible with the confession, it must be taken as true; R. v. Jones, 2 C. & P. 629; but the better opinion seems to be that, as in the case of all other evidence, the whole should be left to the jury, to say whether the facts asserted by the prisoner in his favour be true. Smith v. Blandy, Ry. & M. 257: R. v. Higgins, 3 C. & P. 603: R. v. Clewes 4 C. & P. 221.

A man's confession is only evidence against himself, and not against his accomplices; 1 Hale, 585 n.; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 34; R. v. Tonge, Kel. (J.), 17, 18; 6 St. Tr. 225; R. v. Boroski, 9 St. Tr. 1: R. v. Swinnerton, C. & Mar. 593; unless the confession was made in the presence of the accomplice, and under circumstances giving the latter an adequate opportunity of denying his own guilt, and when the prisoners were not before a magistrate. In such a case it is evidence, although of doubtful value, against the accomplice, and that even although he made no observation upon it. 1 Phil. Ev. 405 (7th ed.). Unsworn statements by one prisoner implicating others have no value as evidence, being neither admissions against interest nor strengthened by oath. But it is difficult to give effect at the same time to this rule, and to that requiring the whole of a confession to be put in. See Anon., 1 Lewin, 107: R. v. Clewes, 4 C. & P. 221: R. v. Fletcher, id. 250. And if the accusations are believed the only way to get the full benefit of them is to accept the accuser as a witness for the Crown. If, however, the prisoners were before a magistrate at the time when the confession was made by one of them, charging the other, the mere fact that the latter did not deny the charge would not render the confession evidence against him; R. v. Appleby, 3 Stark. (N. P.) 33; although if he himself in his own statement before the magistrate made an express reference to the confession of his fellow prisoner, such reference might have the effect of rendering the confession as admissible against him. 3 Russ. Cr. (6th. ed.) 524. So, the confession of a principal is not evidence against an accessory to prove the guilt of the principal, which must be proved aliunde. R. v. Turner, 1 Mood. C. C. 347. In Tinckler's case, 1 East, P. C. 354, the dying declarations of a felo de se were held to be good evidence against a person indicted for assisting the deceased in his self-murder: and the majority of the judges were of opinion that this evidence would of itself be sufficient to convict, although the testimony of the accomplice, if living, would not, unless corroborated by other evidence. But see comments on the report of the case in 1 Den., v, vi. This case is no infringement of the general rule that a man's confession is no evidence against his accomplice, for an accomplice is admissible as a witness against his fellows, and a dying declaration made by a person who, if alive, would be admissible as a witness, is admissible as evidence where the death of the deceased is the subject of the charge, and the cause of the death the subject of the dying declaration. In cases of conspiracy, and of high treason in compassing the King's death, etc., or in which the case for the Crown is that the crime was the result of a conspiracy, anything said or written by one of the accomplices, not as a confession simply, but for the purpose of furthering the common design, is admissible evidence against the others. R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 116, 140; 32 St. Tr. 1: R. v. Desmond, 11 Cox, 146: and see Harrison's Dig., tit. "Confession." This does not extend to confessions after arrest when the design has necessarily been abandoned. R. v. Shakespeare, [1899] 34 L. J. Newsp., 116.

Where two prisoners are jointly indicted, and are on their trial, and it appears from the opening of the counsel for the prosecution that there is no case against one of them, statements made by that one in the absence of the other, tending to show the guilt of the latter, cannot be given in evidence. R. v. Gardner, 9 Cox, 332.

Sect. 3.

PRESUMPTIONS.

Presumptive or (as it is usually termed) circumstantial evidence is receivable in criminal as well as in civil cases: and, indeed, the necessity of admitting such evidence is more obvious in the former than in the latter; for, in criminal cases, the possibility of proving the matter charged in the pleading by the direct and positive testimony of eye-witnesses or by conclusive documents is much more rare than in civil cases, and where such testimony is not available the jury are permitted to infer from the facts proved other facts necessary to complete the elements of guilt or establish innocence. Although presumptive evidence must, from necessity, be admitted, yet it should be admitted cautiously. And Sir Matthew Hale, in particular, lays down two rules most prudent and necessary to be observed in this respect: first, Never to convict a man for stealing the goods of a person unknown, merely because he will give no account how he came by them, unless an actual felony be proved of such goods; and secondly, Never to convict any person of murder or manslaughter, till at least the body be found—on account of two instances he mentions, where persons were executed for the murder of others who were then alive, although missing, 2 Hale, 290. This rule is obviously inapplicable in cases of murder at sea. See post, tit. "Homicide."

Presumptions of fact.]—A presumption is where, some facts being proved, another fact follows as a natural or very probable inference or conclusion from them; so as readily to gain assent from the mere probability of its having occurred, without further proof. The fact thus assented to is said to be presumed, that is, taken for granted until the contrary be proved by the opposite party; stabit præsumptio donec probetur in contrarium. 4 Co. Rep. 71 b. And it is adopted the more readily, in proportion to the difficulty of proving the fact by positive evidence, and to the facility of disproving it or of proving facts inconsistent with it, if it really never occurred. See Stephen, Evidence (5th. ed.), pp. 2, 161; Wills, Circumstantial Evidence (5th. ed.), 22.

Presumptions of fact are of three kinds: violent presumptions, where the facts and circumstances proved necessarily attend the fact presumed; Gilb. Ev. 147; probable presumptions, where the facts and circumstances proved usually attend the fact presumed; 3 Bl. Com. 372; and light or rash presumptions, which, however, have no weight or validity at all. Id.; Gilb. Ev. 147; Co. Litt. 6 b. If, upon an indictment for murder, it were proved that the deceased was murdered in a house, and that the defendant was immediately afterwards seen running out of it with a bloody sword in his hand; these facts raise a violent presumption that the defendant was the murderer; for the blood, the weapon, and the hasty flight, are all circumstances necessarily attending the fact presumed, namely, the murder. Co. Litt. 6 b; Staundf. 179 a; Gilb. Ev. 157. So, upon an indictment for stealing in a dwelling house, if the defendant were apprehended a few yards from the outer door, with the stolen goods in his possession, it would be a violent presumption of his having stolen them; but if they were found in his lodgings some time after the larceny, and he refused to account for his possession of them, this, together with proof that they were actually stolen, would amount, not to a violent, but to a probable presumption merely; but, if the property were not found recently after the loss, as, for instance, not till sixteen months after, it would be but a light or rash presumption, and entitled to no weight. Anon., 2 C. & P. 459: see R. v. Adams, 3 C. & P. 600, Parke, B.: R. v. Cooper, 3 C. & K. 318, Maule, J. And if the prisoner give a reasonable account of the manner in which he became possessed of the goods, this will so far rebut the presumption as to throw it upon the prosecutor to negative that account. R. v. Crowhurst, 1 C. & K. 370, Alderson, B.: R. v. Smith, 2 C. & K. 207, Denman, C.J.: R. v. Harmer, 2 Cox, 487, Pollock, C.B. Where, however, a prisoner was convicted of stealing some articles of dress, and the evidence against him consisted of proof that he was in possession of the property recently after it had been stolen, that he sold it openly, and on his arrest stated to the constable that C. and D. brought the things to his house, and that W., who was at his house, would say that that was true; C., D., and W. were persons known to the constable, and might have been produced as witnesses, but were not called; and inquiry was made of W., but the result of the inquiry was not given in evidence; it was held that the conviction was good, and that it was not incumbent on the prosecution to call the witnesses to whom the prisoner had referred, to disprove his statement. R. v. Wilson, Dears. & B. 157; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 45 (C. C. R.). Although the last-mentioned case may at first sight seem at variance with the doctrine laid down in R. v. Crowhurst, R. v. Smith, and R. v. Harmer, ubi supra, it is not so in reality; for although R. v. Crowhurst and R. v. Smith were cited in R. v. Wilson, the decision in R. v. Wilson did not turn on those cases, but on the question whether the whole evidence taken together was sufficient to justify a conviction. Best on Evidence (4th ed.), 295; and see 1 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.), p. 63. So, where on the trial of an indictment for receiving stolen goods it appeared that the prisoner had told the constable who found the stolen property in his possession that he had purchased it of a tradesman in the same town, and that tradesman, although known, was not called for the prosecution, it was held that there being other circumstances in the case from which the jury might fairly infer the falsehood of the prisoner's story, it was unnecessary to call the tradesman on the part of the prosecution. R. v. Ritson 15 Cox, 478 (C. C. R.). The presumption of guilt arising from the possession of stolen property will, of course, vary according to the nature of the property stolen, and whether it be or be not likely to pass readily from hand to hand. See R. v. Partridge, 7 C. & P. 551, Patteson, J. Upon an indictment for arson, proof that property, which was in the house at the time it was burnt, was afterwards found in the possession of the defendant, raises a probable presumption that the defendant was present and concerned in the arson. See R. v. Rickman, 2 East, P. C. 1034, 1035. A like inference has been raised in the case of murder, accompanied by robbery; Wills, Circumstantial Evidence (5th ed.) 77; in a case of burglary, R. v. Gould, 9 C. & P. 364, Parke, B.; R. v. Exall, 4 F. & F. 922, Pollock, C.B.; and in the case of the possession of a quantity of counterfeit money: R. v. Fuller, R. & R. 308: R. v. Jarvis, Dears. 552; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 30 (C. C. R.); 1 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.) 121. The presumption can, of course, only arise, where the possession is proved. A bag was left by the owner near a place where the prisoner and two other persons were at the time. The prisoner passed the place on his way home, and shortly afterwards one of the other two persons followed in the same direction along with the prosecutor. They met the prisoner coming back to his home from the opposite direction, and, being questioned, he denied all knowledge of the bag, and said that he had been in a neighbouring wood for firewood. The wood, the prisoner's cottage, and some disused farm buildings near it, were then searched, without success. About twenty-four hours afterwards the bag was found in a hayloft in one of the disused farm buildings, near the highway. There was no door to it, and passers-by had easy access to it. The prisoner was then taken into custody, and said to the constable, after previously denying he had taken the bag, "I suppose I shall get a month for this." It was held that there was no evidence from which the jury might infer the prisoner had had possession of the bag, and therefore that the case could not be treated as one of recent possession. R. v. Hughes, 14 Cox, 223 (C. C. R.) Although upon an indictment for larceny it is necessary to prove that goods of the prosecutor have been taken, that may be proved by circumstances, although the witnesses for the prosecution cannot swear to the loss of the article said to be stolen, nor that the property found upon the prisoner and alleged to have been stolen is the prosecutor's. A large quantity of pepper was kept in bulk in a warehouse where the prisoner had no business. He was met coming out of the warehouse, having on him a quantity of pepper of the same description as that in the warehouse. On being stopped, he threw down the pepper, and said, "I hope you will not be hard with me." From the large quantity in the warehouse, it could not be proved that any pepper had been taken from the bulk. Upon these facts, it was held that there was abundant evidence to justify the conviction of the prisoner for stealing the pepper. R. v. Burton, Dears. 282; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 52. "If a man go into the London Docks sober, without means of getting drunk, and comes out of one of the cellars very drunk, wherein are a million gallons of wine, I think that would be reasonable evidence that he had stolen some of the wine in that cellar, though you could not prove that any wine was stolen, or any wine was missed." Per Maule, J., in R. v. Burton, ubi supra. Cf. R. v. Dredge, 1 Cox, 235, Erle, J.: R. v. Mockford, 11 Cox, 16 (C. C. R.). Where, upon an indictment for perjury, in falsely taking the freeholder's oath in the name of J. W., at a parliamentary election, it was proved that the freeholder's oath was administered to a person who polled on the second day of the election by the name of J. W.; that there was no such person in fact as J. W.; that the defendant voted on the second day, though he was not a freeholder; that he did not vote in his own name or in any other than the name of J. W.; that there was but one false vote given on the second day's poll; and that the defendant some time afterwards boasted that he had "done the trick," and was not paid enough for the job, and was afraid he should be "pulled up for his bad vote;" the court held that this was sufficient evidence for the jury to presume that the defendant voted in the name of J. W., and consequently to find him guilty of the charge in the indictment. R. v. Price, 6 East, 323. Upon an indictment for disposing of and putting away a forged bank-note, knowing it to be forged, proof that the defendant has passed other forged notes raises a probable presumption that he knew the note, for the passing of which he is now indicted, to be forged; and if, in addition to this, it be proved that the defendant when he passed these notes gave a false name or address, it amounts to a violent presumption of a guilty knowledge. And the same upon indictments for uttering counterfeit money. (See ante, p. 310). The fact that a person is alive on a given day may be presumed from proof of his being alive on an antecedent day. If, for example, it was proved on the trial of a man for bigamy that the first wife was in good health on the day preceding the second marriage, the inference would be almost irresistible that she was living on the latter day, and the jury would, in all probability, find that she was so. If, on the other hand, it was proved that she was on the day before the second marriage in a dying condition, and nothing further was proved, they would probably decline to draw that inference. The question is, however, entirely for the jury, the law making no presumption either way. R. v. Lumley, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 196; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 86. In 1864 W. married A. In 1868 he was charged with bigamy in marrying B. in 1868, his wife A. being then alive, and was on such charge convicted. In 1879 he married C., and in 1880, C. being then alive, he married D. Afterwards, upon a charge of bigamy in marrying D., C. being then alive, W. was convicted, it being held by the presiding judge that there was no evidence that A. was alive when W. married C., or that the marriage with C. was invalid, by reason of A. being then alive. It was held, however, that the conviction could not be sustained, as the question should have been left to the jury whether upon the above facts A. was alive or not when W. married C. R. v. Willshire 6 Q. B. D. 366; 50 L. J. (M. C.) 57.

Presumptions of law.]—In addition to the presumptions which a jury may make from circumstantial evidence, there are also presumptions of law. "Presumptions of law consist of these rules, which in certain cases forbid or dispense with further inquiry." 1 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.) 69. They fall into two classes—disputable presumptions, which can be rebutted by evidence sufficient to displace them; and conclusive, which are absolute and cannot be rebutted by any evidence.

1. Disputable presumptions.]—The most important of the disputable presumptions in criminal cases is the presumption that the accused is innocent. This is the maxim, "semper præsumitur pro negante," or that the burden of proof lies on the person who affirms a fact. R. v. Twyning, 2 B. & Ald. 386; 20 R. R. 480: Sissons v. Dixon, 5 B. & C. 758. But this presumption is easily rebutted by proof of acts tending to show guilt, and when these acts are wrongful and not accidental a presumption of malice or criminal intent arises. And where certain facts are proved against a defendant the law in certain cases presumes against him malice or intent, or some state of mind involving criminal responsibility, as having accompanied the act proved. This rule may also be expressed by saying that to justify conviction in a criminal case the evidence of guilt must not be a mere balance of probabilities; but must satisfy the jury beyond reasonable doubt that the accused is guilty. See R. v. White, 4 F. & F. 384. In murder, the law presumes malice from the act of killing, until the contrary be proved by the defendant. Fost. 255; 1 East, P. C. 340. And malice is also presumed where any wrongful act is done intentionally, without just cause or excuse. "Malice," says Bayley, J., in delivering the judgment of the court in Bromage v. Prosser, 4 B. & C. 247, 255, "in common acceptation means ill-will against a person, but in its legal sense it means a wrongful act done intentionally, without just cause or excuse. If I give a perfect stranger a blow likely to produce death, I do it of malice, because I do it intentionally, and without just cause or excuse. If I maim cattle, without knowing whose they are,—if I poison a fishery, without knowing the owner,—I do it of malice, because it is a wrongful act, and done intentionally. And if I traduce a man, whether I know him or not, and whether I intend to do him an injury or not, I apprehend the law considers it as done of malice, because it is wrongful and intentional." This definition was considered in Allen v. Flood [1898] App. Cas. 1, and seems to have been there approved. The latter case, which draws a distinction between malice in criminal and civil cases, has been explained in Quinn v. Leathem [1901] App. Cas. 495. The meaning of malice in a criminal case differs to some extent with the common-law or statutory definition of each offence. See McDowell v. Mayor, etc., of Dublin [1903] 2 Ir. Rep. 541 (C. A.).

On an indictment for libel a defamatory statement is presumed to be malicious unless the occasion is privileged. R. v. Harvey, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1; 2 B. & C. 257: Bromage v. Prosser, 4 B. & C. 247: R. v. Creevey, 1 M. & Sel. 273; 14 R. R. 427. And the law also infers that every man must contemplate the necessary consequences of his own act. R. v. Dixon, 3 M. & Sel. 11; 5 R. R. 381; 1 Taylor Evidence (9th ed.), p. 80. Thus, the uttering of a forged stock receipt to a person who employed the prisoner to purchase stock to that amount, and advanced the money, was held sufficient evidence of an attempt to defraud, notwithstanding the belief of the party to whom it was uttered that the prisoner had no such intention. R. v. Sheppard, R. & R. 169. And upon an indictment for forgery, an intention to defraud the person who would have to pay the instrument if it were genuine, may be inferred even though the instrument be so framed as not to impose upon him, and the intention to defraud be general, and not confined or in any way pointed to the person by whom, if genuine, the instrument would be paid. R. v. Mazagora, R. & R. 291: R v. Hill, 2 Mood. C. C. 30; 8 C. & P. 274: R. v. Cooke, Id. 582. Where a man has in his possession a large quantity of counterfeit coin unaccounted for, it may be inferred that he procured it with intent to utter it, if there be no evidence that he was the maker. R. v. Fuller, R. & R. 308. Where a man was indicted under 43 G. 3, c. 58 (rep.), for setting fire to a mill, with intent to injure the occupiers, it was held that the intent might be inferred from the act. R. v. Farrington, R. & R. 207. So, in every case, intention can be but matter of presumption, arising either from the facts stated in the instrument, or from extrinsic facts stated in evidence. (See ante, p. 303, et seq.) As to the presumption from the fact of a previous conviction that a person found in possession of stolen goods knew that they were stolen, see 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 19, post, tit. "Receiving."

In the case of possession of instruments adapted for forgery or coining and counterfeit coins and certain forged documents, the presumption of guilt is placed by statute on the person found in possession, and he must prove a lawful excuse. See the statutes in these titles, post; and as to presumptions in cases of larceny, see ante, p. 311.

The intention to be implied from an act is not to be rebutted or got rid of, because the person committing such act has some ulterior intention. Steele v. Brannan, 41 L. J. (M. C.) 85, 91, Grove, J.

There is no presumption of law that a person proved to have been alive on a certain day was alive on a subsequent day, although a jury may be well warranted by such proof, in finding as a matter of fact that he was so. R. v. Lumley, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 196 (ante, p. 342). And where the question was whether a person was alive on the 7th September, 1879, and the only evidence of her being alive at that date was that she was living in June, 1868, it was held that such evidence ought to have been submitted to the jury. R. v. Willshire (ante, p. 342). Nor is there any presumption of law in favour or against the continuance of life for any given period. R. v. Lumley, ubi supra: R. v. Tolson, 23 Q. B. D. 168.

It is also a maxim of law, that "omnia præsumuntur ritè et solenniter esse acta donec probetur in contrarium;" upon which ground it will be presumed, even in a case of murder, that a man who has acted in a public capacity or situation was duly appointed, and has properly discharged his official duties. R. v. Gordon, 1 Leach, 515: R. v. Rees, 6 C. & P. 606: R. v. Jones, 2 Camp. 131; 11 R. R. 680: R. v. Verelst, 3 Camp. 432; 14 R. R. 775: R. v. Murphy, 8 C. & P. 297: R. v. Catesby, 2 B. & C. 814: R. v. Newton, 1 C. & K. 469: R. v. Townsend, C. & Mar. 178: R. v. Cresswell, 1 Q. B. D. 446; 43 L. J. (M. C.) 77; 13 Cox, 126: R. v. Manwaring, Dears. & B. 132: 7 Cox, 192 (C. C. R.): R. v. Stewart, 13 Cox, 296: R. v. Roberts, 14 Cox, 101 (C. C. R.).

The rule that ignorance of the law shall not excuse a man or relieve him from the penal consequences of a crime (ante, p. 33), is usually spoken of as arising from a presumption that every person knows the law. 1 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.), p. 79. The following language, however, used by Maule, J., in Martindale v. Falkner, 2 C. B. 706, 720, is characterised by Blackburn, J., in R. v. Mayor, etc., of Tewkesbury, L. R. 3 Q. B. 629; 37 L. J. (Q. B.) 238, as clear and common sense: "There is no presumption in this country that every person knows the law; it would be contrary to common sense and reason if it were so."

2. Conclusive presumptions.]—It is an incontrovertible presumption of law (1) that a child under seven is incapable of committing crime; (2) that a male under 14 is incapable of sexual intercourse. See ante, p. 22. 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, ss. 4, 5, enacts that the consent of a female under 16 to unlawful carnal intercourse is no defence to proceeding under the section: but the enactments only take away a defence and create no presumption as to capacity.

Sect 4.

WRITTEN EVIDENCE.

1. Public documents, p. 344.
2. Private documents, p. 380.

1. PUBLIC DOCUMENTS.

Proof by Copies.

As a general rule it is unnecessary to produce in evidence the original of any public document, for the reasons given ante, p. 316. Copies of public documents admissible in evidence fall into four classes.

1. Exemplifications (i.e., copies under seals of state).]—An exemplification under the Great Seal is itself a record, and needs no further proof. Leyfield's Case, 10 Co. Rep. 93; Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.), 97; 2 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.), 1015. Exemplifications under the seal of the court, to which the record belongs, whether it be a statutory or a common law court, are in the same position. Olive v. Guin, 2 Sid. 145; Gilb. Ev. 17, 19. Exemplifications produced from the proper custody, and purporting to exemplify a commission from the crown have been held admissible, though the seal has been lost. Mayor of Beverley v. Craven, 2 M. & Rob. 140.

2. Office Copies (i.e., copies made by an officer of the court to which the document belongs).]—These are admissible without proof of collation of the copy with the original. See Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.) 98. Office copies, certificates, and other documents appearing to be sealed with a seal of the central office of the High Court, shall be presumed to be office copies, certificates, or other documents issued from the central office, and if duly stamped may be received in evidence, and no signature or other formality, except the sealing with a seal of the central office shall be required for the authentication of any such copy, certificate, or other document. R. C. S. [1883], O. 61, r. 7. By the Supreme Court of Judicature Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 66), s. 61, all writs and documents issued out of or filed in any district registry of the High Court of Justice, and all exemplifications and copies thereof, purporting to be sealed with the seal of any such district registry, shall in all parts of the United Kingdom be received in evidence without further proof thereof.

An office copy has been rejected for contractions and abbreviations. R. v. Christian, C. & Mar. 388.

3. Record Office Copies.—In the case of records in the Public Record Office under the custody of the Master of the Rolls, copies certified by the Master of the Rolls, or deputy-keeper of the records, and purporting to be sealed or stamped with the seal of the Record Office are to be received in evidence in all courts of justice without any further or other proof thereof, in every case where the original record would have been received there as evidence. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 94, ss. 11, 12, 13. All records of the High Court are kept in the court for twenty years, and then transferred to the Record Office.

4. Examined Copies are copies made by any person from the record itself. The person to prove such a copy at the trial must examine the copy while the officer reads the record; but the officer need not also read the copy while the witness examines the record. Reid v. Margison, 1 Camp. 469: Gyles v. Hill, Id. 471, n.: Rolf v. Dart, 2 Taunt. 52; Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.) 98.

Statutes and Laws.

Public Acts.]—Public general statutes, like the rules of the common law or general customs of the realm, need not be either pleaded or proved, because the courts are bound ex officio to take judicial notice of them. Production at the trial of a public general statute is not for the purposes of putting it in evidence, but merely in aid of the memory of the court and jury. Gilb. Ev. 10; 2 Taylor Evidence (9th ed.) p. 1006; Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.) 105. In order to assure the correctness of the text of a statute, reference may be made to printed copies purporting to be published by authority, or to the official editions of the statutes; but no statutory provision exists as to proof of the public general statutes of England, Great Britain, or the United Kingdom. In the case of early statutes an exemplification can be obtained of the Act as appearing on the chancery roll, or a certified or examined copy can be made from the parliament roll, or in case of need the original roll can be produced or referred to. 1 Taylor, Evidence (3rd ed.) p. 20; The Prince's Case, 8 Co. Rep. 18*a*, 20*b*; Hardcastle on Statutes (3rd ed.), chaps. 3 & 8. It seems that the preamble of a public general statute is admissible, but not conclusive evidence of the facts therein recited. R. v. Sutton, 4 M. & Sel. 532. The books of common prayer are judicially noticed as Acts of parliament, being scheduled to the Acts of Uniformity. 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 1; 5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 1, s. 4; 1 Eliz. c. 2; 14 Car. 2, c. 4. Acts of the Irish Parliament, printed and published by the King's printer, are to be received as conclusive evidence in any court of Great Britain. 41 G. 3, c. 90, s. 9. There is no statutory provision as to the proof of a Scots Act. Colonial statutes are proved in England by the certificate of the proper officer of the colony that the document to which it is attached is a true copy of the statute in question. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 63, s. 6. All statutes of the United Kingdom passed since 1850, whether general, local and personal, or private, are public Acts, and to be judicially noticed as such, unless the contrary is expressly provided by the particular statute. 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 9. Such Acts therefore do not need proof, though in certain cases it may be expedient to plead them specially. Prior to 1850 it was not uncommon to insert in local and personal or private Acts a clause that they should be deemed and taken to be public Acts, and judicially noticed without being specially pleaded. This rendered a King's printer's copy admissible [as in the case of a public general Act]. Brett v. Beales, M. & M. 416, 421: Woodward v. Cotton, 1 Cr. M. & R. 44: Beaumont v. Mountain, 10 Bing. 404; 4 Moo. & S. 177: Greswolde v. Kemp, C. & Mar. 635. It has been held that such Acts must be specially pleaded to make facts therein admissible in evidence against strangers. Brett v. Beales, ubi supra. This decision must be read subject to 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 9, supra, and to the dicta of Cairns, L.C., in Aiton v. Stephen, 1 App. Cas. 456, to the effect that 13 & 14 Vict. c. 21 (of which 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, is on this point a re-enactment), gave the local Acts to which it applied all the effect of public Acts.

Special or private Acts.]—The common law mode of proving a private statute is by an examined copy of the parliament roll, Gilb. Ev. 12: R. v. Shaw, 12 East, 479: or by an exemplification made from the chancery roll (1 Statt. Realm, Introd. xxxv.), or a certified copy from the clerk of the parliaments or the public record office. See R. v. Milton, 1 C. & K. 58, 59 n. By the Evidence Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 113), s. 3, as amended by the Documentary Evidence Act 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 9), s. 2, all copies of private and local personal Acts of parliament, not public Acts, if purporting to be printed by the King's printers or under the superintendence or authority of his Majesty's stationery office, shall be admitted as evidence thereof by all courts, judges, justices, and others, without any proof being given that such copies were so printed. As to available texts of private Acts, see Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.), 106.

Colonial and foreign laws.]—The law whether written or unwritten of a foreign country or of any part of the King's dominions outside England, must be proved in English courts by the oral testimony of witnesses of competent skill, and in the case of written law cannot be proved by the production of the written law itself, or of an authenticated copy.

Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. (Consist. Rep.) 54: Sussex Peerage claim, 6 St. Tr., N. S. 79: 11 Cl. & F. 85, 114–117; 8 Eng. Rep. 1034: Baron de Bode v. R., 6 St. Tr., N. S. 237; 8 Q. B. 208, 250-267: Castrique v. Imrie, L. R. 4 H. L. 414: 2 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.), 936, 1007: Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.), 121. The witness to prove a foreign law must be a person peritus virtute officii, or virtute professionis. Sussex Peerage claim, ubi supra. A Roman Catholic bishop, who held in this country the office of a coadjutor to a vicar apostolic, and as such was authorized to decide on cases affected by the law of Rome, was therefore held, in virtue of his office, to be a witness admissible to prove the law of Rome as to marriage. Id. But a witness whose knowledge of the law of a foreign country is derived solely from his having studied it at a university in another country, is not a good witness to prove it. Bristow v. Sequeville, 5 Ex. 275; 19 L. J. (Ex.) 289: In the goods of Bonelli, 1 P. D. 69; 45 L. J. (P. D. & A.) 42. A witness competent to give evidence on a point of foreign law may refer to foreign law-books to refresh his memory, or to correct or confirm his opinion, but the law itself must be taken from his evidence. Sussex Peerage claim, supra. The law of a foreign country may also be ascertained by the court here by obtaining an opinion on the subject from a superior court of the foreign country whose law is in question, if a convention has been entered into between the British Government and that of the foreign state. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 11. The law of one part of the King's dominions for the purpose of judicial proceedings in another part may be ascertained in a similar manner under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 63. Both these Acts have been extended by order in council to many places to which the Foreign Jurisdiction Act, 1890 (53 & 54 Vict. c. 37), applies. The principal orders in force at the end of 1903 are published in the 1904 edition of the Statutory Rules and Orders Revised, vol. 5, tit. "Foreign Jurisdiction;" those since that date in the volume of Statutory Rules and Orders for the year in which they were made. See also Encycl. of Laws of England, tit. "Foreign Jurisdiction."

Proceedings in Parliament.

Entries in the journals of the House of Lords and House of Commons may be proved by examined copies from their minute-books; Jones v. Randall, 1 Cowp. 17; R. v. Lord G. Gordon, 2 Doug. 590, 594; 21 St. Tr. 485: R. v. Lord Melville, 29 St. Tr. 549, 683; or by copies purporting to be printed by the printers to the crown or to either House of Parliament, or under the superintendence or authority of the Stationery Office, without any proof being given that such copies were so printed. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 3; 45 & 46 Vict. c. 9, s. 2. The journals of the House of Lords have been held evidence to prove not only an address of the Lords to the King, but also the King's answer. R. v. Holt, 5 T. R. 436, 445. R. v. Francklin, 17 St. Tr. 625, 637. But the resolutions of either house, with a view to ulterior proceedings, are no evidence of the facts therein stated: as, for instance, when the House of Commons resolved that a plot against the government existed, the resolution was held to be no evidence of the existence of such a plot. Titus Oates' Case, 10 St. Tr. 1073, at 1165. As a general rule the proceedings in either house are not admissible as an aid to construing a statute. Steele v. Midland Ry. Co., L. R. 1 Ch. App. 275, 282. But see cases collected in Hardcastle on Statutes (3rd ed.), p. 139, et seq.

Statutory Rules.

Very many statutes authorize the making by the Privy Council or by government departments of "statutory rules," i.e., of subordinate legislation under authority delegated by parliament. By the Rules Publication Act, 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 66), it is enacted that all statutory rules made after December 31, 1893, shall forthwith be sent to the King's printer of Acts of parliament, and subject to regulations made by the Treasury with the concurrence of the Lord Chancellor and Speaker of the House of Commons be numbered, and save as provided by the regulations, be printed and sold by him, and in cases where such rules are required by any Act to be published or notified in the London, Edinburgh, or Dublin Gazette, a notice in the Gazette of the rules having been made, and of the place where copies can be purchased, is now sufficient compliance with such requirement. 56 & 57 Vict. c. 66, s. 3 (3). The regulations issued in 1894 (Stat. Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 11, tit. "Statutory Rule"), restrict the operation of the Act of 1893 to rules which are of a legislative and not merely of an executive character, and to rules made, and not merely confirmed, by a government department: and rules of the latter class, which are of a merely local character, are for the most part not printed under the regulations. Proof of statutory rules may be given by production of the annual volume of Statutory Rules and Orders published by authority, containing them, or by a copy issued by the King's printer. See R. v. Vos [1895], 6 Queensland L. J. 215, an indictment under the Pacific Islanders Protection Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 19).

Primâ facie evidence of any order, or regulation, issued before or after the passing of the Documentary Evidence Act, 1868, by his Majesty, or by the Privy Council, and of any proclamation, order or regulation issued before or after the passing of that Act by or under the authority of any such department of the government or office, as is mentioned in the first column of the schedule thereto, may be given in all courts of justice and in all legal proceedings whatsoever, in all or any of the modes hereinafter mentioned: that is to say:—

1. By the production of a copy of the Gazette purporting to contain such proclamation, order or regulation.

2. By the production of a copy of such proclamation, order or regulation purporting to be printed by the government printer, or, where the question arises in a court in any British colony or possession, of a copy purporting to be printed under the authority of the legislature of such British colony or possession:—

3. By the production, in the case of any proclamation, order or regulation issued by his Majesty or by the Privy Council, of a copy or extract purporting to be certified to be true by the clerk of the Privy Council, or by any one of the lords or others of the Privy Council, and, in the case of any proclamation, order or regulation issued by or under the authority of any of the said departments or officers, by the production of a copy or extract purporting to be certified to be true by the person or persons specified in the second column of the said schedule, in connexion with such department or office. "Any copy or extract made in pursuance of that Act may be in print or in writing, or partly in print and partly in writing. No proof shall be required of the handwriting or official position of any person certifying, in pursuance of this Act, to the truth of any copy of or extract from any proclamation, order or regulation." Documentary Evidence Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 37, s. 2).

Schedule.

Column 1. NAME OF DEPARTMENT OR OFFICER.	Column 2. NAMES OF CERTIFYING OFFICERS.
"The Treasury" (see 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 12 (2)).	Any commissioner, secretary or assistant secretary of the Treasury.
"The Admiralty" (see 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 12 (4)).	Any of the commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, or either of the secretaries to the said commissioners.
Secretaries of State.	Any secretary or under-secretary of state.
"The Board of Trade" (see 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 12 (8)).	Any member of the "Board" or any secretary or assistant secretary of the "Board."
"The Local Government Board" (substituted for the Poor Law Board by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 70).	Any member of the Board; any secretary or assistant secretary of the Board (see 34 & 35 Vict. c. 70, s. 5).
The Board of Agriculture and Fisheries (added by 58 Vict. c. 9, s. 1; 3 Edw. 7 c. 31, s. 1).	The President, or any member of the Board, or the Secretary of the Board, or any person authorized by the President to act on behalf of the Secretary of the Board.
The Board of Education (substituted by 62 & 63 Vict. c. 33 for the Department of Education, which was added by 33 & 34 Vict. c. 75, s. 83); and see 62 & 63 Vict. c. 33, s. 7 (2), (3) & (4).	The document must bear the official seal of the Board authenticated by the signature of a member of, or any secretary or assistant secretary, or some person authorized by the president or some member of the Board to act on behalf of a secretary.
The Post-Master General (added by 33 & 34 Vict. c. 79, s. 21).	Any secretary or assistant secretary of the Post Office.

By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 71, a copy of any rule, order, or regulation made by the Poor Law Commissioners, printed by the King's printer, shall, after the lapse of fourteen days from the date thereof, be received in evidence, and judicially taken notice of, and shall, until the contrary be shown, be deemed sufficient proof that such order was duly made and is in force.

The Poor Law Commissioners have been superseded by the Local Government Board, and (by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 70, s. 5): "a rule, order, or regulation made by the Local Government Board shall be valid if it is made under the seal of the Board and signed by the president or one of the ex-officio members of the Board, and countersigned by a secretary or assistant secretary: and the production of such primâ facie evidence of any of the said rules, orders or regulations as is required by the Documentary Evidence Act, 1868 (ante, pp. 348, 349), with respect to the rules, orders, and regulations of the Poor Law Board, shall, until the contrary is shown, be a sufficient proof that any such rule, order or regulation of the Local Government Board was duly made."

"Subject to any law that may be from time to time made by the legislature of any British colony or possession, this Act shall be in force in every such colony or possession." 31 & 32 Vict. c. 37, s. 3. "The following words shall in this Act have the meaning hereinafter assigned to them, unless there is something in the context repugnant to such construction; that is to say, 'British colony and possession,' shall for the purposes of this Act, include the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man, and such territories as may for the time being be vested in his Majesty by virtue of any Act of parliament for the government of India, and all other his Majesty's dominions; 'Legislature' shall signify any authority, other than the imperial parliament or his Majesty in council, competent to make laws for any colony or possession; 'Privy Council' shall include his Majesty in council and the lords and others of his Majesty's Privy Council, or any of them, and any committee of the Privy Council that is not specially named in the schedule hereto; 'Government printer' shall mean and include the printer to his Majesty, and any printer purporting to be the printer authorized to print the statutes, ordinances, Acts of State, or other public Acts of the legislature of any British colony or possession, or otherwise to be the government printer of such colony or possession; 'Gazette' shall include the London Gazette, the Edinburgh Gazette, and the Dublin Gazette, or any of such gazettes." Id. s. 5. "The provisions of this Act shall be deemed to be in addition to, and not in derogation of, any powers of proving documents given by any existing statute, or existing at common law." 31 & 32 Vict. c. 37, s. 6.

"Where any enactment, whether passed before or after June 19, 1882, provides that a copy of any Act of parliament, proclamation, order, regulation, rule, warrant, circular, list, gazette, or document shall be conclusive evidence, or be evidence, or have any other effect, when purporting to be printed by the government printer, or the King's printer, or a printer authorized by his Majesty, or otherwise under his Majesty's authority, whatever may be the precise expression used, such copy shall also be conclusive evidence, or evidence, or have the said effect (as the case may be) if it purports to be printed under the superintendence or authority of his Majesty's stationery office." 45 & 46 Vict c. 9, s. 2.

Executive Acts.

Of British Government.]—The London Gazette, printed and published by the King's printer, is evidence of all Acts of State, or public matters therein notified. Att.-Gen. v. Theakston, 8 Price, 89; 22 R. R. 716: R. v. Holt, 5 T. R. 436. Thus, a Gazette, which stated that addresses had been presented to the King from several bodies of his subjects, expressive of their loyalty, was held to be evidence of that fact. Id. But in R. v. Gardner, 2 Camp. 513; 11 R. R. 784, it was held not to be evidence of military appointments notified therein. And it is not evidence of a private matter contained therein, unless it be shown that the party to be affected has read the article. Harratt v. Wise, 9 B. & C. 712. The mere production of the Gazette would seem to be sufficient, without proof that it was bought at the Gazette office, or from whence it came. R. v. Forsyth, R. & R. 277. And where a statute (12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, s. 240 (rep.)) enacted that "a copy of the London Gazette" should be evidence, it was held to be sufficient merely to produce a paper purporting to be the London Gazette, and to be printed by authority, although it did not purport to be printed by the Queen's printer. R. v. Raudnitz, 11 Cox, 360 (C. C. R.). But where a statute (11 Vict. c. 2, s. 21 (rep.)) enacted that "the production of the Dublin Gazette, purporting to be printed by the Queen's printer," should be evidence, it was held not sufficient to produce a paper purporting to be the Dublin Gazette and to be printed by authority by A. B., but not giving his style as Queen's printer. R. v. Wallace, 10 Cox, 500; 17 Ir. Com. Law Rep. 207. Where the production of the Gazette is made evidence of any matter, it is not sufficient to produce a whole leaf cut from the Gazette containing the matter sought to be proved, but not bearing the imprint of any printer or purporting to be published by authority. R. v. Lowe, 52 L. J. (M. C.) 122; 15 Cox, 286 (C. C. R.).

Articles of war.]—The articles of war for the better government of officers and soldiers of the army and the rules of procedure relating to courts-martial, etc., are to be judicially noticed by all judges and in all courts whatsoever, and therefore require no proof. 44 & 45 Vict. c. 58, ss. 69, 70: see the official "Manual of Military Law."

Letters patent.]—Letters patent may be given in evidence, without further proof; or they may be proved by exemplifications under the great seal (see 1 Saund. 119, n.), or under the wafer great seal. 47 & 48 Vict. c. 30. And see 2 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.), 1007. Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.) 108.

Proclamations.]—Where a proclamation recited that it had been represented that certain outrages had been committed in different parts of certain counties, and offered a reward for the discovery and apprehension of the offenders, it was held to be admissible evidence to prove an introductory averment in an information for a libel, that divers acts of outrage had been committed in those places. R. v. Sutton, 4 M. & Sel. 532. It seems doubtful whether the courts will take judicial notice of royal proclamations without proof. Dupays v. Shepherd, 12 Mod. 216; Van Omeron v. Dowick, 2 Camp. 42; 11 R. R. 656. Such proclamations may be proved by the London Gazette (ante, p. 350), or by copies purporting to be printed by the printers to the Crown, or by the printers to either House of Parliament, or by any or either of them, [or purporting to be printed under the superintendence or authority of his Majesty's stationery office, 45 & 46 Vict. c. 9, s. 2 (ante, p. 350)], without proof being given that such copies were so printed. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 3; and also under 31 & 32 Vict. c. 37 (ante, pp. 348, 349; and see Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.) 106.

Treaties.]—As a treaty has no municipal effect until confirmed by statute, Walker v. Baird [1892], App. Cas. 491, it is rarely needed in evidence. Extradition treaties, however, are brought into operation by order in council, and can be proved by a King's printer's copy of the order, under 31 & 32 Vict. c. 37, s. 2 (ante, p. 348), or by production of a copy of the official publication of statutory rules and orders (ante, p. 348).

Proclamations, etc., of colonial or foreign governments.]—All proclamations, treaties and other acts of State of any foreign country or British colony . . . may be proved in any court of justice or before any person having by law or consent authority to hear, receive, and examine evidence, either by examined copies or by copies authenticated as hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, if the document sought to be proved is a proclamation, treaty, or other act of State, the authenticated copy to be admissible in evidence must purport to be sealed with the seal of the foreign State or British colony to which the original copy belongs . . . but if any of the aforesaid authenticated copies shall purport to be sealed as hereinbefore directed, the same shall be admitted as evidence in every case in which the original could have been received as evidence without any proof of the seal where a seal is necessary. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 7. Examined copies must be examined with the public archives abroad. A copy printed and published abroad, by the authorized printer of the foreign government or colony, will not, it seems, be sufficient. Richardson v. Anderson, 1 Camp. 65, n., 10 R. R. 628, n. As to colonial documents, see 31 & 32 Vict. c. 37, s. 3 (ante, p. 350).

Maps, Surveys, etc.

Ancient terriers, maps, etc.]—Ancient terriers, surveys, and maps of manors, etc., when evidence, must be produced at the trial, and such circumstances connected with them stated in evidence as may induce the court and jury to give credit to them. See 2 Phil. Ev. 152: 2 Taylor Ev. (9th ed.), 1168, 1169: Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.) 49. Modern maps, or plans, even ordnance maps, are not admissible, see R. v. Milton, 1 C. & K. 58, 61, except as part of the evidence of the person who made them, or unless they can be shown to bind in some way the person against whom they are tendered (2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 1168), or semble unless their accuracy has been verified by the personal examination of the locus in quo by the witness who produces them. Maps annexed to inclosure awards are not admissible against persons not subject to the jurisdiction of the commissioners who made the award. R. v. Berger [1894] 1 Q. B. 823: 17 Cox, 761.

In Cator v. Hamilton [1889] 53 J. P. 504, an ordnance map was received as evidence of boundary at the date when it was made, sed quære.

Surveys, inquisitions, etc.]—Inquisitions, taken by virtue of the King's writ, or of a commission under the seal of the Exchequer (if they have been returned and filed), etc., are proved by the production of the writ or commission and inquisition, or by an examined copy. It is questionable whether they can be evidence at all, until returned and filed. Cornish v. Searell, 8 B. & C. 471: 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.) 1166, 1167.

Public surveys, taken by officers acting for the crown, many of which are to be found in the Public Record Office, are proved by the production of them by the proper officer, without further proof, or by examined copies, or copies taken under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 94, s. 13: 2 Phil. Ev. 153.

Domesday-book, when evidence (see 2 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.), 1166), must be produced at the trial, if intended to prove the gist of the pleading; Hob. 188; but if intended to prove some collateral matter merely, an examined copy (or a Record Office copy) of that part of the book relating to it will be sufficient.

Documents in the Record Office.

All documents in the custody of the Master of the Rolls can be proved either by production of the originals by a clerk from the Record Office or by a Record Office copy made under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 94, s. 13, or by an examined copy. The documents to which the custody of the Master of the Rolls extends are determined by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 94, s. 2, and the orders in council made thereunder. See Statutory Rules and Orders Revised, ed. 1904, vol. 11, tit. "Record Office," and list in 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 983, n. They include the records of the courts merged in the High Court of Justice in 1875 (ss. 1, 3).

Public Registers.

Births, marriages, deaths, etc.]—Christenings, marriages, and burials may be proved by the parish register in which they are entered, by giving in evidence either the register itself or an examined copy of it (Gilb. Ev. 72; 2 Bac. Abr. Ev. (F.): Doe v. Barnes, 1 M. & Rob. 386; 42 R. R. 809), if the original is in the proper custody, that is, in the church itself, or in the custody of the rector, vicar, curate, or other officiating minister; 52 G. 3, c. 146; Doe v. Fowler, 14 Q. B. 700: Walker v. Countess Beauchamp, 6 C. & P. 552; or a copy certified by the incumbent or other person to whose custody the original register is intrusted, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 14 (post, p. 379). Before such books or examined copies are received the court must be satisfied that there was a public duty on the person keeping the register to satisfy himself of the truth of the entries made therein. Doe v. Andrews, 15 Q. B. 256, 259, Erle, J. Besides the register, some proof must be given of the identity of the parties married, etc. Birt v. Barlow, 1 Dougl. 171. It would seem that a certificate of baptism does not prove the age of the party or the date of birth; Wihen v. Law, 3 Stark. (N. P.) 63; 23 R. R. 757; but see R. v. North Petherton, 5 B. & C. 508. By 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 86, s. 38, certified copies of entries purporting to be sealed or stamped with the seal of the register office established by that Act are to be "received as evidence of the birth, death or marriage to which they relate, without any further or other proof of such entry." A copy of an entry in the register book of births in a registrar's district within a superintendent registrar's larger district, certified to be a true copy under the hand of the deputy superintendent registrar, who also certified under his hand that the register book was in his lawful custody, was held to be admissible evidence, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 14, of the entry in the register book upon the mere production of such copy. R. v. Weaver, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 85: L. J. (M. C.) 13. Upon an indictment for carnally knowing a girl, being above the age of ten years and under the age of twelve years, such a certified copy of an entry showing that the child was of the age of eleven years and eight months, was held sufficient proof of the age, there being independent evidence of the identity of the girl with the child whose name was entered in the book. Id.; and see re Goodrich, Payne v. Bennett [1904], Prob. 138, disapproving re Wintle, L. R. 9 Eq. 373, in which Romilly, M.R., held that the certificate was only evidence of the fact of birth before registration and not of the date of birth. In R. v. Cox [1898], 1 Q. B. 179; 18 Cox, 672, 675 (C. C. R.), it was held that no statute made production of a birth certificate necessary for proof of the age of a child, and that the age could be proved by persons who had seen the child and by the mistress of an elementary school at which the child attended. "An entry or certified copy of an entry of a birth or death in a register under the Births and Deaths Registration Acts, 1836 to 1874, or in a certified copy of such a register, shall not be evidence of such birth or death, unless such entry either purports to be signed by some person professing to be the informant and to be such a person as is required by law at the date of such entry to give to the registrar information concerning such birth or death, or purports to be made upon a certificate from a coroner, or in pursuance of the provisions of this Act with respect to the registration of births and deaths at sea. When more than three months have intervened between the day of the birth and the day of the registration of the birth of any child, the entry or certified copy of the entry made after the commencement of this Act of the birth of such child in a register under the 'Births and Deaths Registration Acts, 1836 to 1874,' or in a certified copy of such a register, shall not be evidence of such birth unless such entry purports (a) if it appear that not more than twelve months have so intervened, to be signed by the superintendent registrar as well as by the registrar; or (b), if more than twelve months have so intervened, to have been made with the authority of the registrar-general, and in accordance with the prescribed rules. Where more than twelve months have intervened between the day of a death or the finding of a dead body and the day of the registration of the death or the finding of such body, the entry or certified copy of the entry made after the commencement of this Act, of the death in a register under the Births and Deaths Registration Acts, 1836 to 1874, or in a certified copy of such register, shall not be evidence of such death, unless such entry purports to have been made with the authority of the registrar-general, and in accordance with the prescribed rules," 37 & 38 Vict. c. 88, s. 38. By the Non-Parochial Registers Act, 1840 (3 & 4 Vict. c. 92), s. 6, all registers and records deposited in the General Register Office by virtue of that Act, except the registers and records of baptisms and marriages at the Fleet and King's Bench prisons, at May-fair, at the Mint in Southwark, etc., which were deposited in the registry of the Bishop of London in the year 1821 (see s. 20), shall be deemed to be in legal custody, and be receivable in evidence in all courts of justice: and provision is made for the production of them by the registrar-general. S. 17 provides, that in all criminal cases the original register or record shall be produced: but see 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 14 (post, p. 379): 21 & 22 Vict. c. 25, ss. 1, 3. As to proof of births, deaths, and marriages at sea, see 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, ss. 240, 253, and s. 64, infra. As to proof of marriages abroad under British law, see 55 & 56 Vict. c. 23, s. 16. As to proof of births, deaths and marriages out of England, see Lyell v. Kennedy, 14 App. Cas. 437, 448: Brinkley v. Att.-Gen. 15 P. D. 76. The Fleet books were not evidence of a marriage; Reed v. Passer, 1 Peake (3rd ed.), 303; 3 R. R. 696; or for any purpose. Doe d. Davies v. Gatacre, 8 C. & P. 578. But see 3 & 4 Vict. c. 92, s. 6, supra.

The marriage of Jews is by a written contract, which is afterwards solemnly ratified in the synagogue. In order to prove such a marriage, it is not sufficient, it seems, to prove the religious ceremony by the parol testimony of some person who was present, but the contract must also be proved. Horn v. Noel, 1 Camp. 61: R. v. Althausen, 17 Cox, 630; Nathan v. Woolf [1899] 15 T. L. R. 250: R. v. Weinberg, 33 L. J. Newsp. 239; re de Wilton [1900] 2 Ch. 481.

The register of the navy, with the letters Dd. opposite to a name therein registered (it being proved to be the practice of the navy office to write these letters opposite to the names of such persons as died), was held admissible evidence of the death of a man opposite to whose name these letters were written. Bull. (N. P.) 249; R. v. Rhodes, 1 Leach, 24.

By the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 60), s. 64, sub-s. 2, "the following documents shall be admissible in evidence in manner provided by this Act, namely:—(a) Any register book under this part of this Act (Register of British Ships), on its production from the custody of the registrar, or other person having the lawful custody thereof; (b) A certificate of registry under this Act purporting to be signed by the registrar or other proper officer; (c) An indorsement or a certificate of registry purporting to be signed by the registrar or other proper officer; (d) Every declaration made in pursuance of this part of this Act in respect of a British ship." Sub-s. 3: "A copy or transcript of the register of British ships kept by the Registrar-General of Shipping and Seamen, under the direction of the Board of Trade, shall be admissible in evidence in manner provided by this Act, and have the same effect to all intents as the original register, of which it is a copy or transcript." Further provision is made by ss. 719, 720, of the same Act, as to documents issued by the Board of Trade, as supervisor of British shipping.

As to the admissibility of registers of professional men, see infra.

By 44 & 45 Vict. c. 60 (Newspaper Libel and Registration Act, 1881) s. 15, "every copy of an entry in or extract from the register of newspaper proprietors, purporting to be certified by the registrar or his deputy for the time being, or under the official seal of the registrar, shall be received as conclusive evidence of the contents of the said register of newspaper proprietors, so far as the same appear in such copy or extract without proof of the signature thereto or of the seal of office affixed thereto, and every such certified copy or extract shall in all proceedings, civil or criminal, be accepted as sufficient primâ facie evidence of all the matters and things thereby appearing, unless and until the contrary thereof be shown."

Certificates given under Public Authority.

The certificates of bishops with respect to marriage, general bastardy, excommunication orders, and other like matters, were received in evidence; Co. Litt. 74: R. v. Mawbey, 6 T. R, 619, 637: 3 R. R. 282; so is the certificate of the Recorder of London, as to the custom of that city. 1 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 7. And so are the certificates of justices of peace as to a highway being in repair. R. v. Mawbey, ubi supra.

But the certificate of a British consul abroad is not admissible as evidence in the courts of this country. Waldron v. Coombe, 3 Taunt. 162: 12 R. R. 629: Ex parte Church, 1 D. & R. 324; except under specific statutory provisions, e.g., 52 & 53 Vict. c. 10, s. 6 (Oaths); 55 & 56 Vict. c. 23 (Foreign Marriage).

Professional qualifications—Barristers.]—The proof that a man is a barrister is by certificate of his call issued by the Inn to which he belongs. The Law List is not, strictly speaking, evidence as to barristers.

Solicitors.]—The certificates authorizing solicitors to practise, granted in pursuance of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, if in the form prescribed by 40 & 41 Vict. c. 25, s. 16, are, it seems, admissible in evidence without further proof. The Law List, published under the authority of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, is primâ facie evidence of the right of solicitors and conveyancers named therein to practise during the current year; and on a prosecution for obtaining money by a false pretence of being a solicitor it was held sufficient to prove that the accused was not qualified by producing the Law List. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 22: R. v. Wenham, 10 Cox, 222. An extract from the roll of solicitors kept by the Incorporated Law Society as registrar of solicitors, certified under the hand of the secretary of the society, is evidence of the facts appearing in such extract. 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 22; 51 & 52 Vict. c. 65, s. 5.

Medical practitioners.]—The mere production of a diploma of doctor of physic, under the seal of one of the universities, is not of itself evidence to show that the party therein named is entitled to that degree, Moises v. Thornton, 8 T. R. 303. See Collins v. Carnegie, 3 Nev. & M. 703; 1 A. & E. 695. A copy of the Medical Register, annually published by the Registrar of the General Medical Council, is evidence of the due registration of the persons named therein: and absence of a name from the Register is primâ facie evidence that the person is not a registered medical practitioner: but in the case of a person not on the register a certified copy under the hand of the registrar of the general medical council, or of any branch council of the entry of the name of any person on the general or local medical register, is evidence that such person is registered under the Medical Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. c. 90, s. 27: see Pedgrift v. Chevallier, 8 C. B. (N. S). 246. A certificate of the qualification of an apothecary if purporting to be under the common seal of the Society of Apothecaries is sufficient evidence of the qualification of the person therein named to practise as an apothecary without proof of the seal: 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 8. A certificate under the hand of the registrar, and countersigned by the president or two members of the council of the Pharmaceutical Society, is evidence that the person therein specified is registered under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 56, or the Pharmacy Act, 1868, as the case may be: 31 & 32 Vict. c. 121, s. 13. A copy of the register of dentists or veterinary surgeons, purporting to be printed or published in pursuance of the statute regulating those professions, is primâ facie evidence of registration: and provisions similar to those of s. 27 of the Medical Act, 1858, supra, are made as to proof of the registration of persons not appearing in the register, 41 & 42 Vict. c. 33, s. 29 (Dentists); 44 & 45 Vict. c. 62, s. 9 (Veterinary Surgeons).

Companies and societies.]—The incorporation of a company under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1900, may be proved by the original certificate under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 89, s. 174, or by a copy given by the registrar or an assistant registrar of joint stock companies, and documents or parts of documents required to be registered with such registrar are proved by copies or extracts certified under the hand of the registrar or an assistant registrar. 40 & 41 Vict. c. 26, s. 6. A certified copy of the return made to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue under 7 G. 4, c. 46, s. 7, by the public officer of a joint stock bank is not the only admissible evidence of the making of the return. R. v. Carter, 1 Den. 65; 1 C. & K. 741.

The certificate of registry of a trade union issued by the Registrar of Friendly Societies, unless proved to have been withdrawn or cancelled, is conclusive evidence of compliance with the regulations of the Trade Union Act, 1871, with respect to registry: 34 & 35 Vict. c. 31, s. 13 (5). A like provision is made as to friendly societies by 59 & 60 Vict. c. 25, ss. 11, 96, 100; as to industrial and provident societies by 56 & 57 Vict. c. 39, ss. 8, 75; and as to building societies by 37 & 38 Vict. c. 42, s. 20.

Elections.]—In any criminal or civil proceedings in relation to corrupt practices at parliamentary elections, the certificate of the returning officer is sufficient evidence of the due holding of the election, and of any person therein named having been a candidate thereat. 26 & 27 Vict. c. 29, s. 6. This enactment is extended by s. 53 of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 51) to any prosecution on indictment for the offence of any corrupt practice within the meaning of that Act at a parliamentary election, and by s. 30 of the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 70) which incorporates 46 & 47 Vict. c. 51, s. 53, to prosecutions on indictment for the offence of any corrupt practice at a municipal election, and by

s. 35 of 47 & 48 Vict. c. 70, to similar prosecutions for corrupt practices at municipal elections in the city of London, and by s. 36 of the last-mentioned statute to similar prosecutions for corrupt practices at certain other elections in the said section specified. It has been further extended to the elections of county councils (51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 75) and of urban and rural district councils, and of boards of guardians and parish councils, 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, s. 48: and of metropolitan borough councils, 62 & 63 Vict. c. 14, s. 2, sub-s. 5.

Acts, etc., of Public Bodies.

Corporation books, etc.]—Entries in corporation books, and in the books of public companies, relating to things public and general, and entries in other public books, may be proved by examined copies. R. v. Mothersell, 1 Str. 93: R. v. Mayor, etc., of London, Id. 307: Mercers of Shrewsbury v. Hart, 1 C. & P. 113. Entries in the books of the Custom House, of the Bank of England, or the like, may be proved in the same manner. See Geery v. Hopkins, 2 Ld. Raym. 851: Warriner v. Giles, 2 Str. 954; Crew v. Saunders, Id. 1005: Edwards v. Vesey, Cas. (K. B.) temp. Hardw. 128: and see 2 Doug. 593, n. 3: Marsh v. Collnett, 5 R. R. 763: 2 Esp. 665: Hodgson v. Fullarton, 4 Taunt. 787: Mortimer v. M'Callan, 6 M. & W. 58. But instruments of a private nature, such as a letter found in the corporation chest, R. v. Gwyn, 1 Str. 401, or the like, must be proved in the ordinary way as any other instrument. Where under any Act "a document or proceeding of any corporation or joint stock or other company is receivable in evidence," it shall be admitted if it purports to bear the seal, or stamp, or signature directed by the Act, without proof of the seal, stamp, or signature, or official character of the person purporting to have signed. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 1 (post, p. 378); and see Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.), 132.

Inspection of corporation books and other public writings is granted in civil actions, but not in criminal cases where the corporation is defendant, as it would have the effect of making the corporation furnish evidence to criminate itself. R. v. Heydon, 1 W. Bl. 351: R. v. Purnell, Id. 37; 1 Wils. (K. B.) 239; cf. 1 Ld. Raym. 705; 2 Id. 927; 2 Str. 1210; and see Spokes v. Grosvenor Hotel Co. [1897] 2 Q. B. 124.

Proceedings of local authorities.]—A minute of proceedings at a meeting of the council of a municipal borough, or of a committee of such council, signed at the same or the next ensuing meeting, by the mayor, or by a member of the council, or of the committee, describing himself as, or appearing to be, chairman of the meeting at which the minute is signed, shall be received in evidence without further proof. Until the contrary is proved, every meeting of the council, or of a committee, in respect of the proceedings whereof a minute has been so made, shall be deemed to have been duly convened and held, and all the members of the meeting shall be deemed to have been duly qualified; and where the proceedings are proceedings of a committee, the committee shall be deemed to have been duly constituted, and to have had power to deal with the matters referred to in the minutes, 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 22, sub-ss. 5, 6. As to the minutes of a metropolitan borough council, see 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 60; 62 & 63 Vict. c. 14, s. 2, sub-s. 5.

The minutes and proceedings of county councils are proved in the same way as those of town councils. 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 22, sub-s. 5. The minutes and proceedings of the London County Council are regulated by a local Act of 1893 (56 & 57 Vict. c. ccxxi, s. 10). They can be proved either by printed copies under 44 & 45 Vict. c. 48, s. 33, or under 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 22. The minutes and proceedings of urban and rural district councils, and boards of guardians and their committees, may be proved under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 199, and sched. 1, r. 10; 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, s. 59, and minutes of parish councils and parish meetings as directed by 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, sched. 1, part 3.

Parish books.]—On the trial of an indictment for the non-repair of a highway, entries in an ancient parish book, produced by the churchwarden from the parish chest, were held receivable in evidence to show who were the surveyors of the highways at that time. R. v. Pembridge, C. & Mar. 157.

By-laws.]—8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 1 (post, p. 378), dispenses with proof of the seal or signature or official character of by-laws which purport to be sealed or signed in accordance with any other past or future Act. Under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, the production of a written copy of a by-law made by the council under that Act, or under any former or present or future general or local Act of parliament, if authenticated by the corporate seal shall, until the contrary is proved, be sufficient evidence of the due making and existence of the by-law, and, if it is so stated in the copy, of the by-law having been approved and confirmed by the authority whose approval or confirmation is required to the making or before the enforcing of the by-law. 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 24. This provision is extended by 51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 23, to by-laws made by a county council, and by 62 & 63 Vict. c. 14, s. 5, sub-s. 2, and sched. 2, part 2, to by-laws made by a metropolitan borough council.

A copy of by-laws made under the Public Health Act, 1875 (made by a district council not being the council of a borough), if signed and certified by the clerk of the council to be a true copy, and to have been duly confirmed, shall be evidence, until the contrary is proved, in all legal proceedings of the due making, confirmation and existence of such by-laws without further or other proof. 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 186. By-laws made under prior statutes but continued in force by s. 326 of the Public Health Act, 1875, must be proved in accordance with the Act under which they were made, or under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 1. A print of municipal by-laws with a print of the seal or certificate has been held insufficient. Drew v. Harlow, 39 J. P. 420. The proof of other by-laws depends on the statute under which they are made, and on 8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 1 (post, p. 378). For a list of such statutes, see 2 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.), 1088-1091.

Judicial Documents.

House of Lords.]—A judgment of the House of Lords is proved by an examined copy from the Journal of the House. Jones v. Randall, 1 Cowp. 17; or by a copy purporting to be printed by authority. See 8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 3 (ante, p. 347).

Supreme Court.]—A record of the Supreme Court, or affidavit filed therein may be proved by production of the original from the central office, by an officer of the court, under order of a judge or master. A subpœna does not lie to produce it. R. S. C. 1883, Order LXI., r. 28. The order is obtained by obtaining the signature of a master to an official bespeak paper specifying the documents required, and where it is wanted for production elsewhere than at the Royal Courts by depositing a sufficient sum to secure the expenses of the attendance of the producing officer. Order LXI., r. 29. Production of the original record or document or an exemplification appears to be necessary at common law when it is the gist of the indictment or defence, which is seldom the case, except on a plea of autrefois convict or acquit (ante, pp. 173, 177); or an indictment for an offence after a previous conviction (post, p. 360); or escaping from prison, or for being at large during sentence, R. v. Shaw, R. & R. 526; or for perjury. R. v. Newman, 2 Den. 390: 21 L. J. (M. C.) 75. Exemplifications are now seldom used for the purposes of proceedings in England. In all other cases an examined copy (ante, p. 345) may be used. Leyfield's Cas., 10 Co. Rep. 92 b.; 2 Rolle Abr. 678, L. 45; Hardr. 119. But the modern form of office copy (ante, p. 345), being under the seal of the court is equivalent to an exemplification, and is the simplest mode of proof where the original is not necessary, and a Record Office copy would seem to be admissible. See Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.) 108. The ancient mode of obtaining an exemplification of a record of the Court of King's Bench for use in an inferior court was by removing the record into Chancery by certiorari issuing from the Petty Bag office to the Chief Justice of the court of which the record was: on removal an exemplification under the great seal was sent by mittimus to the inferior court. Gilb. Ev. 14, 15. The functions of the Petty Bag office, which included the preparation of exemplifications, were in part transferred to officers of the Supreme Court, and in part to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, by 37 & 38 Vict. c. 81, s. 5. And the Petty Bag office was under that section abolished in 1889, and the residue of its business, except as to the roll of solicitors, was transferred to the Crown Office of the High Court. (See Statutory Rules and Orders Revised (ed. 1904), vol. 12, tit. "Supreme Court, E," p. 931). With the creation of the High Court the procedure by certiorari is apparently defunct, and application for an exemplification under the great seal apparently should now be made to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery at the Lord Chancellor's office.

Proceedings not being records.]—Rules or regulations of court as to procedure are proved as statutory rules. (See ante, p. 348.) Rules or orders of court not amounting to judgments are proved by examined or office copies. Selby v. Harris, 1 Ld. Raym. 745: Duncan v. Scott, 1 Camp. 100: Gyles v. Hill, 1 Camp. 471, n.: Streeter v. Bartlett, 5 C. B. 562. A rule of court is evidence that the court have ordered as is therein stated; but it is not evidence of any matters in it which are the mere suggestions of the party who obtained it. Woodroffe v. Williams, 6 Taunt. 19.

By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 2, "all courts, justices, masters in chancery, masters of courts, commissioners judicially acting; and other judicial officers, are thenceforth to take judicial notice of the signature of any of the judges of the Supreme Court, attached or appended to any decree, order, certificate, or other judicial or official document."

Affidavits, being admissions upon oath, are evidence as such against the parties who made them. Gilb. Ev. 51, 56; Harmar v. Davis, 7 Taunt. 577. When filed in the central office of the High Court, they may be proved by office copies; (R. S. C. 1883, Order XXXVII., r. 4), or by examined copies, or by production of the original from the proper custody. Affidavits not filed can be proved only by production of the affidavits themselves, and by parol evidence of their having been sworn: Gilb. Ev. 56. Even if not proved to be sworn, yet perhaps they may be received as admissions of the deponents, upon proof of their handwriting. Gilb. Ev. 56. Upon an indictment for perjury in an affidavit, the affidavit, if in existence, must in all cases be produced, whether filed or not, and must be proved. R. v. James, 1 Show. 397: Crook v. Dowling, 3 Dougl. 75: Rees v. Bowen, M'Clel. & Y. 383. But upon proof that it has been lost or destroyed, secondary evidence may be given of its contents and of the defendant's signature to it. R. v. Milnes, 2 F. & F. 10. Where an affidavit purported to have been sworn before a commissioner of oaths, but his commission was not proved, Patteson, J., held the affidavit to be admissible, and that proof of the commissioner's acting was sufficient. R. v. Howard, 1 M. & Rob. 187. And on the trial of an indictment for perjury, assigned on an affidavit sworn in the Court of Queen's Bench, proof of the defendant's signature to the affidavit, and that under a jurat, "sworn in open court at Westminster Hall, the 10th day of June, 1846," the words, "by the court" were in the handwriting of one of the masters of the Court of Queen's Bench, was held sufficient evidence of the swearing of the affidavit in that court, without any further proof that the master was in court when the affidavit was sworn. R. v. Turner, 2 C. & K. 732: see also R. v. Spencer, 1 C. & P. 260; Ry. & M. 97.

Where an affidavit is sworn abroad by a person having authority to administer an oath not derived from the law of a foreign state, judicial or official notice is to be taken of his seal or signature affixed, impressed, or subscribed to the affidavit. 52 & 53 Vict. c. 10, s. 3 (2).

A cognovit actionem filed in court may be proved by an examined copy together with proof of the defendant's signature to the original: 3 & 4 G. 4, c. 39: Scott v. Lewis, 7 C. & P. 347; or by an office copy.

Convictions.]—The proper proof that a prisoner was in lawful custody under a sentence of imprisonment passed at the assizes is by the proof of the record of his conviction; and neither the production of the calendar of sentences, signed by the clerk of assize, and by him delivered to the gaoler, nor the evidence of a person who heard sentence passed, is sufficient for this purpose. R. v. Bourdon, 2 C. & K. 366, Maule, J.

At common law upon an indictment for a subsequent felony the record of a conviction for a previous felony can be proved by the production of the record itself if it be a record of the same court or by an exemplification if it be the record of another court.

By the Evidence Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 99), s. 13, "whenever, in any proceeding whatever (civil as well as criminal, Richardson v. Willis, L. R. 8 Ex. 69; 42 L. J., Ex. 15), it may be necessary to prove the trial and conviction or acquittal of any person charged with an indictable offence, it shall not be necessary to produce the record of the conviction or acquittal of such person, or a copy thereof; but it shall be sufficient that it be certified, or purport to be certified, under the hand of the clerk of the court or other officer having the custody of the records of the court where such conviction or acquittal took place, or by the deputy of such clerk or other officer, that the paper produced is a copy of the record of the indictment, trial, conviction and judgment, or acquittal, as the case may be, omitting the formal parts thereof." It seems that under this enactment the record must be made up, although the formal parts need not be included in the certificate; but the production by the officer of the court (being the same court in which the subsequent proceeding was had) of the caption, the indictment, with the indorsement of the prisoner's plea, the verdict, and the sentence of the court upon it, together with the minutes of the trial, made by the officer in court, was held sufficient evidence of the former trial, without the production either of the record or of a certificate under this section. R. v. Newman, 2 Den. 390; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 75: R. v. Horne Tooke, 25 St. Tr. 447. See R. v. Parry, 7 C. & P. 836. As to what constitutes a conviction, see ante, p. 230.

Convictions before justices of peace may be proved by examined copies, which the clerk of the peace for the proper county will make out upon an application for that purpose. R. v. Gilkes, 8 B. & C. 439. The previous conviction whether summary or on indictment is now in practice usually proved under the Prevention of Crimes Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 112) s. 18; which provides that "a previous conviction may be proved in any legal proceeding whatever against any person by producing a record or extract of such conviction, and by giving proof of the identity of the person against whom the conviction is sought to be proved with the person appearing in the record or extract of conviction to have been convicted. A record or extract of a conviction shall, in the case of an indictable offence, consist of a certificate containing the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment and conviction, and purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court or other officer having the custody of the records of the court by which such conviction was made, or purporting to be signed by the deputy of such clerk or officer; and in the case of a summary conviction shall consist of a copy of such conviction, purporting to be signed by any justice of the peace having jurisdiction over the offence in respect of which such conviction was made, or to be signed by the proper officer of the court by which such conviction was made, or by the clerk or other officer of any court to which such conviction has been returned. A record or extract of any conviction made in pursuance of this section shall be admissible in evidence without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same. A previous conviction in any one part of the United Kingdom may be proved against a prisoner in any other part of the United Kingdom; and a conviction before the passing of this Act shall be admissible in the same manner as if it had taken place after the passing thereof. A fee not exceeding five shillings may be charged for a record of a conviction given in pursuance of this section. The mode of proving a previous conviction authorized by this section shall be in addition to and not in exclusion of any other authorized mode of proving such conviction." As to proof of summary convictions by the court register, see Commissioner of Police v. Donovan [1903] 1 K. B. 895.

Under the following Acts upon an indictment for subsequent felony, after a previous conviction for felony, proof of the previous conviction may be given by a certificate containing the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment or conviction for the previous felony purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court, or other officer having the custody of the records of the court where the offender was first convicted, or by the deputy of such clerk or officer, which certificate is upon proof of identity sufficient evidence of the first conviction, without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 11. Under this section it has been held that the certificate should show that judgment was given. R. v. Ackroyd, 1 C. & K. 158; Cresswell, J.: R. v. Stonnell, 1 Cox, 142, Patteson, J. As to the mode of proving a previous conviction against a person indicted for any offence punishable under the Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96), see s. 116 (post, p. 430). As to the mode of proving a previous conviction of any offence against the coin, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 37. Upon the trial of an indictment for being at large before the expiration of a sentence of transportation, provision is made by 5 G. 4, c. 84, s. 24 for proof of the former conviction and sentence by a certificate of the officer of the court. See also 28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, s. 6 (post, p. 404), which regulates the proof of a conviction for the purpose of discrediting a witness.

In all cases not provided for by statute, where a copy of a record is given in evidence, it must be a copy of the whole record; because the omission of part might have the effect of altering the sense and import of the residue. Gilb. Ev. 23; 3 Co. Inst. 173. Records are not complete until delivered into court on parchment; therefore a minute-book, from which an entry of the proceedings at sessions is made, and from which book the roll containing the record of such proceedings is subsequently made up, is not a record. R. v. Bellamy, Ry. & M. 171: R. v. Thring, 5 C. & P. 507: see R. v. Ward, 6 C. & P. 366: R. v. Bourdon, 2 C. & P. 366 (ante, p. 360). Thus, to prove a verdict you must give in evidence an examined copy or office copy of the whole record, including the judgment; Bull. (N. P.) 234: Gilb. Ev. 37, 68; for otherwise it would not appear but that judgment had been arrested, or a new trial granted; Bull. (N. P.) 234; Pitton v. Walter, 1 Str. 162; unless in the case of an issue out of Chancery, where no judgment was entered up. Bull. (N. P.) 234.

There is now no Nisi Prius record, and no postea in a civil case in the High Court. As to proof of a trial had by producing Nisi Prius record and postea, see Archb. Cr. Pl. (21st ed.) 283. And as to the postea in criminal trials in the High Court, see Short & Mellor, Cr. Off. Pr. 229. Under Order XXXVI., Rule 30, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, copies of the pleadings are to be deposited on entering the action for trial. The certificate provided by Order XXXVI., Rule 42, takes the place of the postea, and judgments and orders need not now be enrolled, whether the judgment is dated before or since the commencement of the Judicature Act, 1873, or November 1, 1875, Order LXI., Rule 8. "Office copies of all writs, records, pleadings, and documents filed in the High Court of Justice shall be admissible in evidence in all causes and matters, and between all persons or parties to the same extent as the original would be admissible." R. S. C. 1883, Order XXXVII., r. 4. But this rule does not apply to proceedings on the Crown side of the K. B. D. On an indictment for perjury in an action it was held that an allegation that judgment was entered up was proved by production of the book from the judgment office in which the incipitur was entered. R. v. Gordon, C. & Mar. 410. Upon an indictment for perjury, charged as having been committed on the trial of an action in the High Court of Justice, the existence and trial of the action are sufficiently proved by the production, by the officer of the court, of the copy writ filed under Order V., Rule 7, and the copy pleadings filed under Order XLI., Rule 1, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1875, and by the production by the solicitor of the defendants in the action, of the original order to dismiss the action. R. v. Scott, 2 Q. B. D. 415; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 259. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 22, prescribes the mode of proving the trial of an indictment for felony or misdemeanor upon the trial of an indictment for perjury or subornation of perjury, alleged to have been committed at the former trial. If it be necessary to prove what a witness said upon a former trial it may be proved upon oath from the notes or recollections of any person who was present at the time; Mayor of Doncaster v. Day, 3 Taunt. 262; 12 R. R. 650; but in order to let in such evidence, it must be first proved that the former trial took place.

At common law in order to prove a writ, if it be the gist of the pleading, you must get it returned, and then procure and give in evidence an examined copy of it. But if it be matter of inducement merely, it is not necessary that it should be returned or proved by an examined copy; Gilb. Ev. 39; but the writ itself, if in your possession, may be given in evidence; or if in the possession of the other party, then, upon proving the service of a notice upon him to produce it, and that it has been returned and filed, but that it was in the other party's possession after the day on which it was returnable, you will be allowed to give a copy of it in evidence. Edmondstone v. Plaisted (or Plaistow), 4 Esp. 160; 2 East, 572. See Knight v. Dauler [1664] Hardr. 323: Wright v. Pindar, Aleyn, 18. Until the non-production is sufficiently accounted for parol evidence of its contents is not admissible. Lester v. Jenkins, 8 B. & C. 339.

Enrolled deeds.]—To prove a deed which has been enrolled, the indorsement of the enrolment is sufficient evidence, without further proof of the deed; Gilb. Ev. 24, 96; Smartle v. Williams, 1 Salk. 280; and see Kinnersley v. Orpe, 1 Doug. 56: Rowe v. Brenton, 8 B. & C. 737, 755. But if the deed be lost, it can be proved only by an examined copy of the enrolment. Baikie v. Chandless, 3 Camp. 17, 20; 13 R. R. 738. The copy is obtained in the case of deeds enrolled in the High Court from the enrolment department of the central office; see R. S. C. 1883, Order LXI. But enrolled deeds must within two years of enrolment be sent to the Public Record Office; and when this has been done they can be proved by a Record Office copy under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 94 (ante, p. 345). All this, however, must be understood of deeds only which need enrolment; for if any other deed be enrolled (as, for instance, a bargain and sale for years, or the like), and be afterwards offered in evidence, it must be proved in the ordinary way. Gilb. Ev. 99; Page's case, 5 Co. Rep. 53: Smartle v. Williams, 1 Salk. 280.

Proceedings in Courts of Equity.]—Prior to the Judicature Acts, the Court of Chancery was not regarded as a Court of Record. 3 Bl. Com. 24, n. Since its fusion with the High Court its records and documents are provable as documents of the High Court, see ante, p. 358. All the records of the old Court of Chancery are now lodged in the Public Record Office, and may be proved by Record Office copies under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 94, s. 13 (ante, p. 345). Decrees of the old Court of Chancery may still and judgments of the Chancery Division may be proved by exemplification under the wafer great seal; but this proceeding is only adopted for the purpose of enforcing them under the Crown Debts Act, 1801 (41 G. 3, c. 90). Independently of this mood of proof, in the case of proceedings prior to November 1, 1875, the bill and answer may be proved by examined copies, (ante, p. 345): Gilb. Ev. 56: Hennell v. Lyon, 1 B. & Ald. 182: Hodgkinson v. Willis, 3 Camp. 401; or by Record Office copies under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 94, (ante, p. 345). In order to prove the answer, it was necessary to give in evidence an examined copy of the bill as well as of the answer; Gilb. Ev. 55; but where it was proved by the proper officer that he had searched diligently in the office for the bill and could not find it, the court allowed the answer to be read without it. Id. See Ewer v. Ambrose, 4 B. & C. 25; Rowe v. Brenton, 8 B. & C. 737, 765. Where the bill and answer are recited (as formerly they were) in the decree, the production of the latter was sufficient proof of them. Com. Dig. Evid. (C. 1): Wharton Peerage case, 12 Cl. & F. 295; 8 Eng. Rep. 1410; see Blower v. Hollis, 1 Cr. & M. 393. Upon an indictment for perjury alleged to have been committed in an answer, the answer itself must be produced, and it must be proved either that the party was sworn to it, or that the name subscribed to it is his handwriting, and that the name subscribed to the jurat is the name and handwriting of a master or other person having authority for that purpose. R. v. Morris, 2 Burr. 1189: R. v. Benson, 2 Camp. 508. See R. v. Spencer, 1 C. & P. 260; Ry. & M. 97. And the same as to depositions in equity. As to the admissibility of decrees and orders in equity see Layburn v. Crisp, 4 M. & W. 320; 8 C. & P. 397; Pim v. Curell, 6 M. & W. 234; Mayor of Ludlow v. Charlton, 9 C. & P. 242. It would seem that bills, answers, and depositions in equity might also be proved by copies certified by the Clerk of Records and Writs under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 14 (post, p. 379). Reeve v. Hodson, 10 Hare, App. XIX., Wood, V.-C.

A decree in equity, if it remain in paper, may be proved by an examined copy (ante, p. 345), together with an examined copy of the bill and answer; but if it has been enrolled, it must be proved by an exemplification under the wafer great seal (ante, p. 345), or by a Record Office copy (see ante, 345).

Proceedings in Ecclesiastical Courts.]—The libel, answer, depositions, and sentence in ecclesiastical courts, in matters within their jurisdiction, are provable in the same manner as the bill, answer, depositions, and decree in equity. See supra, Gilb. Ev. 66, 67; Com. Dig. Ev. (C. 3); Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.), 117.

The practice of the ecclesiastical courts may be proved in the courts of common law by parol evidence. Beaurain v. Scott, 3 Camp. 388; 14 R. R. 759.

Proceedings in the Divorce Court.]—On the transfer of matrimonial causes to the Divorce Court, it was provided that all decrees and orders, and copies of decrees or orders, of the said court, sealed with its seal, should be received in evidence. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, s. 13. And this enactment is not affected by subsequent legislation, though the court is now part of the High Court of Justice. Judgments of a matrimonial court operate as judgments in rem, i.e.: if pronounced by a competent court on an issue properly arising in the cause, they are conclusive evidence of the facts they establish, except it is said in suits of jactitation of marriage. Duchess of Kingston's case, 20 St. Tr. 355; Clewes v. Bathurst, 2 Str. 960; Cas. (K. B.) Temp. Hardw. 11; Mendez v. Villa Real, ib. 18. See Dicey, Conflict of Laws, p. 430.

Proceedings in Probate Courts.]—With reference to wills proved since Jan. 11, 1858, it is enacted by s. 22 of the Court of Probate Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 77), that "all probates, letters of administration, orders, and other instruments and exemplifications and copies thereof respectively purporting to be sealed with any seal of the Court of Probate shall in all parts of the United Kingdom be received in evidence without further proof thereof." This provision is not affected by the amalgamation of the Court of Probate with the High Court of Justice.

Wills affecting real estate proved since Jan. 11, 1858, can be proved by the probate or by an office copy under the seal of the court. 20 & 21 Vict. c. 77, ss. 61, 62. But the probate is not admissible to prove such wills proved in an ecclesiastical court prior to Jan 11, 1858. See 2 Taylor, Evidence (9th ed.), p. 1161. Roscoe, Nisi Prius (16th ed.), 145.

The following decisions are with reference to probate and grants in the ecclesiastical courts. In an indictment for perjury, it was averred, by way of inducement, that a suit was instituted in the Prerogative Court by A. against B., to dispute the validity of a will; it was held that the production of the original allegations of both parties to the suit, signed by their advocates, and proof of the advocates' signatures, and that they acted as advocates in that court, was sufficient proof of the averment, without the production of the caveat. R. v. Turner, 2 C. & K. 732. The probate of a will, under the seal of the proper ecclesiastical court, was sufficient evidence to prove the will of personal property, or that J. S. is the executor, or the like; and the seal of the court sufficiently authenticates it, without further proof. Gilb. Ev. 71; 1 Rolle Abr. 678: R. v.

Netherseal, 4 T. R. 258: Hoe v. Nelthorpe, 3 Salk. 154; Bull. (N. P.) 46: and see Gorton v. Dyson, 1 B. & B. 219: R. v. Turner, 2 C. & K. 732. The production of the original will from the proper custody, with the act of the court ordering probate, is sufficient evidence of the executor's title without accounting for the non-production of the probate. Cox v. Allingham, Jacob, 514. And where by the practice of an ecclesiastical court no book was kept, but grants of probate were recorded by a minute indorsed on or entered at the foot of the original will, and written by the officer of the court, it was held that the production of the will, with such minute on it, was sufficient. Doe d. Edwards v. Gunning, 2 Nev. & Per. 260: Doe d. Basset v. Mew, Id. 266. An examined copy of the act book is also evidence. Davis v. Williams, 13 East, 232: Dorrett v. Meux, 15 C. B. 142.

The copy of the probate is conclusive evidence in the above cases, that is to say, the other party will not be permitted to allege that the will proved is not the last will and testament of the deceased; Gilb. Ev. 73; Chichester v. Philips, Sir T. Raym. 404, 406; Noell v. Wells, 1 Sid. 359; except upon an indictment for forging a will, in which the probate unrevoked is not conclusive evidence of the validity of the will, so as to bar the prosecution; R. v. Buttery, R. & R. 342; but the prosecutor may give in evidence that the probate is forged, or that it was obtained by surprise. Gilb. Ev. 73, 74; Sir T. Raym. and Sid., ubi supra. To prove revocation of a probate, an entry of the revocation in the act book of the court, in which all cases are officially entered, is good evidence. R. v. Ramsbottom, 1 Leach, 25 n.

Letters of administration granted since Jan. 11, 1858, are proved under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 77, s. 22 (ante, p. 364); letters granted prior to that date can be proved by production of the letters of administration, or by a certificate from the ecclesiastical court, that administration was granted, or by calling a clerk from the Court of Probate to produce the book of acts, containing the direction for the letters to issue, and the surrogate's fiat for the same. Bull. (N. P.) 246: Elden v. Keddell, 8 East, 187; 9 R. R. 401: Davis v. Williams, 13 East, 232.

Proceedings in Admiralty.]—Proceedings in and records of the Admiralty Division of the High Court are proved as stated, ante, p. 358. The libel, answer, depositions, and sentence in the Admiralty Court, in proceedings in the Admiralty Court prior to the Judicature Acts, can be proved in the same manner as the bill, answer, deposition, and decree of a court of equity (ante, p. 365). See Com. Dig. Ev. (C. 1). The judgment is conclusive evidence of the facts it establishes, not only against those concerned in interest and persons claiming under them, but also against strangers. Thus, a sentence condemning goods as captured from the enemy is conclusive evidence that they were so captured. Stirling v. Vaughan, 11 East, 619; 11 R. R. 276: Castrique v. Imrie, L. R. 4 H. L. 414: The Minna Craig [1897] 1 Q. B. 55, 460; and see Dicey, Conflict of Laws, 265, 427.

Proceedings in courts of assize or quarter sessions.]—Courts of assize, oyer and terminer, and gaol delivery, including the Central Criminal Court, are now part of the High Court, and their records are those of that court. R. v. Dudley, 14 Q. B. D. 273, 560: R. v. Parke [1903] 2 K. B. 432. Courts of quarter sessions for the trial of indictments are said not to be inferior courts. R. v. Smith, 8 B. & C. 341, 342, Tenterden, L.C.J. The record, and not a mere minute or entry, must be produced, except in cases dealt with by statute (ante, p. 360): R. v. Smith, ubi supra: Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.), 109, 118. Proof of previous convictions at quarter sessions or before a court of summary jurisdiction may be made under 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 18 (ante, p. 361).

Where the record of a court of quarter sessions is pleaded in a court of oyer and terminer, or the converse, or where the record of one court of oyer and terminer is pleaded in another, the exemplification, in strictness, should in like manner be obtained upon certiorari; but in the case of courts of oyer and terminer, and gaol delivery, which are now parts of the High Court (see ante, pp. 125, 365), certiorari would not now be appropriate.

But as to all these courts the general practice is, to apply simply to the clerk of the peace or clerk of assize, who will make it out for you accordingly, without writ, or will attend with the record itself at the trial. Where the "sessions book" was produced to prove an order of the quarter sessions, but the clerk of the peace said that he would have made up the record if it had been bespoken, Parke, B., refused to receive the book in evidence. R. v. Ward, 6 C. & P. 366: see R. v. Bellamy, Ry. & M. 171. But where the entry of the order in the book had a regular caption, and was in the present tense, and in every other respect like a record, and it was proved that no other record was ever made up, this was held to be legal evidence of the order. R. v. Yeoveley, 3 A. & E. 806: and see Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.), 109.

Proceedings in inferior civil courts of record.]—By s. 28 of the County Courts Acts, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 43), provision is made for the entry of a note by the registrar of all proceedings of a county court in a court book, and it is enacted that "such entries in the said book, or a copy thereof bearing the seal of the court, and purporting to be signed and certified as a true copy by the registrar of the court, shall at all times be admitted in all courts and places whatsoever, as evidence of such entries, and of the proceeding referred to by such entry, and of the regularity of such proceeding, without any further proof." And this is the only proper evidence of such proceedings. R. v. Rowland, 1 F. & F. 72. If a certificate is asked for, the purpose for which it is wanted must be stated on application and entered by the registrar on the certificate. County Court Rules, 1903, Order XXIII. r. 10. Where the entry, of which a copy was produced, stated that the court had been held before U., deputy-judge of the said court, it was held that this was sufficient evidence of the regularity of U.'s appointment. R. v. Roberts, 14 Cox, 101 (C. C. R.). Where office copies of proceedings in the court are required, they are prepared by the registrar on prepayment of the cost. County Court Rules, 1903, Order II. r. 7.

Judgments in a court baron, a common law county court, or other inferior court, may be proved either by producing the books in which they are entered; or by examined copies. See Gilb. Ev. 74: Com. Dig. Ev. (C. 1): Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.), 117, 120.

The court rolls of a manor may be proved by examined copies. Gilb. Ev. 75: R. v. Hains, Comb. 337; 12 Mod. 24; or, it seems, by a copy under the steward's hand; Lee v. Boothby, 1 Keb. 720; or you may get the steward or his deputy to produce them at the trial. See Gilb. Ev. 75.

Where the record of an inferior court forms the gist of a pleading in the King's Bench Division, and is to be proved by an exemplification, sue out a certiorari, in the King's Bench Division, directed to the judge, or officer of the court in whose custody the record is supposed to be, requiring him to certify the record to the King's Bench Division; and thereupon an exemplification of the record, under the seal of the inferior court, will be transmitted to the King's Bench Division to be there used as evidence. (See the form, 6 Went. 24.)

Proceedings in bankruptcy.]—Sect. 132 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 52), contains the following provisions as to evidence :—"(1.) A copy of the London Gazette containing any notice inserted therein in pursuance of this Act shall be evidence of the facts stated in the notice. (2.) The production of a copy of the London Gazette containing any notice of a receiving order, or of an order adjudging a debtor bankrupt, shall be conclusive evidence in all legal proceedings of the order having been duly made, and of its date." A cutting from the London Gazette appearing on the Bankruptcy file is not sufficient; but the entire Gazette containing the notice or order must be produced. R. v. Lowe, 52 L. J. (M. C.) 122; 15 Cox, 286 (C. C. R.). In an indictment against a bankrupt for an offence against the bankrupt laws, it was formerly necessary to prove not only the adjudication, but also the other ingredients of the bankruptcy, namely, the trading, where that fact was material; the petitioning creditor's debt, where there was a petitioning creditor; and the act of bankruptcy. R. v. Lands, Dears. 567; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 14. From the terms of s. 132, sub-s. 2, it would appear that in no case is it now necessary in a criminal or civil proceeding, whether against the bankrupt or a third person, to do more than to produce the Gazette in order to prove the fact of bankruptcy, and that it is unnecessary to prove the petitioning creditor's debt, or act of bankruptcy. The following decisions on prior Bankruptcy Acts appear, therefore, to be no longer of authority. R. v. Lands, Dears. 567; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 14: R. v. Levi, L. & C. 597; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 174: R. v. Robinson, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 80; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 78: R. v. Lyons, 9 Cox, 299. An order of discharge is conclusive evidence of the bankruptcy, and of the validity of the proceedings therein. 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 30, sub-s. 3. By s. 133 of the same Act: "(1.) A minute of proceedings at a meeting of creditors under this Act, signed at the same or the next ensuing meeting, by a person describing himself as, or appearing to be, chairman of the meeting at which the minute is signed, shall be received in evidence without further proof. (2.) Until the contrary is proved, every meeting of creditors in respect of the proceedings whereof a minute has been so signed shall be deemed to have been duly convened and held, and all resolutions passed or proceedings had thereat to have been duly passed or had." "Any petition or copy of a petition in bankruptcy, any order or certificate or copy of an order or certificate made by any court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy, any instrument or copy of an instrument, affidavit, or document, made or used in the course of any bankruptcy proceedings, or other proceedings had under this Act, shall, if it appears to be sealed with the seal of any court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy, or purports to be signed by any judge thereof, or is certified as a true copy by any registrar thereof, be receivable in evidence in all legal proceedings whatever." Id. s. 134. "In case of the death of the debtor or his wife, or of a witness whose evidence has been received by any court in any proceeding under this Act, the deposition of the person so deceased, purporting to be sealed with the seal of the court, or a copy thereof purporting to be so sealed, shall be admitted as evidence of the matters therein deposed to." Id. s. 136. "Every court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy under this Act shall have a seal describing the court in such manner as may be directed by order of the lord chancellor, and judicial notice shall be taken of the seal, and of the signature of the judge or registrar of any such court, in all legal proceedings." Id. s. 137. "A certificate of the Board of Trade that a person has been appointed trustee under this Act, shall be conclusive evidence of his appointment." Id. s. 138. "(1.) All documents purporting to be orders or certificates made or issued by the Board of Trade, and to be sealed with the seal of the board, or to be signed by a secretary or assistant secretary of the board, or any person authorized in that behalf by the president of the board, shall be received in evidence, and deemed to be such orders or certificates without further proof unless the contrary is shown. (2.) A certificate signed by the president of the Board of Trade that any order made, certificate issued, or act done, is the order, certificate, or act of the Board of Trade, shall be conclusive evidence of the fact so certified." Id. s. 140.

As to proof of statements by a bankrupt in his public examination, see ante, pp. 328, 329.

Proceedings before Justices and Coroners.

Convictions.]—Convictions before justices may be proved in all legal proceedings under 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 18 (ante, p. 361); and see Commissioner of Police v. Donovan [1903] 1 K. B. 895.

Depositions before magistrates.]—The Indictable Offences Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 42), s. 17 (after directing justices to take in manner therein mentioned the statement on oath or affirmation of the witnesses against any person charged before them with an indictable offence), enacts, that "if upon the trial of the person so accused, it shall be proved, by the oath or affirmation of any credible witness, that any person whose deposition shall have been taken as aforesaid is dead, or so ill as not to be able to travel, and if also it be proved that such deposition was taken in the presence of the person so accused, and that he or his counsel or attorney had a full opportunity of cross-examining the witness, then, if such deposition purport to be signed by the justice by or before whom the same purports to have been taken, it shall be lawful to read such deposition as evidence in such prosecution, without further proof thereof, unless it shall be proved that such deposition was not in fact signed by the justice purporting to sign the same." These provisions are extended to depositions taken before justices on behalf of the accused by 30 & 31 Vict. c. 35, s. 3, which enacts in its concluding words that "upon the trial of such accused person, all the laws now in force relating to the depositions of witnesses for the prosecution shall extend and be applicable to the deposition of witnesses hereby directed to be taken."

Unsworn evidence by children.]—Until 1894, the provisions of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17, applied only to depositions taken on oath or affirmation; and evidence not upon oath given before the committing magistrate by a child of tender years on a charge of carnally knowing a girl under the age of thirteen years by virtue of s. 4 of 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69 (Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885), and reduced into writing by the magistrate and signed by him, and returned by him with the depositions of the other witnesses, could not be read at the trial. R. v. Pruntey, 16 Cox, 344, Cave, J. The law was altered in 1894 by 57 & 58 Vict. c. 41, s. 15 (rep.), and now by s. 15 (1) of the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904 (4 Edw. 7, c. 15), where the unsworn evidence of a child of tender years has been taken before the magistrates upon the hearing of a charge under that Act, or for any of the offences mentioned in the first schedule to that Act, the evidence of such child, though not given on oath or affirmation, but otherwise taken and reduced into writing, in accordance with the provisions of s. 17 of the Indictable Offences Act, 1848, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, shall be deemed to be a deposition within the meaning of that section.

The indictable offences to which this enactment applies, are—

(1) Cruelty to children (s. 1).

(2) Offences against ss. 27, 55, 56, of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100).

(3) Offences under the Children's Dangerous Performances Acts, 1879 & 1897 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 34, and 60 & 61 Vict. c. 52).

(4) Offences against a child under 16, under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, ss. 5, 43, 52, or 62, or s. 11 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act (48 & 49 Vict. c. 69).

(5) Any other offence involving bodily injury to a child under 16. As to this, see post, Book II. Part I. "Illtreatment of Children."

But the evidence of the child must be corroborated by other material evidence in support thereof implicating the accused. 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 15 (1). As to using such depositions at the trial, see post, p. 370.

Illness justifying the reading of a deposition.]—The words, "so ill as not to be able to travel," in 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17, do not mean that the witness's coming to give evidence on the trial shall actually endanger his life, but that he is not reasonably fit, from illness, to attend. R. v. Riley, 3 C. & K. 116: R. v. Cockburn, Dears. & B. 203; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 136; 7 Cox, 265 (C. C. R.). Cf. R. v. Day, 6 Cox, 55: R. v. Wilson, 8 Cox, 453, 454, n. A witness came to the assize town and into court, but a short time before the trial came on he left the court and returned to his home by the advice of a medical man, who deposed that in his judgment it would have been highly dangerous for the witness to remain. While the trial was going on the witness was on his way home. Channell, Serj., after consulting with Parke, B., held that the witness was "so ill as not to be able to travel," and that his deposition before the committing magistrate might be read in evidence. R. v. Wicker, 18 Jur. 252. It is for the presiding judge at the trial to decide, in his discretion, whether the evidence that the witness is too ill to travel is sufficient; R. v. Stephenson, L. & C. 165; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 147; and such evidence need not necessarily come from a medical man. Id. Where, however, the only evidence that the person whose deposition it was proposed to put in was so ill as not to be able to travel, was that of a police officer, who said that he had that morning seen him in bed and that he had fever, Byles, J., rejected the deposition on the ground that to make it admissible there should be the evidence of a medical man, or other evidence which the court might think of equal value to medical testimony. R. v. Welton, 9 Cox, 296: and see R. v. Ulmer, 4 Cox, 442. Where it was proposed to put in the deposition of an absent witness on the ground that he was "so ill as not to be able to travel," and the evidence of such inability was that of a medical man, who said that he had last seen the witness on the Monday (the trial taking place on the Wednesday next following), and that he was then recovering from a severe attack of pain in the bowels, and was too feverish then to travel, but that it was possible he might have sufficiently recovered by the Wednesday to have travelled, but that he (the medical man) would not have advised it, Blackburn, J., refused to admit the deposition on the ground that no one had seen the witness for forty-eight hours, and that he might have become sufficiently recovered in that period. R. v. Bull, 12 Cox, 31. Unless there is actual illness, old age and nervousness and inability to stand a cross-examination are not enough foundation for the reading of the deposition of an absent witness; R. v. Farrell, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 116; 43 L. J. (M. C.) 94: even although the bringing such witness into court would be dangerous to his life. R. v. Thompson, 13 Cox, 181, Lush, J.

Pregnancy.—In R. v. Stephenson, L. & C. 165; 31 L. J. (M. C.) 147, it was held that there might be incidents in regard to the state of pregnancy which might bring the case within the statute. And Bramwell, B., allowed the deposition of a married woman to be read on the evidence of her husband that she was pregnant and unable to attend; although he was unable to state how far advanced she was, and she was about the house attending to her household duties as usual, and had prepared breakfast for him that morning, and had not been confined to bed; but a fortnight before she had suffered in consequence of being driven to the assize town. R. v. Croucher, 3 F. & F. 285. And it is now settled that pregnancy may be a source of such illness as to render the witness unable to travel, and be an illness within the statute 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17. R. v. Wellings, 3 Q. B. D. 426; 47 L. J. (M. C.) 100. These decisions appear to be inconsistent with and to overrule R. v. Omant, 6 Cox, 466, and the ruling of Mellor, J., in R. v. Parker and Ashworth, Archb. Cr. Pl. (22nd ed.), 342. In R. v. Wellings no medical evidence was tendered as to the condition of the witness whose deposition was held by the Court of Criminal Appeal to have been rightly admitted, and the only evidence as to her condition was given by her husband, who proved that he resided with his wife at a place fifteen miles distant from the place of trial, and that when he left his wife on that morning she was unable to move about without considerable difficulty, that she was then lying down, and had been so during the greater part of the past week, though able to get up for a few minutes at intervals. He further stated that his wife thought her confinement would not take place until the middle of the following week, but might, she also thought, occur at any hour. Id. So where a medical man gave evidence to the effect that he had examined the witness that morning; she was very near her confinement, and it would have been dangerous to expose her to the excitement of attending a criminal trial. That two days previously there were symptoms of approaching labour, and her confinement might take place at any moment. At the same time he could not say that her case differed in any way from any ordinary case of confinement: Bowen, J., after consulting with Lush, J., admitted her deposition. R. v. Goodfellow, 14 Cox, 326. In R. v. Butcher [1900] 64 J. P. 808, Darling, J., refused to accept as sufficient the evidence of a police constable that a witness was about to be confined, and stated that there should either be medical evidence or an application for an adjournment.

The above decisions with respect to pregnancy have been applied to illness following childbirth. In R. v. Harvey, 4 Cox, 441, the deposition of a woman who had just been confined was admitted, although it was urged that in a very few weeks the woman would almost certainly be able to attend. In R. v. Marsella, 17 T. L. R. 164; 35 L. J. Newsp. 693: 110 L. T. J. 237, Bruce, J., admitted the deposition of a woman who had been confined ten days before the trial on the oath of the doctor who attended her, that it would be dangerous for her to travel, and the learned judge held that the decisions to the contrary effect in R. v. Wilton, 1 F. & F. 309: R. v. Walker, Id. 534, were overruled by R. v. Goodfellow, ubi supra, and were no longer law.

Where the deposition of a child has been taken in respect of an offence alleged to have been committed against it under the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904, or an offence in the first schedule of that Act (see ante, p. 369), the deposition is admissible in evidence for the prosecution or the defence, if the court of trial is satisfied on the evidence of a registered medical practitioner that the attendance of the child before the court would involve serious danger to its life or health. 4 Edw. 7, c. 15, s. 14. This provision applies to depositions taken without oath under s. 15 of the Act (ante, pp. 369, 370) and to depositions taken out of court under s. 13 of the Act, as well as those taken under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17.

The deposition is receivable only where the indictment is substantially for the same offence as that with which the defendant was charged before the justice. R. v. Ledbetter, 3 C. & K. 103. But where the deposition was taken on a charge of feloniously wounding, it was held receivable on the trial of the defendant for the murder of the person wounded, who had in the meantime died of the wound. R. v. Beeston, Dears. 405; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 5; 6 Cox, 425 (C. C. R.). And so, where the deposition was taken on a charge of robbery with violence to the person, it was received on the trial of the prisoner for the murder of the person robbed, he having in the meantime died from the violence. R. v. Lee, 4 F. & F. 63. Pollock, C.B. And where the deposition had been taken on a charge of obtaining money by false pretences, it was allowed to be read on the trial of an indictment against the prisoner for uttering a forged promissory note, the charges of false pretence and uttering being substantially the same, both arising out of the same transaction and the same evidence proving both charges. R. v. Williams, 12 Cox, 101, Montague Smith, J. See R. v. Radbourne, 1 Leach, 457: R. v. Smith, R. & R. 339; Holt (N. P.), 614: R. v. Dilmore, 6 Cox, 52, Wightman, J.: Leach v. Simpson, 5 M. & W. 309. The point is not whether the inquiry before the magistrate was exactly the same as that before the judge, but whether that inquiry was such that a full opportunity of cross-examination has been given to the party accused. Per Alderson, B., in R. v. Beeston, ubi supra. Where a witness is so ill as not to be able to travel, the judge may, if he thinks fit, postpone the trial to the next assizes, instead of permitting the depositions to be read under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17. R. v. Tait, 2 F. & F. 553, Crompton, J. In all cases where there is any doubt as to whether the deposition is admissible in evidence, it would be prudent to apply to the judge for a postponement of the trial.

As to reading before the grand jury depositions taken under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17, see ante, p. 100.

Although the former statutes relating to the examination of witnesses against a prisoner before justices and coroners (1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 13; 2 & 3 Ph. & M. c. 10; 7 G. 4, c. 64, ss. 2–5) did not contain any express enactment like that contained in 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17, it was yet determined in many cases, and recognized as a rule of law, that, where the examinations of witnesses in cases of felony under these statutes were taken in the presence of the accused, and he had the opportunity of cross-examining them, the deposition of any such witness might be read in evidence against the accused on his trial, if the person who made the deposition were dead; 1 Hale, 305; Bull. (N. P.) 242 (a); or insane (though the insanity were of a temporary nature): R. v. Marshall, C. & Mar. 147: R. v. Eriswell, 3 T. R. 707, 720; (but see R. v. Ferry Frystone, 2 East, 54): or if it appeared satisfactorily to the court that he was kept out of the way by means of the procurement of the defendant; R. v. Harrison, 12 St. Tr. 833, 852: R. v. Lord Morly, Kel. (J.) 53, 55; 6 St. Tr. 770, 771 (in which case, however, the deposition is no evidence against other co-defendants, R. v. Scaife, 2 Den. 281; 17 Q. B. 238; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 229; or if he were bedridden, or so ill as to be unable to travel. 1 Hale, 305; 2 Hawk. c. 46, ss. 15–17: R. v. Wilshaw, C. & Mar. 145. But they cannot be thus read, if it merely appear that the witness is absent, even if he be resident abroad, and that the prosecutor has in vain used his best endeavours to find him. R. v. Lord Morly, Kel. (J.) 55: R. v. Scaife, ubi supra: R. v. Austin, Dears. 612; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 48 (C. C. R.). Nor could depositions formerly be read upon an indictment for high treason; 5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 12: Fost. 237; but in R. v. Lynch (K. B. D. Dec. 19, 1902) the deposition of a witness absent from illness was allowed to be read to the grand jury.

Depositions before magistrates, to be thus given in evidence must be taken conformably with the statute, R. v. Smith, R. & R. 339: Holt (N. P.) 614: 2 Stark. (N. P.) 208, 211 n. (a), and in the presence of the prisoner, so that he may have an opportunity of cross-examining the witness; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17 (ante, p. 368), and see R. v. Paine, 1 Salk. 281: R. v. Woodcock, 1 Leach, 500; 1 East, 354, 356: Pyke v. Crouch, 1 Ld. Raym. 730: R. v. Dingler, 2 Leach, 561: and see Bull. (N. P.) 243: R. v. Forbes, Holt (N. P.) 599 n. The fact that the prisoner had a full opportunity of cross-examining the witness may be negatived by proof that he was insane when the deposition was taken, or was otherwise incapacitated by illness from cross-examining the deponent. R. v. Peacock, 12 Cox, 21; Brett and Mellor, JJ. The depositions must also be taken in the presence of the justice; R. v. Watts, L. & C. 339; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 63 (C. C. R.); and nothing should be returned as a deposition, unless the prisoner had an opportunity of knowing what was said, and of cross-examining the party making it. R. v. Arnold, 8 C. & P. 621, Denman, L.C.J.; R. v. Johnson, 2 C. & K. 394. But where a deposition was not wholly taken in the presence of the prisoner, but the witness afterwards, in his presence, was resworn, and the deposition repeated, and signed, the judges held that it was, under the circumstances, admissible evidence; for the prisoner had then an opportunity of cross-examining the witness. R. v. Smith, ubi supra; see R. v. Bates, 2 F. & F. 317. As to depositions before coroners, see post, pp. 376, 377. In R. v. Holloway, 65 J. P. 712, Wills, J., admitted the deposition of a deceased witness, proved to have been read over to her and assented to by her, but not signed by her owing to injuries to her hands.

Where several depositions were taken on one sheet of paper, and at the foot of the whole was written "sworn before me," with the signature of the magistrate, the depositions previous to the last were held to be receivable in evidence. R. v. Osborne, 8 C. & P. 113, Coleridge, J. And it is now settled that although all the depositions are not taken on one sheet of paper, it is not necessary that each deposition should be signed by the magistrate taking it; and, therefore, where a number of depositions taken at the same hearing on several sheets of paper are fastened together and signed by the magistrate taking them once only at the end of all the depositions, in the form given in the Schedule (M.) to 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, one of these depositions is admissible in evidence, after the death of the witness making it, although no part of it is on the sheet signed by the magistrate. R. v. Parker, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 225; 39 L. J. (M. C.) 60, which is in accordance with R. v. Young, 3 C. & K. 106, and R. v. Lee, 4 F. & F. 63, and overrules R. v. Richards, 4 F. & F. 860. In R. v. Parker, ubi supra, the case stated by the learned judge stated that "the deposition in question was the second of four depositions made at the same hearing, all of which were pinned together." It does not state, however, whether any proof was given at the trial, whether the depositions were pinned together at the time of the signature by the magistrate, although Mr. Justice Byles, in his judgment as reported 39 L. J. (M. C.) at p. 62, says, "the different sheets appear to have been attached together at the time of the signature." In an earlier case, however, it was held to be clear, that if the depositions are on separate sheets, and no distinct proof be given of their having been fastened together at the time when the last was signed, those bearing no signature will be rejected. R. v. France, 2 M. & Rob. 207, Alderson, B. But where the depositions were on separate sheets, and were signed only at the end by the magistrate, the deposition of one of the witnesses who was dead was admitted in evidence, although it seems that the sheets were not fastened together at the time of the signature by the magistrate, but had been afterwards attached together by the magistrate's clerk. R. v. Lee, 4 F. & F. 63, Pollock, C.B. In R. v. France, ubi supra, it was held that depositions taken in cross-examination, at a subsequent time to those in chief, and not signed by the magistrate, were held to be so irregular as to prevent the whole depositions from being read against the prisoner; although both were sworn by the magistrate to have been accurately taken. But this seems to be no longer law. The depositions may also be given in evidence by the defendant, in cases where the witnesses appear, in order to show some material variance between their evidence at the trial and before the magistrate; and may be read by the prosecutor, as it would seem, and certainly by the judge, to impeach the credit of a witness, who gives evidence contradicting statements contained in the deposition made by such witness in a former proceeding in the same case. R. v. Oldroyd, R. & R. 88. It is not necessary, to make the depositions evidence, that each should have a separate caption or heading; a general caption or heading at the head of the body of depositions sufficiently shows that they were all taken under the statute. R. v. Johnson, 2 C. & K. 354. Indeed, a deposition is admissible in evidence though it has no caption, if it be described as the examination of the witness, and the evidence contained in it be relevant to the charge. R. v. Langbridge, 1 Den. 448; 2 C. & K. 975; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 198. The decision to the contrary by Hill, J., in R. v. Newton, 1 F. & F. 641, followed by Mellor, J., in R. v. Johnson Metcalfe, York Spring Assizes, 1862, M.S., was given without R. v. Langbridge being cited.

Taking out of court depositions of persons dangerously ill.]—The Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 35, known as "Russell Gurney's Act") after reciting that by s. 17 of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, it is permitted, under certain circumstances, to read in evidence on the trial of an accused person the deposition, taken in accordance with the said Act, of a witness who is dead, or so ill as to be unable to travel, and that it may happen that a person dangerously ill, and unable to travel, may be able to give material and important information relating to an indictable offence, or to a person accused thereof, and it may not be practicable or permissible to take, in accordance with the provisions of the said Act, the examination or deposition of the person so being ill, so as to make the same available as evidence in the event of his or her death before the trial of the accused person, and that it is desirable in the interests of truth and justice that means should be provided for perpetuating such testimony, and for rendering the same available in the event of the death of the person giving the same,—enacts (s. 6) that, "whenever it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of any justice of the peace that any person dangerously ill, and, in the opinion of some registered medical practitioner, not likely to recover from such illness, is able and willing to give material information relating to any indictable offence, or relating to any person accused of any such offence, and it shall not be practicable for any justice or justices of the peace to take an examination or deposition in accordance with the provisions of the said Act of the person so being ill, it shall be lawful for the said justice to take in writing the statement on oath or affirmation of such person so being ill, and such justice shall thereupon subscribe the same, and shall add thereto by way of caption a statement of his reason for taking the same, and of the day and place when and where the same was taken, and of the names of the persons (if any) present at the taking thereof; and, if the same shall relate to any indictable offence for which any accused person is already committed, or bailed to appear for trial, shall transmit the same with the said addition, to the proper officer of the court for trial at which such accused person shall have been so committed or bailed; and in all other cases he shall transmit the same to the clerk of the peace of the county, division, city, or borough in which he shall have taken the same, who is hereby required to preserve the same and file it of record; and if afterwards, upon the trial of any offender or offence to which the same may relate, the person who made the same statement shall be proved to be dead, or if it shall be proved that there is no reasonable probability that such person will be ever able to travel, or to give evidence, it shall be lawful to read such statement in evidence, either for or against the accused, without further proof thereof, if the same purports to be signed by the justice by or before whom it purports to be taken, and provided it be proved to the satisfaction of the court that reasonable notice of the intention to take such statement has been served upon the person (whether prosecutor or accused) against whom it is proposed to be read in evidence, and that such person, or his counsel or attorney, had or might have had, if he had chosen to be present, full opportunity of cross-examining the deceased person who made the same," see R. v. Peacock, 12 Cox, 21, Brett, J. It is to be observed that the proviso at the close of this section overrides the whole section, and no statement, professedly taken under it, can be available as such at the trial unless notice has been given before taking it of the intention to take it. R. v. Quigley, 18 L. T., N. S. 211, Mellor and Lush, JJ. Sect. 7 points out the mode in which a prisoner in actual custody, who shall have served, or shall have received notice of an intention to take such statement, may have an opportunity of being present when it is taken: and such notice must be in writing, otherwise the statement cannot be read against the prisoner on the trial, although he may have been present when it was taken, and had a full opportunity of cross-examination. R. v. Shurmer, 17 Q. B. D. 323; 55 L. J. (M. C.) 153; 16 Cox, 94 (C. C. R.). In R. v. Prestridge (C. C. C.) Nov. 1881, 72 L. T. Journ. 93, after the deposition of a dying person had been taken under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 35, s. 6, and she had been cross-examined, further questions were put to her by the justice, and her answers were added to the depositions. The caption was added afterwards and returned with the deposition. Hawkins, J., refused to allow the answers to the justice's questions to be given in evidence, and further expressed a very strong opinion that the caption was an integral part of the deposition, and must be added at the time to render the deposition admissible; he stated that he should admit the deposition and reserve the point, but its admission was not pressed. In R. v. Curtis, 21 Times, L. R. 87, Bigham, J., refused to admit a deposition taken under the same enactment because the caption did not state where it was taken. A deposition of a dying person purporting to have been taken under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17, but to which there was no caption and which had not been taken by the committing justice was held inadmissible. R. v. Rees, Glamorgan Assizes, Times Newsp. (20 Dec. 1888), Charles, J. But where the deposition of a dying person was taken by a justice at a hospital in the presence of the accused and all the requirements of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17 were complied with, it was held that the deposition was admissible in evidence, though the requirements of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 35, s. 6 had not been complied with. R. v. Katz, 64 J. P. 807, Darling, J.; in which case counsel was authorized by Wills, J., to state that he had altered the opinion to the contrary expressed by him in R. v. Simpson, 62 J. P. 825.

As to when statements made in the presence of the prisoner are evidence, see ante, p. 338.

Special provision is made by s. 13 of the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904 (4 Edw. 7, c. 15), for the taking out of court of the depositions of children in respect of whom an offence of cruelty against that Act, or any of the offences mentioned in the schedule to the Act, is alleged to have been committed: see those sections, post, Book II. Part I. ch. ii. sect. 4.

Right of accused to copies of depositions.]—6 & 7 W. 4, c. 114, enacts (s. 4) that, "all persons under trial shall be entitled, at the time of their trial, to inspect, without fee or reward, all depositions (or copies thereof) which have been taken against them, and returned into the court before which such trial shall be had," and it is provided by s. 27 of the Indictable Offences Act, 1848 (which replaces 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 114, s. 3), "that at any time after all the examinations aforesaid shall have been completed, and before the first day of the assizes or sessions, or other first sitting of the court at which any person so committed to prison or admitted to bail as aforesaid, is to be tried, such person may require, and shall be entitled to have, of and from the officer or person having the custody of the same, copies of the depositions on which he shall have been committed or bailed, on payment of a reasonable sum for the same, not exceeding at the rate of 1½*d.* for each folio of ninety words." The enactment does not apply in case of committal on remand, but only after committal for trial: see R. v. Lord Mayor of London, 5 Q. B. 555: Dav. & M. 484; ex parte Fletcher, 13 L. J. (M. C.) 67. Where a prisoner has obtained a certificate for legal aid under the Poor Prisoners Defence Act, 1903 (ante, p. 187), the cost of a copy of the depositions for his use is allowed as part of the costs of the prosecution: s. 1 (2). Where the depositions have been transmitted to the director of public prosecutions in pursuance of 42 & 43 Vict. c. 22 (Prosecution of Offences Act, 1879), s. 5, by that section he is put under the same obligation, and upon the same payment, to deliver to an applicant copies thereof.

Under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17, depositions were taken only of witnesses for the Crown. But the accused is now entitled to copies of the examinations of witnesses examined before the justices on his behalf, under s. 3 of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 35, as it is enacted by s. 4 of the same statute, that all the provisions of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, for giving the accused person copies of the examinations shall be read and shall have operation as part of the 30 & 31 Vict. c. 35.

By 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 5 (as extended by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 22, s. 5), justices who fail to deliver to the court of trial or to the director of public prosecutions any examination, information, evidence, bailment, or recognizance, may, on examination and proof of the offence by the court of trial, summarily be fined as the court shall think meet. This enactment is not repealed, and seems to apply to magistrates neglecting their duty under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 20, and the continuance of the liability to fine is clearly indicated by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 22, s. 5.

Prior to the passing of the Indictable Offences Act, 1848, the judges intimated that justices should return to the court of trial all depositions taken against the accused, whether the deponents had or had not been bound over by recognizance to attend the trial, and also that they should return a full statement of all that the witnesses said, not merely of so much thereof as they deem material, much time having been occupied in endeavouring to establish contradictions between the testimony of the witnesses and their depositions, in the omission of minute circumstances in their statements before the magistrate. See R. v. Simons, 6 C. & P. 540: R. v. Fuller, 7 C. & P. 269: R. v. Grady, Id. 650: R. v. Coveney, Id. 667: R. v. Thomas, Id. 817. The opinions thus expressed are equally applicable to depositions taken under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42. That statute obviously applies only to the case of a person bailed or committed to prison for some offence for which he is to be tried, and with a view of enabling him to prepare for trial, and does not extend to the case of a person committed to prison for default of sureties to keep the peace, and who has been discharged by the sessions. Ex parte Humphrys, 19 L. J. (M. C.) 189. A prisoner was not entitled, under 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 114, s. 2 (rep.), to a copy of his own statement returned by the magistrates, but only to a copy of the depositions of the witnesses. R. v. Aylett, 8 C. & P. 669, Parke, B. But it is submitted that under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, the statement is a part of the depositions in the case. The reading, on the part of the prosecution, of the prisoner's statement, returned with the depositions, does not give the prisoner the right to consider the depositions as in evidence on the part of the prosecution, though it appear that they were all taken before such statement was made: but if the prisoner wishes to have the whole or any particular part of the depositions read, he must read it as his evidence. R. v. Pearson, 7 C. & P. 671.

Depositions before coroners.]—The provisions of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 17, do not in terms apply to the depositions taken before coroners. And it is submitted that the ruling to the contrary by Darling, J., in R. v. Butcher, 64 J. P. 808, appears to have been given per incuriam. But it is stated in Bull. (N. P.) 242 that depositions taken before a coroner may be read if the witness is dead or beyond sea. By the Coroners Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 71), s. 18, sub-s. 5, a person charged by an inquisition with murder or manslaughter shall be entitled to have from the person having for the time being the custody of the inquisition or of the depositions of the witnesses at the inquest, copies thereof, on payment of a reasonable sum for the same, not exceeding the rate of 1½*d.* for every folio of ninety words. The depositions in such cases are returned to the clerk of the court of trial (50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 5). The judges had power, by their general authority as a court of justice, to order a copy of depositions taken before a coroner to be given to a prisoner indicted for the murder of the party concerning whose death the inquiry took place before the coroner, although in a case where the coroner could not have been compelled to return them under 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 4. That section is repealed by 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, but the repeal does not seem to affect the power of the judges. Ex parte Greenacre, 8 C. & P. 32. R. v. Walford, 8 C. & P. 767. There was formerly supposed to be a difference between depositions taken before a magistrate and before a coroner; for the latter were said to be evidence, even though the party accused was not present when they were taken. Bull. (N. P.) 242: R. v. Eriswell, 3 T. R. 707, 713, Buller, J. The reason given for this exception was, that the coroner is an elective officer, appointed on behalf of the public, to make inquiry of matters within his jurisdiction, who therefore is presumed to take the depositions fairly and impartially. Bull. (N. P.) 242. Although the propriety of this distinction had been questioned (see 2 Stark. Ev. 384), the practice nevertheless formerly was to admit such depositions without inquiry whether the party accused was or was not present; and in R. v. Purefoy, Peake Ev. 64; 2 Phil. Ev. (7th ed.), 373, Hotham, B., received depositions taken before a coroner, although it appeared, and was objected, that the defendant was not present. But in R. v. Rigg, Leeds Summer Assizes, 1866, MS., 4 F. & F. 1085, Montague Smith, J., refused to admit in evidence the deposition of a witness taken before the coroner, where the prisoner was not present at the inquest when the witness was examined. The dicta and expressions of opinion in favour of a contrary practice, cited above, were brought on that occasion under his lordship's notice; but he said that he had no doubt upon the subject, and had no hesitation in rejecting the deposition. This ruling is in accord with the opinions expressed by the ablest text writers on the subject. 1 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), 339; 3 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 672, n.; Stark Ev. (4th ed.) 38: Jervis on Coroners (6th ed.), 51, 52. Depositions taken before the coroner must, in order to be admissible, appear to have been taken before the coroner quâ coroner, and must be signed by him. 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 4, sub-s. 2; R. v. England, 2 Leach, 767, 771. The depositions must appear also to have been upon oath; 2 Hale, 284; Bull. (N. P.) 242.

50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 4, sub-s. 2, enacts, that the deposition shall be signed by the witness as well as by the coroner, which the old statutes did not. This gets rid of the ruling in R. v. Flemming, 2 Leach, 854: 1 East, P. C. 440. A deposition taken before a coroner may be proved by the coroner, or by any person who can prove the coroner's and the witness's signature, and that the witness was sworn, and that the prisoner was present and had an opportunity of cross-examining the witness. 50 & 51 Vict. c. 71, s. 4, sub-s. 2; 1 Tayl. Ev. (9th ed.), 339: R. v. Wilshaw, C. & Mar. 145: Sills v. Brown, 9 C. & P. 601.

Depositions taken abroad.]—A deposition taken out of England is not admissible in England in substitution for the oral statement of the deponent, except under statutory provision, although it may be put against the deponent if made by him and containing confessions or admissions.

Depositions may be taken abroad in certain criminal cases, under the following statutes, 13 G. 3, c. 63: 24 G. 3, sess. 2, c. 25: 26 G. 3, c. 57, as to offences in India (see Ilbert, Government of India, p. 259); and under 42 G. 3, c. 85, as to offences by public officers outside Great Britain. Such depositions are admissible in England. The Evidence on Commission Act, 1831 (1 W. 4, c. 22), does not relate to criminal proceedings (R. v. Upton St. Leonards, 10 Q. B. 827), and commissions are it is believed never issued in criminal cases under the Evidence by Commission Act, 1859 (22 Vict. c. 20). If the witness had been examined abroad, under 13 G. 3, c. 63, and has there proved original documents, those documents themselves must be transmitted and given in evidence in this country: copies are not admissible. R. v. Douglas, 1 C. & K. 670.

Provision is made in Extradition Treaties for the execution of commission to take evidence for the purposes of proceedings against a fugitive criminal: but there is no statutory provision rendering the evidence so taken admissible in proceedings in England.

By the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 60), s. 691, sub-s. 1, "Whenever in the course of any legal proceedings instituted in any part of his Majesty's dominions before any judge or magistrate, or before any person authorized by law or by consent of parties to receive evidence, the testimony of any witness is required in relation to the subject-matter of such proceeding, then, upon due proof, if such proceeding is instituted in the United Kingdom, that such witness cannot be found in that kingdom, or, if in any British possession, that he cannot be found in the same possession, any deposition that such witness may have previously made on oath in relation to the same subject-matter before any justice or magistrate in his Majesty's dominions, or any British consular officer elsewhere, shall be admissible in evidence, provided that:—(a) If the deposition was made in the United Kingdom, it shall be admissible in any proceeding instituted in the United Kingdom. (b) If the deposition was made in any British possession, it shall not be admissible in any proceeding instituted in that British possession. (c) If the proceeding is criminal, it shall not be admissible unless it was made in the presence of the person accused. (Sub-s. 2.) Every deposition so made shall be authenticated by the signature of the judge, magistrate, or consular officer before whom it is made; and the judge, magistrate, or consular officer shall certify, if the fact is so, that the accused was present at the taking thereof. (Sub-s. 3.) It shall not be necessary in any case to prove the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed any such deposition; and in any criminal proceeding a certificate under this section shall, unless the contrary is proved, be sufficient evidence of the accused having been present in manner thereby certified. (Sub-s. 4.) Nothing herein contained shall affect any case in which depositions taken in any proceeding are rendered admissible in evidence by any Act of parliament, or by any Act or ordinance of the legislature of any colony, so far as regards such colony, or to interfere with the power of any colonial legislature to make such depositions admissible in evidence, or to interfere with the practice of any court in which depositions not authenticated as hereinbefore mentioned are admissible." Where witnesses whose evidence had been taken abroad by a British vice-consul under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 270 (of which this section is a re-enactment), were the officers of a British sailing vessel, which was stated by a clerk in the office of the registrar-general for seamen, from his examination of official records, never to have been in this country, this was held to be sufficient evidence that the witnesses could not be found in the United Kingdom, and as the depositions purported to be taken in the presence of the prisoner and of the British vice-consul, and also to be signed by the latter, they were admitted in evidence. R. v. Conning, 11 Cox, 134: see also R. v. Anderson, 11 Cox, 154: R. v. Stewart, 13 Cox, 296.

Proceedings in Colonial and Foreign Courts, etc.]—By s. 7 of the Evidence Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 99), "all judgments, decrees, orders, and other judicial proceedings of any court of justice in any foreign state, or in any British Colony, and all affidavits, pleadings, and other legal documents filed or deposited in any such court, may be proved in any court of justice, or before any person having by law or by consent of parties authority to hear, receive and examine evidence, either by examined copies or by copies authenticated as hereinafter mentioned, that is to say . . . if the document sought to be proved be a judgment decree order or other judicial proceeding of any foreign or colonial court or an affidavit pleading or other legal document filed or deposited in any such court, the authenticated copy to be admissible in evidence must purport either to be sealed with the seal of the foreign or colonial court to which the original document belongs, or, in the event of such court having no seal, to be signed by the judge, or, if there be more than one judge, by any one of the judges of the said court; and such judge shall attach to his signature a statement in writing on the said copy that the court whereof he is a judge has no seal: but if any of the aforesaid authenticated copies shall purport to be signed or sealed as hereinbefore respectively directed the same shall respectively be admitted as evidence in every case in which the original document could have been admitted in evidence, without any proof of the seal where a seal is necessary or of the signature or of the truth of the statement attached thereto, where such signature and statement are necessary, or of the judicial character of the person appearing to have made such signature and statement." See R. v. Newman, Dears. 85. This enactment does not apply to the proceedings of the courts of Scotland or Ireland, nor it would seem to those of the Isle of Man or Channel Islands, and judgments of these courts must in criminal cases ordinarily be proved as those of foreign courts were at common law, i.e. by exemplifications under the seal of the court, if the court has a seal, and evidence must also be given that the seal affixed to the exemplification is in fact the seal of the court. Henry v. Adey, 3 East, 221: Alves v. Bunbury, 4 Camp. 23: Cavan v. Stewart, 1 Stark. (N. P.) 525: Appleton v. Lord Braybrook, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 6; 6 M. & Sel. 34; 18 R. R. 294: Flindt v. Atkins, 3 Camp. 215, n.: Alivon v. Furnival, 1 Cr. M. & R. 277.

Records of Irish Courts.]—Records of the courts in Ireland might, it is said, be proved by examined copies, etc., in the same manner as English records; but see Harris v. Saunders, 4 B. & C. 411. It was necessary, however, that the court should be satisfied that it was with a record the copy was examined; and, therefore, where the witness produced to prove the copy stated that he examined it with a parchment roll shown to him in a room over the Four Courts at Dublin, without seeing from whence it was taken, or knowing the person who produced it to be an officer of the court, Lord Ellenborough refused to receive it in evidence. Adamthwaite v. Synge, 4 Camp. 372; 16 R. R. 804: Slane Peerage case, 5 Cl. & F. 23: 7 Eng. Rep. 311.

Statutory modes of proving public documents.]—The production in evidence of most of the documents above mentioned has been much facilitated by the following statutes. The Evidence Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 113), enacts (s. 1), that "whenever by any Act now in force, or hereafter to be in force, any certificate, official or public document, or document or proceeding of any corporation or joint-stock or other company, or any certified copy of any document, by-law, entry in any register or other book, or of any other proceeding, shall be receivable in evidence of any particular in any court of justice, or before any legal tribunal, or either house of parliament, or any committee of either house, or in any judicial proceeding, the same shall respectively be admitted in evidence, provided they respectively purport to be sealed or impressed with a stamp, or sealed and signed, or signed alone, as required, or impressed with a stamp and signed, as directed by the respective Acts made or to be hereafter made, without any proof of the seal or stamp, where a seal or stamp is necessary, or of the signature or of the official character of the person appearing to have signed the same, and without any further proof thereof, in every case in which the original record could have been received in evidence." And the Evidence Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 99), s. 14, provides that, "whenever any book or other document (see Reeve v. Hodson, 10 Hare, app. xix.) is of such a public nature as to be admissible in evidence on its mere production from the proper custody, and no statute exists which renders its contents provable by means of a copy, any copy thereof or extract therefrom shall be admissible in evidence in any court of justice, or before any person now or hereafter having by law or by consent of parties authority to hear, receive, and examine evidence, provided it be proved to be an examined copy or extract, or provided it purport to be signed and certified as a true copy or extract by the officer (see In re Hall's Estate, 22 L. J. (Ch.) 177: Re Porter's Trusts, 25 L. J. (Ch.) 688: R. v. Weaver, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 85; 43 L. J. (M. C.) 13, ante,

p. 353) to whose custody the original is entrusted, and which officer is hereby required to furnish such certified copy or extract to any person applying at a reasonable time for the same, upon payment of a reasonable sum for the same, not exceeding fourpence for every folio of ninety words."

2. PRIVATE DOCUMENTS.

Inscriptions and entries.]—In pedigree cases an entry in a family Bible, an examined copy of an inscription on a tombstone, a pedigree hung up in a family mansion, and the like, are admissible evidence. Goodright v. Moss, 2 Cowp. 591: Berkeley Peerage Claim, 4 Camp. 401; 14 R. R. 732; Roscoe, Nisi Prius (17th ed.), 44.

Deeds and other instruments in writing.]—When a deed is to be given in evidence, the deed itself must be produced at the trial. Leyfield's case, 10 Co. Rep. 92 b, 93, except in the following cases, (1) where the deed is in the hands of the opposite party:—Read v. Brookman, 3 T. R. 151; Wymark's case, 5 Co. Rep. 73 a; (2) where it has been lost by time or accident, or by any other casualty, as by fire, etc., Read v. Brookman, 3 T. R. 153, n. (see Kensington v. Inglis, 8 East, 273; 9 R. R. 188; Brewster v. Sewell, 3 B. & Ald. 296; Freeman v. Arkell, 2 B. & C. 494, as to proof of the loss, etc.). In such cases its contents may be proved by a copy or other secondary evidence. Leyfield's case, 10 Co. Rep. 92 b: Medlicot v. Joyner, 1 Mod. 4. In R. v. Hunter, 3 C. & P. 591; 4. C & P. 128, where it appeared that the deed alleged to be forged was in the custody of the defendant, who, after notice, refused to produce it, secondary evidence of the deed was received. In R. v. Hall, 12 Cox, 159, Cleasby, B., after consulting Byles, J., refused to admit secondary evidence of the document alleged to be forged in that case, on the ground merely that no foundation had been laid for the admission of such evidence by proof of the loss or destruction of the document. But in both cases the court declined to recognize a rule once supposed to assert that a person could not be convicted of forgery without the actual production of the forged document.

If there have been no subscribing witness to, then proof of the handwriting of the parties will be sufficient, the law in such a case presuming a delivery. The Evidence Act, 1865 (28 & 29 Vict. c. 18), s. 7, which is applicable to all sorts of criminal judicature (see s. 1), enacts that it shall not be necessary to prove by the attesting witness any instrument to the validity of which attestation is not requisite, and such instrument may be proved as if there had been no attesting witness thereto. This enactment got rid of the old rule requiring the calling of an attesting witness to any document purporting to be attested. Gilb. Ev. 99: Barnes v. Trompowsky, 7 T. R. 266: Marsh v. Collnet, 2 Esp. 665; 5 R. R. 763: Manners v. Postan, 4 Esp. 239; 3 B. & P. 343: and see England v. Roper, 1 Stark. (N. P.) 304. And it is now unnecessary to call the attesting witness to prove the execution of a deed, unless the deed is one to the validity of which attestation is requisite. A list of instruments to the validity of which attestation is requisite, and which therefore must still, subject to the exceptions to be presently mentioned, be proved by the subscribing witness, will be found in 2 Taylor Ev. (9th ed.), p. 1207, n. It does not appear necessary that the subscribing witness when called should swear that the deed was actually executed in his presence. If he were afterwards desired to attest it by the party who executed it (Grellier v. Neale, 1 Peake (3rd ed.), 198; 3 R. R. 669: Powell v. Blackett, 1 Esp. 97), or in the presence of the party (Park v. Mears, 3 Esp. 171: 2 B. & P. 217), and attested it accordingly, this will be sufficient, provided that the attesta-tion and execution be done so nearly at the same time, as fairly to be deemed parts of the same transaction. MS., E. 1814. On the other hand, a person who sees an instrument executed, but who is not desired by the parties to attest it, cannot, by afterwards putting his name to it, prove it as an attesting witness. M'Craw v. Gentry, 3 Camp. 232.

To this rule of proving the execution by the evidence of an attesting witness, which is now limited, as we have seen above, to the case where the deed is one to the validity of which attestation is requisite, there are, however, many exceptions.

1. Where the execution forms one of the admissions in the cause; but this exception is applicable to civil cases only.

2. Where the deed (and the same as to a will, although it be less than thirty years since the testator's death, Doe d. Oldham v. Woolley, 8 B. & C. 22) is thirty years old or upwards, the court will presume that it has been duly executed, and will not require it to be proved, Bull. (N. P.) 255: Chelsea Waterworks Co. v. Cowper, 1 Esp. 275, 278, provided possession have followed the deed, or some satisfactory account be given of it, and provided there be no erasure or interlineation in it, and that it do not import fraud; otherwise it must be proved as in ordinary cases, either by the attesting witness, or by evidence of his and the party's handwriting. 2 Bac. Abr. Ev. (F.); Bull. (N. P.) 255; and see Swinnerton v. Marquis of Stafford [1810] 3 Taunt. 91. It may be necessary here to remark, that when you give an ancient obligation for the payment of money in evidence, you should be prepared to prove the payment of interest within the last twenty years, or other circumstances sufficient to rebut the presumption which the law will otherwise raise of such obligation having been satisfied. See Forbes v. Wale, 1 W. Bl. 532.

3. Where a deed enrolled (and to which enrolment was necessary) is given in evidence, it is not necessary to prove the execution of it by the subscribing witness: but it may be proved by the enrolment indorsed on it, or, if the deed be lost, by an examined copy of the enrolment, as already mentioned, ante, p. 345.

4. Where one deed is recited in another, proof of the second deed is deemed proof of the one recited, as against the parties to the second deed and those claiming under them. 2 Bac. Abr., Ev. (F.).

5. Secondary evidence of the execution may be given by proving the handwriting of the witness and the party, upon proof of any of the following circumstances: that the subscribing witness is dead, Nelson v. Whittall, 1 B. & Ald. 19, or has become insane, 12 Vin. Abr. 224: Currie v. Child, 3 Camp. 283, or is abroad out of reach of the process of the court, Holmes v. Pontin, Peake (3rd ed.), 135: Cooper v. Marsden, 1 Esp. 1: Wallis v. Delancey, 7 T. R. 266, n.; 12 Vin. Abr. 224: and see Hodnett v. Forman, 1 Stark. (N. P.) 90, whether there domiciled or not; Prince v. Blackburn, 2 East, 250, or has set out for the purpose of leaving the kingdom, Ward v. Wells, 1 Taunt. 461; 10 R. R. 581: or that from circumstances it may fairly be presumed that he has left the kingdom, Wardell v. Fermor, 2 Camp. 282: Wyatt v. Bateman, 7 C. & P. 586; or that he is serving in the navy, Parker v. Hoskins, 2 Taunt. 223, or the like; or that after a bonâ fide serious and diligent inquiry, he cannot be found, Cochlan v. Williamson, 1 Doug. 93: Cunliffe v. Sefton, 2 East, 183; Barnes v. Trompowsky, 7 T. R. 266; Crosby v. Percy, 1 Camp. 303; 1 Taunt. 364: Wardell v. Fermor, 2 Camp. 282: Willman v. Worrall, 8 C. & P. 380: Earl of Falmouth v. Roberts, 9 M. & W. 469; or that he is or has become incompetent as a witness from any cause, Jones v. Mason, 2 Str. 833. The rule on this subject is not affected by the power to examine witnesses abroad on interrogatories, under s. 4 of the Evidence on Commission Act, 1831 (1 W. 4, c. 22), Glubb v. Edwards, 2 M. & Rob. 300. But the declarations of the witness himself as to the place of his residence, or hearsay statements of others on the subject, cannot be admitted to prove that he is abroad. Doe d. Beard v. Powell, 7 C. & P. 617

And even if the subscribing witness has become blind, the instrument cannot be read without calling him. Cronk v. Frith, 9 C. & P. 197; 2 M. & Rob. 262; but see Wood v. Drury, 1 Ld. Raym. 734: Pedler v. Paige, 1 M. & Rob. 258, contrà. In Page v. Mann, 1 M. & M. 79, Lord Tenterden held, that proof of the handwriting of the subscribing witness, who was dead, was sufficient, without any further proof of the identity of the parties than the identity of the name and description. See also Kay v. Brookman, Id. 286: Mitchell v. Johnson, Id. 176. But see Whitelocke v. Musgrove, 1 Cr. & M. 511: Jones v. Jones, 9 M. & W. 75. If there be two witnesses to the deed, and any of the circumstances just now mentioned apply only to one of them, the deed must of course be proved by the other. Also by 26 G. 3, c. 57, s. 38, bonds or other deeds or writings executed in the East Indies, and attested by any person or persons resident there may be given in evidence in Great Britain, upon proof by one or more credible witnesses of the handwriting of the parties and of the witnesses. Lastly, where the subscribing witness at the trial is unable, or refuses to disclose the truth, the deed may be proved by other witnesses. Goodtitle v. Clayton, 4 Burr. 2224: Talbot v. Hodson, 7 Taunt. 251.

Upon an indictment for forging a deed or other written instrument, all that it is incumbent upon the prosecutor to prove is, that the name subscribed to the deed is not the handwriting of the party whose signature it purports to be, which may be proved by the party whose name is forged.

To prove a will of lands, it was at common law only necessary to call one of the witnesses who attested it; Doe v. Smith, 1 Esp. 391; Dayrell v. Glascock, Skin. 413: Holdfast v. Dowsen, 1 W. Bl. 8; 2 Str. 1253: Lowe v. Jolliffe [1761] 1 W. Bl. 365; if the opposite party wish he might call the others. Bull. (N. P.) 264. The witness called, however, should be prepared to give parol evidence of every circumstance attending the attestation necessary to show that the will was duly executed and attested. Wills of lands over thirty years old require no proof; 1 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 86. And the ordinary mode of proving wills of lands is by production of the probate if granted since January 11, 1858 (see ante, p. 364).

All other writings, not under seal, are proved in the same manner as deeds; that is, by the subscribing witness, if there be one (see ante, p. 380); Wetherston v. Edgington, 2 Camp. 94; and see Stone v. Metcalf, 1 Stark. (N. P.) 53: Higgs v. Dixon, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 180; and if the instrument is one to the validity of which attestation is requisite, 28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, s. 7 (ante, p. 380); if not, then either by the subscribing witness or by proof of the party's handwriting. It is said also, that a writing of this kind, if ancient, shall be received in evidence without proof, in the same manner as an ancient deed. Tr. per Pais, 370; but see Fortesc. 43. If the original has been lost or destroyed, copies or other secondary evidence of their contents will be received; but evidence must be given at the same time of the genuineness of the original instrument. See Goodier v. Lake [1737] 1 Atk. 446; R. v. Pembridge, C. & Mar. 157.

Handwriting.]—The handwriting of a witness or party may be proved either by some person who has a knowledge of it from having seen him write, see Burr v. Harper, Holt (N. P.) 420; 17 R. R. 656; even once only, Willman v. Worrall, 8 C. & P. 380; Warren v. Anderson, 8 Scott, 384; or his surname only, Lewis v. Sapio, M. & M. 39; (dissenting from Powell v. Ford, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 164), or from having been in the habit of corresponding with him, Gould v. Jones, 1 W. Bl. 384; Harrington v. Fry, Ry. & M. 90; or of acting upon his correspondence with others, R. v. Slaney, 5 C. & P. 213; 38 R. R. 205: see Doe v. Suckermore, 5 A. & E. 703; 2 Nev. & Per. 16; or the handwriting of a party may be proved by his own admission. Waldridge v. Kennison, 1 Esp. 143. But the witness must at least be prepared to swear that he believes the writing to be that of the witness or party. Eagleton v. Kingston, 8 Ves. 438, 475, Eldon, L.C. see hereon 58 J. P. 813.

By s. 8 of "Denman's Act" (28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, which by s. 1 applies to all courts of criminal judicature), "comparison of a disputed writing with any writing proved to the satisfaction of the judge to be genuine, shall be permitted to be made by witnesses; and such writings, and the evidence of witnesses respecting the same, may be submitted to the court and jury as evidence of the genuineness or otherwise of the writing in dispute." (a) It seems that under this section the disputed writing and the writing whose genuineness is proved cannot be submitted to the jury in order that they may draw their own unaided conclusion from a comparison, but that they must be assisted by the evidence of an expert; R. v. Harvey, 11 Cox, 546, per Blackburn, J.; or of a person who in the ordinary course of business has come to know the handwriting in question. Fitzwalter Peerage claim, 10 Cl. & F. 193; 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 1227.

A man is an expert in handwriting who has an adequate knowledge and skill as to handwriting whether acquired in the way of his business or not. R. v. Silverlock [1894] 2 Q. B. 766 (C. C. R.). In R. v. Wilbain, 9 Cox, 448 (Ir.) and R. v. Harvey, ubi supra, a police officer was held not to be qualified as an expert.

It has long been established practice to admit the evidence of persons skilled in detecting forgeries to prove that a writing is in a feigned hand, though they never saw the party write. R. v. Cator, 4 Esp. 177; Goodtitle v. Bruham, 4 T. R. 497. There are decisions to the contrary; see Carey v. Pitt. Peake (Add. Cas.), 130; 4 R. R. 895; Batchelor v. Honeywood, 2 Esp. 714; Gurney v. Langlands, 5 B. & Ald. 330: R. v. Backler, 5 C. & P. 118. In Doe v. Suckermore, 5 A. & E. 703; 2 Nev. & Per. 16, the court was equally divided.

Stamps.]—The absence of a revenue stamp from a document is now no bar to its production in criminal proceedings. See the Stamp Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 39), s. 14, sub-s. 4, which enacts, that "save as aforesaid, an instrument executed in any part of the United Kingdom, or relating,

(a) Until this enactment, handwriting could not be proved by comparing it with other writings, although confessedly written by the person whose handwriting was in question. Garrels v. Alexander, 4 Esp. 37; R. v. Cator, 4 Esp. 117: Macferson v. Thoytes, Peake (3rd. ed.), 29: Stranger v. Searle, 1 Esp. 14: see Griffits v. Ivery, 11 A. & E. 322; 3 Per. & D. 179: Hughes v. Rogers, 8 M. & W. 123: Younger v. Honner, 2 M. & Rob. 536; 1 C. & K. 51. But on a question as to the genuineness of handwriting, the jury might compare the document with authentic writings of the party to whom it was ascribed, if such writings were in evidence for other purposes of the cause. Solita v. Yarrow, 1 M. & Rob. 133: R. v. Morgan, Id. 134, n.: Griffith v. Williams, 1 Cr. & J. 47: Waddington v. Cousins, 7 C. & P. 595: Doe v. Newton, 5 A. & E. 514; 1 Nev. & P. 1. In an action for a libel, which charged the plaintiff with having published a libel on the defendant, where the defendant justified on the ground that the plaintiff had published such libel, letters written by the plaintiff, not otherwise evidence in the cause, in which the defendant's name was spelt in a peculiar manner, were held to be admissible to show that the libel in question, which contained the defendant's name spelt with the same peculiarity, was also written by the plaintiff. Brookes v. Tichborne, 5 Ex. 929.

wheresoever executed, to any property situate, or to any matter or thing done or to be done, in any part of the United Kingdom, shall not, except in criminal proceedings, be given in evidence, or be available for any purpose whatever, unless it is duly stamped in accordance with the law in force at the time when it was first executed." This enactment replaces 17 & 18 Vict. c. 83, s. 27 (rep.), which got rid of the difficulties of proof in criminal cases caused by prior Stamp Acts. As to former law see Archbold, Cr. Pl. (22nd ed.), 354.

Bankers' books.]—The Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 11), was passed to obviate the inconvenience occasioned to bankers and their customers, by removal of ledgers and other account books from banks for the purpose of production in legal proceedings, and to facilitate proof of transactions recorded in such ledgers and account books. The material parts of the Act are as follows:—"Subject to the provisions of this Act, a copy of any entry in a banker's book shall in all legal proceedings be received as primâ facie evidence of such entry, and of the matters, transactions, and accounts therein recorded," s. 3. "A copy of an entry in a banker's book shall not be received in evidence under this Act unless it be first proved that the book was at the time of the making of the entry one of the ordinary books of the bank, and that the entry was made in the usual and ordinary course of business, and that the book is in the custody or control of the bank. Such proof may be given by a partner or officer of the bank, and may be given orally or by an affidavit sworn before any commissioner or person authorized to take affidavits," s. 4. "A copy of an entry in a banker's book shall not be received in evidence under this Act unless it be further proved that the copy has been examined with the original entry, and is correct. Such proof shall be given by some person who has examined the copy with the original entry, and may be given either orally or by an affidavit sworn before any commissioner or person authorized to take affidavits," s. 5. "A banker or officer of a bank shall not, in any legal proceeding to which the bank is not a party, be compellable to produce any banker's book the contents of which can be proved under this Act, or to appear as a witness to prove the matters, transactions, and accounts, therein recorded, unless by order of a judge made for special cause," s. 6. "On the application of any party to a legal proceeding a court or judge may order that such party be at liberty to inspect and take copies of any entries in a banker's book for any of the purposes of such proceedings. An order under this section may be made either with or without summoning the bank or any other party, and shall be served on the bank three clear days before the same is to be obeyed, unless the court or judge otherwise directs," s. 7. "The costs of any application to a court or judge under or for the purposes of this Act, and the costs of anything done or to be done under an order of a court or judge made under or for the purposes of this Act, shall be in the discretion of the court or judge, who may order the same or any part thereof to be paid to any party by the bank, where the same have been occasioned by any default or delay on the part of the bank. Any such order against a bank may be enforced as if the bank was a party to the proceeding," s. 8. "In this Act the expressions 'bank' and 'banker' mean any person, persons, partnership, or company carrying on the business of bankers, and having duly made a return to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, and also any savings bank certified under the Acts relating to savings banks, and also any post office savings bank.

"The fact of any such bank having duly made a return to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue may be proved in any legal proceeding by production of a copy of its return verified by the affidavit of a partner or officer of the bank, or by the production of a copy of a newspaper purporting to contain a copy of such return published by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue; the fact that any such savings bank is certified under the Acts relating to savings banks may be proved by an office or examined copy of its certificate; the fact that any such bank is a post office savings bank may be proved by a certificate purporting to be under the hand of her Majesty's Postmaster-General, or one of the secretaries of the Post Office."

"Expressions in this Act relating to 'bankers' books' include ledgers, day books, cash books, account books, and all other books used in the ordinary business of the bank," s. 9. "In this Act the expression 'legal proceeding' means any civil or criminal proceeding or inquiry in which evidence is or may be given, and includes an arbitration; the expression 'the court' means the court, judge, arbitrator, persons, or person, before whom a legal proceeding is held or taken; the expression 'a judge' means with respect to England a judge of the High Court of Justice, and with respect to Ireland a judge of the High Court of Justice in Ireland," s. 10. "Sunday, Christmas Day, Good Friday, and any bank holiday, shall be excluded from the computation of time under this Act," s. 11.

"The expressions 'bank' and 'bankers' in the Bankers' Books Evidence Act, 1879 (supra), shall include any company carrying on the business of bankers to which the provisions of the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1880, are applicable, and having duly furnished to the registrar of joint stock companies a list and summary with the addition specified by this Act, and the fact of such list and summary having been duly furnished may be proved in any legal proceedings by the certificate of the registrar or any assistant registrar for the time being of joint stock companies." 45 & 46 Vict. c. 72 (Revenue, etc., Act, 1882), s. 11, sub-s. 2.

Most of the decisions on these Acts are collected in the Annual Practice, 1905, notes to Order XXXVII., r. 7. It was held in R. v. Bradlaugh, 15 Cox, 222, n.; 47 J. P. 243; by Coleridge, L.C.J., that justices before whom a preliminary inquiry is proceeding are not a court which can make an order under the Act, and that the order must be made by the High Court or a judge thereof. In criminal proceedings the application in the High Court is made on the crown side, and the order drawn up in the Crown Office. It may be made ex parte.

Sect. 5.

PAROL EVIDENCE.

1. In what Cases receivable, p. 385.
2. Competency of Witnesses, p. 387.
3. Privilege, p. 397.
4. Credit of Witnesses, p. 403.
5. The number of Witnesses requisite, p. 408.
6. Process against Witnesses, p. 410.
7. Witnesses' Expenses, p. 414.
8. Examination of Witnesses, p. 414.

1. In what Cases receivable.

Parol evidence is admissible, (1) When it is the best evidence of the facts to be proved, e.g., where it is the evidence of a person who saw or heard them; (2) As secondary evidence of the contents of writings, in which case it is inferior to the evidence of the documents themselves. As a general rule, the contents of a written document which is capable of being produced, must be proved by the document itself, and not by parol evidence: Queen Caroline's Case, 2 B. & B. 284, 289; 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1348; subject to this exception, that what a party to the record says is primary evidence against him as an admission, though it relates to the contents of a written instrument, and though the contents be directly in issue in the cause. Slatterie v. Pooley, 6 M. & W. 664; 10 L. J. Ex. 8; 1 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 291. In conformity with this rule, it used to be held that secondary evidence could not be given of a document, which, if producible, could not be put in because it was unstamped. Rippiner v. Wright, 2 B. & Ald. 478: R. v. Castle Morton, 3 B. & Ald. 588: Doe v. Cartwright, Id. 326; Teal v. Autey, 2 B. & B. 99. But these cases are no longer of authority, so far as they depend on the absence of a stamp on a written agreement (see ante, pp. 383, 384). But where a parol contract is made subsequently to, and in substitution for, a former written contract, parol evidence may be given of the latter contract. White v. Parkin, 12 East, 578; 11 R. R. 488. As to the cases in which parol evidence may be received as secondary evidence of a written instrument, where the written instrument is proved to have been burnt, destroyed, or lost, or in the possession of the opposite party, see ante, p. 315.

There are no degrees of secondary evidence: and therefore a party who has laid the foundation for such evidence, may prove the contents of a deed by parol, although it appear that there is an attested copy in existence. Doe v. Ross, 7 M. & W. 102: Brown v. Woodman, 6 C. & P. 206: Hall v. Ball, 3 Scott (N. R.) 577. But it has been held, that where there is a copy of the original document, it cannot be proved by a copy of that copy. Liebman v. Pooley, 1 Stark. (N. P.) 167; 18 R. R. 756. Everingham v. Roundell, 2 M. & Rob. 138. It must not, however, be understood that parol evidence can never be received where written evidence of the same fact is attainable. For although parol evidence cannot be substituted for any instrument which the law requires to be in writing; 1 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), 282; nor for the written evidence of any contract which the parties have put in writing; Id. p. 284: nor for any writing, the existence or contents of which are disputed, and which is material to the issue between the parties, and is not merely the memorandum of some other fact, Id. p. 290; yet where the writing does not fall within either of these three classes, no reason exists for excluding parol evidence of its existence and contents, Id. p. 293. Thus, although a written receipt may have been given for the payment of money, proof of the fact of payment may be made by any person who witnessed it. Rambert v. Cohen, 4 Esp. 213; 6 R. R. 854. So the fact of marriage may be proved by the evidence of a person who was present at it, although the marriage may have been registered. R. v. Manwaring, Dears. & B. 132; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 10. And where three witnesses stated that a vessel was a British ship of Shields, and that she was sailing under the British flag, but no proof was given of the register of the vessel or of the ownership, it was held, that this was sufficient proof that the vessel was British. R. v. Seberg, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 264: 39 L. J. (M. C.) 133. And on an indictment for unlawful assembly, parol evidence of proclamations and inscriptions has been admitted without producing copies. R. v. Hunt, 1 St. Tr., N. S. 171: R. v. Fursey, 3 St. Tr., N. S. 543, 561: O'Connell v. R., 5 St. Tr., N. S. 1, 278.

As a general rule, parol evidence is not admissible as to anything not immediately within the knowledge of the witness; he must speak of facts which happened in his presence, or within his hearing. This rule excludes hearsay evidence, save in the cases mentioned, ante, pp. 317, 318. It also, as a general rule, excludes the expression of opinion or belief. But to this rule there is a necessary exception on questions of the identity of things or persons, or the genuineness of handwriting, where the witness is qualified to express a credible opinion or belief on the subject. R. v. Silverlock [1894] 2 Q. B. 766; 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 930, ante, p. 382. And in matters of science or trade, an expert, or person intimately acquainted with it may be called upon to give his opinion as to the probable result or consequence from certain facts already proved. As, for instance, if it were required to determine whether a man died of any particular disease, symptoms being proved, a physician may be called upon to give in evidence his opinion as to the disease of which the party died, as founded upon the symptoms so proved, although he have never seen the deceased. So, upon an indictment for murder, the deceased's wounds, etc., being described, a surgeon may be called upon to give in evidence his opinion whether the deceased died in consequence of his wounds, or from natural causes. Upon a question of insanity, a witness of medical skill may be asked whether such and such appearances, proved by other witnesses, are, in his judgment, symptoms of insanity; but he cannot be asked, if, from the testimony given, the act with which the prisoner is charged is, in his opinion, an act of insanity; which is the very point to be decided by the jury. R. v. Wright, R. & R. 456; 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 931–936; and see ante, p. 28. On an indictment for uttering a forged will, which it was suggested had been written over pencil-marks that had been rubbed out, it was held that the evidence of an engraver, who had examined the paper with a mirror and traced the pencil-marks, was admissible on the part of the prosecution. R. v. Williams, 8 C. & P. 434.

2. Competency of Witnesses.

Mode of ascertaining.]—It is the business of the judge to decide as to the competency of a witness. R. v. Whitehead, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 33; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 186; 1 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 25: which may be done by examining him on the voir dire, or by evidence aliunde. R. v. Wakefield, 2 Lewin, 279: M. & M. 197, n., Murray's Report. It was at one time held that the objection for incompetency must be made before the witness was sworn in chief; but it has been generally allowed to be made at any time during the trial. Stone v. Blackburn, 1 Esp. 37: Turner v. Pearte, 1 T. R. 717. It is, however, always advisable to make the objection before the witness has been examined in chief, and if he can be examined as to it, to examine him on the voir dire; and more recent cases appear to decide that the objection should, in strictness, be taken at that time; see Hartshorne v. Watson, 5 Bing. N. C. 477: Wollaston v. Hakewill, 3 Scott (N. R.) 593; unless the incompetency appears only in the course of his examination in chief. Yardley v. Arnold, 10 M. & W. 141: Jacobs v. Layborn, 11 M. & W. 685. And the opposite party cannot, after the witness has been sworn and examined, adduce other evidence to show his incompetency. Dewdney v. Palmer, 4 M. & W. 664. If the judge has admitted a witness as competent to give evidence, but upon proof of subsequent facts affecting the capacity of the witness, and upon observation of his subsequent demeanor, the judge changes his opinion as to his competency, the judge may stop the examination of the witness, strike his evidence out of his notes, and direct the jury to consider the case exclusively upon the evidence of the other witnesses. R. v. Whitehead, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 33; 35 L. J. (M. C.) 186.

What witnesses competent.]—Persons who by the common law were deemed to be incompetent as witnesses, and not allowed to give evidence upon a criminal prosecution, may be classed as follows: (1) those who do not appear to have sufficient discretion; (2) those who do not appear to have a right sense of the sanctity and moral obligation of an oath; (3) those whose crimes render them infamous; (4) those who are interested in the event of the suit. The 3rd and 4th disqualifications were removed by Lord Denman's Act, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85 (post, p. 390). The competence of husband and wife and of counsel and solicitors is considered, post, p. 397, tit. "Privilege."

1. Want of discretion.]—An idiot is not allowed to give evidence; Co. Litt. 6 b; 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 896; a lunatic during a lucid interval may. Id.: Com. Dig. Testm. (A.). When a lunatic is tendered as a witness, it is for the judge to ascertain whether he is of competent understanding to give evidence, and is aware of the nature and obligation of an oath; if satisfied that he is, the judge should allow him to be sworn and examined, leaving the jury to decide the worth of his testimony. R. v. Hill, 2 Den. 254; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 222. A person who is deaf and dumb is not incompetent if he can be made to understand the nature of an oath, and if intelligence can be conveyed to and received from him by means of signs; Ruston's Case, 1 Leach, 480: R. v. O'Brien, 1 Cox, 185 (Ir.), and may be examined through the medium of a sworn interpreter, who understands his signs (Id.). A dumb man, not deaf, is sworn in the usual way, and then the interpreter is sworn to interpret his signs. If a dumb witness can write he will be allowed to write down his evidence. See 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 897.

An infant of any age may be a witness in any criminal case, provided such infant appear sufficiently to understand the nature and moral obligation of an oath; for its competency not upon its age, but its understanding. R. v. Powell, 1 Leach, 110: R. v. Brasier, Id. 199 (1 East, P. C. 443): R. v. Williams, 7 C. & P. 320. See 2 Hale, 278, 284; Com. Dig., Testm. (A. 1): R. v. Travers, 2 Str. 700; 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), 896. The court has refused to postpone the trial of an indictment, in order that a child of six, who was a necessary witness for the prosecution, and who could not be examined from want of knowledge of the nature and obligation of an oath, might in the meantime be instructed therein. R. v. Nicholas, 2 C. & K. 246; 2 Cox, 136, Pollock, C.B. But in another case where an indictment for rape on a girl of ten was ignored because the girl did not understand the nature of an oath, an order was made to detain the accused in custody until the girl could be instructed. R. v. Baylis, 4 Cox, 23, Erle, J.: and the same course was followed in R. v. Cox, 62 J. P. 89. It is submitted (Taylor, Ev. vol. ii. (9th ed.), p. 898), that the matter is for the discretion of the judge in each case.

There are several statutes under which a court may receive the unsworn evidence of a child of tender years who is tendered as a witness, and who, in the opinion of the court, does not understand the nature of an oath, if the court is satisfied that the child is of sufficient intelligence to justify the reception of the evidence, and understands the duty of speaking the truth; but to justify a conviction such unsworn evidence must be corroborated by other material evidence. The Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Vict. c. 69), s. 4, permits such unsworn evidence upon the hearing of a charge of unlawfully and carnally knowing any girl under the age of thirteen years, or attempting to have unlawful carnal knowledge of any such girl. The Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904 (4 Edw. 7, c. 15), s. 15, makes the like provision as to proceedings for an offence under that Act, or for an offence specified in the schedule thereto, i.e., offences under ss. 27, 55, 56 of the Offences against the Person Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 100), and offences against a child under the age of sixteen years under ss. 5, 43, 52, 62, or s. 11 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885 (48 & 49 Vict. c. 69), and offences against the Dangerous Performances Acts, 1879 and 1897 (42 & 43 Vict. c. 34, and 60 & 61 Vict. c. 52), and any other offence involving bodily injury to a child under the age of sixteen. As to the last paragraph see R. v. Roberts, 18 Cox, 530: Lord Advocate v. Fraser, 3 Fraser (Justiciary). 67.

2. Want of religion.]—At common law, it is not necessary that a witness should be a Christian, or even believe in the Old Testament (as laid down in some of the older authorities; see Co. Litt. 6 b; Gilb. Ev. 142, 143). In order to render him competent to take an oath as a witness, it is sufficient if he believe in a God, in a future state of rewards and punishments, and in the moral obligation of the oath he is about to take. Omichund v. Barker, Willes, 538; 1 Atk. 21; 1 Wils. 84; Bull. (N. P.) 292: R. v. Taylor, Peake (3rd ed.), 14. Consequently it is permissible to accept the sworn evidence of Christians of all sects and denominations (R. v. Mildrone, 1 Leach, 412; 3 R. R. 708; Mee v. Reid, Peake (3rd ed.), 33; 3 R. R. 648: R. v. McCarther, Peake (3rd ed.), 211: R. v. Serva, 2 C. & K. 53); Jews (Gilb. Ev. 143; Gomez Serra v. Nunez, 2 Str. 821); Turks, Moors, and other Mussulmans (R. v. Morgan, 1 Leach, 54: see 2 Str. 1104); Hindoos or Gentoos (Omichund v. Barker, ubi supra); Chinese (R. v. Entrehman, C. & Mar. 248); and the like.

Until the passing of the Evidence Further Amendment Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 68, s. 4), a man wholly without religion was not a competent witness. Maden v. Catanach, 7 H. & N. 360: 31 L. J. Ex. 118. S. 4 was repealed by the Oaths Act, 1883 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 46), and s. 1 of that Act (post, pp. 407, 408) substituted. By s. 3 of the Act of 1888 (post, p. 406), where an oath has been duly administered and taken, the fact that the person taking it had no religious belief does not affect the validity of the oath. S. 1 (post, p. 407) does not provide for the case of a person called as a witness who does not object to be sworn, but who, although an adult and of sufficient intellect, has no belief in a future state of rewards and punishments, and no belief in a God, and it would seem that such a person might still be successfully objected to as a witness by the opposite party, although if he was actually sworn without objection, the oath would be valid under s. 3 (post, p. 406). The repealed s. 4 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 68, provided not merely for the case of the person called as a witness objecting to take the oath, but also for the case of his being objected to as incompetent to take an oath.

It was held under the law as it stood before these statutes that the circumstance that a principal witness, although an adult and of sufficient intellect, had no idea of a future state of rewards and punishments, was not a sufficient ground for discharging the jury, though it appeared as soon as the jury was charged, and before any evidence was given. R. v. Wade, 1 Mood. C. C. 86. But if an application for that purpose be made before the jury are sworn, the judges have power to postpone important trials, if they have reason to believe that an adult, who is a necessary witness for the prosecution, can, within a reasonable time, be rendered competent to testify. R. v. White, 1 Leach, 430, n. (a).

3. Infamy.]—Formerly persons who had been convicted of certain crimes which were regarded as infamous were incompetent as witnesses, unless they had been pardoned or had endured their punishment. This rule excluded the evidence of convicted accomplices. 2 Hawk, c. 46, s. 101.

It has been abolished by the Evidence Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, which enacts (s. 1) that "no person offered as a witness shall be excluded by reason of incapacity from crime or interest from giving evidence, either in person or by deposition, according to the practice of the court, on the trial of any issue joined, or of any matter or question, or on any inquiry arising in any suit, action or proceeding, civil or criminal, in any court, or before any judge, jury, sheriff, coroner, magistrate, officer, or person having, by law or by consent of parties, authority to hear, receive and examine evidence; but every person so offered may and shall be admitted to give evidence on oath, or solemn affirmation in those cases wherein affirmation is by law receivable, notwithstanding that such person may or shall have an interest in the matter in question, or in the event of the trial of any issue, matter, question, or inquiry, or of the suit, action, or proceeding in which he is offered as a witness, and notwithstanding that such person offered as a witness may have been previously convicted of any crime or offence." Notwithstanding this enactment, it has been held that a person actually under sentence of death, is civilly dead, and is therefore incapable of being a witness. R. v. Webb, 11 Cox, 133, Lush, J. But this decision was prior to the passing of the Forfeitures Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 23), and seems to be inconsistent with the provisions of that Act. See 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 877. The witness is liable to be questioned as to the fact of such conviction and to have it proved against him. (28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, ss. 1, 6, post, p. 404).

4. Interest.]—Until the Evidence Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, s. 1, supra), removed the incapacity, it was a general rule of evidence, not to admit the testimony of a witness who was necessarily to be a gainer or loser by the event of a cause, whether such advantage were direct and immediate, or consequential only.

Accomplices.]—Notwithstanding this general rule, an accomplice was always a competent witness before the grand jury and the petty jury, 2 Hawk. c. 46, ss. 94–100: R. v. Dodd, 1 Leach, 155; 2 East, P. C. 1003, and whether included in the indictment or not. R. v. Tinckler, 1 East, P. C. 354, 356, although his expectation of pardon depended upon the defendant's conviction. 1 Hale, 303; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 94. This expectation of pardon does not amount to a right, either as to the particular offence, question, or other offences committed. R. v. Rudd, 1 Cowp. 331; 1 Leach, 115: R. v. Lee, R. & R. 361: R. v. Brunton, R. & R. 454: R. v. Garside, 2 A. & E. 266. As to the circumstances under which an accomplice should be admitted as an approver, see R. v. Dunne, 5 Cox, 507 (Ir.): R. v. Gallagher, 15 Cox, 291. A police spy is not an accomplice. R. v. Mullins, 3 Cox, 526; 7 St. Tr., N. S. 1110. See Bush v. Ralling (1756), Say. 289: Mead v. Robinson, Willes, 422. If the accomplice is dead his depositions, if properly taken, may be read against the defendant. R. v. Westbeer, 1 Leach, 12. An accessory is a competent witness against his principal, and the principal against the accessory, R. v. Patram, 2 East, P. C. 782: R. v. Haslam, 1 Leach, 418; but the fact of the witness being an accomplice, accessory, or principal detracts very materially from his credit. 1 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), 632.

Corroboration.]—It is not a rule of law that the evidence of an accomplice must be corroborated. R. v. Atwood, 1 Leach, 464; re Meunier [1894] 2 Q. B. 415; 18 Cox, 15: R. v. Stubbs, Dears. 555; 23 L. J. (M. C.) 16 (C. C. R.). But it is the general practice to require corroboration: and for the prosecution in order to induce the jury to credit his testimony, to give other evidence confirmatory of, at least, some of the leading circumstances of his story, from which the jury may be able to presume that he has told the truth as to the rest: and for the judge to direct the jury not to act on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. R. v. Rudd, 1 Cowp. 331, 336: R. v. Wells, M. & M. 326: R. v. Jenkins, 1 Cox, 177, Alderson, B.: R. v. Andrews, Id. 183, Coleridge, J.: R. v. Hastings, 7 C. & P. 152: R. v. Stubbs, ubi supra: R. v. Boyes, 1 B. & S. 311; 30 L. J. (M. C.) 301. Re Meunier, ubi supra. If, upon an indictment against several, the accomplice be confirmed in the testimony he gives against some of the prisoners, but not as to the others, this has been held sufficient confirmation to warrant the conviction of all. R. v. Dawber, 3 Stark. (N. P.) 34, and n.: but see R. v. Stubbs, ubi supra. The enforcement of the rule varies in strictness according to the nature of the offence and the degree of complicity of the accomplice. R. v. Boyes, ubi supra; and in the case of misdemeanors it has been often relaxed. R. v. Jones, 2 Camp. 131, 132; 11 R. R. 680: R. v. Hastings, 7 C. & P. 152: R. v. Avery, 1 Cox, 206, Erle, J. Even in a case of manslaughter arising out of a prize-fight, the persons present aiding and abetting are not regarded as accomplices needing corroboration. R. v. Hargrave, 5 C. & P. 170: R. v. Young, 10 Cox, 371: and cf. R. v. Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534; 33 L. J. (M. C.) 177. It has been said that if an accomplice be confirmed as to the particulars of the story, he does not require confirmation as to the persons charged. R. v. Birkett, R. & R. 251; but this doctrine has been rejected in later cases; inasmuch as the confirmation as to the circumstances proves only that the accomplice was participant in the felony, not that the particular party charged was his confederate. R. v. Webb, 6 C. & P. 595: R. v. Wilkes, 7 C. & P. 272: R. v. Farler, 8 C. & P. 106: R. v. Dyke, Id. 261: R. v. Jellyman, Id. 604: R. v. Birkett, Id. 732: R. v. Stubbs, ubi supra. And where, upon an indictment against principals and accessories, the case against the principal was proved by an accomplice, who was confirmed as to the accessories, but not as to the principal, the jury were directed to acquit the prisoners. R. v. Wells, M. & M., 326: R. v. Moores, 7 C. & P. 270. A prisoner as a matter of prudence ought not to be convicted upon the evidence of any number of accomplices, unconfirmed by other testimony. R. v. Noakes, 5 C. & P. 326. Nor is the testimony of the wife of an accomplice such evidence as a jury ought to rely upon as confirmation of his statement. R. v. Neal, 7 C. & P. 168. And a prisoner, who employed another person to harbour a principal felon, has been convicted on the uncorroborated testimony of the person who actually harboured him. R. v. Jarvis, 2 M. & Rob. 40. Corroboration is not required as to every particular. R. v. Gallagher, 15 Cox, 291 (Ir.). Where a woman was accused of administering a noxious drug with a view to cause miscarriage, evidence of the father of the woman to whom it was administered, that he had accused the prisoner of administering it, and that she did not deny it, was held corroboration. R. v. Cramp, 14 Cox, 390, Denman, J. Until 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, s. 1) a convicted or attainted accomplice could not testify. (See ante, p. 390.) Where it is proposed to call an accomplice for the crown, it is the practice: (A) not to include him in the indictment; or (B) to take his plea of guilty; Winsor v. R., L. R. 1 Q. B. 289, 390; or before calling him either (C) to offer no evidence and permit his acquittal: R. v. Owen, 9 C. & P. 83; or (D) to enter a nolle prosequi: R. v. Fergus O'Connor, 4 St. Tr., N. S. 935. As we have already seen, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, s. 1 (ante, p. 390), renders persons competent as witnesses, notwithstanding that they may have an interest in the matter in question, or in the event of the trial of any issue, matter, question, or inquiry, or of the suit, action, or proceeding, whether civil or criminal, in which they may be offered as witnesses; subject, however, to certain exceptions, which will be presently stated.

Parties to the suit.]—In civil actions, until the Evidence Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 99), neither party to a suit was allowed to give evidence for or obliged to give evidence against himself. The rule as to the competence of parties to give evidence was never properly applicable to criminal proceedings.

Prosecutor.]—The indictment being at the suit of the Crown, the private prosecutor was always considered a competent witness.

Defendant.]—The defendant at common law was not a competent or compellable witness at any stage of the proceedings, on the ground of the maxim nemo tenetur seipsum prodere, which protected both the defendant and all witnesses in the case from liability to answer incriminating questions (see post, p. 399), and if the defendant were examined on oath any conviction would be bad. R. v. Sullivan, Ir. Rep., 8 C. L. 404. Nor was he bound to answer questions put to him at the preliminary inquiry (a) or even when articles of the peace were sworn against him. Lort v. Hutton, 45 L. J. (M. C.) 95. On this last point the law has been altered as to summary proceedings by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, s. 25.

The position of the defendant has been gradually changed by a series of statutory provisions (b) culminating in the Evidence Act, 1877, and the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, and the present law will be best shown by printing and annotating these two statutes.

40 & 41 Vict. c. 14 (Evidence Act, 1877), s. 1.]—"On the trial of any indictment or other proceeding for the non-repair of any public highway or bridge, or for a nuisance to any public highway, river, or bridge, and of any other indictment or proceeding instituted for the purpose of trying or enforcing a civil right only, every defendant to such indictment or proceeding, and the wife or husband of any such defendant, shall be admissible witnesses and compellable to give evidence." [These proceedings, even before the passing of this Act, had been regarded as in substance of a civil nature. R. v. Stephens, L. R., 1 Q. B. 702; 35 L. J. Q. B. 251.]

61 & 62 Vict. c. 36 (Criminal Evidence Act, 1898), s. 1. Defendant and husband or wife of defendant competent witnesses for the defence.]—"Every

(a) This is often inaptly called the "examination" of the prisoner. The expression is apt to describe the inquisitorial procedure by interrogating the accused derived from the Roman law and in use on the Continent and in the Star Chamber (Baildon, Star Chamber Reports).

(b) For an enumeration of these statutes, see Official Index to the Statutes (ed. 1904), tit. "Witness," 2 (a). Many of the statutes apply to Ireland, and as to that country are not affected by the Act of 1898. All of them except the Act of 1877 appear, as to the evidence of the defendant, to be superseded by the Act of 1898. Charnock v. Merchant [1900] 1 Q. B. 474; 69 L. J. Q. B. 221; 19 Cox, 443. And as to the evidence of the husband or wife of the defendant, all of them appear to be impliedly repealed as to England and Scotland by that Act, except the Act of 1877 and the enactments scheduled to the Act of 1898 (post, p. 397), and the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904 (4 Edw. 7, c. 15) (see post, p. 398). Such of the enactments as come within the scope of this work are printed post, under the appropriate titles.

person charged with an offence, and the wife or husband, as the case may be, of the person so charged, shall be a competent witness for the defence at every stage of the proceedings, whether the person so charged is charged solely or jointly with any other person." (a) ["Competent witness."—This provision appears to supersede all prior enactments, which rendered the defendant a competent witness, except the Evidence Act, 1877 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 14, supra, p. 392). See Charnock v. Merchant [1900] 1 Q. B. 474; 69 L. J. Q. B. 221; 19 Cox, 443; and s. 6 of the Act, post, p. 396.

As to its effect on enactments making the defendant's husband or wife a competent witness, see s. 6, post, p. 396. The Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904 (4 Edw. 7, c. 15), s. 12, makes the defendant a competent but not compellable witness. It is submitted that the procedure under that Act is regulated by the Act of 1898. See Charnock v. Merchant, ubi supra.

"For the defence."—These words do not seem to limit a defendant to giving evidence on his own behalf if he is indicted and tried "jointly" with others. See post, p. 395. And sub-s. f. (iii.), post, p. 395, seems to contemplate the case of a defendant giving evidence against a co-defendant.

"Every stage of the proceedings."—These words do not include proceedings before the grand jury, but apply to proceedings at the preliminary inquiry and before the petty jury. R. v. Rhodes [1899] 1 Q. B. 77; 68 L. J. Q. B. 83; 19 Cox, 182: R. v. Saunders, 63 J. P. 24. In R. v. Hodgkinson, 64 J. P. 808, Darling, J., held that a defendant was not entitled, after pleading guilty, to give evidence on oath in mitigation of punishment. Evidence given by the defendant at the preliminary inquiry is admissible against him at the trial, even if he is not there called as a witness. R. v. Bird, 19 Cox, 180; 62 J. P. 760 (C. C. R.). In R. v. Humphries, 67 J. P. Rep., 396, Wills, J., intimated that if the defendant did not exercise at the preliminary inquiry his right to give evidence, and was content there to reserve his defence, the value of his evidence at the trial was thereby lessened. This view has been indorsed by many judges: and where the defence is reserved it will be difficult to get a certificate for legal aid under the Poor Prisoners Defence Act, 1903 (ante, p. 187).

"Solely or jointly."—In 1871 it was decided that where two persons were indicted and tried together, one could not be called as a witness for the other. R. v. Payne, L. R., 1 C. C. R. 349: 41 L. J. (M. C.) 65. The common law rule as laid down in this case is not directly affected by the Act of 1898. See R. v. Sheriff, Lewes Assizes, November, 1900; 35 L. J. Newsp. 664, Bruce, J. But as each defendant is entitled to be called "for the defence," and not merely "on his own behalf," he seems to be free to give evidence which may exculpate or inculpate a co-defendant. See R. v. Hadwen [1902] 1 K. B. 882; 71 L. J. K. B. 581; 20 Cox, 206; 66 J. P. 456 (C. C. R.).

Where it appears to the court that the prosecutor has included one of the defendants in the indictment simply to shut him out from giving evidence for a co-defendant, and that there is no evidence affecting the defendant so unjustly joined, the court may direct his immediate acquittal. Davis v. Living, Holt, (N. P.) 275; and see Gilb. Ev. 132, 134: Buller (N. P.) 285: R. v. Frazer,

(a) The Act of 1898 does not affect the former law as to calling one defendant as a witness against a co-defendant; but if a defendant called on his own behalf by his evidence inculpates a co-defendant, he is subject to cross-examination on behalf of the defendant so inculpated. R. v. Hadwen, ubi supra.

In the case of an indictment against two or more defendants, one defendant may give evidence for the crown against a co-defendant in the following cases:—

1. Where a nolle prosequi has been entered. R. v. Sherman, Case (K. B.) temp. Hardw. 303.

(1797), McNally Ev. 56 (Ir.): R. v. O'Donnell, 7 Cox, 337 (C. C. R. Ir.): R. v. Owen, 9 C. & P. 83. An alternative course in such a case is to direct that the defendants be separately tried: in which case the defendant not under trial is a competent witness for the defendant who is under trial. R. v. Payne (ubi supra). Such an order was made in R. v. Bradlaugh, 15 Cox, 217: and see R. v. Archer, 3 Cox, 228, Maule, J.]

"Provided as follows:—

(a) Defendant not compellable witness.]—"A person so charged shall not be called as a witness in pursuance of this Act except upon his own application."

[This appears to mean on the application of the defendant himself or by his counsel with his consent. The defendant ought to be informed of his right to give evidence, but failure to do so does not invalidate the trial. R. v. Saunders [1899] 63 J. P. 24.]

(b) Comment on failure to give evidence.]—"The failure of any person charged with an offence, or of the wife or husband, as the case may be, of the person so charged, to give evidence shall not be made the subject of any comment by the prosecution."

[Though counsel may not comment on failure by the defendant to give evidence, the judge may comment if in his discretion he thinks it proper to do so. R. v. Rhodes [1899] 1 Q. B. 77, 83 (C. C. R.), and cf. Kops v. R. [1894] App. Cas. 650. The fact that the defendant did not give evidence before the justices may be matter for unfavourable comment. R. v. Humphries, ante, p. 393. And the jury are entitled to draw inferences unfavourable to the defendant where he is not called to establish an innocent explanation of facts proved by the prosecution, which without such explanation tell for his guilt. R. v. Corrie [1904] 68 J. P. Rep. 294 (C. C. R.).]

(c) Evidence of wife or husband of accused.]—"The wife or husband of the person charged shall not, save as in this Act mentioned, be called as a witness in pursuance of this Act except upon the application of the person so charged." See post, pp. 396, 397.

(d) Communication between spouses privileged.]—"Nothing in this Act shall make a husband compellable to disclose any communication made to him by his wife during the marriage, or a wife compellable to disclose any communication made to her by her husband during the marriage."

[As to the effect of clause (d) see post, pp. 396, 397.]

(e) Incriminating questions.]—"A person charged and being a witness in pursuance of this Act may be asked any question in cross-examination, notwithstanding that it would tend to criminate him as to the offence charged."

2. Where a verdict of acquittal has been given. R. v. Rowland, Ry. & M. 401.

3. Where the defendant in question has pleaded guilty. R. v. George, C. & Mar. 111: R. v. Hinks, 1 Den. 84; 2 C. & K. 462: R. v. Drury, 3 C. & K. 190, Rolfe, B.: R. v. King, 1 Cox, 282, Platt, B.: R. v. Williams, 1 Cox, 289: R. v. Arundel, 4 Cox, 260: R. v. Gallagher, 13 Cox, 61 (C. C. R.).

4. Where, though jointly indicted, he is not being tried with the defendant against whom he gives evidence. Winsor v. R., L. R. 1 Q. B. 390; 35 L. J. M. 161.

In all these cases a defendant is also a competent witness for a co-defendant. It is said that a defendant who has pleaded guilty should be sentenced before being called in favour of a co-defendant: R. v. Jackson, 6 Cox, 525, Erle, J.; and if he is called for the crown, his evidence should be corroborated. R. v. Sparks, 1 F. & F. 388; and see ante, pp. 390, 391.

[See R. v. Senior [1899] 34 L. J. Newsp. 100; Jelf, Cr. Ev. 68, and post, p. 399.]

(f) Questions as to other offences or character.]—"A person charged and called as a witness in pursuance of this Act shall not be asked, and if asked shall not be required to answer, any question tending to show that he has committed or been convicted of or been charged with any offence other than that wherewith he is then charged, or is of bad character, unless—

"(i) the proof that he has committed or been convicted of such other offence is admissible evidence to show that he is guilty of the offence wherewith he is then charged; or

"(ii) he has personally or by his advocate asked questions of the witnesses for the prosecution with a view to establish his own good character, or has given evidence of his good character, or the nature or conduct of the defence is such as to involve imputations on the character of the prosecutor or the witnesses for the prosecution [see R. v. Bridgwater, 21 Times L. R. 69, C. C. R.] or

"(iii) he has given evidence against any other person charged with the same offence."

[(i) As to cases in which evidence of other offences is admissible, see ante, pp. 305–313, and under the title "Receiving."

(ii) As to proving previous convictions where evidence of good character has been given on behalf of the accused, see ante, p. 313. It has been ruled that cross-examination of the prosecutrix on a charge of rape, with a view to prove consent, involves an imputation on her character within the second exception. R. v. Fisher, Day, J., 34 L. J. Newsp. 100: Jelf on Criminal Evidence, 70. On an indictment for murder by stabbing, a suggestion on behalf of the defence that a witness for the crown committed the offence charged is such an imputation. R. v. Marshall, 63 J. P. 36, Darling, J., and see R. v. Holmes, Jelf, Criminal Evidence, 69. But merely to deny in strong terms a statement made by the prosecutor is not necessarily an imputation on the character of the prosecutor or her witnesses. R. v. Rouse [1904] 1 K. B. 184; 68 J. P. Rep. 14 (C. C. R.). In R. v. ——, Swansea Summer Assizes [1898] 33 L. J. Newsp. 563, Day, J., under this clause allowed cross-examination as to previous acquittals, presumably as falling within the word "charged."

(iii) Where one of the two defendants jointly indicted gives evidence on his own behalf, and in so doing incriminates the other defendant, counsel for the latter is entitled to cross-examine. R. v. Hudwen [1902] 1 K. B. 882: 71 L. J. K. B. 581; 20 Cox, 206; 66 J. P. 456 (C. C. R.)].

(g) Evidence from witness box.]—"Every person called as a witness in pursuance of this Act shall, unless otherwise ordered by the court, give his evidence from the witness box or other place from which the other witnesses gave their evidence."

[The defendant is ordered to give evidence from the dock where there is reason to believe that he is likely to be violent.]

(h) Unsworn statements before justices and court of trial.]—"Nothing in this Act shall affect the provisions of section 18 of the Indictable Offences Act, 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 42), or any right of the person charged to make a statement without being sworn."

[As to the provisions of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 18, ante, p. 325; as to the right to make unsworn statements at the trial, see p. 209.]

Sect. 2.—Time for calling defendant.]—"Where the only witness to the facts of the case called by the defence is the person charged, he shall be called as a witness immediately after the close of the evidence for the prosecution."

["After the close of the evidence, etc.," means before counsel for the prosecution sums up his case, and without prejudicing his right to do so. R. v. Rhodes [1899] 1 Q. B. 77, 83. The section does not affect the right of the defendant to call witnesses to character, but seems to require that the defendant be first called. As to whether he must be called before or after his counsel's speech, see ante, p. 211. Where the defendant calls witnesses to fact, the order in which he and these witnesses should be called appears to be in the discretion of his counsel. See the cases noted in Stone's Justices' Manual (36*th ed.*), 227, note (g).]

Sect. 3.—Right of reply.]—"In cases where the right of reply depends upon the question whether evidence has been called for the defence, the fact that the person charged has been called as a witness shall not of itself confer on the prosecution the right of reply."

[See R. v. Gardner [1899] 1 Q. B. 150 (C. C. R.) and ante, pp. 208, 211. In R. v. Paget, 64 J. P. 281, Fulton, Recorder, held that where one defendant gave evidence hostile to a co-defendant, cross-examination on behalf of the latter did not give the prosecution a right to reply.]

Sect. 4.—Calling of wife or husband in certain cases.]—"(1) The wife or husband of a person charged with an offence under any enactment mentioned in the schedule of this Act may be called as a witness either for the prosecution or defence and without the consent of the person charged.

"(2) Nothing in this Act shall affect a case where the wife or husband of a person charged with an offence may at common law be called as a witness without the consent of that person.

[As to the effect of this section see post, p. 397.]

Sect. 5.—Application of the Act to Scotland.]

Sect. 6.—Provision as to previous Acts.]—"(1) This Act shall apply to all criminal proceedings, notwithstanding any enactment in force at the commencement of this Act, except that nothing in this Act shall affect the Evidence Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 14, ante, p. 392).

"(2) But this Act shall not apply to proceedings in courts martial unless so applied—

"(a) As to courts martial under the Naval Discipline Act (29 & 30 Vict. c. 109), by general orders made in pursuance of section 65 of that Act; and

"(b) As to courts martial under the Army Act (44 & 45 Vict. c. 58), by rules made in pursuance of section 70 of that Act.

[The Act has been applied to courts martial in the navy and army. As to the Army, see Official Manual of Military Law (1903), p. 641. As to the navy, see King's Regulations, June 7, 1899, arts. 626–665.]

Sect. 7.—Extent, commencement, and short title.]—"(1) This Act shall not extend to Ireland.

"(2) This Act shall come into operation on the expiration of two months from the passing thereof (Aug. 12, 1898).

(3) This Act may be cited as the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898.

3. Privilege.

Doctor and patient.]—There is no privilege entitling a medical practitioner to refuse to give in evidence statements made to him by a patient, however confidential the communication may be. Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 753; 2 R. R. 515; Duchess of Kingston's case, 20 St. Tr. 355, 572; 2 Smith, L.C. (11th ed.), 731.

Husband and wife.]—Communications between husband and wife during the marriage are privileged from disclosure in evidence. This right is preserved as to civil proceedings by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 88, s. 3; and as to criminal cases by 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 1 (d) (ante, p. 394).

That statute has to a considerable extent altered the law as to evidence by the husband or wife of an accused person. And the present law appears to be as follows:—

1. The husband or wife of the prosecutor has always been a competent witness either for the crown or for the defence. 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 889, citing R. v. Houlton, Jebb (C.C. Ir.), 24.

2. The husband or wife of a defendant to an indictment within the Evidence Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 14) is a competent and compellable witness for the crown or the defence (see ante, p. 392).

3. The husband or wife of a defendant is a competent witness for the defence in all criminal cases whether the accused is charged solely or jointly. 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 1, ante, p. 393. Except in the cases referred to in s. 6 (1), and in the schedule to that Act (ante, p. 397), and the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904 (4 Edw. 7, c. 15), s. 12, the husband or wife can be called only on the application of such defendant (s. 1 (c), ante, p. 394).

4. At common law, as a general rule, the husband or wife of a defendant is not a competent witness for the crown against such defendant: 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 70: R. v. Cliviger, 2 T. R. 263: Davis v. Dinwoody, 4 T. R. 678. This rule is subject to the following exceptions:—

(a) In cases of high treason. But this is very doubtful. R. v. Griggs, Sir T. Raym. 1; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 82; 1 Hale, 48, 301; 1 Co. Litt. 6 b.

(b) When husband is indicted for personal injury to the wife, or vice versâ: 2 Hawk. c. 46, ss. 77, 80, 81; 1 Hale, 301: R. v. Azire, 1 Str. 633: R. v. Jagger, 1 East, P. C. 455; 3 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.), 666: R. v. Pearce, 9 C. & P. 667: R. v. Serjeant, Ry. & M. 352: R. v. Jellyman, 8 C. & P. 604. In Lord Audley's case, 3 St. Tr. 401, a wife was held a competent witness to prove that her husband was present and aided and abetted another in committing a rape on her. And on an indictment of a husband for the murder of his wife, the dying declarations of the wife have been admitted. R. v. Woodcock, 2 Leach, 500; 1 East, P. C. 354, 356: R. v. Johns, 1 East, P. C. 357; 2 Leach, 504, n.

(c) On an indictment for forcible abduction and marriage the wife is a competent witness against the husband even though the marriage is valid, or if voidable has been annulled. 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 78: R. v. Wakefield, 2 Lewin, 279: Murray's Report, 257; M. & M. 197, n.: R. v. Perry, 3 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.), 666. This rule is based by some on the view that the marriage, being under coercion, is null. 1 Hale, 301: Buller (N. P.), 286; and see Scott v. Sebright, 12 P. D. 21: Cooper v. Crane [1891] Prob. 369; by others on the view that the force used is a personal wrong to the wife. 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 893.

(d) On an indictment for bigamy the second wife is a competent witness on the first marriage being proved. 1 Hale, 693: R. v. Peat, 2 Lewin, 288; 3 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.), 715, n. But this is only an apparent exception, and depends on the fact that the second marriage is void: for the common law rule only applies where there is a valid marriage. R. v. Young, 2 Cox, 291, Erle, J.; 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), 889; and see R. v. Fuzil Deen, 6 Queensland L. J. 302.

All these common law exceptions are preserved by s. 6 (2) of the Act of 1898, and by s. 6 (1) the husband or wife of a defendant is entitled to give evidence either for the crown or for the defence without the consent of such defendant in the case of proceedings under any of the enactments scheduled to that Act (see ante, p. 397); and under the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904 (4 Edw. 7. c. 15, s. 12). Under the last-mentioned enactment the husband or wife, though a competent, is not a compellable witness. On an indictment under 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69, it has been ruled by Wills, J., in R. v. Ellis, 34 L. J. Newsp. 646, that the husband or wife is compellable, the view of the learned judge apparently being that s. 20 of the Act was pro tanto repealed by the Act of 1898. See also

R. v. Brazil, 63 J. P. 138: 34 L. J. Newsp. 132: R. v. Dunning, 34 L. J. Newsp. 33. Charnock v. Merchant [1900] 1 Q. B. 474, ante, p. 393, does not appear to affect the construction of s. 4 of the Act of 1898.

5. Where two or more persons are indicted and tried jointly, the wives or husbands of such persons were at common law not competent witnesses either for or against their own spouses or their co-defendants. R. v. Thompson, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 377: 41 L. J. (M. C.) 112. That case is not directly overruled by the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898. The husband or wife cannot be called for the crown against any of the co-defendants except in cases within the schedule to the Act of 1898 (ante, p. 397), and the common law exceptions above stated. And the husband or wife cannot be called for the defence save as in the statute provided, except on the application of her own husband or his own wife. But if called it is submitted that the witness is free to give evidence for or against any of the defendants subject to cross-examination by the crown or the defendant inculpated. R. v. Hadwen (ante, p. 395).

The rules on this subject are substantially the same as in the case of evidence by co-defendants for or against each other. Thus a wife may give evidence for or against the co-defendants if her husband has been convicted (R. v. Williams, 8 C. & P. 284) or has pleaded guilty (R. v. Thompson, 3 F. & F. 824) or is not being tried with the persons indicted jointly with him. 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 888; and see ante, p. 393 n.

Incriminating questions.]—A witness other than the defendant is privileged to refuse to answer any question which might tend to criminate him, i.e. to expose him to any punishment, penalty, or forfeiture. After some former difference of opinion among the judges it is now settled that for the purpose of impeaching the credit of a witness he may always be asked on cross-examination questions with regard to alleged crimes or other improper conduct on his part. 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 947; 3 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.) 612, and the cases there cited; but the witness cannot be compelled to answer such questions where the answers would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge, or to a penalty or forfeiture of any nature. R. v. Slaney, 5 C. & P. 213; 38 R. R. 205: R. v. Garbett, 1 Den. 236; 2 C. & K. 474: Mexborough (Earl) v. Whitwood [1897] 2 Q. B. 111: Allhusen v. Labouchere, 3 Q. B. D. 654; 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 960, and cases there cited; 3 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.), 613 et seq. And the Evidence Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 99), expressly provides (s. 3) that nothing in that Act contained shall render any person compellable to answer any question tending to criminate himself or herself. The objection is for the witness to take, and he is presumed to know the law sufficiently to enable him to take it. R. v. Coote, L. R. 4 P. C. 599; 42 L. J. (P. C.) 45. Counsel for the opposite side cannot argue the question; R. v. Adey, 1 M. & Rob. 94: Thomas v. Newton, M. & M. 48, n.; and if he answers without objection, his answer is admissible on a charge as to the offence admitted. R. v. Sloggett, Dears. 656; 25 L. J. (M. C.) 93. But the witness may claim the protection of the court at any stage of the inquiry; although he may already have answered without objection some questions tending to criminate him. R. v. Garbett, 2 C. & K. 474. The witness is not himself the sole judge whether his evidence will bring him into danger; the court must be satisfied, from the circumstances of the case and the nature of the evidence which the witness is called upon to give, whether there really is reasonable ground to apprehend danger to him from his being compelled to answer. Ex parte Reynolds, 20 Ch. D. 294 (C. A.): Osborn v. London Dock Co., 10 Ex. 698; 24 L. J. (Ex.) 140: Sidebottom v. Adkins, 27 L. J. (Ch.) 152: R. v. Boyes, 1 B. & S. 311; 30 L. J. (Q. B.)

301; Ex parte Fernandez, 10 C. B. (N. S.) 3, 39, 40; 30 L. J. (C. P.) 321; Spokes v. Grosvenor Hotel Co. [1897] 2 Q. B. 124. But if it is once made to appear that the witness is in danger, great latitude should be allowed to him in judging for himself of the effect of any particular question. Subject, however, to that reservation, the judge is bound to insist on the witness answering, unless he is satisfied that the answer will tend to place him in peril. Ex parte Reynolds, ubi supra. The privilege of refusing to answer questions on the ground that the answers may tend to criminate him is that of the witness alone, and neither party to the suit can take any advantage therefrom. Boyle v. Wiseman, 10 Ex. 647; 24 L. J. (Ex.) 160: R. v. Kinglake, 11 Cox, 499; 18 W. R. 805. Therefore, where a witness, called on the part of the crown to prove bribery against the defendant, refused to give evidence on the ground that his evidence would tend to criminate himself, but on the objection being overruled by the judge, gave his evidence, the court of Queen's Bench held, that the defendant could not object that such evidence had been improperly received. R. v. Kinglake, ubi supra.

Where a witness, being interrogated as to his conduct on a particular occasion, refuses to answer on the ground that his evidence may render him liable to prosecution, the production to him of a pardon under the great seal for all offences committed by him on the occasion referred to takes away his privilege, and makes him compellable to answer. Thus, on the trial of an information filed by the attorney-general, by direction of the House of Commons, against A. for bribery at a parliamentary election, B., a witness for the crown, on being asked whether he had not received money for his vote, refused to answer the question. Counsel for the crown then produced and tendered to him a pardon under the great seal for all offences which he might have committed at or in relation to such election. The court held that after tender of the pardon the witness was bound to answer all questions relating to what he did at the election; and overruled a further objection on his part that he was still liable to impeachment by parliament, from which the pardon would have been no protection (see 12 & 13 W. 3, c. 2, s. 3), holding that this possibility was too remote and improbable a contingency to affect the case, or to give the witness any privilege. R. v. Boyes, 1 B. & S. 311; 30 L. J. (Q. B.) 301; 2 F. & F. 157. See R. v. Reading, 7 St. Tr. 259, 296: R. v. Kinglake, ubi supra.

The rule against incriminating questions does not apply to a defendant who is called as a witness on his own behalf under the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, so far as relates to the offence then charged against him; see s. 1 (e) ante, p. 394. But a defendant when so called may not be asked and shall not be required to answer as to having committed or having been charged with or convicted of any offence not charged in the indictment, except in the cases provided by s. 1 (f) of the Act (ante, p. 395).

Judges and jurors.]—Hawkins (bk. 2, c. 46, s. 83) says that it is no exception against a person as a witness that he is one of the judges or jurors who are to try the case. But the functions of judge and juror would now be regarded as wholly incompatible with that of a witness. A grand juror is debarred by his oath and privileged from giving evidence on matters which occurred in proceedings before the grand jury (see ante, p. 103, and 1 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 614). The same rule appears to apply to petty jurors, Id., p. 616.

Lawyer and client.]—"For the perfect administration of justice, and for the protection of the confidence which exists between a solicitor and his client, it has been established as a principle of public policy that those confidential communications shall not be subject to production. But to that of course this limitation has been put, and justly put, that no court can be called upon to protect communications which are in themselves part of a criminal or unlawful proceeding." Bullivant v. Att.-Gen. for Victoria [1901] App. Cas. 196, 200, Halsbury, L.C. (The earlier authorities are collected in Archbold Cr. Pl. (22nd ed.), p. 369, and the authorities as to civil cases in the Annual Practice (1905), p. 388.) This privilege, therefore, does not extend to communications made to a solicitor by his client before the crime for the purpose of being guided or helped in the commission of it. R. v. Cox and Railton, 14 Q. B. D. 153; 54 L. J. (M. C.) 41: R. v. Jones, 1 Den. 166: R. v. Farley, id. 197; 2 C. & K. 313; 2 Cox, 82: R. v. Hayward, 2 C. & K. 234; 2 Cox, 23: and cf. Williams v. Quebrada Rail., etc., Co. [1895] 2 Ch. 751. In R. v. Haydn [1825] 2 Fox & Sm. 379 (Ir.), on an indictment for libel, a witness for the Crown testified that the defendant consulted him about certain MS., and asked whether it was safe to publish it. Bushe, C.J., ruled that the communication was privileged, and that the person asking advice must be considered as seeking how to avoid and not how to commit a crime. In Bullivant v. Att.-Gen. for Victoria, ubi supra, it was held that there must be some proof, or at least definite allegation, of fraud or illegality to take away the privilege. The privilege is strictly confined to counsel, and to solicitors and their clerks and agents, including interpreters between them and their clients. Parkins v. Hawkshaw, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 239; 19 R. R. 711: Taylor v. Forster, 2 C. & P. 195: Foote v. Hayne, Ry. & M. 165: du Barre v. Livette, Peake (3rd ed.) 108; 3 R. R. 655. It does not extend to stewards or other agents of the party; Vaillant v. Dodemead, 2 Atk. 524: Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 753; 2 R. R. 715. The privilege depends on the existence of the relation of lawyer and client at the time when the lawyer acquired the information, not on its existence at the time when the lawyer is called on to give evidence. Minet v. Morgan, L. R. 8 Ch. App. 361: R. v. Brewer, 6 C. & P. 363: R. v. Farley, 1 Den. 197; 2 C. & K. 313; 2 Cox, 82: R. v. Hankins, 2 C. & K. 823; 3 Cox, 434. And information acquired by a solicitor to a bank has been held not to be rendered privileged by his subsequent retainer by directors of the bank for their defence. R. v. Brown, 7 Cox, 442; S. C., sub nom., R. v. Esdaile, 1 F. & F. 213. And where, on a trial for forgery, a witness who had been served with a subpœna duces tecum objected that the documents came into his possession as the solicitor of the prisoner in a previous prosecution instituted by him, it was held that the documents must be produced. R. v. Brown, 9 Cox, 281, Willes, J. Cf. R. v. Tylney, 1 Den. 319; 18 L. J. (M. C.) 36: R. v. Avery, 8 C. & P. 596. And where an attorney refuses, and is justified in refusing, to produce documents, secondary evidence may be given of the contents. Coates v. Birch, 2 Q. B. 252. If, being solicitor for the defendant, he holds papers in another capacity, he must produce them; as, for instance, a solicitor and steward of a lord of a borough is bound to produce public documents relating to the borough, but he is not bound to produce documents relating to the lord's interest in the borough. R. v. Woodley, 1 M. & Rob. 390. The privilege has been held not to apply to the contents of a notice served upon him by the solicitor on the other side, requiring him to produce at the trial a certain paper belonging to his client in his hands, Spenceley v. Schulenburgh, 7 East, 357, or the like. See Kennedy v. Lyell, 23 Ch. D. 387, 405; 9 App. Cas. 81: Foakes v. Webb, 28 Ch. D. 287, 289. And where a solicitor was present at the time his client swore to an answer in Chancery, it was held that he could be compelled to give evidence of that fact, on an indictment against his client for perjury. Bull. (N. P.) 284: sed contrà, R. v. Watkinson, 2 Str. 1122. So he may be called to prove his client's handwriting, though the knowledge was obtained from witnessing his execution of a bail-bond in the action; Hurd v. Moring, 1 C. & P. 372; and he may be called to prove his client's identity. Studdy v. Sanders, 2 D. & R. 347; contrà Parkins v. Hawkshaw, ubi supra. And if he be a subscribing witness to a deed of his client, he may be examined as to his execution of it. Doe v. Andrews, 2 Cowp. 845; Robson v. Kemp, 4 Esp. 233; 5 Esp. 52; 8 R. R. 831: Doe v. Roe, 6 Dowl. 518. A letter written by a solicitor for a client is not inadmissible on the ground of privilege as evidence against the client in a prosecution against the latter, but to make it evidence against the client, it must be shown that the letter was written in pursuance of the client's instructions, and it is not sufficient to prove merely that it was written by the solicitor in consequence of an interview with his client. R. v. Downer, Cox, 486 (C. C. R.).

Master and servant.]—A servant may be a witness for or against the master or mistress; Gilb. Ev. 135; a master or mistress for or against the servant.

Parent and child.]—A father or mother may be a witness for or against their child. R. v. Oakhampton (Mayor of), 1 Wils. (K. B.) 332; and see R. v. Bramley [1795] 6 *T. Priest and Penitent.]—The question whether ministers of religion, and in particular Roman Catholic priests, have any privilege from giving evidence of confessions has not been authoritatively decided. Steph. Dig. Evidence (5th ed.), 204. The canons of the English Church contemplate that confessions should be under the seal of secrecy. The tendency of judicial dicta is that while in strict law the privilege does not exist, the minister should not be required to give evidence as to a confession made to him. Butler v. Moore, McNally Ev. 253 (Ir.): R. v. Sparkes, Peake (3rd ed.), 109, cit.; 3 *R. State privilege or public policy.]—Where the disclosure of a particular fact, not bearing directly upon the matter in question, may be of detriment to the public service, the court will not compel a witness to disclose it. Documents or information received officially are privileged if the officer declares it to be injurious in the public interest to produce or disclose them. Home v. Bentinck, 2 B. & B. 130, 162: Att.-Gen. v. Briant, 15 M. & W. 169: R. v. Fergus O'Connor, 4 St. Tr., N. P.) 116, 136: 32 St. Tr. 1, 98, a witness for the crown was held entitled to refuse to say through whom he made a disclosure to the Government. In R. v. Smith O'Brien, 7 St. Tr., N. S. 1, an informer was held entitled to refuse to disclose the source of his information when its disclosure would expose his informant to the risk of assassination; and in R. v. Hardy, 24 St. Tr. 199, 753, a witness who was employed to obtain information of the proceedings at a meeting of one of the corresponding societies was not allowed to disclose the name of his employer. It is the usual practice not to press a police witness for the names of persons on whose information he has acted in the detection of crime, unless the evidence is directly material or necessary in the interests of the prisoner. R. v. Richardson, 3 F. & F. 693; and cf. Marks v. Beyfus, 25 Q. B. D. 494; 59 L. J. (Q. B.) 579, where the Director of Public Prosecutions was held to be entitled to refuse to disclose the names of persons on whose information he instituted a prosecution.

4. Credit of Witnesses.

The credibility of a witness depends upon (1) his knowledge of the facts he testifies; (2) his disinterestedness; (3) his integrity; (4) his veracity; and (5) his being bound to speak the truth by such an oath as he deems obligatory, or by such affirmation or declaration as may by law be substituted for an oath (post, p. 407, 408). Proportioned to these is the degree of credit his testimony deserves from the court and jury.

From knowledge.]—Although a witness be perfectly disinterested, although he be a man of integrity and veracity, and have a just sense of the moral obligation of the oath he has taken, still the degree of credit to be given to his testimony depends upon his real knowledge of the facts he testifies. A man may be deceived in a fact, from deriving his knowledge of it through a false medium; from his attention being occupied more by the circumstances accompanying it than by the fact itself at the time of its occurrence; or from a thousand other circumstances, which, if candidly stated, might be satisfactorily answered and accounted for by the other party, so as to convince the witness himself that he laboured under a mistake. Where there is a doubt, therefore, whether the evidence given by a witness be not founded on some misconception, it is the duty of the counsel who cross-examines him to question him as to the sources of his knowledge; his reasons for believing the fact to be as he has stated; his reasons for recollecting it; the circumstances attending its occurrence; whether it was light or dark, and whether he was near or distant at the time it occurred, and the like; so that the jury may be able to judge of the degree of confidence they should place in the witness's testimony. If a witness refuse to answer such questions, or do not answer them satisfactorily, it should have the effect of detracting considerably from his credit in the estimation of the jury.

From disinterestedness.]—A witness, to be perfectly credible, must not be in the slightest degree biassed or partial to one party or the other. Therefore, if it appear that the witness is prejudiced against the party against whom he appears, or has before expressed sentiments indicative of such prejudice, or if it appear that a prosecution is pending against him for the same or a similar offence, and he come to disprove some of the facts charged in the indictment against the defendant—all these are circumstances which detract proportionably from his credit. Where the prosecutor is to derive an advantage from a conviction of the defendant, this, we have seen (ante, p. 390), is no objection to his competency; it goes to his credit merely. A father is a competent witness for his son, and a son for his father; and husband and wife for each other (see ante, p. 402); but the interest arising from the relationship detracts proportionately from the credit of the witness. See 2 Hale, 276; Gilb. Ev. 149, 155.

From integrity.]—Since the Evidence Act, 1843 (6 & 7 Vict. c. 85, s. 1 (ante, p. 390)), the fact that a witness has been convicted of crime affects only his credit, and not his competency. As to prior law, see R. v. Teal, 11 East, 307: 11 R. R. 516. Whether a witness has or has not been convicted, witnesses may be called to speak as to his general character, although not as to any particular offence of which he may be guilty. 2 Hawk, c. 46, s. 207; R. v. Rookwood, 13 St. Tr. 139, 211: R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 116, 149; 32 St. Tr. 1. In order to impeach the credit of a witness for veracity, witnesses may be called by the other side to prove that his general reputation is such that they would not believe him upon his oath. R. v. Brown, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 70; 36 L. J. (M. C.) 59. They need not have heard him on oath. R. v. Bispham, 4 C. & P. 392. As to cross-examination, see post, p. 419.

All other questions (not being questions the answers to which would have a tendency to expose him to a criminal charge, or to a penalty or forfeiture, as to which see ante, p. 399) for the purpose of impeaching a witness's character not only may be put, but must be answered, although the answer may degrade the witness's character. Cundell v. Pratt, M. & M. 108. And a witness may not refuse to produce a document kept by him under the authority of an Act of parliament, on the ground that it may criminate himself. Bradshaw v. Murphy, 7 C. & P. 612. If the witness be examined as to the offence or improper conduct imputed to him, and deny it, his denial is conclusive, if the question is merely collateral to the point in issue, and it is not permissible to call witnesses or offer other evidence to contradict him. R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 116, 149; 32 St. Tr. 1: Harris v. Tippett, 2 Camp. 637; 11 R. R. 767: R. v. Burke, 8 Cox, 44 (Ir.): R. v. Cracknell, 10 Cox, 408, Willes, J. But if the question is relevant to the point at issue, and the witness deny the thing imputed, he may be contradicted. Yewin's case, 2 Camp. 638. In that case the witness was asked whether he had not said that he would be avenged on his master, and would fix him in gaol. This he denied, but he was allowed to be contradicted. So where a witness for the prosecution denied on cross-examination that he had had a quarrel with the prisoner and had threatened to be revenged on him, evidence was allowed to be given to contradict him. R. v. Shaw, 16 Cox, 503, Cave, J. By s. 6 of Denman's Act (28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, which by s. 1 extends to all courts of criminal judicature), "a witness may be questioned as to whether he has been convicted of any felony or misdemeanor, and upon being so questioned, if he either denies or does not admit the fact, or refuses to answer, it shall be lawful for the cross-examining party to prove such conviction; and a certificate containing the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment and conviction for such offence, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court, or other officer having the custody of the records of the court where the offender was convicted, or by the deputy of such clerk or officer (for which certificate a fee of 5*s.* and no more shall be demanded or taken), shall, upon proof of the identity of the person, be sufficient evidence of the said conviction, without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same."

This enactment seems to apply where a defendant, giving evidence on his own behalf, denies previous convictions lawfully put to him under s. 1 f (iii.) of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898 (ante, p. 395).

Where general evidence is given of the bad character of a witness, the opposite party may cross-examine the witnesses as to the grounds of their opinion, if he think it prudent to do so; or he may call witnesses who can speak to the general good conduct of the witness, or contradict any particular facts the other witnesses may have disclosed in their cross-examination. It has been held that where a witness refuses to answer a question, his not answering ought not, legally, to have any effect with the jury. R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 116, 157; 32 St. Tr. 1: Rose v. Blakemore, Ry. & M. 382: Lloyd v. Passingham, 16 Ves. 59; sed quære: see 2 Tayl. Ev. (9th. ed.), 970.

In Queen Caroline's case, 2 B. & B. 284, 311; 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1348, it was held, that where a witness for a prosecution had been examined in chief, the defendant could not afterwards give evidence of any declaration by such witness, or of acts done by him to procure persons corruptly to give evidence in support of the prosecution, unless he had previously cross-examined such witness as to such declarations or acts.

From veracity.]—The character of a witness for habitual veracity is an essential ingredient in his credibility; for a man who is capable of uttering a deliberate falsehood is in most cases capable of doing so under the solemn sanction of an oath. If, therefore, it appear that he has formerly said or written the contrary of that which he has now sworn (unless the reason of his having done so be very satisfactorily accounted for), his evidence should not have much weight with a jury; and if he have formerly sworn the contrary, the fact (although no objection to his competency, R. v. Teal, 11 East, 309; 10 R. R. 516) is almost conclusive against his credibility. As to the modes of testing veracity, see post, p. 419, cross-examination.

A consideration of the probability of a fact also may aid us in forming a judgment of the credit that should be given to a witness for veracity. If he tells us of a fact having occurred which is contrary to common experience and observation, it will require that his integrity, veracity, and means of knowledge should be indisputable to induce us to believe it: but if, on the contrary, the fact stated by him be very likely to have happened, we may be induced to believe it, without very scrupulously inquiring into his character for integrity, veracity, etc. The strength of the evidence should always be great in proportion to the improbability of the fact to be established by it.

From their being sworn to speak the truth.]—The general common law rule is that the testimony of a witness to be examined vivâ voce in a court of common law in this country shall not be received unless he has previously been sworn to speak the truth. Counsel has no privilege from being sworn, even if he acts only as interpreter. R. v. Kelly [1848] 3 Cox, 75, Patteson, J. Even a peer, who in a court of equity was allowed to give in his answer to a bill without oath, merely pledging his honour for the truth of it, must be sworn if examined as a witness. Earl of Lincoln's case, Sir W. Jones, 152, 154; Cro. Car. 64: Meers v. Lord Stourton [1711], 2 Salk. 513; 1 P. Wms. 146; 24 Eng. Rep. 332; and see 2 Mod. 99. It will be seen (post, pp. 407, 408) that this general common law rule is now subject to important statutory exceptions. The witness must be sworn in open court by the judge, or, as is the usual course, by the clerk of the court or the crier or some other officer. R. v. Tew, Dears. 429; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 62 (C. C. R.). But it is for the court and not for such officers to ascertain the mode in which the oath or affirmation or declaration should be administered. R. v. Moore, 61 L. J. (M. C.) 80; 17 Cox, 458 (C. C. R.).

Form of Oath.]—The form of the oath, where the witness is sworn, varies according to the religion or country of the witness. See R. v. Mildrone,

1 Leach, 412; 3 R. R. 708. Christians are sworn on the New Testament; Jews, on the Old Testament; Mahometans, on the Koran; and persons of other religions according to the form prescribed for that purpose by the religion they profess. Bull. (N. P.) 292. Christians are sworn with their hats off; Jews, with their hats on. As to swearing in Christian form, a man born a Jew and married according to Jewish rites and unbaptized, but professing to be a member of the Established Church, see R. v. Gilham [1775] 1 Esp. 285. As to the mode of swearing Chinamen, see R. v. Entrehman, C. & Mar. 248; Stringer on Oaths (2nd ed.), 86, 124. Even among the different sects of Christians there may be different modes of taking the oath; R. v. Mildrone, 1 Leach, 412: and see R. v. M'Carther, 1 Peake (3rd ed.), 211. Each witness, in short, swears in the particular form prescribed by his religion. The only general rule that can be laid down upon the subject is, that the oath must be such as the witness deems obligatory upon his conscience. See R. v. Taylor, 1 Peake (3rd ed.), 14. S. 5 of the Oaths Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 46), which enacts that "if any person to whom an oath is administered desires to swear with uplifted hand, in the form and manner in which an oath is usually administered in Scotland, (a) he shall be permitted so to do, and the oath shall be administered to him in such form and manner without further question," appears only to be declaratory of the common law. R. v. Mildrone, ubi supra. And it is expressly declared, by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 105, that, in all cases in which an oath may lawfully be administered, the party is bound by the oath administered, provided it have been administered in such form and with such ceremonies as he may declare to be binding; and that, in case of wilful false swearing, he may be convicted of the crime of perjury, in the same manner as if the oath had been administered in the form and with the ceremonies most commonly adopted. And by the Oaths Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 46), "where an oath has been duly administered and taken, the fact that the person to whom the same was administered had, at the time of taking such oath, no religious belief, shall not for any purpose affect the validity of such oath." S. 3. The cases immediately following were decided before the passing of 51 & 52 Vict. c. 46 (Oaths Act, 1888). A witness may be asked, after he is sworn, whether he considers the oath he has taken obligatory upon his conscience; but if he answer in the affirmative his answer is conclusive, and he cannot further be asked whether there be any other mode of swearing more binding upon his conscience than that which has been used. Queen Caroline's case, 2 B. & B. 284; 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1348. The more correct and proper way is to ask the witness, before he is sworn, whether he considers the oath he is about to take obligatory upon his conscience. Id. A witness, however, may, either before he is sworn, or after he has been sworn upon the voire dire (Maden v. Catanach, 7 H. & N. 360; 21 L. J. (Ex.) 118), or, semble, even after he has been sworn in the cause (Queen Caroline's case, ubi supra), be asked whether he believes in the being of a Deity, and in a future state of rewards and punishments; Maden v. Catanach, ubi supra: but he cannot be questioned as to the particular tenets of his religion. See R. v. Taylor, 1 Peake (3rd ed.), 14: R. v. White, 1 Leach, 430: R. v. Serva, 2 C. & K. 53. As to whether when the witness does not object to be sworn on the ground of his having no religious belief, an objection to him on

(a) In Scotland the oath is usually administered by the presiding judge and taken in the form following:—"I swear to Almighty God (as I shall answer to God at the great day of judgment) that I will speak the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth" (see Home Office Circular, 31st May, 1893). Both judge and witness stand, and the witness repeats the oath with his right hand uplifted. He neither holds nor kisses any book. The words in brackets are now often omitted in the Scotch courts.

that ground may successfully be made by the opposite party, notwithstanding 51 & 52 Vict. c. 46, s. 1 (infra), see ante, p. 406. If through mistake a witness is allowed to affirm instead of being sworn, his evidence is inadmissible, and a conviction founded on it is bad. R. v. Moore, 61 L. J. (M. C.) 80. In R. v. James, 6 Cox, 5, it was held that where the mistake is discovered before the end of the case the jury may be directed to disregard the unsworn evidence. But it is submitted that this decision is inconsistent with and overruled by R. v. Moore, ubi supra, and R. v. Gibson, 18 Q. B. D. 537.

Affirmation in lieu of oath.—1. Quakers and Moravians.]—Formerly, in civil cases, instead of an oath, a Quaker was allowed to make an affirmation, 7 & 8 W. 3, c. 34 (rep.); 22 G. 2. c. 46, ss. 36, 37 (rep.) (see Atcheson v. Everitt [1776] 1 Cowp. 383), and a Moravian a declaration, 22 G. 3, c. 30 (rep.); but it was expressly provided by those statutes that a Quaker or Moravian should not thereby be enabled to give evidence in criminal cases, or to serve on juries, unless he were actually sworn. But by 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 49, a Quaker or Moravian, required to give evidence in a criminal case, instead of taking an oath in the usual form, was permitted to make a solemn affirmation or declaration, in these words: "I, A. B., do solemnly, sincerely, and truly declare and affirm," etc., which has the same force and effect in all courts of justice and other places where by law an oath is required, as if such Quaker or Moravian had taken an oath in the usual form. And if any person making such affirmation or declaration shall be convicted of having wilfully, falsely, and corruptly affirmed or declared any matter or thing, which if the same had been sworn in the usual form, would have amounted to wilful and corrupt perjury, every such offender shall be subject to the same pains, penalties and forfeitures to which persons convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury are subject. The same rule was, by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 77, extended to any person who shall have been a Quaker or Moravian; it having been held that a person formerly a Quaker, who had seceded from that sect on some points of doctrine, retaining their opinions on the unlawfulness of swearing, but refusing to affirm under the form given in 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 49, was not admissible as a witness in a criminal case on making the affirmation under 9 G. 4, c. 32 (rep.). R. v. Doran, 2 Mood. C. C. 37. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 49, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 77, are not repealed: but their effect is equally attained by s. 1 of the Oaths Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 46), infra.

The form of the affirmation of a Quaker or Moravian is as follows:—

"I, A. B., being one of the people called Quakers [or, one of the persuasion of the people called Quakers, or of the United Brethren, called Moravians], do solemnly, sincerely, and truly declare and affirm that, etc. (3 & 4 W. 4, c. 49, s. 1.)

The affirmation of a person formerly a Quaker or Moravian is as follows:—

"I, A. B., having been one of the people called Quakers [or, one of the persuasion of the people called Quakers, or of the United Brethren called Moravians], and entertaining conscientious objections to the taking of an oath do solemnly, sincerely, and truly declare and affirm that," etc. (1 & 2 Vict. c. 77.)

2. Affirmation in lieu of oath where witness objects to be sworn on religious or other grounds.]—"Every person upon objecting to being sworn, and stating, as the ground of such objection, either that he has no religious belief, or that the taking of an oath is contrary to his religious belief, shall be permitted to make his solemn affirmation instead of taking an oath in all places and for all purposes where an oath is or shall be required by law, which affirmation shall be of the same force and effect as if he had taken the oath; and if any person making such affirmation shall wilfully, falsely, and corruptly affirm any matter or thing which, if deposed on oath, would have amounted to wilful and corrupt perjury, he shall be liable to prosecution, indictment, sentence and punishment in all respects as if he had committed wilful and corrupt perjury." 51 & 52 Vict. c. 46 (Oaths Act, 1888), s. 1.

The form of affirmation to be taken under this section instead of an oath is as follows:—

"I, A.B., do solemnly, sincerely, and truly declare and affirm," then proceeding with the words of the oath prescribed by law, omitting any words of imprecation or calling to witness. (51 & 52 Vict. c. 46, s. 2.)

Where a witness desires to make an affirmation under this section instead of taking an oath, it is the duty of the judge himself to ascertain that the witness objects to be sworn on one of the grounds mentioned in the section, and if the judge does not do so, and the witness being a witness for the prosecution, is allowed to affirm and his evidence left to the jury, and a conviction ensues, such conviction will be quashed, even although no objection was taken before verdict. R. v. Moore, 61 L. J. (M. C.) 80; 17 Cox, 458 (C. C. R.).

Unsworn evidence of a child of tender years.]—The cases in which a child of tender years can be examined without being sworn are stated ante, pp. 388, 389.

Witness under subpœna duces tecum.]—A witness producing documents under a subpœna duces tecum need not be sworn, if the party who calls him does not wish to examine him. Perry v. Gibson, 1 A. & E. 48: Summers v. Moseley, 2 Cr. & M. 477: Davis v. Dale, M. & M. 514.

5. The Number of Witnesses requisite.

General rule—One witness sufficient.—At common law, one witness is sufficient in all cases (with the exception of perjury), at the trial. 2 Hawk. c. 46, ss. 2, 10; Fost. 233. As to evidence by accomplices, see ante, p. 390. As to witnesses before the grand jury, see ante, pp. 99, 100.

Exceptions—1. Treason.]—In high treason or misprision of treason two witnesses are in general required, both before the grand jury and at the trial; both of the witnesses to the same overt act, or one of them to one overt act, and another of them to another overt act of the same species of treason; unless the defendant willingly, and without violence, confesses the same. 7 & 8 W. 3, c. 3, ss. 2, 4; 2 Hawk. c. 46, ss. 3-9. And if the jury do not give credit to both of the witnesses, the defendant must be acquitted. R. v. Palmer, 7 St. Tr. 1067, Scroggs, C.J. But where the overt act is composite, made up of several circumstances and passing through several stages, it is not necessary that there should be two witnesses to each circumstance and at each stage. It is enough if the joint testimony of two or more witnesses establish the act as a whole. R. v. M'Cafferty, 10 Cox, 603; Ir. Rep., 1 C. L. 363. And one witness is sufficient to prove a collateral fact; Fost. 242; as, for instance, to prove that the defendant is a natural-born subject, R. v. Vaughan, 13 St. Tr. 485, or the like.

But where the overt act alleged is the assassination of the King, or any direct attempt against his life, or person, one witness is sufficient. 39 & 40 G. 3, c. 93; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 51, s. 1. See post, tit. "Treason."

2. Perjury.]—Upon an indictment for perjury there must be two witnesses; one alone is not sufficient, because there is in that case only one oath against another. R. v. Muscot, 10 Mod. 192, 194. The rule is not like that as to corroboration of accomplices, a precautionary practice, but is a rule of law. R. v. Yates, C. & Mar. 132, 139, Coleridge, J. But if the assignment of perjury be directly proved by one witness, and strong circumstantial evidence be given by another, or be established by written documents, this would be sufficient it seems. R. v. Lee, 1 Russ. Cr. (6th ed.), 368: R. v. Shaw, L. & C. 579; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 169 (C. C. R.): see R. v. Boulter, 2 Den. 396; 21 L. J. (M. C.) 57 (C. C. R.). And although every assignment of perjury must be proved by two witnesses (see R. v. Parker, C. & Mar. 639), it is not necessary that every fact which goes to make the assignment of perjury should be so proved. R. v. Gardiner, 8 C. & P. 637: 2 Mood. C. C. 95: R. v. Roberts, 2 C. & K. 607. And, therefore, where an assignment of perjury was that the defendant had falsely sworn that he had not on a certain day treated one W. with any brandy or other spirit, this was held to be sufficiently proved by the evidence of one witness that on the day in question the defendant had treated W. with brandy in one public-house, and by the evidence of another witness that on the same day in another public-house the defendant had asked W. if he would have two pennyworth, and that the witness shortly afterwards saw W. drinking something of the colour of brandy or rum. R. v. Hare, 13 Cox, 174, Denman, J. Also, if the perjury consist in the defendant's having sworn contrary to what he had before sworn on the same subject, this is not within the rule above mentioned; for the effect of the defendant's oath in the one case is neutralized by his oath in the other; and proof by one witness will, therefore, make the evidence against the defendant preponderate. R. v. Knill, 5 B. & Ald. 929, n. And where the defendant had on several occasions made statements (not on oath), to different persons, contradictory to what he swore on the occasion on which the perjury was imputed to him, and there was also independent evidence tending indirectly to show that the latter statements were true, the defendant was held to be properly convicted. R. v. Hook, Dears. & B. 606; 27 L. J. (M. C.) 222 (C. C. R.). On these two cases see R. v. Cleland [1901], 20 N. Z. L. R. 509, where it is suggested that R. v. Knill is not good law. But the mere contradiction of the one oath of the defendant by the other is not enough. R. v. Harris, 5 B. & Ald. 926: R. v. Wheatland, 8 C. & P. 238. Where the perjury was assigned on an affidavit of the defendant that he had paid all the debts under his bankruptcy, it was held that the non-payment of each debt must be proved by two witnesses. R. v. Parker, ubi supra.

3. Personation.]—Upon a charge of personation at a parliamentary or municipal election it is necessary, in order to justify committal for trial, that not less than two creditable witnesses shall testify that the accused has knowingly personated, and falsely assumed to vote in the name of, another; 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 88: 35 & 36 Vict. c. 33, s. 24; and this provision seems equally applicable to the trial.

4. Blasphemy and offences against religion.]—Two witnesses are necessary on a prosecution for blasphemy under 9 W. 3, c. 35 (see s. 1), or for offences under 1 Eliz. c. 1 (see s. 21).

5. Certain offences against women and children.]—The 2nd section of 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69 (Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1885), which makes it a misdemeanor to procure women or girls for the purposes of prostitution, and the 3rd section of the same statute, which makes it a misdemeanor to procure the defilement of women or girls by threats or fraud, or administering drugs, contain provisoes, that no person shall be convicted of any offence under such sections upon the evidence of one witness, unless such witness be corroborated in some material particular by evidence implicating the accused.

The 4th section of the same Act, which makes it a felony to unlawfully and carnally know any girl under the age of thirteen years, and a misdemeanor to attempt to have carnal knowledge of a girl under that age, after rendering admissible under such circumstances as in that section mentioned, the evidence of such girl or other child of tender years, though not given upon oath, provides that no person shall be liable to be convicted of the offence unless the testimony admitted by virtue of that section, and given on behalf of the prosecution, shall be corroborated by some other material evidence in support thereof implicating the accused. And s. 15 of the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, 1904 (4 Edw. 7, c. 15), which renders admissible under such circumstances as in that section mentioned, the evidence of a child of tender years, though not given upon oath, in any proceeding for an offence under that Act, or any of the offences specified in the first schedule thereto (vide ante, pp. 388, 389), contains a proviso requiring the corroboration of such evidence similar to that contained in the above cited s. 4 of 48 & 49 Vict. c. 69.

6. Process against Witnesses.

In cases of felony or misdemeanor, where there has been a preliminary inquiry under the Indictable Offences Act, 1848, followed by a committal for trial, the witnesses are generally, and ought always to be, bound over by recognizance to appear at the trial and give evidence (see 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 20), except where from infancy or other cause they are incompetent to enter into a recognizance. See R. v. Smith, 17 Cox, 601. As to cases where the indictment is removed for trial at the Central Criminal Court under that Act, see 19 & 20 Vict. c. 16, ss. 8, 10. A magistrate has no power to issue a warrant for the apprehension of a person to attend to find bail for his appearance as a witness in a civil or criminal case. Evans v. Rees, 12 A. & E. 55; 9 L. J. (M. C.) 83.

Subpœna ad testificandum.]—In all cases where the witnesses have not been so bound over, but are in England, if it is not certain that they will attend voluntarily, their appearance at the trial may be compelled by subpœna. In ordinary cases the common subpœna is sufficient. It may be sued out either at the Crown Office of the High Court, at the Royal Courts of Justice, in London (R. v. Ring, 8 T. R. 585; 5 R. R. 478); or from the clerk of the peace, or clerk of assize of the court in which the defendant is to be tried. It is sometimes more advisable to sue it out at the crown office, on account of the readiness with which the witness may be subjected to attachment in case of his non-attendance. R. v. Ring, ubi supra. See the form of the subpœna, 5 Burn's J. 384 (30th ed.), and Cr. Off.

Rules, 1886, Appendix, Forms 151 et seq. The names of four witnesses may be inserted in one writ. 2 Cowp. 846. In a crown office subpœna the names of three witnesses only can be inserted. Short & Mellor's Cr. Off. Pract. 452. As soon as you have obtained the writ, make out a copy of it for each witness, and serve it upon him personally, at the same time showing him the writ. The service should be personal: for otherwise if he disobeys the subpœna, he cannot be proceeded against as for a contempt. Smalt v. Whitmill, 2 Str. 1054. And it should be served a reasonable time before the trial; Hammond v. Stewart, 1 Str. 510; but if the witness be in court at the time of the trial, a service of the subpœna ticket upon him there would perhaps be deemed sufficient if he were subpœnaed on the part of the defendant, see 2 Cowp. 845; 1 W. Bl. 36, and would certainly be sufficient if he were subpœnaed on the part of the prosecution. Indeed, in a criminal case, a person who is present in court when called as a witness, is bound to give his evidence, although he has not been subpœnaed. R. v. Sadler, 4 C. & P. 218: Blackburn v. Haygreave, 2 Lewin, 259.

By the Writ of Subpœna Act, 1805 (45 G. 3, c. 92), ss. 3, 4, the service of a writ of subpœna in any one part of the United Kingdom, is as effectual to compel the appearance of a witness in any other part of the same, as if the subpœna were served in that part of the kingdom in which the defendant is required to appear; and in case of non-attendance the court from which the subpœna issued may transmit a certificate thereof in the manner pointed out in the statute; i.e., in the case of an English court to the High Court of Justiciary in Scotland, or the King's Bench Division of the Supreme Court in Ireland; and the court to which it is so transmitted may punish the party for his default, in like manner as if he had refused to appear to a subpœna issuing out of that court, provided it appear that a reasonable and sufficient sum of money to defray the witness's expenses of coming, attending to give evidence, and returning, were tendered to him at the time he was served with the subpœna.

Where the subpœna is served in England, a tender of expenses does not seem to be necessary either on the part of the crown or of the prisoner; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 173; R. v. Cooke, 1 C. & P. 321; yet if the witness be so poor as not to be able to go to the assizes or sessions at his own cost, the fact of the expenses not having been tendered would probably be deemed by the court a sufficient excuse for his non-attendance.

Provision is made by 13 G. 3, c. 63, ss. 40, 44, as to witnesses resident in India, and by 42 G. 3, c. 85, as to witnesses abroad in prosecutions of public officers for offences. 1 W. 4, c. 22, applies only to civil proceedings. See ante, p. 377. S. 689 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, 57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, provides for the taking of evidence abroad in cases of offences at sea, or by British seamen; and s. 691 appears to give power to take depositions abroad as to any criminal offence whatever committed outside Great Britain subject to the conditions there stated, including the presence of the accused. See ante, p. 377.

Subpœna duces tecum.]—If any person (not being the defendant) have in his possession a written instrument which may be requisite as evidence in the cause, then, instead of the common subpœna, he should be served with a subpœna duces tecum, commanding him to bring it with him, and produce it at the trial. See the form, Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Appendix, forms, 151 et seq. It is sued out and served in the same manner as the common subpœna. Upon being served with this subpœna the witness must attend at the trial with the instrument required, and produce it in evidence, unless he have some lawful and reasonable excuse for withholding it; of the validity of which excuse the court, and not the witness, is to judge. Amey v. Long, 9 East, 473; 6 Esp. 116; 1 Camp. 14, 180, n.; and see 5 Esp. 90. As to swearing such witness, see ante, p. 403. It is no excuse that the legal custody of the instrument belongs to another, if it be in the actual possession of the witness; Id.: Amey v. Long, ubi supra: Corsen v. Dubois, Holt (N. P.) 239. But the court will not compel him to produce it, if it tend to criminate himself (see 1 Esp. 105, and ante, p. 399), or his client (if the witness be a solicitor, R. v. Dixon, 3 Burr. 1687); or if it be his title-deed, Pickering v. Noyes, 1 B. & C. 262; 2 D. & R. 386: R. v. Hunter, 3 C. & P. 591. If the witness, instead of bringing the papers, etc., required, deliver them to the opposite party, by whom they are withheld, the court will allow secondary evidence of the contents of them to be given, without a notice to produce the originals. Leeds v. Cook, 4 Esp. 256; 6 R. R. 855. A witness so producing documents need not be sworn. See ante, p. 408.

Habeas corpus ad testificandum.]—If the witness at the time of the trial be in civil custody or under process in a civil action suit or proceeding, he may be brought into court to give evidence. The application for habeas corpus must be made on affidavit to a Judge at Chambers, Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 246. For forms of affidavit, see Appendix to Crown Office Rules, 1886, Nos. 181, 182, and for form of writ, Id., No. 183, and as to the preparation and indorsement of the writ, see Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 230. It is not necessary, where the evidence of the witness is required on a criminal trial, that the affidavit should state that he is willing to attend. Short & Mellor Cr. Off. Pract. 367. Engross the writ; see the forms ubi supra. It must be directed to the person in whose custody the witness is. As soon as you get the writ signed, etc., leave it with the officer to whom it is directed; pay or tender to him his reasonable charges for bringing up the witness, and he will bring him into court on the day of trial, according to the exigency of the writ. A prisoner in execution may be brought up in this manner to give evidence; Geery v. Hopkins, 2 Ld. Raym. 851; R. v. Burbage, 3 Burr. 1440, although it was formerly held otherwise. Barnes, 222; Comb. 17, 48. So, a sailor on board a king's ship may be brought up by this writ, if he have been previously subpœnaed. R. v. Roddam, 2 Cowp. 672. But the court will not grant the writ to bring up a prisoner of war; the proper way of proceeding in that case is by application to the Secretary of State. Furly v. Newnham, 2 Doug. 419. So, where the application appeared to be a mere contrivance to remove a prisoner in execution, the court refused to grant it. R. v. Burbage, 3 Burr. 1440.

4. Judge's Order.]—With regard to witnesses in criminal custody at the time of the trial, by the Criminal Procedure Act, 1853 (16 & 17 Vict. c. 30) s. 9, any judge of the superior courts has the power, on application by affidavit, to issue a warrant or order under his hand for bringing up any prisoner or person confined in any gaol, prison, or place, under any sentence, or under commitment for trial, or otherwise (except under process in any civil action, suit, or proceeding), before any court, judge, justice, or other judicature, to be examined as a witness in any cause or matter, civil or criminal; to be so brought under the same care and custody, and to be dealt with in the like manner in all respects, as a prisoner brought up for the like purpose under a writ of habeas corpus. The application, if made to a judge under this section, may be made on affidavit for an order. Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, r. 247. For forms of affidavit see Appendix to Cr. Off. Rules, 1886, Nos. 181, 182, and for form of order, Id. 184.

5. Secretary of State's Order.]—The powers of the Secretary of State under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 30, s. 9, are repealed and superseded by s. 11 of the Prisons Act, 1898 (61 & 62 Vict. c. 41), which appears to apply to prisoners in civil or criminal custody, and to be available in all cases in which a habeas corpus testificandum or a judge's order could be issued. The section provides that "(1) A Secretary of State on proof to his satisfaction that the presence of any prisoner at any place is required in the interest of justice, or for the purpose of any public inquiry may, by writing under his hand, order that the prisoner be taken to that place. (2) A prisoner taken from a prison in pursuance of an order made under this section, or of a warrant issued under s. 9 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1853 (ante, p. 412), shall whilst outside the prison be kept in such custody as the Secretary of State may by general rules prescribe, and whilst in that custody shall be deemed to be in legal custody. (3) For the purposes of this section the expression 'prisoner' shall include any person lawfully confined under any sentence, or under commitment for trial or otherwise, and the expression 'prison' shall include any place in which any such prisoner is lawfully confined."

Privilege of witnesses from arrest.]—A person subpœnaed as a witness, or bound over by recognizance, either to prosecute or give evidence, enjoys a privilege from arrest on civil process whilst attending the court, not only on the day mentioned in the subpœna, etc., but also on every day of the same sittings, assizes, or sessions, until the cause is tried; he is also privileged in like manner during a reasonable time before and after the trial, while coming to or returning from the place where the sittings, assizes, or sessions are held. See Lightfoot v. Cameron, 2 W. Bl. 1113: Arding v. Flower, 8 T. R. 534: Re Freston, 11 Q. B. D. 545; 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), 868. And this privilege has also been held to extend to witnesses attending voluntarily, and not subpœnaed. See Meekins v. Smith, 1 H. Bl. 629, 636. If a witness, under these circumstances, be arrested, the court out of which the subpœna issued, or the judge of the court in which the cause has been or is to be tried, will, upon application, order him to be discharged. See 3 Stark. (N. P.) 132.

Penally for non-attendance.]—Where a witness wilfully neglects to attend at the sessions or assizes, etc., in obedience to a Crown Office subpœna, the High Court (K. B. D.), upon application, will grant an attachment against him (R. v. Ring, 8 T. R. 585; 5 R. R. 478), if the witness was served personally with the subpœna (Smalt v. Whitmill, 2 Str. 1054; Wakefield's case, Cas. (K. B.) temp. Hardw. 313), and was served a reasonable time before the trial; Hammond v. Stewart, 1 Str. 510: and see 1 Marshall, 410. It is immaterial whether the cause was in fact called on or not, if it satisfactorily appear that the witness would not have been forthcoming when called on to give evidence. Barrow v. Humphreys, 3 B. & Ald. 598: Mullett v. Hunt, 1 Cr. & M. 752: Dixon v. Lee, 1 Cr. M. & R. 646: R. v. Stretch, 3 A. & E. 503: Lamont v. Crook, 6 M. & W. 615. It is doubtful whether a court of quarter sessions has authority to issue an attachment; the only mode of proceeding against the witness in such a case seems to be by indictment. As to the mode of proceeding where the subpœna has been served in Ireland or Scotland, see 45 G. 3, c. 92, ante, p. 411. Where a witness does not attend at the court and time specified in his recognizance, the recognizance may be estreated and the penalty levied in the manner stated, ante, pp. 117–120.

Improper interference with witnesses.]—Any person preventing a witness duly summoned from attending court is liable to attachment or committal for contempt of court. R. v. Hall, 2 W. Bl. 1110; Commonwealth v. Feely, 2 Virg. Cas. 1. As to other offences which may be incurred by interfering with witnesses, see ante, pp. 146 and post, Book II. Part II. ch. III., s. 8.

7. Witnesses' Expenses, etc.

At common law, a witness in criminal cases is not entitled to his expenses; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 173; at least, if he attend on the part of the prosecution. A witness subpœnaed for the defence cannot refuse to give evidence until his expenses are paid. R. v. Cooke, 1 C. & P. 321. The present statutory provisions as to expenses of witnesses in criminal cases are stated, ante, p. 246, et seq.

8. Examination of Witnesses.

Ordering witnesses out of court.]—When the case is called on, or at any other period during the trial, the court, at the request of the defendant (R. v. Vaughan, cas. temp. Holt, 689; 13 St. Tr. 485, 491: Peter Cook's case, 13 Str. 311, 318): or indeed at the request of either party, will order such of the witnesses of the opposite party as have not yet been examined, or are not under examination, to leave the court until they shall be called for in their order, so that each witness may be examined out of the hearing of the other witnesses on the same side who are to be examined after him. Southey v. Nash, 7 C. & P. 632. This rule has been applied when a legal argument arises as to the witnesses' evidence. R. v. Murphy, 8 C. & P. 297 (and see post, p. 416, n.). The solicitor for either party is said not to be within this rule. Pomeroy v. Baddeley, Ry. & M. 430. It has been said that if, after such an order, a witness be present during the examination of the other witnesses, he cannot be examined; Attorney-General v. Bulpit, 9 Price, 4; 23 R. R. 637: R. v. Webb, 1 Stark. Ev. (3rd ed.), 189; but the conduct of the witness seems to be no ground for depriving the crown, or the defendant, of a witness, and the practice is to allow him to be examined, subject to observation as to his conduct in disobeying the order; R. v. Colley, M. & M. 329: R. v. Brown, 4 C. & P. 588, n. This was formerly held to be a matter for the discretion of the judge. Parker v. M'William, 6 Bing. 683: Beamon v. Ellice, 4 C. & P. 585: R. v. Wylde, 6 C. & P. 380: Cook v. Nethercote, 6 C. & P. 741; 40 R. R. 855: Thomas v. David, 7 C. & P. 351. It seems now, however, to be the better opinion, that the judge has no right to reject the testimony of a witness who has remained in court after an order to withdraw; Chandler v. Horne, 2 M. & Rob. 423: Cobbett v. Hudson, 1 E. & B. 11, 14; except, perhaps, in revenue cases. 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 916.

Witness on back of indictment.]—Although in strictness it is not necessary for the prosecutor to call every witness whose name is on the back of the indictment, it has been usual to do so, that the defendant may cross-examine them; R. v. Simmonds, 1 C. & P. 84: R. v. Beezley, 4 C. & P. 220: R. v. Bull, 9 C. & P. 22: R. v. Vincent, 9 C. & P. 91: R. v. Barley, 2 Cox, 191. If the counsel will not call the witness, the judge in his discretion may. R. v. Simmonds, ubi supra: R. v. Bodle, 6 C. & P. 186: R. v. Holden, 8 C. & P. 606: R. v. Stroner, 1 C. & K. 650: R. v. Thompson, 13 Cox, 181, Lush, J.: R. v. Edwards, 3 Cox, 82. In the last-mentioned case, Erle, J., referred to R. v. Belany (unrep.) where, the judge refusing to interfere, the defendant had to call some of the witnesses on the back of the indictment. Where a witness called before the coroner was not called for the crown at the trial, the court has refused to require him to be called. R. v. Wiggins, 10 Cox, 562. However, the prosecutor is not bound to call them all; though he ought, it has been said, to have them in court, that they may be called for the defence, if the prisoner chooses. R. v. Woodhead, 2 C. & K. 520: R. v. Cassidy, 1 F. & F. 79: R. v. Thompson, ubi supra. If the counsel for the prosecution, at the instance of the prisoner's counsel, calls a witness, but does not ask him a question, the former is entitled to re-examine the witness after he has been examined by the prisoner's counsel. R. v. Beezley, 4 C. & P. 220: R. v. Harris, 7 C. & P. 581; and see post, p. 424. The defendant is entitled to inspect the indictment to see the names of the witnesses. R. v. Lacy, 3 Cox, 517, Erle, J. But the court cannot compel the prosecution to give their descriptions or addresses. R. v. Gordon, 12 L. J. (M. C.) 84, Patteson, J.

Witnesses not on depositions.]—Witnesses may be called for the crown whose depositions were not taken before the committing magistrate, and whose names are not on the back of the indictment. R. v. Ward, 2 C. & K. 759. But notice of intention to call such additional witnesses with a copy of the evidence which it is proposed that they should give, ought to be given to the prisoner and sent to the court. In R. v. Connor, 1 Cox, 233, Patteson, J., said, that he had no power to interfere in a case in which, after the prisoners were committed, a great body of additional evidence had been obtained, copies of which had been refused to the prisoners. In R. v. Flannagan, 15 Cox, 403, Butt, J., offered the defence an adjournment on a trial of murder to give time to rebut new evidence, of which notice had not been given, and the tendency of the latest decisions is to reject new evidence if tendered without notice of intention to give it and without giving the defence a copy of the proof. Thus in R. v. ——, Cent. Crim. Ct., Oct. 1893, Charles, J., refused to admit new evidence unless the prosecution could prove service of the proof on the defence. In R. v. Hawkins (Q. B. D. 1896), Russell, L.C.J., also required proof of notice of new evidence. In R. v. Stiginani, 10 Cox, 552, Willes, J., is said to have ruled that the evidence of a witness, whose deposition had not been taken before the committing magistrate, and in respect of whom the prosecution had given no notice to the prisoner that it was their intention to call him, was not admissible when tendered on the part of the prosecution. The same point, however, having been raised in R. v. Greenslade, 11 Cox, 412, Brett, J., after consulting Willes, J., said that he had the authority of the latter for saying that his ruling in R. v. Stiginani, ubi supra, was incorrectly reported, and that evidence tendered under the circumstances above mentioned, if relevant, ought to be received, although the fact of notice of its intended production not having been given to the prisoner or his solicitor was a subject of strong comment.

Questions by the judge.]—During the progress of the trial, the judge may, of course, question the witnesses; and, even though the counsel for the prosecution has closed his case, and the counsel for the defendant has taken an objection to the evidence, the judge may make any further inquiries of the witness that he thinks fit, in order to answer the objection. R. v. Remnant, R. & R. 136.

Witness called by the judge.]—Where the judge calls a witness not called by either party, which he is entitled to do (Coulson v. Disborough [1894] 2 Q. B. 316), neither party is entitled to examine or cross-examine as of right. Id., R. v. Cliburn, 62 J. P. 232 (Fulton, Recorder); but if the evidence is adverse to either party, such leave should be given. Id.

Rebutting evidence.]—In R. v. Haynes, 1 F. & F. 666, the court refused to call a new witness for the crown after the close of the case. But rebutting evidence is certainly admissible at the discretion of the court to meet a case unexpectedly set up by the defence. R. v. Frost, 4 St. Tr. (N. S.) 85; 9 C. & P. 129: R. v. Whelan, 8 L. R. (Ir.) 314; 14 Cox, 595 (Ir.): R. v. Coyle, 7 Cox, 74, Erle, J.: R. v. McGavaran, 6 Cox, 64: or to meet evidence of good character given for the defence. R. v. Rowton, L. & C. 520; 34 L. J. (M. C.) 57; 10 Cox, 25 (C. C. R.): R. v. Hughes, 1 Cox, 44, Rolfe, B. Contra, R. v. Burt, 5 Cox, 284, Martin, B. Where the defendant is called this class of evidence may be rendered unnecessary by the result of his cross-examination under 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 1 (f). Where after the examination of witnesses as to facts on behalf of a prisoner, the judge (there being no counsel for the prosecution) called back and examined a witness for the prosecution, it was held that the prisoner's counsel had a right to cross-examine again if he thought it material. R. v. Watson, 6 C. & P. 653.

Reswearing witnesses.]—Where there are two prosecutions against the same party for felony, the judge can not, even by consent, take the evidence on the first trial as given in the second. Sometimes witnesses have been re-sworn in the second case, and their evidence read over to them from the judge's notes; R. v. Foster, 7 C. & P. 495; and a similar course was adopted in a case of misdemeanor. R. v. Lovett, 3 St. Tr., N. S. 1177, 1179, 9 C. & P. 462. Where, however, on the trial of a prisoner, the jury, not being able to agree, were discharged, and the prisoner was again tried before another jury, and the judge, at the request of the prisoner and of his counsel, and with the consent of the counsel for the crown, instead of again taking the evidence vivâ voce, read over to the witnesses the evidence taken by himself at the first trial, asking each witness if he had anything to add or alter in his evidence, and also informing the counsel for the prisoner and the counsel for the crown that if either of them wished to ask the witness any question he could do so, this mode of taking the evidence on the second trial was strongly disapproved by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. R. v. Bertrand, L. R., 1 P. C. 520; L. J. P. C. 51 (and see ante, p. 214). A trial on admissions is not allowed unless they are made in open court by defendant or his advocate with his authority. R. v. Thornhill, 8 C. & P. 575 (ante, p. 325).

Examination in chief.]—After the witness has been sworn or has made the necessary affirmation or declaration (see pp. 406 et seq.), the counsel for the party who calls him proceeds to examine him. In doing this, two things are principally to be attended to: 1stly, that the questions be pertinent to the matter immediately in issue (a); and 2ndly, that they be not leading questions.

Firstly. The questions must be pertinent to the matter immediately in issue. No question may be asked of a witness upon a direct examination, the probable answer to which cannot have a tendency to prove the offence or defence, or other matter put in issue by the pleadings. In the case of (a) In the United States it is common practice to send the jury out when objections to the admissibility of evidence are being argued. In R. v. Freeman [1895] 6 Queensland, L. J. 281, it was held by the Rt. Hon. Sir S. Griffith, C.J., that under the English practice the jury must be present throughout the proceedings. But in R. v. Hicks, at the Central Criminal Court, July 30, 1904, on a trial for abortion, Ridley, J., sent the jury out of Court while objections to admissibility of evidence were being argued.

circumstantial evidence the courts of necessity allow of a greater latitude in this respect; but still, in this case, the questions must be such as are likely to elicit evidence of facts from which the jury may reasonably presume the guilt or innocence of the prisoner. Upon an indictment for a conspiracy, general evidence of a conspiracy charged may be received in the first instance, although it cannot affect the defendant, unless afterwards brought home to him or to an agent employed by him. Queen Caroline's case, 2 B. & B. 284, 302; 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1348. (See ante, p. 306.) And the same rule applies where a defendant seeks, by such general evidence, in the first instance, to affect the prosecutor with a conspiracy to suborn witnesses for the destruction of the defence (provided the proposed evidence be previously opened to the court), as in the case of a prosecution for a conspiracy. Id. So, if A commit a burglary, and B stay outside the house for the purpose of preventing an interruption; upon the trial of B, the prosecutor first proves the offence committed by A, and then brings the guilt home to B by proving his share in it. In these cases, however, the matter to be proved naturally branches itself into two propositions, that a certain conspiracy existed, and that the defendant was engaged in it; that A committed the burglary, and that B. aided and assisted him in the commission of it.

Secondly. It is a general rule, that, in a direct examination of a witness, he shall not be asked leading questions, or, in other words, questions framed in such a manner as to suggest to the witness the answers required of him. To this rule, however, there are a few exceptions. To identify a person whom the witness has already described, the person may be pointed out to him, and he may be asked, in direct terms, if that be the person he meant. R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 116; 32 St. Tr. 1: R. v. De Berenger, Stark. Ev. (4th ed.) 167, n. As to the proper questions to be asked to prove identification, see R. v. Blackburn, 6 Cox, 333. Where a witness swears to a certain fact, and another witness is called for the purpose of contradicting him, the latter may be asked, in direct terms, whether that fact ever took place. Courteen v. Touse, 1 Camp. 43; 10 R. R. 627.

And, lastly, questions which are merely introductory to others that are material are in general allowed to be asked in direct terms, without objection. R. v. Robinson, 61 J. P. 520.

If an irrelevant or leading question be put, the counsel on the other side should immediately interpose and object to it. So, if a witness be asked whether a certain representation was made, the opposite counsel may interpose, and ask him whether the representation in question were by parol or in writing; for, if the latter, the writing must be produced. Queen Caroline's case, 2 B. & B. 284; 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1348.

Hostile witness.]—By s. 3 of Denman's Act (28 & 29 Vict. c. 18), which, by s. 1, is applied to all courts of criminal judicature), "A party producing a witness shall not be allowed to impeach his credit by general evidence of bad character; but he may, in case the witness shall, in the opinion of the judge, prove adverse, contradict him by other evidence, or, by leave of the judge, prove that he has made at other times a statement inconsistent with his present testimony; but before such last-mentioned proof can be given, the circumstances of the supposed statement, sufficient to designate the particular occasion, must be mentioned to the witness, and he must be asked whether or not he has made such statement." To be consistent within the meaning of the section the statements need not be directly or absolutely at variance. Jackson v. Thompson, 31 L. J. (Q. B.) 11. The word "adverse" in this section means "hostile," and not merely "unfavourable." Greenough v. Eccles, 5 C. B. (N. S.) 786; 28 L. J. (C. P.) 160, decided on s. 22 of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 125. The discretion of the judge is absolute: Rice v. Howard, 16 Q. B. D. 681. 28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, s. 3, appears to get rid of what was supposed to be the former rule that a party could not show that his own witness had at any time given a different account of the same transaction. Ewer v. Ambrose, 3 B. & C. 746: R. v. Farr, 8 C. & P. 768: R. v. Ball, 8 C. & P. 745. Before the Act of 1854, if a witness called to prove a fact proved the contrary, his credit could not be impeached by general evidence; Bull. (N. P.) 297; Ewer v. Ambrose, 3 B. & C. 746, 751; but the party was at liberty to make out his case by other and contradictory evidence, for the other witnesses were not called directly to impeach the credit of the first. Id. R. v. Ball, ubi supra. If the witness appear evidently to be hostile to the party who has called him, the counsel may put leading questions to him, having first obtained permission of the court to do so. Clarke v. Saffery, Ry. & M. 126; and see Bastin v. Carew, Id. 127: R. v. Chapman, 8 C. & P. 558: R. v. Ball, ubi supra.

Where on a trial for rape a witness for the prosecution, to whom the prosecutrix had made a communication shortly after the commission of the alleged offence, being asked on cross-examination as to the particulars of such communication, gave an answer different from that which the prosecuting counsel was instructed was the truth, it was held by Day, J. (after consulting Cave, J.), that it was competent for the prosecuting counsel, on re-examination, to ask the witness, under 28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, s. 3, whether she had not at another time made a statement inconsistent with her present testimony to a person named, and also to call such person to give evidence of the statement so made to him. R. v. Little, 15 Cox, 319. In that case the prisoner's counsel objected that there was nothing in the demeanor of the witness to show that she was hostile, and the report does not state whether the learned judges considered her to be so. In one case, before 28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, s. 3, where a judge called a witness upon the back of the indictment, who gave evidence in form against the defendant, and the judge ordered the deposition of the witness before the coroner to be read, to show its inconsistency with the testimony then given, the twelve judges thought him right in so doing, and Lord Ellenborough and Sir J. Mansfield, C.J., thought that the prosecutor had the same right. R. v. Oldroyd, R. & R. 88. See also R. v. Beardmore, 8 C. & P. 260: R. v. Williams, 6 Cox, 343 (post, p. 422).

Refreshing memory.]—We have seen (ante, p. 403) that a witness can be allowed only to speak of facts within his own knowledge and recollection, except in matters of science, in which case his opinion is admissible evidence. See R. v. Wright, R. & R. 456. He cannot, therefore, be admitted to read his evidence. But he will be allowed to refresh his memory from any book or paper made by himself, or seen and examined by him shortly after the fact occurred to which it relates, if he can afterwards swear to the fact from his recollection. Doe v. Perkins, 3 T. R. 749: Kensington v. Inglis, 8 East, 273, 289; 9 R. R. 438: Burrough v. Martin, 2 Camp. 112; 11 R. R. 679: Bolton (Lord) v. Tomlin, 5 A. & E. 856. See R. v. Guinea [1841], Ir. Circ. Rep. 167: R. v. Laidler, 19 Cox, 360: R. v. Robinson, 61 J. P. 520; 2 Taylor Ev. (9th ed.), 925. If he knew the fact, however, only from seeing it in the book or paper, the original book or paper must be given in evidence, and proved by other means. Doe v. Perkins, ubi supra. In like manner, depositions made by an old witness have been allowed to be read to him, for the purpose of refreshing his memory as to dates, etc. Vaughan v. Martin, 1 Esp. 440. A witness may not refresh his memory with a copy of an instrument which might itself be used for refreshing his memory, unless the copy were made by himself, or in his presence, and he knew it to be correct. Burton v. Plummer, 2 A. & E. 341; 4 Nev. & M. 315. And where upon an indictment for forgery it was sought to prove the numbers of the notes given in payment for the forged instrument by a witness, whose memory it was proposed to refresh by a written memorandum made by himself of the numbers of the notes, the material for which memorandum had been supplied by an entry made by himself at the time he paid the notes, the original entry itself not being produced, Blackburn, J., refused to allow the witness so to refresh his memory, saying that the original entry must be produced. R. v. Harvey, 11 Cox, 546. The prisoner was a timekeeper, and T. C. was pay-clerk, in the employment of the prosecutor. It was the prisoner's duty every fortnight to give a list of the days worked by the prosecutor's workmen to a clerk, who entered the days and the wages due in respect of them in a time-book. At pay-time it was the prisoner's duty to read from the time-book the number of days worked by each workman to T. C., who paid the wages accordingly. T. C. saw the entries in the time-book while the prisoner was reading them out. Upon the trial of an indictment charging the prisoner with obtaining money by false pretences, it was held that T. C. might refresh his memory by referring to the entries in the time-book, in order to prove the sums paid by him to workmen. R. v. Langton, 2 Q. B. D. 296; 46 L. J. (M. C.) 136; 13 Cox, 345 (C. C. R.); and see R. v. Mullins, 3 Cox, 526; 7 St. Tr., N. S. 1110.

When a witness is under the examination of a junior counsel, the leading counsel may interpose, take the witness into his own hands, and finish the examination; but after one counsel has brought his examination to a close, no other counsel on the same side can put a question to the witness. Doe v. Roe, 2 Camp. 280; 11 R. R. 711.

Cross-examination generally.]—When the direct examination is finished, the witness may then be cross-examined by counsel for the opposite party. Or, if the party calling a witness do not think proper to examine him after he is called and sworn, the witness may nevertheless be cross-examined by the counsel for the opposite party. R. v. Brooke, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 472. See Morgan v. Brydges, Id. 314: Phillips v. Eamer, 1 Esp. 355. (See ante, pp. 414, 415.) Where a witness was called, and had only answered an immaterial question, when he was stopped by the judge, Gurney, B., ruled that the opposite party had no right to a cross-examination. Creevy v. Carr, 7 C. & P. 64.

Where two prisoners are jointly indicted and evidence is called on behalf of one prisoner which tends to criminate the other, the latter is entitled to cross-examine the witness. R. v. Woods, 6 Cox, 224. So where A, B, and C were jointly indicted, and separately defended, and at the close of the case for the prosecution C was acquitted, and was then called as a witness for A, and gave evidence tending to criminate B, it was held that B's counsel had a right to cross-examine C, and to reply. R. v. Burdett, Dears. 431; 24 L. J. (M. C.) 63; 6 Cox, 458 (C. C. R.). The reason for the rule is that such evidence, though given in defence of one prisoner, becomes in fact evidence for the prosecution against the other.

The rule is equally applicable where one of the prisoners is called in his own defence under the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898, and gives evidence incriminating his fellow-prisoner. R. v. Hadwen [1902], 1 K. B. 882 (C. C. R.), and to this extent s. 1 (f) (iii.) of the Act has the effect of abrogating the common law rule expressed in R. v. Payne, L. R. 1 C. C.

R. 349; and Allen v. Allen [1894], Prob. 248, 253, that the evidence of one defendant on a criminal trial cannot be received for or against another defendant.

When a witness is produced, the first thing that claims the attention of the counsel for the opposite party is, whether the witness be competent, and if not, then in what manner the objection to his competency must be made. (See ante, p. 387 et seq.)

The next thing that claims the opposite counsel's attention, in the course of the examination, is, whether parol evidence be the best evidence of the facts to which the witness deposes; and if not, whether grounds have been laid for its admission as secondary evidence; whether the questions be relevant and pertinent to the matter in issue; and whether they be leading questions. If the evidence of the witness be objectionable in any of these respects, the counsel should immediately interpose and make his objection.

Supposing, however, the witness and his evidence not open to these preliminary objections, the opposite counsel must then proceed to cross-examine him, if, in his judgment, a cross-examination be necessary or advisable. In giving his evidence a witness tells the truth, wholly or partially, or tells a falsehood. If he tells the whole truth, cross-examination may be dangerous, as it may have the effect of rendering his story more circumstantial, and impressing the jury with a stronger opinion of its truth; and it is better, in such a case, either not to cross-examine him at all, or to confine your questions to his credibility, by impugning his means of knowledge, his disinterestedness, or his integrity. (See ante, pp. 403, 404.)

If the witness tell only part of the truth, then the opposite counsel, if the residue be favourable to his client, will immediately proceed to cross-examine him as to it; but, if unfavourable, the counsel will either refrain altogether from cross-examining him, or will confine his questions to the witness's credibility, as above mentioned.

If, on the other hand, the evidence of the witness be false, then the whole force of the cross-examination must be directed to his credibility (see ante, p. 403); and you may afterwards prove the truth by other witnesses.

In cross-examining a witness, the counsel may ask him leading questions; that is, he may lead the witness, so as to bring him directly to the point in which he requires the answer; and this whether the witness be a willing or an adverse one; see Parkin v. Moon, 7 C. & P. 408; but he will not be allowed to put into the witness's mouth the very words he is to echo back again. R. v. Hardy, 24 St. Tr. 199, 755, Buller, J.; and see 2 Taylor, Ev. (9th ed.), p. 944. Cross-examination of witnesses for the crown is not permitted as to matters involving state secrets. R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. (N. P.) 116; 32 St. Tr. 1. (See ante, p. 402.) As to the mode of suggesting, in cross-examination of a witness, that he is a spy, see R. v. Bernard, 1 F. & F. 240; 8 St. Tr., N. S. 887. As to incriminating questions, see ante, p. 399.

Questions put in cross-examination must be either relevant and pertinent to the matter in issue, or calculated to elicit the witness's title to credit. It is not usual to cross-examine witnesses to character, unless the counsel cross-examining have some distinct charge on which to cross-examine them; see R. v. Hodgkiss, 7 C. & P. 298; and it is improper to examine as to mere circumstances of suspicion occurring on the day when the offence is charged. R. v. Rogan, 1 Cox, 291, Erle, J. If the only evidence called on the prisoner's part is evidence as to character, though the counsel for the prosecution is in strictness entitled to a reply, it is not usual to exercise it, except in extreme cases. See R. v. Stannard, 7 C. & P. 673 : R. v. Whiting, Id. 771, and ante, p. 211.

Cross-examination as to documents.]—The practice as to cross-examination as to documents is now regulated by s. 5 of Denman's Act (28 & 29 Vict. c. 18), which is in the following terms:—"A witness may be cross-examined as to previous statements made by him in writing, or reduced into writing, relative to the subject-matter of the indictment or proceeding, without such writing being shown to him; but if it is intended to contradict such witness by the writing, his attention must, before such contradictory proof can be given, be called to those parts of the writing which are to be used for the purpose of so contradicting him: Provided always, that it shall be competent for the judge, at any time during the trial, to require the production of the writing for his inspection, and he may thereupon make such use of it for the purposes of the trial as he may think fit."

Under s. 5 you may cross-examine a witness upon a letter or other statement made by him in writing without reading it or putting it in as evidence. If a witness refresh his memory from entries in a book, the opposite counsel may cross-examine on those entries without making them his evidence, and the jury may see them if they think fit; but, if the opposite counsel cross-examine as to other entries in the same book, he makes them his evidence. Gregory v. Tavernor, 6 C. & P. 281. If the cross-examining counsel put a paper into the witness's hands, and put questions on it, and anything comes of those questions, the opposite counsel has a right to see the paper, and re-examine on it; but if the cross-examination founded on the paper entirely fails and nothing comes of it, the opposite counsel cannot demand to see the paper. R. v. Duncombe, 8 C. & P. 369 : R. v. Ramsden, 2 C. & P. 603; 31 R. R. 703.

Depositions.]—Prior to 28 & 29 Vict. c. 18 the judges had laid down the following rules (see 7 C. & P. 676: 6 L. J. (M. C.) 37) as to the mode of cross-examining witnesses for the crown with respect to what they had previously sworn before the magistrate, and which had been reduced into writing in their depositions:—I. That where a witness for the crown has made a deposition before a magistrate, he cannot, on his cross-examination by the prisoner's counsel, be asked whether he did or did not, in his deposition, make such or such a statement, until the deposition itself has been read, in order to manifest whether such statement is or is not contained therein; and that such deposition must be read as part of the evidence of the cross-examining counsel. II. That, after such deposition has been read, the prisoner's counsel may proceed in his cross-examination of the witness as to any supposed contradiction or variance between the testimony of the witness in court and his former deposition; after which the counsel for the prosecution may re-examine the witness, and, after the prisoner's counsel has addressed the jury, will be entitled to the reply. And in case the counsel for the prisoner comments upon any supposed variance or contradiction, without having read the deposition, the court may direct it to be read, and the counsel for the prosecution will be entitled to reply upon it. III. That the witness cannot, in cross-examination, be compelled to answer whether he did or did not make such or such a statement before the magistrate, until after his deposition has been read, and it appears that it contains no mention of such statement. In that event, the counsel for the prisoner may proceed with his cross-examination; and if the witness admit such statement to have been made, he may comment upon such omission, or upon the effect of it upon the other part of his testimony; or, if the witness denies that he made such statement, the counsel for the prisoner may then, if such statement be material to the matter in issue, call witnesses to prove that he made such statement. But in either event, the reading of the deposition is the prisoner's evidence, and the counsel for the prosecution will be entitled to reply.

The first of these rules appears to be superseded by 28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, s. 5 (ante, p. 421). They were binding on the prisoner's counsel; but the judge who tried the case, might, notwithstanding, if he thought fit, himself look at the depositions, and question a witness as to any discrepancy which appeared between his deposition and his evidence. And, by the judge's permission, the prisoner's counsel might, "as his mouthpiece," do the like. R. v. Peel, 2 F. & F. 21, Willes, J. Whether, if such examination introduced new facts in evidence, that would give the counsel for the prosecution the right of reply, was not settled. See R. v. Edwards, 8 C. & P. 26. The witness could not be asked whether he did or did not state a particular fact before the magistrate, without first allowing him to read, or have read to him, his depositions. R. v. Taylor, 8 C. & P. 726. Where an accomplice who could not read gave evidence falling very short of what he had stated before the magistrate, the judge allowed his deposition, signed with his mark, to be shown to him, but would not allow it to be read to him, in order that the prosecuting counsel might examine upon it. R. v. Beardmore, 8 C. & P. 260. Where a witness examined for the crown gave an answer different from what was expected, counsel for the prosecution was allowed to show the witness his deposition to refresh his memory; and on his persisting in the answer was also allowed to put the question in a leading form. R. v. Williams, 6 Cox, 343. Except as above mentioned, the prosecution cannot use or refer to the depositions taken before the magistrate, without putting them in as their evidence. R. v. Muller, 10 Cox, 43. If the witness denies his signature or mark to the deposition, it may be proved by the evidence of any competent person who heard it taken; and it is not necessary to prove it by the magistrate or his clerk, any more than in the case of a confession. R. v. Hallett, 9 C. & P. 748, Coleridge, J.: R. v. Hearn, C. & Mar. 109, Coltman, J.: see ante, p. 336, 337.

Under Rule 1 the prisoner's counsel was not permitted, in cross-examining a witness for the prosecution, to put his deposition into his hand that he might read it, and then to ask him whether, having read it, he still persevered in the statement which he had made in court; the proper course was to read the deposition to him at the time, and to cross-examine him upon it, or to put it in afterwards as evidence for the prisoner. R. v. Ford, 2 Den. 245; 20 L. J. (M. C.) 171 (C. C. R.): R. v. Brewer, 9 Cox, 409, Blackburn, J. In R. v. Ford, Campbell, C.J., said, "the proper course to be pursued is that pointed out in Queen Caroline's case, 2 B. & B. 284, at p. 289." R. v. Ford seems not now to be an authority, having regard to the change in practice effected by 28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, s. 5 (ante, p. 421). Under that section, although a witness may be cross-examined as to what he said before the magistrate, and the deposition may be put into his hand for that purpose, without reading it as a part of the evidence of the cross-examining party, yet the latter is bound by the answer of the witness, unless the deposition is put in to contradict him, and it is not admissible to state that the deposition does contradict him unless it is so put in. R. v. Riley, 4 F. & F. 964: R. v. Wright, Id. 967, Channell, B.

As to variations between a witness's deposition and his evidence at the trial, Cockburn, C.J., said in R. v. Wainwright, 13 Cox, 171, 173, that he did not attach much importance to the accordance between what a witness said at the trial and what he was reported in his deposition to have said before the magistrate. He knew, from his own experience, how difficult it was to take down a witness's exact words. A witness expressed himself in a long sentence, the magistrate's clerk struck out a particular word, and with that omission it went down on the notes, and was not the whole sentence. The whole meaning of the sentence which the witness had uttered might thereby be entirely altered. Too much importance ought not, therefore, to be attached to such variations, and if there were a substantial agreement between the evidence at the preliminary inquiry and that adduced at the trial, that was sufficient.

Former statements not in writing.]—It is provided by s. 4 of Denman's Act (28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, which by s. 1 applies to all courts of criminal judicature), "if a witness, upon cross-examination as to a former statement made by him relative to the subject-matter of the indictment or proceeding, and inconsistent with his present testimony, does not distinctly admit that he has made such statement, proof may be given that he did in fact make it; but before such proof can be given the circumstances of the supposed statement, sufficient to designate the particular occasion, must be mentioned to the witness, and he must be asked whether or not he has made such statement."

This enactment is wide enough to cover all statements, but is specially applicable to a statement not in writing. You may cross-examine the witness on such statement; and if he deny it, you may call another witness to prove it. So, if a witness admit that when before a magistrate he was cross-examined for the prisoner, and it appears that such cross-examination is not returned with the depositions, he may be questioned by the prisoner's counsel as to the answers he gave. R. v. Edwards, 8 C. & P. 26: R. v. Curtis, 2 C. & K. 763, Erle, J. So, if it appear that a statement of the witness before the magistrate, although written down by him, was not read over to the witness, nor signed by him or by the magistrate, the witness may be cross-examined as to such statement without producing the writing. R. v. Griffiths, 9 C. & P. 746, Coleridge, J.: see Jeans v. Wheedon, 2 M. & Rob. 486, and the note. Witnesses for the prosecution were duly sworn and examined before the magistrate, and cross-examined by the prisoner; minutes thereof were duly made by the magistrate's clerk, and then sent to his office to be copied as draft depositions. The witnesses attended there also. T., the copying clerk, while copying the minutes, asked the witnesses some questions, for the purpose of making the depositions more correct, clear, and complete, and inserted their answers to such questions in the depositions. The prisoner was not then present. The depositions thus written were sent back to the magistrate; and the witnesses, in the presence of the prisoner, after being resworn, and after hearing the depositions read over to them, and full opportunity for cross-examination being given to the prisoner, signed them. At the trial, a material question was put to one of the witnesses as to something which he had said to T., in answer to one of the questions so put to him by T. It was held that such answer formed no part of the depositions, but was wholly independent of them, and therefore that the question might be asked without putting in the depositions. R. v. Christopher, 1 Den. 536; 2 C. & K. 994, 995; 19 L. J. (M. C.) 103. So a witness may be cross-examined as to his statement before the grand jury in the same case. R. v. Gibson, C. & Mar. 672, Parke, B. But cross-examination as to the state of his recollection when examined before the magistrate has been rejected as inadmissible, and as an attempt by a side-wind to evade putting in the deposition. R. v. Newton, 4 Cox, 262, Patteson, J. If, however, a witness, when examined in chief as to the occurrence of a fact, answer that he does not remember it, the counsel on the opposite side cannot give evidence of a former declaration by the witness of the fact having occurred, unless he have in cross-examination questioned the witness as to such a declaration; for the fact may have occurred, and the witness have formerly declared his knowledge of it, and yet he may not recollect it at the time of his examination. Queen Caroline's case, 2 B. & B. 284, 292; 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1348.

Collateral facts.]—As a general rule, a witness cannot be cross-examined as to any distinct collateral fact, not relevant to the matter in issue, for the purpose of disproving the truth of the expected answer by other witnesses, in order to discredit the whole of his testimony. Spenceley v. De Willott, 7 East, 108.

Previous convictions.]—As to the cross-examination of a witness as to whether he has been convicted of felony or misdemeanor, and proof of such conviction, see 28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, s. 6 (ante, p. 404); 61 & 62 Vict. c. 36, s. 1 (f.) (ante, p. 395).

If, upon the trial of an indictment, it appear, on cross-examination of one of the witnesses for the prosecution, that J. S. was employed by the prosecutor for the purpose of procuring and examining evidence and witnesses in support of the indictment, the defendant cannot give evidence of J. S.'s having offered a bribe to a certain person, to induce him to give evidence touching the matter of the indictment, unless such person have been examined as a witness. Queen Caroline's case, 2 B. & B. 284, 302; 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1348.

Cross-examination of prisoners.]—(See ante, p. 419.) Prisoners called as witnesses on their own behalf may be cross-examined like any other witness, subject to the limitations imposed by s. 1 (f.) of the Criminal Evidence Act, 1898. (See that section, ante, p. 395.) Where a police sergeant, who was called for the prosecution, was asked in cross-examination in effect whether the prisoner in committing the act with which he was charged was not acting under the sergeant's instructions, and the prisoner afterwards stated in the witness-box that he considered that he was so acting, it was held that such cross-examination and evidence did not involve imputations within that section. R. v. Bridgwater, 21 Times, L. R. 69 (C. C. R.).

Recalled witness.]—If a witness for the crown is recalled, the prisoner's counsel is entitled to cross-examine him on the new evidence given. R. v. Watson, 6 C. & P. 653.

Re-examination.]—If any new fact arise out of the cross-examination, the witness may be examined as to it by the counsel who first examined him. In the same manner he may be re-examined when necessary, in order to explain any part of his cross-examination. In Queen Caroline's case (ubi supra) it was held, that if a witness, upon his cross-examination, admits having used certain expressions in a conversation with a person not a party to the cause, the opposite counsel, in re-examining the witness, is confined to such questions as may elicit the meaning of the expressions, and the motives of the witness for using them. But where a witness deposes to certain expressions being used by a party to the cause, the counsel for that party is entitled to re-examine the witness as to the whole of the conversation in which the expressions occurred; because the expressions are given in evidence, in such a case, as an admission of the party, and the whole of his admission should be taken together. 2 B. & B. 284, 294; 1 St. Tr., N. S. 1348. If a witness whose name is on the back of the indictment be called merely to allow the prisoner to cross-examine him, any question put by the prosecutor's counsel afterwards must be considered as a re-examination, and nothing can be asked which does not arise out of the cross-examination. R. v. Beezley, 4 C. & P. 220, Littledale, J.

In re-examination questions tending to prove the commission by the defendant of an offence other than that charged in the indictment have been allowed where the object was to explain away an apparently contradictory fact elicited by cross-examination. R. v. Chambers, 3 Cox, 92. Rolfe, B.

Property.]—The term "property" shall include every description of real and personal property, money, debts, and legacies, and all deeds and instruments relating to or evidencing the title or right to any property, or giving a right to recover or receive any money or goods, and shall also include, not only such property as shall have been originally in the possession or under the control of any party, but also any property into or for which the same may have been converted or exchanged, and anything acquired by such conversion or exchange, whether immediately or otherwise. [This definition re-enacts 20 & 21 Vict. c. 54, s. 17, with the modifications italicized.]

Night.]—See post, p. 620.

Sect. 2—Distinction between grand and petty larceny abolished.]—Every larceny, whatever be the value of the property stolen, shall be deemed to be of the same nature, and shall be subject to the same incidents in all respects as grand larceny was before the 21st day of June, 1827; and every court, whose power as to the trial of larceny was before that time limited to petty larceny, shall have power to try every case of larceny, the punishment of which cannot exceed the punishment hereinafter mentioned for simple larceny, and also to try accessories to such larceny. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 2, passed on June 21, 1827.]

Sect. 3—Larceny by bailees.]—Whosoever, being a bailee of any chattel, money, or valuable security, shall fraudulently take or convert the same to his own use, or the use of any person other than the owner thereof, although he shall not break bulk or otherwise determine the bailment, shall be guilty of larceny, and may be convicted thereof upon an indictment for larceny; but this section shall not extend to any offence punishable on summary conviction. [This section re-enacts 20 & 21 Vict. c. 54, s. 4, with the additions italicized. As to larceny by partners or joint owners of the partnership or joint property, see 31 & 32 Vict. c. 116, s. 1 (post, p. 432). As to larceny by servants, see post, p. 464. As to larceny by tenants and lodgers, see post, p. 516. As to fraudulent misappropriation by agents, bankers, or factors, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 77–79 (post, p. 576): by trustees, s. 80 (post, p. 583): by directors, etc., of public companies, ss. 81–84 (post, p. 585). As to fraudulent conversion of property by persons intrusted with the same since December 31, 1901, see 1 Edw. 7, c. 10 (post, p. 575).

Sect. 4—Punishment for simple larceny.]—Whosoever shall be convicted of simple larceny, or of any felony hereby made punishable like simple larceny, shall (except in the cases hereinafter otherwise provided for) be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section is taken from 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, ss. 3, 4, & 12 & 13 Vict. c. 11, s. 1.]

Sect. 5—Several counts for different larcenies.]—It shall be lawful to insert several counts in the same indictment against the same person for any number of distinct acts of stealing, not exceeding three, which may have been committed by him against the same person within the space of six months from the first to the last of such acts, and to proceed thereon for all or any of them. [This section re-enacts 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 16. It does not extend to indictments for receiving only, though under s. 92 (post, p. 546), a count for receiving may be added to each of the three larceny counts.]

Sect. 6—Election.]—If, upon the trial of any indictment for larceny, it shall appear that the property alleged in such indictment to have been stolen at one time was taken at different times, the prosecutor shall not by reason thereof be required to elect upon which taking he will proceed, unless it shall appear that there were more than three takings, or that more than the space of six months elapsed between the first and the last of such takings; and in either of such last-mentioned cases the prosecutor shall be required to elect to proceed for such number of takings, not exceeding three, as appear to have taken place within the period of six months from the first to the last of such takings. [This section re-enacts 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 17.]

Sect. 7—Larceny after previous conviction for felony.]—Whosoever shall commit the offence of simple larceny after a previous conviction for felony, whether such conviction shall have taken place upon an indictment, or under the provisions of the Act passed in the session held in the eighteenth and nineteenth years of Queen Victoria, chapter one hundred and twenty-six, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding ten years . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 11, with the additions in italics. 18 & 19 Vict. c. 126 is repealed as to England and Wales, and replaced by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49.]

this Act.]—Whosoever shall commit the offence of simple larceny, or any offence hereby made punishable like simple larceny, after having been previously convicted of any indictable misdemeanor punishable under this Act, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section was new law in 1861.]

Sect. 9—Larceny after two summary convictions.]—Whosoever shall commit the offence of simple larceny, or any offence hereby made punishable like simple larceny, after having been twice summarily convicted of any of the offences punishable upon summary conviction, under the provisions contained in [7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29: 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30: 9 G. 4, c. 55: 9 G. 4, c. 56: 10 & 11 Vict. c. 82: 11 & 12 Vict. c. 59:] 14 & 15 Vict. c. 92, ss. [3, 4, 5], 6, or in this Act or in the Malicious Damage Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 97), (whether each of the convictions shall be in respect of an offence of the same description or not . . .), shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years . . . or to be imprisoned . . . and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. [This section was framed from 12 & 13 Vict. c. 11, s. 3. The enactments included in square brackets are repealed, and as to summary convictions are replaced by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49, as to England and Wales.]

Sect. 100—Restitution of stolen goods on conviction of offender.]—See ante, p. 265.

Sect. 103—Apprehension of offenders.]—Any person found committing any offence punishable, either upon indictment or upon summary conviction, by virtue of this Act, except only the offence of angling in the daytime, may be immediately apprehended without a warrant by any person, and forthwith taken, together with such property, if any, before some neighbouring justice of the peace to be dealt with according to law; and if any credible witness shall prove upon oath before a justice of the peace a reasonable cause to suspect that any person has in his possession or on his premises any property whatsoever on or with respect to which any offence, punishable either upon indictment or upon summary conviction by virtue of this Act, shall have been committed, the justice may grant a warrant to search for such property as in the case of stolen goods: and any person to whom any property shall be offered to be sold, pawned, or delivered, if he shall have reasonable cause to suspect that any such offence has been committed on or with respect to such property, is hereby authorized, and, if in his power, is required to apprehend and forthwith to take before a justice of the peace the party offering the same, together with such property, to be dealt with according to law. [This section is taken from 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 63, with the alteration italicized.]

Sect. 104—Apprehension by peace officer for certain offences.]—Any constable or peace officer may take into custody, without warrant, any person whom he shall find lying or loitering in any highway, yard, or other place, during the night, and whom he shall have good cause to suspect of having committed, or being about to commit, any felony against this Act, and shall take such person, as soon as reasonably may be, before a justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law. [This section was new law in 1861.]

Sect. 109—Summary conviction a bar to other proceedings.]—In case any person convicted of any offence punishable upon summary conviction by virtue of this Act shall be paid the sum adjudged to be paid, together with costs, under such conviction, or shall have received a remission thereof from the crown, or from the lord-lieutenant in Ireland (see 52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 12, sub-s. 9), or shall have suffered the imprisonment awarded for non-payment thereof, or the imprisonment adjudged in the first instance, or shall have been so discharged from his conviction by any justice as aforesaid, in every such case he shall be released from all further or other proceedings for the same cause. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 70. As to its effect, see ante, p. 174.]

Sect. 114—Provisions as to receiving, etc., goods stolen in other parts of the United Kingdom.]—If any person shall have in his possession in any one part of the United Kingdom any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, which he shall have stolen or otherwise feloniously taken in any other part of the United Kingdom, he may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished for larceny or theft in that part of the United Kingdom where he shall so have such property, in the same manner as if he had actually stolen or taken it in that part; and if any person in any one part of the United Kingdom shall receive or have any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever which shall have been stolen or otherwise feloniously taken in any other part of the United Kingdom, such person knowing such property to have been stolen or otherwise feloniously taken, he may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished for such offence in that part of the United Kingdom where he shall so receive or have such property, in the same manner as if it had been originally stolen or taken in that part. [This section re-enacts 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 76. As to Venue, see ante, pp. 48, 49.]

Sect. 115—Offences committed within jurisdiction of Admiralty.]—All indictable offences mentioned in this Act which shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England or Ireland shall be deemed to be offences of the same nature, and liable to the same punishments, as if they had been committed upon the land in England or Ireland, and may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, and determined in any county or place in which the offender shall be apprehended or be in custody; and in any indictment for any such offence or for being an accessory to any such offence the venue in the margin shall be the same as if the offence had been committed in such county or place, and the offence itself shall be averred to have been committed "on the high seas;" Provided, that nothing herein contained shall alter or affect any of the laws relating to the government of his Majesty's land or naval forces. [This section was framed from 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 77. As to Admiralty jurisdiction, see ante, pp. 39-43.]

Sect. 116—Indictment for offences committed after previous convictions.]—In any indictment for any offence punishable under this Act, and committed after a previous conviction or convictions for any felony, misdemeanor, or offence or offences punishable upon summary conviction (see ss. 7, 8, 9, supra), it shall be sufficient, after charging the subsequent offence, to state that the offender was at a certain time and place or at certain times and places, convicted of felony, or of an indictable misdemeanor, or of an offence or offences punishable upon summary conviction (as the case may be), without otherwise describing the previous felony, misdemeanor, offence, or offences; and a certificate containing the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment and conviction for the previous felony or misdemeanor, or a copy of any such summary conviction, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court or other officer having the custody of the records of the court where the offender was first convicted, or to which such summary conviction shall have been returned, or by the deputy of such clerk or officer (for which certificate or copy a fee of five shillings and no more shall be demanded or taken), shall upon proof of the identity of the person of the offender, be sufficient evidence of such conviction, without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the name;

And the proceedings upon any indictment for committing any offence after a previous conviction or convictions shall be as follows; (that is to say), the offender shall, in the first instance, be arraigned upon so much only of the indictment as charges the subsequent offence, and if he plead not guilty, or if the court order a plea of not guilty to be entered on his behalf, the jury shall be charged, in the first instance, to inquire concerning such subsequent offence only: and if they find him guilty, or if on arraignment he plead guilty, he shall then, and not before, be asked whether he had been previously convicted, as alleged in the indictment, and if he answer that he had been so previously convicted, the court may proceed to sentence him accordingly, but if he deny that he had been so previously convicted, or stand mute of malice, or will not answer directly to such question, the jury shall then be charged to inquire concerning such previous conviction or convictions, and in such case it shall not be necessary to swear the jury again, but the oath already taken by them shall for all purposes be deemed to extend to such last mentioned inquiry:

Provided, that if upon the trial of any person for any such subsequent offence such person shall give evidence of his good character, it shall be lawful for the prosecutor, in answer thereto, to give evidence of the conviction of such person for the previous offence or offences before such verdict of guilty shall be returned, and the jury shall inquire concerning such previous conviction or convictions at the same time that they inquire concerning such subsequent offence. [This section was framed from 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 11, with the addition of the words in italics, and the provisions as to the mode of arraignment, as to which see ante, p. 185; post, Book II. Part V., "Offences committed after previous convictions;" and Greaves, Crim. Law Cons. Acts, p. 157.]

Sect. 117—Fine and sureties.]—Whenever any person shall be convicted of any indictable misdemeanor punishable under this Act, the court may, if it shall think fit, in addition to or in lieu of any of the punishments by this Act authorized, fine the offender, and require him to enter into his own recognizances and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour (see ante, p. 240);

And in case of any felony punishable under this Act the court may, if it shall think fit, require the offender to enter into his own recognizances and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace, in addition to any punishment by this Act authorized (see ante, p. 240):

Provided, that no person shall be imprisoned under this clause for not finding sureties for any period exceeding one year. [The provisions of this section as to felonies were new law in 1861, except as to the particular cases provided for by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 111 (joint stock banks), infra, and 17 & 18 Vict. c. 112, s. 26 (literary and scientific institutions).]

Sect. 119—Whipping.] . . . Whenever whipping may be awarded for any indictable offence under this Act, the court may sentence the offender to be once privately whipped, and the number of strokes and the instrument with which they shall be inflicted shall be specified by the court in the sentence. [The part of this section relating to solitary confinement was repealed by 56 & 57 Vict. c. 54 (S. L. R.). See ante, p. 239.]

Sect. 121—Costs.]—The court before which any indictable misdemeanor against this Act shall be prosecuted or tried may allow the costs of the prosecution in the same manner as in cases of felony; and every order for the payment of such costs shall be made out, and the sum of money mentioned therein paid and repaid, upon the same terms and in the same manner in all respects as in cases of felony. (See ante, p. 246.)

3 & 4 Vict. c. 111 (Joint Stock Companies Act, 1840), s. 2: Punishment of members of certain banking companies.]—If any person or persons being a member or members of any banking co-partnership within the meaning of the said Act 1 & 2 Vict. c. 96 (which relates to banking partnerships under 6 G. 4, c. 42, and 7 G. 4, c. 46), or of any other banking co-partnership formed under or in pursuance of the Bank of England Act, 1833 (3 & 4 W. 4, c. 98) shall commit any fraud, forgery, crime, or offence against, or with intent to injure or defraud any such co-partnership, such member or members shall be liable to indictment, information, prosecution, or other proceeding in the name of any of the officers for the time being of the said co-partnership, in whose name any action or suit might be lawfully brought against any member or members of such co-partnership, for every such forgery, fraud, crime, or offence, and may thereupon be lawfully convicted as if such person or persons had not been, or was or were not a member or members of such co-partnership: any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

31 & 32 Vict. c. 116 (Larceny Act, 1868), s. 1—Larceny or embezzlement by partners or joint owners of the partnership or joint property.]—If any person, being a member of any co-partnership, or being one of two or more beneficial owners of any money, goods, or effects, bills, notes, securities, or other property, shall steal or embezzle any such money, goods, or effects, bills, notes, securities, or other property of or belonging to any such co-partnership or to such joint beneficial owners, every such person shall be liable to be dealt with, tried, convicted, and punished for the same as if such person had not been or was not a member of such co-partnership or one of such beneficial owners. 42 & 43 Vict. c. 22, s. 7—Restitution.]—See ante, p. 267.

43 & 44 Vict. c. 33 (Post Office (Money Orders) Act, 1880), s. 4, sub-s. 4—Postal Orders.]—An order under this Act shall be deemed to be an "order for the payment of money" and a "valuable security" within the meaning of the Post Office Acts and of the Forgery Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 98), and of s. 1 of the Larceny Act, 1861 (ante, p. 427), and of any other law relating to forgery or stealing, which is for the time being in force in any part of the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands, or Isle of Man.

59 & 60 Vict. c. 52 (Larceny Act, 1896), s. 1.—Receiving in England or Ireland property stolen, etc., outside United Kingdom, Venue.]—(1) If any person without lawful excuse receives, or has in his possession, any property stolen outside the United Kingdom, knowing such property to have been stolen, he shall be liable to penal servitude for any term not less than three years, and not more than seven years; or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and may be indicted in any county or place in which he has, or has had the property. (2) For the purposes of this section, property shall be deemed to have been stolen where it has been taken, extorted, obtained, embezzled, converted, or disposed of under such circumstances that if the act had been committed in the United Kingdom the person committing it would have been guilty of an indictable offence according to the law for the time being of the United Kingdom. (3) An offence under this section shall be a felony or misdemeanor, according as the act committed outside the United Kingdom would have been a felony, or misdemeanor if committed in England or Ireland. (4) This section shall be construed and have effect as part of the Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict. c. 96). Indictment for Simple Larceny.

SUFFOLK, to wit: The jurors for our lord the King upon their oath present, that J. S., on the 1st day of June, in the year of our Lord ——, three pairs of shoes, and one waistcoat, of the goods and chattels of J. N., feloniously did steal, take, and carry away; against the peace of our lord the King, his crown and dignity.

As to form of indictment against a married woman for stealing the goods of her husband when leaving him, see R. v. James [1902] 1 K. B. 540 (C. C. R.); 71 L. J. (K. B.) 211; 20 Cox, 156.

If the defendant has been guilty of other distinct acts of stealing (not exceeding three), committed by him against the same person within the space of six calendar months, one or two other counts (as the case may be), in the following form, may (under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 5, ante, p. 428), be added. And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present, that the said J. S. afterwards, and within the space of six calendar months from and after the time of the committing of the said offence in the first count of this indictment charged and stated, to wit, on the first day of August, in the year aforesaid, six silver tea-spoons, of the goods and chattels of the said J. N., feloniously did steal, take, and carry away; against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, etc. As to adding a count for receiving to each larceny count, see post, p. 547.

Felony: penal servitude for not less than three years and not exceeding five years, or imprisonment not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1 (ante, p. 235); and, if a male under sixteen years, with or without whipping; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 4 (ante, p. 428); the offender if sentenced to whipping, to be once privately whipped, and the number of strokes and the instrument with which they shall be inflicted, to be specified in the sentence. Id. s. 119 (ante, p. 432.) The defendant may also be required to enter into his own recognizances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace. Id. s. 117 (ante, p. 431). If the defendant have previously been twice convicted summarily under 24 & 25 Vict. cc. 96, 97, he may be sentenced to penal servitude for a term not exceeding seven nor less than three years, or imprisonment for not more than two years, with or without hard labour, and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping. 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 9 (ante, p. 429); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, p. 235). As to the punishment of simple larceny after a previous conviction for felony, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 7 (ante, p. 428); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, p. 235); and as to the punishment of simple larceny after a previous conviction of an indictable misdemeanor punishable under the Larceny Act, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 8 (ante, p. 428); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 69, s. 1, sub-ss. 1, 2 (ante, p. 235); and see post, Book II., Part V., Offences after Previous Convictions. As to the statement and proof of the former convictions, see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 116 (ante, p. 430).

As to the sentence where the defendant is already under sentence for another crime, see 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 10 (ante, p. 231).

If it be proved that the defendant took the property in such manner as to amount in law to embezzlement, he shall not by reason thereof be entitled to be acquitted, but the jury may return as their verdict that the defendant is not guilty of larceny, but is guilty of embezzlement, 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 72 (post, p. 557), and he may be punished accordingly. But a general verdict of guilty cannot be sustained upon evidence of embezzlement only. R. v. Gorbutt, Dears. & B. 166; 26 L. J. (M. C.) 47 (C. C. R.).

Evidence (a).

J. S.]—It is immaterial whether this be the correct name of the defendant or not. (See ante, pp. 55, 163.) The prosecutor has only to prove that the defendant is the person who actually committed the offence; which is done either by identifying him as the party who committed it, or by circumstantial evidence. (See ante, p. 339.)

"On the 1*st day of June*," etc.]—The time here stated need not be proved as laid: if the offence be proved to have been committed at any time before or after, provided it be some day before the finding of the indictment (ante, p. 297). Where a larceny is committed in one county and the thief at any distance of time (R. v. Parkin, 1 Mood. C. C. 45) carries the goods into another county, in contemplation of law he is guilty not only of a carrying away but also of a taking in every county through or into which he has carried the goods. 1 Hale, 507; 1 Hawk. c. 33, s. 52; 3 Co. Inst. 113: R. v. Fenley [1903] 20 Cox, 252, Jelf, J. (and see ante, p. 298). If it be proved that the larceny was actually committed by the defendant in another part of the United Kingdom, and that he carried the goods at any distance of time through or into the county or other extent of the court's jurisdiction, it will be sufficient (ante, pp. 48, 49); unless the nature of the property be changed, and the indictment be for stealing the article in its original state (ante, p. 48). So it will be sufficient if the offence be either begun or completed in the county in which the defendant is indicted; or be committed within five hundred yards of the boundary of such county (ante, p. 43). And where a larceny is (a) The evidence is considered, throughout this book, with reference to principal offenders: it is always, however, to be remembered that accessories before the fact are now triable in all respects as principals: 24 & 25 Vict. c. 94, s. 1 (ante, p. 18).
